The first provision I would make would be to reduce all appropriations as recommended and as passed by the Congress, even after they are considered, by the amount of 10 per cent. Of course, we shall have to make exceptions to that. The first exception is the interest on the public debt. We can not reduce that. That will have to be paid in full. I take it that the sums to be allotted to the soldiers of all wars will have to be another exception. A third exception will have to be the President's salary and the salaries of members of the judiciary, and so forth. With those three exceptions, it seems to me that we can reduce by 10 per cent all the other appropriations carried by the Congress without injuring the administration of the departments a particle, but that on the contrary there will be brought about under this provision a system of consolidating bureaus and divisions in each of the departments which will not only bring about a saving of 10 per cent but will give us a better administration of the Government's affairs for a less amount of money.

So it is my purpose, as I stated a moment ago, to offer this amendment to every appropriation bill as it comes up. It is true that the agricultural appropriation bill is in conference, and we would have to pass a joint resolution about it if we agreed to this reduction of expenses for the various departments all along the line.

Senators, I never believed anything more sincerely or firmly in my life than that if we accomplish this saving in the administration of each one of the departments we will bring about a better administration of the Government; and it will be infinitely better to reduce appropriations than to put additional taxes upon the American people. I do not know how various Senators think about it; but the idea, at this time of perhaps the greatest depression we have ever known, of imposing upon the American people, and especially upon the consuming public, this enormous sum in taxes, when we can save enough out of present recommendations to do virtually the same thing.

I think it is absolutely indefensible for us to take the course of taxing the people instead of cutting down appropriations. We ought to cut down the appropriations. It is absolutely necessary. We can get a better administration of the Government if we do; and I want to say that we shall have to come to it before the present condition is over. The American people can not pay the increased burden that we will attempt to put upon them. We are spending money this year just as if our Treasury were full, when we already have a deficit of $2,000,000,000; and if we go on we shall have a bigger deficit next year, notwithstanding the additional $1,200,000,000 that we are going to impose according to the pending tax bill.

So much for the reduction of appropriations. Senators will want to know how I would make up the rest of the deficit that would result from failure to enact the proposed sales tax.

Mr. President, I come to an old friend when I come to the next item I would change. That old friend is war-tax refunds. In the first years they were very small, did not mean much, were just corrections of mistakes made. But the refunds of taxes since 1922 have not been a matter of bookkeeping, they have been a matter of business. That is one of the best businesses there has been in this country. Up to date we have refunded in cash, largely of excess-profits taxes paid during the war, $1,345,845,165.90. But that is not all we have refunded. We have refunded in credits, credits on current taxes, a much larger sum than that. We have refunded, largely of 1917 and 1918 taxes, paid during the war, the enormous sum of $2,530,317,850.28, making a total of taxes refunded, and very largely of excess-profits and income taxes paid during the war years, the enormous sum of $3,876,164,016.18. Virtually $4,000,000,000 has been refunded in the last 10 years in the way of refunds of war taxes, on account of mistakes made in assessing war taxes.

Senators will remember the case that was brought to our attention some few years ago when the Treasury Department refunded to the United States Steel Corporation, on account of an error committed in paying its taxes in 1917, the enormous sum of $59,000,000, $26,000,000 in cash, $33,000,000 in credits on current taxes. So the American Government has refunded, in the way of cash and by credits, the enormous sum of nearly $4,000,000,000.

What is happening in that regard now? Senators will remember that we passed a bill limiting those refunds. We required publicity in their making, and that saved over $100,000,000 the first year after that provision was enacted. But what is the situation now? Last year the Government refunded in cash $69,000,000 and in credits $213,000,000, a total of $282,000,000, and it is proposed this year to refund in cash some $89,000,000 more, and, in addition, the credits will run it up to nearly $300,000,000.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield.

Mr. LONG. As I understand it, this bill was finally reported by the committee about 30 days ago, was it not?

Mr. McKELLAR. Which bill?

Mr. LONG. The bill the Senator is now debating, to which he is offering his amendment.

Mr. McKELLAR. Yes.

Mr. LONG. It was reported about 30 days ago?

Mr. McKELLAR. It was proposed in the House soon after Congress met. It was then debated and passed in the House and sent over to the Senate. I think it has been several weeks that we have had it.

Mr. SMOOT. Since February the 24th.

Mr. LONG. Is it not the Senator's understanding that the country has become a great deal more "Hooverish" in the last 30 days?

Mr. McKELLAR. No; I can not say that that is my understanding.

Mr. LONG. I mean in the effect on the general economic welfare, it is getting "Hooverish" throughout the 48 States, so that 90 cents means more than a dollar meant when this bill came here.

Mr. McKELLAR. I can not be certain about that. But I want to say this, that for the first quarter of the present year there has been a cash refund already of $22,000,000, and of credits of $64,000,000, and, based on that, if we adopt an amendment which I have prepared, and which I will offer at the proper time, an amendment which will suspend the payment of refunds and the making of credits for refunds on war taxes, there will probably be brought to the Treasury somewhere in the neighborhood of $250,000,000 for this year. Certainly it will bring $200,000,000. The two items alone will save 10 per cent, and the suspension of the refund provision, referring to war-tax refunds, will bring about a saving of $450,000,000, in my judgment.

I sent to the Secretary of the Treasury for the figures, asked him to have an examination made as to both of these items, and I want to read in part what he said about it; I am going to put the whole letter in the RECORD later. He stated:

In your first paragraph you request estimates, first, as to the amount which will be saved to the Federal Government by the amount which will be saved to the Federal Government by the enactment of a resolution reducing appropriations, with certain exceptions, by 10 per cent, and, second, what would be saved by the enactment of a resolution providing for the suspension of consideration by the Treasury Department of claims for refunds of taxes paid during the period of the war. As indicated in my telephone conversation with you to-day, the Treasury is not able to furnish you with this information at the present time. The desired estimates would require a detailed analysis of appropriations and of pending claims for refund. tions and of pending claims for refund.

I get the figures, however, from the House hearings, on page 331. At this point I ask that the table on page 331 of the House hearings on the Treasury Department appropriation bill, Seventy-second Congress, first session, be printed as a part of my remarks, so that Senators may have the figures before them.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? There being no objection, the table was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Statement showing internal revenue receipts, additional assessments and collections, and overassessments of internal-revenue taxes (refunds, abatements, and credits) for fiscal years 1917 to 1931, inclusive, and first three months of fiscal year 1932

		Amount of addi- tional assess- ments and col- lections result- ing from office audits and field investigations	Overassessments allowed by bureau
Fiscal year	Total internal revenue receipts		Amount of re- funds of taxes illegally col- lected	Amount of credits and abatements	Total
117 118 119 120 121 122 123 124 125 126 127 128 129 129 130 131 1rst quarter 1932	$809, 393, 640, 44 3, 698, 955, 820, 93 3, 850, 150, 078, 56 5, 407, 580, 251, 81 4, 585, 587, 061, 95 3, 197, 451, 083, 00 2, 621, 745, 227, 57 2, 796, 179, 257, 06 2, 584, 140, 288, 24 2, 835, 999, 892, 19 2, 865, 683, 129, 91 2, 870, 535, 537, 68 2, 939, 054, 375, 43 3, 040, 145, 733, 17 2, 428, 228, 754, 22 455, 144, 328, 12	$16, 597, 255, 00 29, 984, 655, 00 123, 275, 768, 00 466, 889, 359, 00 416, 483, 708, 00 266, 978, 873, 00 275, 216, 858, 00 2735, 216, 858, 00 2735, 214, 497, 00 2414, 251, 490, 00 2415, 855, 476, 00 2416, 669, 507, 00 2416, 585, 476, 00 231, 480, 00 281, 629, 605, 00 281, 629, 605, 00	$887, 127, 94 2, 083, 565, 46 8, 654, 171, 21 15, 639, 952, 65 28, 656, 357, 95 48, 134, 127, 83 123, 992, 820, 94 137, 008, 225, 65 4 151, 886, 415, 60 174, 120, 177, 74 103, 858, 687, 78 142, 393, 567, 17 190, 164, 339, 48 126, 836, 333, 32 69, 476, 930, 25 69, 476, 930, 25 22, 051, 345, 02	(1) (1) (1) (1) (1) (1) (1) (1) (2) (1) (1) (1) (1) (1) (1) (1) (1) (1) (1	$887, 127, 94 2, 088, 565, 46 8, 654, 171, 21 15, 639, 952, 65 28, 656, 367, 95 182, 371, 597, 88 430, 576, 702, 89 492, 635, 001, 30 378, 040, 924, 34 513, 357, 878, 27 366, 151, 291, 99 341, 5*7, 819, 31 418, 95.9, 634, 20 326, 773, 540, 19 283, 208, 265, 88 86, 595, 184, 74
Total	46, 915, 744, 440, 28	5, 809, 619, 959. 00	1, 345, 846, 165, 90	2, 530, 317, 850, 28	3, 876, 164, 016, 18

No record available; credits first applied in fiscal year 1922.
 Estimated; based on amount of claims allowed in 1922 ($182,371,597.88) less refunds allowed in 1922 ($48,134,127.83).

THOMAS TOOK	may moreomente its torrer.
1923		$132, 525, 380. 55	1928	$45, 685, 725, 88
1924		161, 515, 217. 33	1929	50, 865, 425, 55
1925		144, 646, 530. 53	1930	36, 124, 226, 60
1926		148, 867, 165, 26	1931	50, 425, 493, 68
1927		32, 704, 156. 33	First quarter 1932	12, 424, 569. 35

Includes $17,777,642.45 refunded taxes under provisions of section 1200 of the revenue act of 1924 (25 per cent refunds of 1923 individual income taxes).
Includes $206,115.29 refunded taxes under provision of above section of law.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I want to say that, in my judgment, probably three-fourths of the four billions paid in refunds of taxes during the last 10 years is nothing in the world but legalized graft. If we had that money in the Treasury to-day we would not have to be taxing the American people. Who have drawn these big sums? Who have drawn these $4,000,000,000? People of great wealth in this country, who paid taxes in war time, when they were selling to the Government and when the taxes were included in the price of the goods which our Government and other governments bought. So I think we can easily expect somewhere in the neighborhood of $250,000,000 out of those two items of savings.

It is said, what is your precedent for it? My precedent for it is this, that in 1917 Senator Coe I. Crawford, of the State of South Dakota, introduced a bill to suspend the consideration of all claims by the Court of Claims on certain war claims. They had been entering judgments in such claims for years. He stopped that. None have ever been paid since. That is just exactly what we ought to do in this case. When our Government is almost facing bankruptcy refunds are being made secretly. No one except the Treasury Department knows about it until after it is done. They are paying back between two and three hundred million dollars a year in refunds, refunds in the way of credits and refunds in the way of cash. It seems to me that under those circumstances we could follow the precedent that was set by Senator Crawford in 1917, and simply suspend, until this provision should be repealed, the operation of that law.

The next item to which I want to call attention, where we can do something to take the place of the proposed tax, I will now state. If we are to levy any additional taxes, we ought to put those taxes on the people who are able to pay them. The House of Representatives has reported a provision which, it is estimated, will yield $112,000,000 in additional income taxes. They increased the rates in all of the smaller brackets. They took away the large exemptions which the general run of the public have had for a number of years. Then when they come to incomes of $100,000 and over they impose a surtax.

In my judgment, that should be a graded tax. Where the amount is $100,000 and less than $200,000, I propose to leave the tax at 40 per cent. Where it is over $200,000 and under $400,000, I propose to make it 50 per cent. Where it is over $400,000 and under $600,000, I propose to make it 60 per cent. Over $600,000, I propose to make the tax 65 per cent.

It is said that will be hard on industry. There are 10,000,000 people unemployed in this country, many thousands of them hungry. If a man who has an income of a million dollars a year has to help the Government out at such a time, it will mean no distress to him. If he has an income of a million dollars, and has to pay a tax of, say, 65 per cent, he still will have a very large sum which he would have difficulty in spending. There is no reason in the world why he should be personally discommoded at all if such a tax were placed on his income. He would not suffer any deprivation. There would be enough for him to get along on. So that ought to be increased.

I am sorry to say that under the figures sent me by the Secretary of the Treasury that will mean an increase of only $14,000,000 in return.

As shown by the House bill, the House proposes to increase the corporation tax by 1 per cent. That will be passed on to the consumer, but supposing it is left there, it will yield $26,000,000.

I next come to the provision for an estate and gift tax, which it is estimated by the House committee will yield $50,000,000. It will be perfectly proper to add to the tax on the larger incomes so as largely to increase that sum, probably not less than $50,000,000 in that item.

The House proposes to tax stock transfers. Senators, we ought to tax stock sales. I think a large part of our financial woe, a large part of the cause of the present depression, comes from stock gambling on the stock exchanges, and we might easily put a small tax on such transactions, which would bring the Government an enormous income

In these various ways it seems to me that we can easily propose something to take the place of the sales tax. We should not enact the sales tax. But the key to the arch is the reduction of expenditures of the Government. The first step taken in remedying the present situation is to bring down the appropriations for each department, with the exceptions I have named, 10 per cent. Whenever we do that there will be precious little need of making these other proposals. There will be no need for the sales tax at all.

I hope that the Senate will this afternoon show its interest in economy. Everyone connected with the Government is constantly shouting about economy, but when it comes to a vote there is always some reason why they can vote on the other side. We will go out on the hustings and talk about economy, but here is where we practice economy for the Government, if at all. It is the only place where it can be done. The only place where we can accomplish economy for the Government is in the Congress. I appeal to the Senate this afternoon, when we shall vote on this matter, to vote favorably upon it.

Mr. President, I ask that there be printed in full the letter from Mr. Ballantine, Under Secretary of the Treasury, part of which I quoted earlier in my remarks.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, Washington, March 14, 1932.

Washington, March 14, 1932.

My Dear Senator: In response to your letter of March 12, 1932, the following is submitted in answer to the questions upon which you have asked for information:

you have asked for information:

In your first paragraph you request estimates, first, as to the amount which would be saved to the Federal Government by the enactment of a resolution reducing appropriations, with certain exceptions, by 10 per cent; and, second, what would be saved by the enactment of a resolution providing for the suspension of consideration by the Treasury Department of claims for refunds of taxes paid during the period of the war. As indicated in my telephone conversation with you to-day, the Treasury is not able to furnish you with this information at the present time. The desired estimates would require a detailed analysis of appropriations and of pending claims for refunds.

desired estimates would require a detailed analysis of appropriations and of pending claims for refunds.

As already explained to you informally in connection with your second inquiry, the Budget for the fiscal year 1933, as summarized in the table on pages 25 and 26 of the Annual Report of the Secretary of the Treasury for the fiscal year 1931, includes amounts due in that year from foreign governments on their obligations to the United States. That is to say, the estimated receipts for the fiscal year 1933 already include $195,094,690 for interest and $74,831,881 for principal, making a total of about $270,000,000. On the other hand, expenditures for 1933 include $69,138,800 which represents the portion of the receipts due from foreign governments which would be required to be applied to the retirements of outstanding government obligations. I have interpreted your question as referring to the full fiscal year 1933, although you mention specifically the first month of that fiscal year; it so happens that no payments are due from foreign governments in the month of July, the first due in that fiscal year being a relatively small amount in the month of November. For the most part, the payments are made in December and June.

the most part, the payments are made in December and June. It is understood on the basis of our conversation that your third inquiry concerning the additional taxes which would be collected should the capital gains and losses provisions of the present law be repealed was intended to cover merely the repeal of the loss provisions. As I have already explained, the disallowance of losses incurred from dealings in property in a given year as deductions against income might in many cases make the collection of the tax impossible, since the proposal would mean that an individual whose operations in a given year had resulted in profits which were subsequently wiped out by corresponding losses would in fact have no income from such operations with which to pay the taxes due on his profitable transactions. The Treasury is not in a position to furnish an estimate of the effect of your proposal upon the revenues. Statistics tabulated from individual income-tax returns do not show the total amount of income received from profitable transactions, but rather the net amount of profit or loss for each return.

of profit or loss for each return.

As regards your request for estimates of the probable effect on revenues of certain increases in the surtax rates applicable to higher brackets of income, which would increase the maximum surtax rate to 65 per cent on amounts of income in excess of $600,000, it is estimated that in view of the sharp reduction which has taken place in the income reported in these high brackets the rates in question would provide about $14,000,000 of revenue in the fiscal year 1933 in addition to the $112,000,000 of additional revenue which it is estimated that the provisions of H. R. 10236 would yield exclusive of the effect of the administrative provisions of that act.

As to the question of finding relief in the present budgetary situation from a reduction in the sinking-fund retirements, as required by existing legislation, it should be borne in mind that the program upon which the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives is acting is one which calls for the balancing of the Budget for the fiscal year 1933, exclusive of statutory debt retirements for that year. The amount of the deficit on the basis of the existing revenue law is estimated at $1,738,000,000. This figure includes $497,000,000 of statutory debt retirements, so that the deficit, exclusive of the latter amount, is $1,241,000,000, or $5,000,000 less than the amount provided for in the committee's program.

By the provisions of the Victory Liberty loan act approved March 3, 1919, as amended, the sinking fund was created and a definite program of debt retirement was set up with a view to assuring the orderly reduction of the public debt. The Treasury would be strongly opposed to any measure which would essentially alter this program even in years when, as in 1931 and the current fiscal year, increase in the debt is unavoidable, and when, as proposed for the fiscal year 1933, there will be no net reduction in the public debt. It is essential that the Government should continue to charge its Budget with an annual contribution to the sinking fund as provided for in the law. By so doing, it recognizes and accepts its obligation to fulfill the sinking-fund requirements which constitute a part of its undertaking with the holders of its obligations.

I regret that your letter did not reach the Treasury until this morning, so that it has been impossible for me to respond as promptly as you had hoped.

Verq truly yours,

A. A. BALLANTINE, Under Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. Kenneth McKellar, United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I want to be heard on the point of order, if a point of order is to be made against the latter part of the amendment submitted by the Senator from Tennessee.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The point of order has not yet been made. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, it does not seem possible, upon the consideration of this amendment, to settle the problems relating to a new revenue measure. Nevertheless every reduction that is made in expenditures under the general appropriation bills diminishes the magnitude of the problem relating to the balancing of the Budget. I know that it may be said that a horizontal reduction in appropriations is an unscientific method of accomplishing economy; but, Mr. President, it is a practical method of accomplishing an end with which almost every Member of | this body has avowed himself in sympathy.

When we analyze the increased expenditures of the Federal Government it becomes very apparent that Congress has yielded to entreaties and demands for the broadening of the sphere of Federal activities and for the intensification of Federal efforts. That process has not yet stopped. It is in progress now. There is not a Senator who hears me but daily receives urgent requests from constituents and from others for the establishment of some new Government agency, for the expenditure of additional Federal funds, and at the same time our mail is filled with appeals for the elimination of proposals for increasing the revenue.

We can not determine those questions on a single bill or amendment, but we can determine whether we are going to adopt an effective policy of making certain that we will operate the Government within the aggregate amount of its revenues. It is the Budget system crystallized and intensified. In years gone by we have frequently seen general appropriation bills fail of passage and in order to avoid extraordinary sessions of the Congress there have been passed joint resolutions making available lump-sum appropriations to be administered by the various departments of the Government, the specific appropriations for which had failed. This end can be accomplished in that way if we have a disposition to take hold of it and try to work it out.

The Department of the Interior is a very good one on which to begin. Many of its bureaus have become more or less antiquated or obsolete. Some of its principal activities have been diminished to the extent that the bureaus controlling them could be easily abolished. An outstanding citizen of this country, a gentleman of broad experience in both private and public matters, a student of the great problems which underlie the difficulties with which we are now confronted, in an article published by the National News Syndicate, has frankly advocated the abolition of the Department of the Interior. We have heard dozens of speeches made on the floor of the Senate advocating the reduction in size of the Federal Government. It is one of those things about which one speaks eloquently, but if anything is to be done there is only speechmaking and feeble action. This gentleman, Mr. Charles S. Barrett, formerly and for many years president of the Farmers' Union, expresses the opinion that the Department of the Interior may be abolished and such activities as are essential to be carried on may be transferred to other departments and continued there and notable economies thus accomplished. I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD at the end of my remarks the article to which I have referred.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See Exhibit A.)

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. As has already been stated, we are constantly talking about reducing the size of the Federal Government and reducing Federal activities. This amendment is not sufficient, in my judgment, to accomplish the balancing of the Budget because, when we have done this, we have only done a small part of what it will be necessary to do. It is about time that some one who favors abolishing bureaus, boards, commissions, and departments should specify some bureaus or boards that might be abolished.

It is about time we were getting down to a practical view of the subject. We all realize that it is not an easy thing to do. It is much easier to talk about it than it is to carry it into effect. It may be that we will go on seeking new sources of revenue and raising existing tax levies until the burden will become so oppressive that the whole structure will crumble in ruin. It is quite possible that might come if this so-called depression should continue throughout a prolonged period.

But the point I am emphasizing is if we are in earnest, if we want to take hold of this subject and demonstrate our earnestness, it is a practical way of accomplishing a wholesome end to make a horizontal reduction. We must admit when we present the issue that it will occasion difficulties and inconvenience. It may in some instances impair in a degree the efficiency of the service. But if the paramount object to be accomplished is to reduce Government expenditures and avoid imposing constantly increasing burdens of taxation, the time is at hand when we should take hold of the subject and deal with it aggressively and courageously.

EXHIBIT A

ABOLISH THE UNITED STATES INTERIOR DEPARTMENT

By Charles S. Barrett

The politicians, the statesmen, and everybody else rave against the centralization of power in Washington. The demand for the abolishment of departments, bureaus, and commissions is universal. The cry for reduction in taxation is also heard on every versal. The cry for reduction in taxation is also heard on every hand. This cry and demand are going to continue unless some one does something more than talk.

If the people, the dear people, knew how they had been imposed upon in this matter there would be more hell to pay than you have ever heard of. Just think of the number of men in Congress who have been here from 5 to 25 years, who came here talking about abolishing something or other and are still talking about it. They know that it sounds well to the voters.

PERFECT PLACE TO START

There were several speeches made about this same matter in the Senate last week. My dear friend, James Hamilton Lewis, made a great speech, but he did not say anything about what particular department he would abolish. Now, Mr. Voter, let us put the boys on record. We are telling them where to start. The Interior Department should be abolished. It is a perfect place to I defy anyone to go over the record of this department as well as scrutinize its operations to-day and not agree, if he will be honest with himself, the Government, and the people, that not only is this the place to begin abolishing something but that a distinct service to the country will be rendered by abolishing

UNWHOLESOME REGINNING

Frankly, I shudder to think of the iniquities growing out of the Interior Department. Whatever, if any, arguments there were for justifying the establishment of this department have long ceased to exist. The tens of millions of dollars annually to be saved by abolishing this department would prove valuable in our important and necessary economy program.

The Interior Department, as many will recall who watched its inception and have followed its operations, was fostered and promoted through unwholesome motives of special interests who used this department to purioin much of our choicest public domain in the West. Not only did this mark its inception but all through the long years of its operation this department has been charged with incompetency and often flagrant graft.

SOME SCANDALS

One of the greatest, if not the greatest, scandals in the history of the Nation occurred through the machinations of this department. Information coming into my hands leads me to believe that there is prejudice, inefficiency, and congonance in that department

My readers may, and most naturally will, ask, "What is to be done about handling matters of routine and detail in the various activities now under this department?" The answer to this is one of the easiest our statesmen could be called upon to make. In fact, it is so easy that they can scarcely find any excuse for delay in giving the Government and the people relief by abolishing this well-termed "iniquitous department."

EXCUSE FOR DEPARTMENT GONE

The excuse for creating this department was primarily to handle our vast public domain—the free or public lands in the West. Then from time to time additional duties were allocated to it.

Now, our public domain is practically gone. What has not been purloined with the knowledge and consent of officials of this department is of such minor value that we rightly may consider the public domain as a thing of the past. Of all the other activities of this department their allocation among existing departments would add to efficiency in handling them and could be done without serious burden on their existing machinery.

PUT SECRETARIES TO WORK

This might go to the extent of making some department Secretaries so busy they would be compelled to remain at their desks and work instead of traveling over the country making political speeches in support of whatever administration was in power. This might prove a political hardship, but would add immensely to the efficiency of government.

The activities of the Interior Department in their order as named in the appropriation bill before Congress for funds to carry on the operations of the department taken in the order named almost automatically reallocate themselves.

ALLOCATIONS NOT DIFFICULT

The General Land Office rightly belongs under the Department of Agriculture. What department is so adapted to handle everything in the land program? The Agriculture Department should embrace the Bureau of Indian Affairs. Scarcely an item of this bureau now but what the Department of Agriculture has an interest and an activity in. Let it take them all over.

The Bureau of Reclamation should never have been anywhere except under the Department of Agriculture. Geological Survey belongs in the Department of Commerce along with the Bureau of Mines. National Park Service, in view of forests, grazing lands, and roadways is logically for the Department of Agriculture.

SENSIBLE REPLACEMENTS

The Office of Education could well be allocated to the Depart-

The Office of Education could well be allocated to the Department of Commerce in the best of wisdom. Government in Territories is so related to matters in which the Department of Agriculture now exercises great activity that Territories could wisely be allocated to this department.

St. Elizabeths Hospital belongs under the War and Navy. Columbia Institution for the Deaf and Howard University, along with Education, could well go under the Department of Commerce, as could the Freedmen's Hospital, where it would be as well administered as under the Interior Department, and likely well administered as under the Interior Department, and likely with greater efficiency.

WORD TO FARMERS

The allocation of these activities is neither a difficult nor serious problem. The great issue is whether or not we shall permit the inexcusable continuance of the Interior Department. We have a right to call upon our statesmen to make good their complaints against centralization of government in Washington and begin some abolishing when the department to be abolished is so plainly discerned and the wisdom of abolishing it is so apparent.

In this connection I want to say a word to the American farmer.

As you know, I headed a great national farm organization for nearly a quarter of a century. In that entire time it was never said or even intimated that I ever at any time misled, or tried to mislead, the American farmer.

TIME FOR ACTION

I am telling you now that you have been abused and defrauded through this department of government and that now is the time to strike for its abolishment. You do not need any consent from any Government official nor have to fill out any question-naire. You only need to draw on your own intelligence and your own self-interest in better, more efficient, and honest Government to spur you to action.

You write now to your Senators and Representatives in Congress. Not one of them but knows of iniquities in this department. Many of them agree that the department should be abolished. These need to know of your interest and support. The others can be incited to action by your insistence and demands if they are made impressive enough.

RESULTS ARE CERTAIN

I know that there are bold, brave statesmen who claim that they pay no attention to communications. But I am telling you, out of a quarter of a century of experience watching Congress, that your letters and telegrams are heeded, especially when they come in vast numbers. They have never failed.

I am going to give you some startling facts in my statement next week concerning this department. These facts, based upon the records, and proven before I even thought of giving them to you, I know will stir your interest and action as I have been stirred. The scrutinizing eye of official investigation, where men and records can be summoned under oath may yet be necessary. Such an investigation of this department has never been made.

TURN TALK INTO ACTION

We are going into this fight with justice on the side of abolishing such a sore and useless spot in governmental life. The voice of every statesman, nearly, with a vote in Congress, has already been raised against useless departments, bureaus, and commissions.

Now is the time for them to give some commendable per-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. McNARY obtained the floor.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President-

Mr. McNARY. I yield to the Senator from Utah to make the point of order, if that is his desire.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will not the Senator from Utah let it go over until morning so we can discuss it? I do not believe the amendment is subject to a point of order. I am not at all sure that it is.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I desire to discuss the point of order, too.

Mr. SMOOT. Then I will merely enter the point of order, and the Chair need not rule on it until to-morrow.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will not rule upon the point of order until Senators have been heard.

PROPOSED SALES TAX

Mr. NEELY. An exceedingly able and timely editorial entitled "The Sales Tax Confiscatory," appeared last Monday in the Wheeling Intelligencer, which is the leading Republican newspaper of West Virginia.

The editorial was written by the Hon. H. C. Ogden, one of the country's most famous newspaper proprietors and one of West Virginia's most capable and influential men.

I ask unanimous consent that the editorial be read from the Secretary's desk:

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Out of order and, without objection, the clerk will read, as requested.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

[From the Wheeling Intelligencer, March 14, 1932] THE SALES TAX CONFISCATORY

Secretary of the Treasury Mills is certainly an official of a buoyant and airy disposition. Burdens which rest heavily on the ordinary man are disposed of by Mr. Mills as mere bagatelles.

Referring to the proposed 2½ per cent manufacturers sales tax, Mr. Mills expressed the belief that it is so low that practically no one will feel it, Either Mr. Mills never conducted a manufacturing operation and employed labor, or his path has been an unusually rosy one. Instead of a 2½ per cent sales tax being negligible, it is more accurate to say that it approaches confiscation. If Mr. Mills will take a day off and study the income-tax returns that will be piling into the Internal Revenue offices during this week, he will find that the large majority of the manufacturers of the United States did not earn, in 1931, a profit of 5 per cent on their sales. He will find that a very large percentage of them earned no profit.

He will find that the average profit of a highly successful manufacturer is barely 10 per cent of the volume of sales.

A proposal, under these conditions, to exact a 2¼ per cent tax means, in short, a special revenue tax of the most prosperous, of 22½ per cent of their profits, and on many of them the complete confiscation of their profits, and on many more, the loading of an extra burden on heavy losses already incurred.

Manufacturers in the United States to-day pay an 11 per cent income tax. Add to that, in the case of the most prosperous, 22 to 25 per cent more, and we have approximately a 35 per cent income tax imposed on manufacturing industries. The manufacincome tax imposed on manufacturing industries. The manufacturing of the country is the basis of the country's prosperity. The men who work in the mills and factories and produce create The men who work in the mills and factories and produce create the market for the American farmer. The factories employ more than half of our working population. To put a tax burden upon these industries, ranging from 35 per cent of the income to 100 per cent of the income, would be to create the greatest hindrance to the return of national prosperity.

Why should any man in his senses seek to build a factory and employ labor, take all the chances of accidents and loss, for the purpose of paying 35 per cent of his profits in taxes if he has profits, and the further purpose of pocketing all of his own losses if he has losses?

if he has losses?

In the judgment of this newspaper, there are many less objectionable ways of raising necessary revenue than the saddling of such a burden upon business. An income tax is much more equitable. A luxury tax is far to be preferred. Finally, a reasonable bond issue, repaying to the American people part of the five or six billion dollars they have advanced toward retirement of the public debt in excess of legal requirements, might well be undertaken.

This is a time to assist business by encouraging employment, not to lay upon it a confiscatory tax.

PROHIBITION OF SOVIET IMPORTS

Mr. ODDIE. Mr. President, on behalf of the representatives of a large number of patriotic, civic, labor, business, and social organizations, I presented this morning a petition to the Hon. Ogden L. Mills, Secretary of the Treasury, protesting against the importation of Soviet products under the provisions of section 307 of the tariff act of 1930. I now ask permission to have the petition and the accompanying data published in the RECORD.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The matter referred to is as follows:

PETITION FOR THE ENFORCEMENT OF SECTION 307 OF THE TARIFF ACT OF 1930, AGAINST SOVIET PRODUCTS

MARCH 15, 1932.

Hon. Ogden L. Mills, Secretary of the Treasury, Treasury Department,

Washington, D. C. Mashington, D. C.

Mr. Secretary: We desire to submit for your consideration certain facts and observations relating to the importation into the United States of articles produced by convict or forced labor in the Soviet Union, together with extracts from the constitution, laws, and decrees in force in that country, and other evidence of the practices of the Soviet régime, all of which have a direct bearing on the enforcement of section 307 of the Tariff Act of 1930. The department has been advised by representatives of labor and agriculture, manufacturers, and producers of raw materials, individually and collectively, that imports produced under the conditions of virtual slavery which exist in the Soviet Union are a serious menace to many branches of industry and agriculture in the United States. The Treasury Department is also aware that for years past patriotic societies, separately and together, have painstakingly investigated and established by unimpeachable evidence the true nature of the economic system which prevails within the boundaries of the U. S. S. R. It is the belief of all these organizations that American political and economic institutions are imperiled as a result of the commercial war which is being waged by the dictatorship in Moscow upon all civilized society.

In the light of these facts, and particularly in light of the position taken by the United States concerning the recognition of the Soviet régime, we can not believe that the Treasury Department will dispute the fact that section 307 of the tariff act of 1930 was will dispute the fact that section 307 of the tariff act of 1930 was enacted to protect American industry from the competition of forced labor as that term applies to conditions of labor in Soviet Russia. The intent of the statute is clear upon this point.

The existence of forced labor throughout Russia is a matter of

The existence of forced labor throughout Russia is a matter of general and common knowledge. Communism or state socialism as it exists in Russia involves unified economic effort and makes complete and rigid control over all economic activity essential. This is not a matter of dispute. It is a fundamental element and well-known principle of the soviet system.

We may expect to find evidence of this policy in the constitution and laws of Soviet Russia. Article 9 of the constitution declares that labor is a duty of all citizens. Article 61 of the criminal code makes refusal to perform compulsory services or to carry out work of national importance a criminal offense. Article 11 of chapter 3 of the labor code provides that where there is a 11 of chapter 3 of the labor code provides that where there is a deficiency of labor for the execution of important state tasks all deficiency of labor for the execution of important state tasks all citizens may be called to labor duty by a special resolution of the Council of People's Commissars. This is the basic law of the Soviet Union and its constituent republics. No one will dispute the fact that the 5-year plan of the U. S. S. R. is the "important state task" provided by the laws.

Abundant evidence of the active and effective enforcement of these laws relating to labor is already in the files of the Treasury Department. You also have in your possession a mass of decrees and other pronouncements taken from official Russian sources, a and other pronouncements taken from official Russian sources, a number of which are attached hereto as illustrative exhibits, which definitely establish that "forced labor" in the commonly accepted sense of that term prevails throughout Russia. Therefore there is no need to take time here and now to reexamine this mass of detailed evidence.

It is our belief that the evidence already in the possession of the department establishes that "forced labor," in the commonly accepted sense of that term, is a fundamental part of the Soviet system. Any evidence secured hereafter could do no more than corroborate the evidence which already is in the possession of the department. It is improbable that the Treasury Department will be able to secure any facts relating to specific shipments of Soviet products. It may, therefore, be reasonably concluded that the question of whether or not section 307 is an effective bar against the products of "forced labor" as it exists in Russia rests on facts already before the department, and must be decided upon the basis of these facts.

of these facts.

We are not asking that the Treasury Department declare its views as to the desirability or undesirability of excluding Soviet products under section 307. We are asking whether, under section 307, the intent of Congress to exclude the products of "forced labor" will be effectively enforced against the products of that country. We assert, in that connection, that all the facts are now before the department and that a prompt decision as to the action which the department intends to take should be rendered. If you believe the law is defective, it is our purpose to urge the enactment of effective legislation. We are hopeful that the decision of the Treasury Department will make this unnecessary.

This is a matter of deep and vital interest to the patriotic societies interested in the future welfare of the United States, as well as to American labor and American industry. If you, as the executive officer of the Government charged with the enforcement of the tariff act, are of the opinion that you do not have the of the tariff act, are of the opinion that you do not have the means of enforcing section 307 against Soviet products, we ask a definite statement to that effect so that we can then present the matter to Congress for the necessary legislative action for the protection of American labor and industry from this ruinous and unfair competition and for the preservation of our economic, political, and social institutions.

American Alliance (Inc.), Walter L. Reynolds, secretary.

American Coalition of Patriotic Societies, John B. Trevor, chairman of the board.

American Farm Bureau, Chester H. Gray, Washington repre-

American Legion, John Thomas Taylor, legislative representa-

American Legion Auxiliary, Mrs. Frederick C. Williams, national president.

American Machine & Metals (Inc.), V. C. Stephens, treasurer. American Manganese Producers' Association, J. Carson Adkerson, American Manganese Development Corporation, Anthony J. Molesphini, secretary.

American Security League, Amos A. Fries, president

American Vigilant Intelligence Federation, H. A. Jung, manager-director.

American War Mothers, Mrs. L. H. Stone, national president.

American Women's Legion, Mrs. Dorothy C. Bettelheim, presi-

Amherst Mining Co., George H. Crosby, jr., treasurer.

Anglo-Saxon Federation of America, John Walter Stephens, chairman.

Anthracite Cooperative Association, Joseph F. Noonan, president.
Anthracite Institute, Brice P. Disque, executive director.
Arizona Asbestos Association, Lewis H. Brown, president.
Bear Canyon Asbestos Co., A. S. Blagden, president.
Berst-Foster-Dixfield Co., Ned G. Begle, president.
Brown Co., W. R. Brown, assistant treasurer.
Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York, J. Barstow

Smull, president.

Crown, Zellerbach Corporation, M. R. Higgins, president.

Dames of the Loyal Legion, National Society, Mrs. Rhoda C. Y. Schelly, national president.

Daughters of the American Revolution, National Society, Edith Hobart, national president general.

Daughters of the Revolution, National Society, Mrs. Eugene J.

Grant, president.

Daughters of the Revolution, of New Jersey, Charlotte C. Aycrigg, State regent.

Daughters of Union Veterans of Civil War, Harriet J. Goetz, Disabled American Veterans, Thomas Kirby, national legislative chairman; Vivian D. Corbly, national adjutant.

Domestic Manganese & Development Co., H. A. Pumpelly, vice president.

Evergreen Mines Co., D. C. Pettyjohn, assistant to general manager.

Fraternal Order of Eagles, J. C. Canty, grand worthy president. Hy-Grade Manganese Co. (Inc.), Charles H. Massie, manager. Hy-Grade Manganese Production & Sales Corporation, N. H. Mannakee, president

Independent Petroleum Association of America, Wirt Franklin,

Industrial Defense Association (Inc.), Edward H. Hunter, executive secretary

Joint Conference on the Russian Situation, George F. Zimmer, assistant to president.

Johnson City Central Labor Union, John B. Holcombe, president.

Junior Order of the American Mechanics, John H. Noyes, legislative representative.

Junior American Vigilant Intelligence Federation, Rachael E.

Holmes, president.

Kentucky Cardinal Coal Corporation. J. C. Stras, president.

Leonia Women's Republican Club, Mary P. Shelton, regent.

Long Leaf Yellow Pine (Inc.), O. N. Cloud, secretary-manager.

Manganese Mines Co. of America, L. B. Hungerford, secretary.

Merchant Tailors' Society of the City of New York, John J. T. MacNamara, secretary.

Military Order of the World War, John Ross Delafield, commander in chief.

Minnesota Sintering Co., Stanley B. Trayer, superintendent. Montana Prince Mining Co., Clinton J. Hanson, assistant treas-

National Confectioners' Association, Walter C. Hughes, secretary. National Defense Committee of American Legion, Amos A. Fries, member.

National Exchange Club, Alfred A. Jenkins, national president; Herold M. Harter, national secretary. National Immigration Legislative Committee, Demarest Lloyd, chairman.

National Grange, Fred Brenckman, Washington representative. National Lumber Manufacturers' Association, C. W. Bahr, economist

National Patriotic Council, Mrs. Noble Newport Potts, president

National Patriotic League (Inc.), H. Ralph Burton, vice president and general counsel.

National Patriotic Association of Chicago, Rachael E. Holmes, executive secretary.

National Security League (Inc.), R. L. Bullard, president.

National Society Sons and Daughters of the Pilgrims, A. C. Reeves, governor general.

National Society United States Daughters of 1812, Mary Logan Tucker, chairman national defense committee. National Sojourners (committee of 13), F. W. Sopford, C. A. C., president.

Naval and Military Order Spanish-American War, Robert Lee Longstreet, commander in chief. New Hampshire Timberland Owners Association, W. R. Brown, president

New York, Ontario & Western Railway Co., J. H. Nuelle, presi-

North Range Iron Co., D. C. Pettyjohn, assistant to general manager.

Order of Independent Americans, A. S. Losh, State councilor, Pennsylvania. Patriotic Builders of America, Mrs. William Cummings Story,

president

Patriotic Order Sons of America, Herman A. Miller, secretary. Penn Anthracite Mining Co., Charles Dorrance, president: "Speaking for 1,000,000 citizens of the State of Pennsylvania whose names have already been affixed to petitions to the President of the United States for the exclusion under section 307 of Russian anthracite, we wish their signatures as being considered signed to similar petition dated March 15, 1932, to Secretary of Treasury."

Reserve Officers Training Corps Association, Col. Orvel Johnson, executive secretary

Ridgewood Unit Republican Women, Katharine H. Stratton, vice president.

Silver Prince Mining Co., Inglis M. Uppercu, vice president. Society of Colonial Wars, Norman S. Dike, governor. Society of New England Women, New York City Colony, Mrs. L. Grant Baldwin, chairman.

Sons of the American Revolution, Josiah A. Van Orsdel, president general.

New England Lumber Manufacturers Association,

Elisha R. Bitgood, president.

Southern Pine Association, C. C. Sheppard, president.

Southern Vigilant Intelligence Association, George B. Helmer, president.

Southwestern Virginia (Inc.) (a regional chamber of commerce),

Trenton Potteries Co., John A. Campbell, president.
Trout Mining Co., V. C. Stephens, treasurer.
Union League of Michigan, Walter C. Cole, vice president.
United Daughters of the Confederacy, Mrs. James Harvie Dew (New York).

United States Air Force Association, Col. J. Edward Cassidy, United States Air Force Association, Col. 3. Edward Cassilly, director general.

U. & S. Mining & Development Co., Leslie L. Savage, president. Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, Darold D. DeCoe, commander in chief; L. S. Ray, chairman legislation committee. Veterans of Foreign Wars, Ladies' Auxiliary, Dora E. Raffensperger, national president.

Virginia Federation of Women's Clubs, American citizenship committee, Helen Norris Cummings, State chairman. Westchester Security League, Mrs. Henry Perez, president's representative.

West Coast Lumbermen's Association, W. B. Greeley, secretarymanager.

West Coast Manganese Corporation, Ernest A. Wiltsee, vice west Coast Ranganese Corporation

president.
White Band (Inc.), J. W. Scott-Sanders, brigadier general, department of mobilization.
Whitmarsh Mining Co., J. D. Enright, secretary.
Women of Army and Navy Legion of Valor, Mrs. Charlotte Rock, national president Women Descendants Ancient and Honorable Artillery, Mrs. Julia

A. Jewett, president.
Women's Patriotic League of America, Mrs. Joseph L. McCarthy, president; Mrs. F. E. Grant, chairman committee on subversive

PARTIAL LIST OF MEMBERS OF CONGRESS ACCOMPANYING DELEGATION TUESDAY MORNING, MARCH 15, TO PRESENT A PETITION THAT IMPORTS OF MANGANESE, LUMBER, MATCHES, COAL, OIL, PULPWOOD, ASBESTOS, AGRICULTURAL AND ALL OTHER PRODUCTS FROM SOVIET RUSSIA BE PROHIBITED ENTRY INTO THE UNITED STATES

Senators: Henry F. Ashurst, Arizona; James F. Byrnes, South Carolina; C. C. Dill, Washington; Frederick Hale, Maine; Carl Hayden, Arizona; Matthew M. Neely, West Virginia; Peter Norbeck, South Dakota; Tasker L. Oddie, Nevada; Frederick Steiwer, Oregon; and Thomas J. Walsh, Montana.

Representatives: Samuel Arentz, Nevada; Carl G. Bachmann,

Representatives: Samuel Arentz, Nevada; Carl G. Bachmann, West Virginia; Robert L. Bacon, New York; Fred A. Britten, Illinois; George F. Brumm, Pennsylvania; Thomas G. Burch, Virginia; Wesley E. Disney, Oklahoma; Edmund F. Erk, Pennsylvania; Edward E. Eslick, Tennessee; Hamilton Fish, Jr., New York; John W. Fishburne, Virginia; Godfrey G. Goodwin, Minnesota; Robert S. Hall, Mississippi; Willis C. Hawley, Oregon; David Hopkins, Missouri; Ralph Horr, Washington; Thomas A. Jenkins, Ohio; Lamar Jeffers, Alabama; Bolivar E. Kemp, Louisiana; Samuel A. Kendall, Pennsylvania; John C. Ketchum, Michigan; Charles H. Martin, Oregon; Malcolm C. Tarver, Georgia; Schuyler O. Bland, Virginia; Martin Dies, Texas; Zebulon Weaver, North Carolina; William Williamson, South Dakota; and Mell G. Underwood, Ohio.

Exhibits, description, and source of information
Exhibit No.	Description	Source
1	Extract from the constitution of the R. S. F. S. R.	Art. 9,
2	Extracts from the criminal code of the R. S. F. S. R.	Arts. 20, 61, 133, and 135.
3	Labor code of the R. S. F. S. R. (1922 edition, with amendments up to 1931).	Ch. III, arts. 11 and 12.
4	Annex No. 3 to labor code: Conditions of Labor in the Preparation and Floating of Timber.	or their month over the
5	Circular of the People's Commissariat of Justice of the R. S. F. S. R., dated Jan. 14, 1929, No. 5.	Published in the Bulletin of Financial and Economic Legislation, No. 8 of 1929, p. 56.
6	Instruction of the People's Commissariat of Agriculture of the R. S. F. S. R., dated June 1, 1929.	Published in the Bulletin of Financial and Economic Leg- islation No. 26 of 1929, p. 35.
7	Decree of the Council of People's Commissars of the R. S. F. S. R., dated Oct. 5, 1929.	Published in the Bulletin of Financial and Economic Leg- islation, No. 42 of Oct. 18, p. 40.
8	Decree of the central executive committee and the Council of People's Commissars of the U. S. S. K. of Nov. 23, 1929, as to criminal responsibility for the production of inferior goods and failure to observe standards.	Published in the Bulletin of Financial and Economic Leg- islation, No. 3, Jan. 27, 1930, p. 51.

Exh	ibits, description, and source of	information—Continued
xhibit No.	Description	Source
9	Decree of the central executive committee of the R. S. F. S. R. (VTSIK) and the Council of People's Commissars of the R. S. F. S. R., dated Feb. 13, 1930.	Collection of Laws of the R. S. F. S. R., 1930, No. 9, Ch. 107.
10	Circular of the People's Commissariat of Labor of the R. S. F. S. R. and of the directorate of timber floating of the Supreme Council of National Economy of the U. S. S. R. of Feb. 13, 1930, No. 24, regarding the supply of workers for timber floating during the 1930 season.	Bulletin of Financial and Economic Legislation, No. 11 of Apr. 17, 1930, p. 41.
11	Circular of the People's Commissariat of Labor of the U. S. S. R. and R. S. F. S. R., of the Supreme Council of National Economy, of the People's Commissariat of Agriculture, and of the Collective Ferry Admissiration	Published in the Bulletin of Financial and Economic Legis- lation, No. 8 of Mar. 17, 1930, p. 56.
12	of the U. S. S. R., Mar. 3, 1930. Circular of the People's Commissariat of Labor of the U. S. S. R. in agreement with the People's Commissariat of Transport and the central committees of the Local Transport Union, dated Mar. 22, 1930.	Published in the Bulletin of Financial and Economic Legis- lation, No. 16 of June 7, 1930, p. 47.
13	Decree of the People's Commissariat of Labor of the R. S. F. S. R. of Sept. 12, 1930, No. S3, regarding measures for securing workers for loading and unloading operations in the autumn of 1930.	Published in the Bulletin of Financial and Economic Legis- lation, No. 27 of Sept. 27, 1930, p. 64.
14	Decree of the Central Executive and the Council of People's Commissars of the U. S. S. R., Nov. 3, 1930.	Published in Izvestia of Nov. 12, 1930.
15	Decision of the People's Commissariat of of Labor of the U. S. S. R. regarding the reorganization of the labor market.	Published in Izvestia, Nov. 5, 1930.
16	Decree of the Council of People's Com- missars of the R. S. F. S. R. of Dec. 8, 1930, concerning the employment of women in industry and in state and	Published in Izvestia of Dec. 20, 1930.
17	cooperative administrations.  Decree of the Central Executive Committee and Council of People's Commissars of the U. S. S. R., dated Dec.	Published in Izvestia of Dec. 17, 1930.
18	<ol> <li>15, 1930.</li> <li>Decree of the People's Commissariat of Labor of the U. S. S. R. of Dec. 23, 1930, No. 374, concerning the registra- tion and dispatch to work of persons seeking work.</li> </ol>	Published in Izvestia of Dec. 29, 1930.
19	Resolution of the central committee of the All-Union Communist Party, of Oct. 20, 1930, relative to measures for plan-governed supply of labor man- power to national economic life, and struggle against the tendencies to fre- quent change of employment.	Izvestia, No. 292, Moscow, Oct. 22, 1930.
20	Resolution of the People's Commissariat of Labor, No. 314, dated Oct. 9, 1930, relative to suspension of unemployment allowances and the employment of those not working.	Za Industrializatsiu, No. 239, Moscow, Oct. 11, 1930.
21	Resolution of the People's Commissariat of Labor of the U. S. S. R., of Jan. 16, 1931, concerning the sending back to work on the railway lines of persons who formerly worked in the railway service.	Izvestia, No. 18, Jan. 18, 1931. Moscow.
22	Resolution of the People's Commissariat of Labor of the U. S. S. R. defining persons who are regarded as malicious	Izvestia, No. 19, Moscow, Jan. 19, 1931.
23	disorganizers of production.  Order of the People's Commissariat of Labor, the Supreme Soviet of National Economy, and the Kolkhozcenter	Za Industrializatsiu, Moscow, No. 207, July 29, 1931.
24	regarding the recruitment of workers. Circular of the People's Commissariats of the U. S. S. R. and the R. S. F. S. R., of the Collective Farm Central Administration of the U. S. S. R., the Supreme Soviet of National Economy of the U. S. S. R., and the People's Commissariat of Agriculture of the U. S. S. R., dated Mar. 3, 1930, U. S. S. R. Labor Commissariat's No.	Supply of man power to seasonal (periodical) industries (literally: * * to seasonal branches of national economic life), collection of directives * * issued by the Commissariat of Labor of the R. S. F. S. R., Moscow, 1930. (Published in Moscow Izvestia, No. 8, 1930.)
25	87, concerning the assignment of labor man power to work in seasonal indus- tries.  Excerpts from resolution of the central	Izvestia, No. 14. Moscow, Jan.
	executive committee of the U. S. S. R. concerning the training of skilled laborers for the national economy of the U. S. S. R., signed by president of the central executive committee—M	14, 1931.
26	Kalinin, and secretary of the central executive committee, A. Ennkidze. Resolution of the Collegium of the People's Commissariat for Supply of the U. S. S. R. of Jan. 13, 1931, No. 42.	Informative bulletin of the cen- trosoyuz of the U. S. S. R. and R. S. F. S. R., Nos. 4-6, Mos-description of the all-Russian central executive committee and Soviet of People's Commissars of the R. S. F. S. R., concerning measures for the expansion of timber procuring and timber floating operations.
27	Resolution of the all-Russian central executive committee and Soviet of People's Commissars of the R. S. F.	cow, Jan. 31, 1931, p. 36. Izvestia, No. 45, Moscow, Feb. 15, 1930.

Exhibits, description, and source of information—Continued

Exhibits, description, and source of information-Continued

Exhibit No.	Description	Source	Exhibit No.	Description	Source
28	Decision of the Collegium of the People's Commissariat of Labor of the U. S. S. R. instituting criminal liability for evading mobilization.	Za Industrializatsiu, No. 225, Sept. 25, 1930.	53	Excerpt from an article regarding de- sertions of workers from various dis- tricts; emphasis on necessity of kulak labor.	Pravda Severa, Archangel, No. 87, Apr. 18, 1931.
29	Circular No. 13 of the People's Commis- sariat of Justice of the R. S. F. S. R. of Feb. 6, 1931, regarding extension of cooperation by organs of the prosecut-	Bulletin of Financial and Eco- nomic Legislation, No. 14, p. 27, May 17, 1931.	54	Excerpts from an article entitled "Party work in the forest."  Deserters of labor to be prosecuted	Lumber operations of the third year of the 5-year period, page 65, Archangel, 1931. Krasnaya Gazeta, Leningrad, ing office to the carrying out of lumber operations. To the Kray and Oblast prosecutors.		56	Excerpts from an article entitled "The seventh plant splits a thousand beams	Mar. 17, 1930. Pravda Severa, Archangel, No. 93, Apr. 26, 1931, page 5.
30	Excerpts from statute of the board of management attached to the chief administration of places of confinement of the People's Commissariat of the Interior of the R. S. F. S. R. "Combine of factory labor colonies of the State administration of places of confinement and enterprises of the committee of assistance" under the abbreviated name "Combine F. T. K.	Sobrante Uzakoneni I Raspori- azheni Raboche Krestianskovo Pravitelstva R. S. F. S. R. No. 45, June 18, 1930.	57	per day—A still greater number should be split." Recommends punishment for absentee workers.  Instruction concerning the preferential supply to members of shock brigades, issued by the Secretary of the All-Union Central Soviet of Labor Unions; Vice People's Commissar for Supply; Vice President of the Administration of the Centrosoyuz.	Trud, No. 95, Moscow, Apr. 7, 1931.
81	Gumz." Directions issued by the court of the northern territory concerning lumbering 1930-31. Courts officially ordered	Sudebnaya Praktika (court practice) of the R. S. F. S. R., No. 17-18, Dec. 30, 1930, p. 18.	58 59	Summary of resolution of the central committee of the All-Union Com- munist Party of Feb. 5, 1930. Advertisement for deserter.	Economic Life, No. 30, Moscow, Feb. 6, 1930.  Izvestia, No. 43, Moscow, Feb.
. 32	to increase their output of convict lumbermen.  Translation of excerpts from the Soviet press saleting to labor in the forests of	Newspapers published during the period Nov. 22, 1929-Nov.	€0	Central committee plan regarding party and labor-union work and the training of Cadees for the Nizhni-Novgorod	13, 1931. Pravda, Moscow, No. 113, Apr. 24, 1631.
33	the U.S.S.R. Translation of excerpts from the Soviet press relating to labor in the coal mines of the U.S.S.R.	26, 1930. Newspapers published during the period Dec. 1, 1929-Oct. 25, 1930.	61	automobile plant (excerpts from). Newspaper article "Production trial of rapacious workers and deserters from	Izvestia, No. 48, Moscow, Feb. 18, 1931.
34 35	Newspaper article "The march of the farm laborers to the Donetz Basin." Resolution of the Northern Kray Com- mittee of the All-Union Communist	Izvestia, No. 211, Moscow, Aug. 2, 1930. Pravda Severa, Archangel, No. 24, p. 1, Jan. 31, 1931.	62	the transport service."  Newspaper article "Severe measures should be applied toward labor deserters."	Izvestia, No. 42, Moscow, Feb. 12, 1931.
36	Party (of Bolsheviks) regarding lumber operations and the work of	Prayda, Moscow, Sept. 19, 1930.	63	Order of Shadunts, Chairman of the Board of the Central Asiatic Cotton Combine, dismissing Deserter	Za Industrializatsiu, No. 12, Moscow, Jan. 12, 1531. Pravda Vostoka, Tasakent, No. 210, page 1, Aug. 2, 1331.
	An article regarding the decree of the Council of Labor and Defense of Sept. 14 (1930 ?) to stimulate lumbering by attaching extraordinary committees of six to respective district executive committees and the central executive committees and the central executive com-		65	Gorielov.  Notice from the Moscow Oblast Prosecution Department publishing names of labor deserters and giving warning	Za Industrializatsiu, No. 228, Sept. 28, 1930.
37	mittees of automonous republics.  Article entitled "Compulsory timber service in Urals—Extraordinary triumvirates formed."	Za Industrializatsiu, Moscow, Sept. 23, 1930.	66 67	of criminal prosecution.  Excerpt from newspaper article relative to leniency shown to labor deserter.  Advertisement for deserter.	Za Industrializatsiu, No. 129, Moscow, May 12, 1931. Za Industrializatsiu, No. 49, Mcscow, Feb. 19, 1931.
38	Article entitled "Compulsory service	Pravda, Moscow, Sept. 27, 1930.	68	do	Za Industrializatsiu, No. 47,
39	Excerpts from article entitled "Deserters should be returned to the forest and to timber cutting."	Pravda Severa, Archangel, No. 53, p. 3, Mar. 7, 1931.	DO DA	do	8, 1931, Moscow,
40	Explanation of the plenum of the Su- preme Court of the R. S. F. S. R. of Mar, 16, 1931, Protocol No. 3, regarding	Bulletin of Financial and Eco- nomic Legislation, No. 16, June, 7, 1931, p. 74.	0.00	do	26, 1931.
	the manner of serving terms of compul- sory labor for members of collective farms sentenced to compulsory labor		72	do	24, 1931.
41	by the courts.  Excerpts from a speech of Comrade  Krylenko at the conference of the People's Commissariat of Justice and of	Soviet justice, No. 12, p. 6, Apr. 30, 1931.	73 74	do representatives of the press on Apr. 4, 1931, subject "Tasks of the press con- nected with the struggle for revolu- tionary legality in the period of recon-		75 76	do	26, 1931.  Za Industrializatsiu, No. 55, Moscow, Feb. 23, 1931.  Economic Life, No. 196, Oct. 19,
42	laks who have failed to execute the tasks set must be brought to court within 5 days"	Pravda Severa, Archangel, No. 94, p. 8, Apr. 27, 1931.  Pravda Severa, Archangel, No.	77	Judgment Over Labor Deserters.  Message of the central committee of the All-Union Communist Party (of Bolsheviks): To all party, economic, labor union, and Communist Youth	1930. Izvestia, No. 243, Moscow, Sept. 3, 1930.
43	Excerpts from an article entitled "To supervise daily the actual execution of set tasks by all kulaks." Excerpts from article entitled "The	94, p. 1, Apr. 27, 1931.  Pravda Severa, Archangel, No.	78	organizations (excerpts from).  Explanation of the types of penitentiary colonies.	Small Soviet Encyclopedia, vol. 8, column 977, Moscow, 1931.
44	blows dealt to the enemies of floating should be increased." Criticism of lenity toward kulaks and well-to-do peasants.	114, p. 2, May 24, 1931.	79	Description of Bab-Cubs convict timber camp (sketch of a small timber camp).	Solovetskie Ostrova, the month- ly journal, the organ of the management of the Solovetsky camp of the O. G. P. U., No.
45	Excerpts from article regarding the float- ing program being threatened by de- crease in laborers.	Pravda, Moscow, No. 145, p. 3, May 28, 1931.	80	Namenana artiala giuing advassa living	camp of the O. G. P. U., No. 7, p. 10; printed and published at the Solovetsky Island camp in the White Sea, July, 1926. Ekonomicheskaya Zhizn, Mos-
46	Excerpts from an article entitled "The work of collective farms."	Lumber operations of the third year of the 5-year period, p. 66, Archangel, 1931.	81	Newspaper article giving adverse living conditions of lumbermen in the north- ern forests; causes. Excerpt from an article on "State trade	cow, July 29, 1928.  Vsia Moskva, 1930.
47	Newspaper article, "To answer in court for evading mobilization. Explana- tion of the prosecuting department of the Republic."	Za Industrializatsiu, No. 216, Moscow, Sept. 14, 1930.	82	collection enterprise of the Moscow places of confinement."  Excerpt from English language article	V. O. K. S., No. 2, p. 7, 1931.
48	Compulsory labor service for nepmen	Kraspaya Gazeta, Leningrad, Aug. 30, 1930.		entitled "Obligatory labor or forced labor;" a defense of obligatory labor.
49	Excerpt from newspaper article relative to guaranteeing an ample supply of labor for construction.	Economic Life, Moscow, Aug. 29, 1930.	83 84	Excerpt from an article on penal labor colonies.  The replacing of prisons by labor colo-	Soviet Penal Labor Law, Mos- cow, 1931 (p. 90). Soviet Penal Labor Law, p. 89,
50	Newspaper article "Not a single log to be left in the water; the program to be executed in full."	Pravda, No. 272, Moscow, Oct. 2, 1930.	85	nies for convicts (excerpts from). Convict timber colonies trebled since	Moscow, 1931. Sovietskoye Ispravitel-no-trudo-
51	Excerpt from a resolution of the Moscow Soviet, dated Oct. 4, 1930, relative to establishment of canteens and ration- ing of goods.	The Izvestia of the Moscow Oblast executive committee, No. 109, of Oct. 10, 1930.		1929.	voye Pravo, the official university course on Soviet peni- tentiary labor justice published by the Commissariat of the
52	member of the control commission, relative to institution of legal proceed- ings against the presidents of the	Pravda, No. 289, Moscow, Oct. 19, 1930.	200	Definition of Ishan coloniar (second)	Interior of the R. S. F. S. R. for the State Institute for studying crime and criminals, Moscow, 1931.
	Rodvin and Ustiansk rayon executive committees,		86	Definition of labor colonies (excerpts)	Small Soviet Encyclopedia, Moscow, 1930.

Exhibits, description, and source of information-Continued

Exhibit No.	Description	Source
87	Order dated Oct. 23, 1931, of Lintin, acting director of the chief administration of penitentiary labor institutions to the Kray and Oblast boards of management of penitentiary labor institutions; concerning the remuneration	Sovietskava Yustitsia, No. 30, p. 33, Nov. 7, 1931.
88	for the labor of persons banished and performing penitentiary labor. Circular No. 105 of Sept. 14, 1931, signed by Lintin, acting director of the chief administration of places of confine- ment, to the chiefs of the Kray and Oblast boards of management of places of confinement, etc., regarding the industrial and financial plan for the fourth quarter of 1931.	Sovietskaja Yustitsia, No. 28, page 31, Oct. 10, 1931.
89	Excerpts from article entitled "Shame- ful situation on the Vamsherenga River"—lumber work threatened by distortion of socialistic organization of workers.	Pravda Severa, Archangel, No. 108, p. 3, May 17, 1931.
90	An order of the central executive com- mittee, and of the Soviet of People's Commissars of the U. S. S. R. dated June 30, 1931, regarding privileges to peasants migrating for seasonal work.	Za Industrializatsiu, Moseow, No. 179, July 1, 1931.
91	Resolution of the central executive com- mittee and Soviet of People's Com- missars permitting enterprises, insti- tutions, and organizations of the socialized sector to hire workmen and employees without applying to labor	Izvestia, Moscow, No. 259, p. 4, Sept. 19, 1931.
92	organs.  Summary of lecture by Comrade P. I.  Stuchka at sector of law of the Institute of Soviet Construction and Law on "The transition from compulsory labor by court sentence to voluntary labor."	Sovetskaya Yustitsia (Soviet Justice) organ of the People's Commissariat of Justice of the R. S. F. S. R., Apr. 10, 1931.

EXHIBIT No. 1

EXTRACT FROM THE CONSTITUTION OF THE R. S. F. S. R.

ART. 9. The Russian Socialist Federated Soviet Republic recognizes labor as the duty of all citizens of the Republic.

EXHIBIT No. 2

EXTRACTS FROM THE CRIMINAL CODE OF THE R. S. F. S. R.

ART. 20. Measures of social protection of a correctional character are the following:

(b) Deprivation of liberty in correctional labor camps in remote parts of the U. S. S. R.

(c) Deprivation of liberty in general places of confinement.

(d) Compulsory labor without deprivation of liberty.

(g) Banishment from the R. S. F. S. R. or from a particular locality, with or without compulsory settlement in other localities, or with or without prohibition to reside in particular localities.

ART. 61. Refusal to perform compulsory services or national tasks or to carry out work of national importance entails:

For the first offense—A fine, imposed by the competent authorities, not exceeding a limit of five times the cost of the task, service, or work imposed. For the second offense—Deprivation of liberty or compulsory labor for a period not exceeding one year.

Acts committed by a group of persons by previous agreement, in manifestly active opposition to the authorities in the execution of such service, task, or work, entail deprivation of liberty for a period not exceeding two years, with confiscation of property in whole or in part, with or without banishment from the locality concerned. ART. 133. * Arr, 133. * * * The subjection of workers, in violation of the regulations on the protection of labor, to conditions of work which deprive or might deprive them of their capacity for work entails deprivation of liberty for not more than two years or compulsory labor for not more than one year or a fine not exceeding 500 rubles.

ART. 135. The obstruction of the lawful work of factory and local committees, of trade-unions, or of their delegates, entails deprivation of liberty or compulsory labor for not more than one year, or a fine not exceeding 1,000 rubles.

EXHIBIT No. 3

LABOR CODE OF THE R. S. F. S. R. (1922 EDITION, WITH AMENDMENTS UP TO 1931)

Chapter III

The procedure to be followed in drawing citizens of the R. S. F. S. R. to labor duties:

S. R. to labor duties:
Article 11. In exceptional cases (struggle against natural calamity, lack of labor for the execution of extremely important State tasks) all the citizens of the R. S. F. S. R., with the exceptions given in articles 12 to 14, may be drawn to work by way of labor duty in accordance with a special resolution of the Soviet of People's Commissars or of organs invested with authority by the Soviet of People's Commissars.

Paragraph 1. The procedure to be followed in drawing to labor duties for struggle against natural calamity (earthquakes, catastrophes, train accidents, fires, floods, epidemics, freeing of rallways from ice and snow, struggle against mass attacks of pests, locusts, beasts of prey, etc.) shall be regulated in accordance with the provisions concerning the manner of drawing the population to labor and transportation duties, approved by the All-Russian Central Executive Committee and the Soviet of People's Commissars of the R. S. F. S. R. on July 18, 1927, amended on January 1 and July 30, 1928, on August 19, and on September 16, 1929. * * * Paragraph 5. Persons who are drawn to participate in labor or transport duty and who do not present themselves at the appointed place and time, or refuse to perform such duty, shall be held responsible under article 61 of the criminal code.

Paragraph 8. The mobilization of the members of the city soviets for leading work in the village soviets and rayon executive committees in the regions of complete collectivization has been provided for by the circular of the Presidium of the Central Executive Committee of the U. S. S. R., dated February 16, 1930. (Collection of decrees of the U. S. S. R., No. 12, art. 140.)

Paragraph 10. The People's Commissariat for Labor of the U. S. S. R. in concurrence with the Supreme Soviet of National Economy of the U. S. S. R., has been entrusted with the carrying out of a mobilization of specialists on the floating of lumber, and on the improvement of floating routes, including the mobilization of practitioners and students. * *

Concerning the transfer of engineers and technical workers from the administration to production at enterprises of the timber industry, subordinate to the Supreme Soviet of National Economy of the R. S. F. S. R., see resolution of the People's Commissariat for Labor of the U. S. S. R., No. 13).

Article 12. The following persons shall be exempt from calling up for compulsory labor service: (a) Persons temporarily incapacitated for work on account of illness or injury during the period of eight weeks before confinement, and women during a period of eight weeks after confinement; (c) nursing mothers; (d) men disabled in employment or in the war; (e) women with children under 8 years o

Additional exceptions and relaxations in respect of various kinds of compulsory labor service shall be specified by the C. P. C., the C. L. D., and the P. L. C., with due regard to health, family circumstances, the nature of the work, and conditions of life.

EXHIBIT No. 4

ANNEX NO. 3 TO LABOR CODE: CONDITIONS OF LABOR IN THE PREPARA-TION AND FLOATING OF TIMBER

Young persons over 14 years of age may be employed on light work such as the preparation of bast, or bast fiber and tan bark, and on the trimming of small wood.

No work shall be done on the following holidays:

(a) January 1, New Year's Day.
(b) January 22, anniversary of the 9th of January, 1905.
(c) March 12, anniversary of the overthrow of autocracy.
(d) March 18, anniversary of the Paris Commune.

(e)

May 1, day of the International. November 7 and 8, anniversary of the proletarian revolu-(f)

EXHIBIT No. 5

CIRCULAR OF THE PEOPLE'S COMMISSARIAT OF JUSTICE OF THE R. S. F. S. R. DATED JANUARY 14, 1929, NO. 5

(Published in the Bulletin of Financial and Economic Law, No. 8, of 1929, p. 56)

Effective application of the law of May 21, 1928, regarding forced

To all presidents of regional, provincial, and district courts and the procurators of these courts.

Copies to the people's commissariat of justice of the autonomous republics and distributing commissions.

By decree of a joint meeting of the All-Union Central Execu-

By decree of a joint meeting of the All-Union Central Executive Committee and the Council of People's Commissars of the R. S. F. S. R. of the 26th of March, 1928, the people's commissariat of justice was instructed to take urgent measures to insure that thereafter the sentence of short-term deprivation of liberty should not be imposed as a measure of social protection.

In fulfillment of this Government decree, the People's Commissariat of Justice and the supreme court, in a letter of instructions dated August 20, 1928, directed the courts to pass sentence of short-term deprivation of liberty with the utmost circumspection and to substitute in all cases wherever possible forced labor, fine, discharge from post, expulsion, and other measures of social protection, in accordance with the appropriate article of the 30th of July, 1928, the People's Commissariat of Justice decreed that distributing commissions everywhere should immediately transfer to forced labor all prisoners sentenced to short-term deprivation of liberty not exceeding one year.

Notwithstanding the above-mentioned directions, the actual position continues to be most unsatisfactory. Not only have courts not comprehended the perfectly clear and unmistakable instructions of the Government, but they have also failed to carry out the not less categorical and direct instructions of the People's Commissariat of Justice. As a result, whereas the number of persons in the Republic sentenced to deprivation of liberty not exceeding one year was, on the 1st of March, 1928, 24,583, or 24.8 sons in the Republic sentenced to deprivation of liberty not exceeding one year was, on the 1st of March, 1928, 24,583, or 24.8 per cent of the total number of those incarcerated; those in custody pending trial, 36,024, or 32 per cent; and the total number deprived of liberty, 111,806; on the 1st of December, 1928, the number sentenced to deprivation of liberty not exceeding one year was 31,026, or 27.3 per cent; those in custody pending trial, 29,216, or 25.7 per cent; and the total number deprived of liberty,

Thus, instead of the anticipated marked reduction, we have an absolute and real increase in the number of short-term prisoners and only a slight fall in the number of those in custody pending

An investigation carried out simultaneously showed that local forced labor was not, in most cases, organized, and this fact was cited by several courts as their reason for continuing the old line of penal policy.

The People's Commissariat of Justice, considering the continuance of such a state of affairs absolutely intolerable, cancels Circular No. 149/9 of the 23d of November, 1928, and in extension of earlier circulars instructs as follows:

1. The strictest measures are to be taken to insure that from the moment of receipt of this circular by the local courts the people's court shall thenceforth pass no sentence of short-term deprivation of liberty not exceeding one year. The courts are notified that in any case of any infringement of this instruction being established, the judge who passed the sentence shall himself be indicted for nonfulfillment of the orders of the Central Government and shall learn from personal experience the meaning of forced labor.

Exceptions, which should be exceedingly rare, may be admitted only in the case of habitual criminals sentenced more than twice. In such cases, as a rule, the sentence should be permanent banishment to some distant place, in accordance with article 35 of the criminal code.

2. The courts are instructed, in all cases where the sentence 2. The courts are instructed, in all cases where the sentence under the criminal code is deprivation of liberty not exceeding one year, to pass without exception sentence of forced labor, fine, expulsion, or other measures of social protection, in accordance with the rules laid down in article 51 of the criminal code, and on no account to permit, in evasion of the present instruction, the passing of long-term sentence of deprivation of liberty for minor extensivel offences. criminal offenses.

EXHIBIT No. 6

INSTRUCTION OF THE PEOPLE'S COMMISSARIAT OF AGRICULTURE OF THE R. S. F. S. R., DATED JUNE 1, 1929

(Published in the Bulletin of Financial and Economic Legislation No. 26, of 1929, p. 35)

Procedure for the utilization of forced labor in forestry and improvement work

GENERAL INSTRUCTIONS

The present instructions are the first attempt to utilize on timber and improvement work the labor of persons sentenced to forced labor without detention under guard. Considering this experiment of exceptionally great importance, the People's Commissariat of Agriculture instructs all agricultural organizations to begin forthwith from the current season to explore all existing begin forthwith from the current season to explore all existing possibilities of utilizing the labor of persons sentenced to forced labor for forestry and improvement work of a mass character and to establish for this purpose permanent relations with the Bureau of Forced Labor. In putting into practical effect the utilization of forced labor agricultural organizations must observe the rules laid down in the following instructions:

1. Forced labor of persons sentenced thereto without detention under guard shall be utilized for forestry and improvement work in accordance with the directions contained in the instructions of the People's Commissariat of the Interior of the R. S. F. S. R., dated the 28th of November, 1928, regarding the utilizations.

F. S. R., dated the 28th of November, 1928, regarding the utilization of forced labor without detention under guard (Bulletin of the People's Commissariat of the Interior, No. 45, of 1928).

2. Persons serving a sentence of forced labor in the localities where their work or service for hire is carried out must be sup-where their work or service for hire is carried out must be supplied in these localities with living quarters and food if the place of work is situated more than 10 kilometers from their place of residence, and also with special service clothing where such is prescribed for seasonal work. At the request of the person sentenced the cost of these supplies may be paid in cash, but only after completion of the whole period of forced labor, or in the event of the completion of the work prior to the completion of the term of forced labor. term of forced labor.

5. Forced labor, as a rule, is utilized for work of an unskilled character, and standards of labor output are fixed for each type of work carried out by forced labor.

The standards of labor output are the average standard prescribed for such work by decrees of departments of labor or customatical decrees of the standard of the stan tomarily accepted by State organizations where such work is their principal work.

EXHIBIT No. 7

DECREE OF THE COUNCIL OF PEOPLE'S COMMISSARS OF THE R. S. F. S. R., DATED OCTOBER 5, 1929

(Published in the Bulletin of Financial and Economic Legislation, No. 42, of October 18, p. 40) Authorization of local executive committees to enforce compulsory labor for the carrying out of work of loading and unloading grain cargoes

The Council of People's Commissars of the R. S. F. S. R.

In accordance with the decree of the central executive committee of the U.S.S.R. of the 25th of September, 1929, to authorize the Councils of People's Commissars of Autonomous Republics, regional and provincial executive committees to enforce temporarily compulsory labor in carrying out the loading and unloading of grain cargoes up to the 1st of February, 1930.

EXHIBIT No. 8

DECREE OF THE CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE AND THE COUNCIL OF PEOPLE'S COMMISSABARS OF THE U. S. S. R. OF NOVEMBER 23, 1929, AS TO CRIMINAL RESPONSIBILITY FOR THE PRODUCTION OF INFERIOR GOODS AND FAILURE TO OBSERVE STANDARDS

(Published in the Bulletin of Financial and Economic Legislation, No. 3, January 27, 1930, p. 51)

Side by side with the immense growth in quantity of the production in state industry, there has recently been observed, in a series of cases, a falling off in the quality of goods produced not only for the open market but also for the needs of state industry and transport. Numerous enterprises are trying, by lowering the quality of the products, to solve the very important problem of how to lower costs by rationalization and by increasing the productivity of labor. This phenomenon acts as a serious obstacle to the work of the socialist reconstruction of the national obstacle to the work of the socialist reconstruction of the national economy, and also does great harm to the interests of workers and peasants, as consumers, of goods. In order to insure the work of socialist construction, it is essential that there should be a definite quality of production.

With the object of intensifying the struggle against the production of inferior goods and the failure to observe fixed standards, the Central Executive Committee and the Council of People's

Commissars of the U. S. S. R. decree—

That on the basis of the second part of article 3 of the fundamental principles of the penal code of the U. S. S. R. and allied republics (U. S. S. R. Collection of Laws, 1927, No. 12, par. 122), the executive committees of the allied republics be instructed to provide in their criminal codes:

 As penalty for the systematic or mass production of inferior goods by industrial or commercial enterprises—deprivation of liberty for not more than five years, or forced labor for not more than one year.

(2) As penalty for failure to observe the standards laid down—deprivation of liberty for not more than two years, or forced labor for not more than one year.

DECREE OF THE CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE R. S. F. S. R. (VTSIK) AND THE COUNCIL OF PEOPLE'S COMMISSARS OF THE R. S. F. S. R., DATED FEBRUARY 13, 1930

(Collection of Laws of R. S. F. S. R., 1930, No. 9, Ch. 107)

No. 107. Regarding the measures to be taken in order to increase the productivity of the timber industry

The Vtsik and the Council of People's Commissars decree The Vtsik and the Council of People's Commissars decree—
1. Rural soviets are empowered to undertake, as a self-imposed task of the village as a whole, a definite task in preparing and hauling timber (by this is understood the employment of their own means of haulage) in those districts where a resolution has been passed by a general meeting of citizens (a rural assembly), and where, in connection with this undertaking, the self-imposed task has been allotted amongst the separate economic units; and in cases where the decision of the rural assembly has not been executed, to inflict summary fines upon those economic units which have not fulfilled the said decision, not exceeding five times the value of the work allotted to them. In case of default of which have not fulfilled the said decision, not exceeding five times the value of the work allotted to them. In case of default of payment of fines so inflicted rural assemblies are empowered to sell by public auction the property of the persons so fined.

Means of haulage belonging to rich peasants (kulaks) who do not fulfill their allotted tasks of preparing and hauling timber are liable, by the decision of the rural assembly, to confiscation for the needs of the timber program.

2. In the event of any person or persons resisting the fulfillment of the allotted task in the preparation and haulage of timber, and likewise should any person or persons refuse to fulfill their allotted task, the rural assembly is empowered to institute criminal proceedings against such person or persons under article 61 of the proceedings against such person or persons under article 61 of the Criminal Code of the R. S. F. S. R.

Criminal Code of the R. S. F. S. R.

3. The fines which are so imposed on separate economic units which have not fulfilled, in accordance with the resolution passed in a rural assembly, the self-imposed task undertaken by the village as a whole for the preparation and haulage of timber, are compulsorily allotted in the following proportions: As to 25 per cent to the funds devoted to the cooperativization and collectivization of poor peasants and as to 75 per cent to the local budget. This applies to cases where the fines have been imposed either summarily by rural councils or by judgment of the court under article 61 of the Criminal Code of the R. S. F. S. R.

4. Central executive committees of the autonomous republics

4. Central executive committees of the autonomous republics and provincial executive committees are empowered, in regions where the preparation and haulage of timber is carried out, and where the preparation and haulage of timber is carried out, and where it is found that all other means of providing an adequate supply of labor and/or means of haulage have been exhausted, to institute compulsory paid labor and/or haulage in order to fulfill the needs of timber preparation and transport.

Rich peasant (kulak) elements are to be engaged, having regard to local conditions, at a lower rate of pay.

The present decree is to be put into force by telegraph.

EXHIBIT No. 10

CIRCULAR OF THE PEOPLE'S COMMISSARIAT OF LABOR OF THE R. S. F. S. R. AND OF THE DIRECTORATE OF TIMBER FLOATING OF THE SUPREME COUNCIL OF NATIONAL ECONOMY OF THE U. S. S. R. OF FEBRUARY 13, 1930, NO. 24, REGARDING THE SUPPLY OF WORKERS FOR TIMBER FLOATING DURING THE 1930 SEASON

(Izvestia of the People's Commissariat of Labor, No. 8, of 1930, p. 174; Bulletin of Financial and Economic Legislation, No. 11, of April 17, 1930, p. 41)

To the people's commissariats of labor of the autonomous republics, to the regional and provincial departments of labor, and Timber-floating work during the 1930 season should be regarded as an especially important part of the politico-economic campaign.

The production program (R. S. F. S. R.) of timber floating for the 1930 season has been laid down at a figure of 91,300,000 cubic meters, which shows a general increase in the volume of timber floating of more than 80 per cent as compared with last year.

This increase in volume has occasioned a considerably increased demand for workers in comparison with last year, and it is thus necessary to attract to this work fresh contingents of workers who have never before been engaged in it.

In view of all these circumstances, the state of the labor market for the fortherning them.

for the forthcoming timber-floating operations promises to be especially strained, and this renders it necessary to establish the most rigorous discipline in the labor market and the observance of a "shock tempo" in all work of the labor organizations connected with the preparation and carrying through of the timber-floating comparison.

nected with the preparation and carrying through of the timber-floating campaign.

The People's Commissariat of Labor of the R. S. F. S. R. and the directorate of timber floating of the Supreme Council of National Economy of the U. S. S. R., in conformity with the existing directions regarding the carrying out of timber-floating operations during the 1930 season (decree of the special plenipotentiary of the Council of Labor and Defense for wood and timber preparation of January 15, 1930, the decree of the collegium of the People's Commissariat of Labor of the U. S. S. R. and of the Supreme Council of National Economy of the U. S. S. R. of January 30, 1930, No. 31) recommends the acceptance, for guidance on the territory of the R. S. F. S. R., of the said regulations and of the following procedure for securing workers for the timber-floating campaign:

tions and of the following procedure for securing workers for the timber-floating campaign:

(1) On the basis of information regarding the need for labor received from economic organizations (in conformity with the circular of the People's Commissariat of Labor of the U. S. S. R., the Supreme Council of National Economy of the U. S. S. R., the People's Commissariat of Transport, the People's Commissariat of Labor of the R. S. F. S. R., the Supreme Council of National Economy of the R. S. F. S. R., and the People's Commissariat of Agriculture of the R. S. F. S. R. of August 14, 1929, regarding workers for wood and timber preparation and timber floating during the 1929–30 season (Izvestia of the People's Commissariat for Transport of the U. S. S. R. for 1929, No. 36), the People's Commissariat of Labor of the autonomous republics and the regional, provincial, and area labor departments must hasten the regional, provincial, and area labor departments must hasten the preparation of plans of operation for providing labor for the timber-floating campaign in the districts under their control.

The plans of operation shall include the most exact territorial subdivision or distribution of the labor markets for timber-floating analysis of the labor markets for timber-floating workers are included.

floating workers amongst individual economic organizations and lay down hard and fast calendar periods for the supply of labor lay down hard and fast calendar periods for the supply of labor for timber floating.

(2) When plans of operation are drawn up the most serious attention must be paid to the correct definition of the demand and available supply of labor.

Plans for the supply of labor for timber-floating operations must be elaborated in collaboration with the chiefs of the timber-floating areas concerned, on the basis of the actually attainable standards of output and with a view to increase the productivity of labor.

of labor.

When determining the existing reserves of labor, the transition to collective agriculture methods must be taken into account, and in this connection it is necessary, through the local collective farm groups, to discover a surplus of labor which can be used for timber-floating work, and to conclude, with the collective farm groups, agreements regarding the procedure for obtaining collective farm workers for timber-floating operations. Each district shall be limited, for the purpose of the supply of workers, to a definite timber-floating river (although several organizations may be working on that river). The recruiting of pilots and specialists for the construction of timber-floating shoots may be effected for for the construction of timber-floating shoots may be effected for several timber-floating rivers in one and the same district.

(3) Agreements with collective farms regarding the procedure for attracting labor, and also agreements with timber-floating organizations regarding the procedure for placing workers at their organizations regarding the procedure for placing workers at their disposal, are to be concluded by the labor organizations in all districts not later than February 25, 1930.

(4) All timber-floating organizations at present conducting timber-preparation work must at once start to detail, for timber-floating work for 1930, those workers who are now engaged in preparing timber but who are willing to do timber-floating work. The allotment of workers for timber floating and for timber-preparation work is to be effected similarly (circular of the People's Commissariat of Labor of the U. S. S. R. and Supreme Council of National Economy of the R. S. F. S. R. of February 21, 1929, No. 54, regarding the supply for the season 1929-30 of timber-preparing organizations with detachments of workers—"Izvestia of the People's Commissariat of Labor of the U. S. S. R.," 1929, Nos. 9-10).

The following is the general procedure for the allotment of labor:

(a) Strict attention must be paid to the class line (circular of People's Commissariat of Labor of the U. S. S. R. of November 19, 1929, No. 360, regarding intensification of the work of labor organizations in the class selection of labor cadres—"Izvestia of the Peoples Commissariat of Labor of the U. S. S. R.," 1929, Nos.

48-49);
(b) It is to be carried out with the participation of representatives of the agricultural and forest workers' trade-unions;
(c) Allotted workers are to be registered in group nominal rolls in duplicate, one of which is to be kept by the timber-floating organization and the other by the group;
(d) Immediately after the allotment of workers engaged on timber preparation the timber-floating organization must notify those labor organizations to whom were submitted requests for those labor organizations to whom were submitted requests for workers, with information regarding the number of workers allotted, their trades and the districts in which they reside:

(e) Summoning of workers detailed for timber-floating opera-tions (in those cases where it is impossible to effect a transfer of workers from timber preparation to timber floating without causing a stoppage of work) is to be undertaken direct by the timber-floating organizations themselves and an immediate notification made to the labor organizations;

(f) Organizations must start immediately the allotment of forest workers for timber floating without waiting for the end of the timber-preparation work, in order that the allotment may be fully effected not later than March 5, 1930.

(6) The recruitment of workers for timber-floating work is to be effected only through the machinery of the labor organizations. The transfer of this recruitment to the timber-floating organizations themselves is only allowed in exceptional cases by mutual agreement on conditions of the complete operative subordination to the labor organizations of all recruiting operations carried out, and the places where the economic organizations carry out recruitment independently must be fixed not later than February

(7) In those places where the labor organizations have special machinery for the recruitment of workers for wood and timber preparation this machinery must be used also for recruiting work-

The cadre of recruiters must be carefully examined, and class enemies and unsuitable persons eliminated from it.

(8) All operations of the labor organizations in connection with the recruitment of workers must be paid for by the timber-floating organizations. On making agreements regarding the procedure for the recruitment of labor the timber-floating organizations must pay the departments of labor an advance of not less than 35 per pay the departments of labor an advance of not less than 35 per cent of the total amount of remuneration accruing to them for producing the whole number of workers asked for.

(9) In every hamlet or village where timber-floating recruits are living a delegate is appointed from amongst them.

The appointment of a delegate is made by the person conducting the requirement in agreement with the right of persons of the results and the results of the ressent of the results of the results of the results of the results the recruitment in agreement with the village workers' committee.

It is the duty of the delegate to inform workers of the proposed dates for starting work and also to organize the assembling of the workers for travel to the place of work in accordance with the notifications received from the labor organizations or economic organizations. The delegate can not exercise any other functions. When considerable groups of workers are sent off a delegate of the

When considerable groups of workers are sent off a delegate of the labor organization must be present.

(10) The dispatch of workers to the place of work must be effected according to a fixed plan to be drawn up jointly by the labor organization and the economic organization concerned. If under this plan the workers must be transported a long distance, the labor organization must in good time, through the appropriate organization (commercial and cooperative), arrange that on the journey the workers receive their food regularly and are provided with articles of food of which there is a shortage.

rided with articles of food of which there is a shortage.

In conformity with the plan mentioned, every workers' delegate must be informed where and when workers are due to arrive for the execution of the work or for entrainment and subsequent journey to the place of work. Information in this sense must be given to the delegate not later than five days before the day fixed for the dispatch of workers.

(11) On arrival of the workers at the place of work the functions of delegates cease.

The distribution of the workers on individual tasks and the appointment of the superintending personnel is carried out solely by the administration of the economic organizations irrespective of their former grouping and of the delegates appointed to represent them.

Note.-All contracts for executing timber-floating work concluded by timber economic organizations with the All-Russian Association of Timber-Cooperatives and with the general directorate of local timber preparation work are unaffected by the present circular.

(12) When carrying out timber floating during the 1930 season, (12) When carrying out timber hosting during the 1800 scass, the timber-floating organizations must prepare to create cadres of permanent workers for timber floating by trying to utilize these selected cadres of workers for other work in the period between timber-floating campaigns, for instance, for loading and unloading, etc.

6097

Timber-floating organizations must at the end of the timber-floating season of 1930 allot for their work in 1930-31 not less than 50 per cent of the timber-floating workers engaged with them during the present season.

(13) Labor organizations in agreement with the chiefs of tim-ber-floating areas must register all trained workers, such as pilots. shoot-construction specialists, the operative personnel connected with steam tugs, etc., sending them to work in timber-floating organizations in an organized manner.

(14) In connection with the regulation of labor and living conditions of workers on timber-floating work the timber-floating organizations must take the following measures:

(a) The provision of dwellings for timber-floating workers with the necessary fittings, and the introduction of control over the sanitation of these dwellings.

(b) The provision of each place of work and each rafting unit with the necessary quantity of standard medicine chests, organizing with the assistance of health detachments the training of persons in charge of medical supplies, and also sanitary educational work amongst the timber-floating workers.

(c) The maximum realization of rationalization measures of floating, with a view to increase the productivity of labor, etc.

labor, etc.

(15) Recruitment of workers for timber-floating operations must be carried out with the maximum utilization of local reserves of labor, and in this connection it is necessary to start extensive recruiting operations in the villages and obtain for this task the help of all village authorities (village soviets, peasants' mutual assistance committees, etc.).

(16) Departments of labor in conjunction with the chiefs of timber-floating areas should at once institute a verification of the preparations on the spot for conducting timber-floating operations, and also for the creation of normal living conditions on timber-floating work.

Local departments of labor and chiefs of timber-floating areas

Local departments of labor and chiefs of timber-floating areas must give practical indications to their subordinates on the basis of these directions.

EXHIBIT No. 11

CIRCULAR OF THE PEOPLE'S COMMISSARIAT OF LABOR OF THE U. S. S. R. AND R. S. F. S. R., OF THE SUPREME COUNCIL OF NATIONAL ECONOMY, OF THE PEOPLE'S COMMISSARIAT OF AGRICULTURE, AND OF THE COL-LECTIVE FARM ADMINISTRATION OF THE U. S. S. R., MARCH 3, 1930

(Published in the Bulletin of Financial and Economic Legislation, No. 8, of March 17, 1930, p. 56)

No. 87. Regarding the dispatch of labor from collective farms to seasonal branches of the national economy

8. The dispatch to work of members of collective farms must be carried out only upon the order of labor organizations, or, with their authority, upon the order of economic organizations direct; the first to be dispatched, qualifications being equal, should be the farm laborers and poor peasants from among the members of collective farms.

These orders must state:

The number of persons liable for despatch, by separate professions and trades;
(b) The date of dispatch;

(c) Place of dispatch;
(d) Exact address of the place of destination, with instructions as to where and to whom the draft must report,
The administration of the collective farm is held responsible if it dispatches members of collective farms according to their

If it dispatches members of collective farms according to their professions or trades, but not in accordance with the order.

9. The administration of the collective farm must, immediately upon receipt of the order, itself issue orders to those of its members who are liable to be dispatched. These orders must state the date of departure and the place of assembly.

The nonfulfillment by members of a collective farm of an order of the administration must be considered as the nonfulfillment of the rules governing the internal affairs of the collective farm.

10. Administrations of collective farms must, not later than three days after the dispatch of their members to work, inform area labor organizations and the area collective farm unions of the time of dispatch and the strength of the draft, according to separate professions and trades.

EXHIBIT No. 12

CIRCULAR OF THE PEOPLE'S COMMISSARIAT OF LABOR OF THE U. S. S. R. IN AGREEMENT WITH THE PEOPLE'S COMMISSARIAT OF TRANSPORT AND THE CENTRAL COMMITTEES OF THE LOCAL TRANSPORT UNION, DATED MARCH 22, 1930

(Published in the Bulletin of Financial and Economic Legislation, No. 16, of June 7, 1930, p. 47; No. 121, regarding loading and unloading operations)

To the People's Commissars of the Allied Republics, and to the Chief Inspectors of Labor in Transport

4. Any demand for labor in respect of the following is considered as a matter of extreme urgency and is to be satisfied immediately and completely: The loading and unloading of grain on railway and water transport and all enterprises connected with transport work (grain dumps, flour mills, groat mills, elevators, train warehouses, grain drying plants, etc.); the loading and unloading of import and export goods in all ports and stations (timber export, etc.).

7. Refusal to do loading and unloading work, without adequate excuse, by any unemployed person who has been passed as suitable for such work, entails his being struck off the register and loss of unemployment benefit, according to the general rules laid down. (Decree of the People's Commissariat of Labor of the U. S. S. R., dated February 21, 1930, No. 59; Izvestia, People's Commissariat of Labor of the U. S. S. R., 1930, No. 8.)

EXHIBIT No. 13

DECREE OF THE PEOPLE'S COMMISSARIAT OF LABOR OF THE R. S. F. S. R. OF SEPTEMBER 12, 1930, NO. 83, REGARDING MEASURES FOR SECUR-ING WORKERS FOR LOADING AND UNLOADING OPERATIONS IN THE AUTUMN OF 1930

(Published in the Bulletin of Financial and Economic Legislation, No. 27, of September 27, 1930, p. 64)

No. 27, of September 27, 1930, p. 64)

In view of the irregularity in the supply of workers for loading and unloading operations, and also the forthcoming increase in goods turnover during the autumn in connection with the transport of consignments of grain and other foodstuffs, the People's Commissariat of Labor of the R. S. F. S. R. decrees:

1. In the event of a dearth on the spot of detachments of porters for loading and unloading work during September-November, 1930, all those unemployed on the register of the labor organizations, whether they be physical or intellectual workers, who are physically fit and generally suitable for such work, must be compulsorily dispatched to work.

pulsorily dispatched to work.

A refusal by the unemployed worker to undertake loading and unloading operations without valid reasons is to be considered as a refusal to perform work of any kind, with the consequences arising therefrom (removal of his name from the register, deprivation of relief, etc.).

Ехнівіт No. 14

DECREE OF THE CENTRAL EXECUTIVE AND THE COUNCIL OF PEOPLE'S COMMISSARS OF THE U. S. S. R., NOVEMBER 3, 1930

(Published in the Izvestia of November 12, 1930)

(a) Regulations regarding disciplinary punishments in respect of transport transport

2. As "duty offenses" are regarded the infringement of rules of an internal character and other rules, regulations, and instructions defining the duties and obligations of workers, as well as the nonfulfillment of the orders of heads of departments.

As "duty offenses" are also regarded failures on the part of the head of a department to use his disciplinary authority to combat duty offenses committed by workmen under his control.

Disciplinary punishments are inflicted also in respect of duty offenses not entailing criminal proceedings.

3. The present regulations establish the following disciplinary punishments:

(a) Reprimand.

(a) Reprimand.(b) Severe reprimand.

(c) Arrest for a period not exceeding three months with service.

Note on (c).—The worker serving this sentence is lodged in prison and freed daily in order that he may carry out his usual

(d) Arrest for a period not exceeding three months without

(e) Degradation to lower-grade work for a period not exceeding a year.
(f) Discharge.

(g) Discharge, without permission, for a period not exceeding the year, to serve in transport work in any capacity or in any one year, to serve in transport work in any capacity or in any definite work.

Note 1.—The regulation regarding detention of a person under arrest, and the place of arrest, shall be determined by instructions issued by the commissiariat of communications in conjunction with the O. G. P. U. and the commissariat of internal affairs of the allied republics.

7. Disciplinary punishments, such as arrest, can be inflicted by heads of departments who have the right to engage or discharge the workman in question.

the workman in question.
Arrest may be inflicted—

(a) For a period not exceeding three days—by heads of administrative stations, by heads of constructional sections, and subsec-

(b) For a period not exceeding seven days—by heads of regional railways, directors of repair shops, heads of regional sea basins, chiefs of commercial ports, heads of regional (district) road transport organizations.

(c) For a period not exceeding 15 days—by directors of rail-ways, managers of sea-fleet basins, managers of local State river fleets, heads of the chief road transport organizations of allied republics, heads of constructional administrations, heads of regional (district) offices of the transport union organizations, heads of exploitation and planning administrations, the chief director of railways, heads of all-union branch combines and central administrative organizations of the Commissariat of Communications.

Note 1. The chief director of railways and heads of branch combines and central administrative organizations of the Commissariat of Communications can arrest all workmen subordinate to them with the exception of those appointed by the Commissar of Communications.

11. Any of the heads of departments above mentioned may, within the limits of the rights prescribed to him for inflicting disciplinary punishments, inflict directly such disciplinary punishments.

ments without referring to his immediate superior.

15. The infliction of a disciplinary punishment does not preclude the institution of criminal proceedings for the same offense. However, in cases where the sentence has not yet been carried out, the enforcement of such punishment is postponed until judgment has been pronounced in the criminal case. The withdrawal of the charge, or an acquittal on the criminal count, does not preclude the county of the distribution of the criminal count, does not preclude the execution of the disciplinary punishment unless the reasons for acquittal or withdrawal of the prosecution are based on a refutation of the evidence relevant to the offense. In such cases the disciplinary punishment can not be inflicted later than 15 days after receipt of notice of acquittal or discharge, by the official who sentenced the accused.

17. Before a disciplinary punishment can be inflicted, the head of the department must demand an explanation from the accused. The accused may, not later than three days after the remand has been made, furnish either verbal or written explanations. Failure to give an explanation within that period is to be no obstacle to the infliction of the punishment.

19. Disciplinary punishments inflicted in respect of a worker are indorsed on his personal record, the worker signing a declaration to the effect that it is done with his knowledge. At the same time notice of the conviction is sent to the district in which the convicted person is employed, in such manner as to insure that the conviction is brought to the notice of all workers in his district.

EXHIBIT No. 15

DECISION OF THE PEOPLE'S COMMISSARIAT OF LABOR OF THE U. S. S. R. REGARDING THE REORGANIZATION OF THE LABOR MARKET

(Published in Izvestia, November 5, 1930)

Having heard the report of Comrade Vasileva, a member of the Collegium of the People's Commissariat of Labor, on the reorganization of labor exchanges, the Commissariat of Labor has recognized as essential the reorganization of the labor exchanges as directorates of labor cadres charged with the organization and control of the preparation of labor and with supplying it to the national economic system according to plan.

Directorates of labor cadres will be organized in all industrial areas. In nonindustrial areas and rural districts recruiting offices will be established. The directorates must carry out their work in close contact with the economic trade-union organization and the great mass of the working public.

The hiring of labor must be effected exclusively through the directorates of labor cadres. Only by their permission may the economic organizations themselves effect the engagement and recruiting of labor.

The most important branches of national economy must have the first call on labor, in particular the coal industry, unskilled labor in the metal industry, transport and capital construction in the heavy industries (glant factories).

The directorates of labor cadres must select and register as workers both adults and young persons from among the toilers of the urban and rural population. The selection of labor must be effected according to class origin, qualification, and physical conditions.

The directorates of labor cadres are entrusted with the control over the regular supply of labor to enterprises. Any excess of labor must be transferred to other important branches of industry in which there is a shortage of labor of these cadres.

The number of persons having the right to register at the direct torates of labor cadres and to be assigned to work is considerably extended.

The Commissar has recognized that it is essential to register The Commissar has recognized that it is essential to register and assign to work the undermentioned categories of persons seeking work (provided they are not deprived of electoral rights): Members of trade unions, members of workers', employees', and students' families who have slack periods in their work; the children of workers, employees, and farm laborers, even if they have no specialized training and have not worked for hire; members of workers' and employees' families serving in the Red Army, and less persons discharged from the Red Army, provided that they also persons discharged from the Red Army, provided that they have applied to the directorates of labor cadres not later than one year from the day on which they were taken on the register of the organs of the local military command.

The following are also subject to registration: Members of industrial cooperatives who have worked in such enterprises for not less than three years; men invalided out of labor or the army; farm laborers; poor peasants; members of cooperative farms; and all single women who have worked for not less than six months in workshops organized by organizations for the protection of mothers and children.

Persons seeking work and registered at the directorates of labor cadres do not enjoy any unemployment benefits.

All persons registered at the directorates of labor cadres must be sent to work not later than three days after the day of registration. Soldiers and persons discharged from the Red Army are sent to work on the day of registration.

To industrial enterprises there will be sent, besides the basic cadres of workers, members of workers' families, members of industrial cooperatives, farm laborers, and poor peasants of the villages. Members of "shock" workers' families enjoy a preferential right to be sent to and engaged on work in industrial and transport enterprises in which members of their family are working.

Persons who have been combed out of establishments and enter-prises under the first category are registered at the directorates and told off for unskilled labor only.

Persons combed out under the second and third categories are egistered on a general basis, but they can not be sent to work in those districts, departments, and enterprises in which they have been forbidden to work by the combing-out commission.

Deserters and "fliers" are placed by the directorate of labor cadres in a special register and for six months are not sent to work in industrial enterprises but are employed on physical gang labor.

In industrial enterprises but are employed on physical gang labor. Persons who refuse work offered for which they are particularly qualified are placed on a special list with deserters and "filers" and are sent to physical gang labor. If they refuse the latter, they are struck off the register altogether.

Illness vouched for by medical certificates, and lack of living accommodation on transfer to work in another place, are considered valid reasons for refusing work. Women with husbands and children can not be sent to work in another place without their own consent. their own consent.

EXHIBIT No. 16

DECREE OF THE COUNCIL OF PEOPLE'S COMMISSARS OF THE R. S. F. S. R. OF DECEMBER 8, 1930, CONCERNING THE EMPLOYMENT OF WOMEN IN INDUSTRY AND IN STATE AND COOPERATIVE ADMINISTRATIONS

(Published in the Izvestia of December 20, 1930)

In order to satisfy the labor demands of rapidly developing in-dustry and other branches of national economy, and in order to attract more and more women into active socialist construction, it is essential to develop the employment of women in all branches of the national economy. The increased attraction of women into industry will, in addition, make possible the maximum utilization of local labor resources and will contribute to the creation of solid of local labor resources and will contribute to the creation of solid and permanent workers' cadres.

Past experience of the employment of women in the industrial life of the country fully demonstrates the possibility and propriety of an extensive employment of women even in those branches of national economy in which women have hitherto not worked all or only in negligible numbers. Meanwhile the directors of at all or only in negligible numbers. Meanwhile the directors of state and cooperative institutions and organizations do not show the requisite initiative and perseverance in the matter of the extensive utilization of women as workers.

EXHIBIT No. 17

DECREE OF THE CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE AND COUNCIL OF PEO-PLE'S COMMISSARS OF THE U. S. S. R., DATED DECEMBER 15, 1930

(Published in Izvestia of December 17, 1930)

Procedure for the engagement and distribution of labor and the campaign against the fluidity of labor

The immense successes in the socialistic industrialization of the country and the rapid tempo of collective and state farm con-struction have brought about the complete liquidation of unemployment.

In this connection it has become necessary, simultaneously with the training of new labor cadres, to utilize more fully and rationally the existing labor forces in all branches of the national Planned utilization can only give the best results if it is coupled with measures permitting the wider extension of socialistic forms and methods of work (socialist competition, shock-brigade tactics, etc.). At the same time planned utilization of labor is impossible without a decision and systematic campaign against all disorganizing elements in production.

In view of the above, the Central Executive Committee and the Council of People's Commissars of the U. S. S. R. decree:

1. Labor organizations are charged with the duty of insuring the planned distribution of labor within the limits approved by the competent planning organs.

2. All undertakings, institutions, organizations, and individuals are obliged to engage workers and employees only through the labor organizations, except in the cases mentioned in this decree.

3. The employment of persons who have passed through higher educational institutions or technical schools is effected in accordance with the special laws regarding their allocation to employment.

The People's Commissariat of Labor of the U.S.S. R. shall fix the category of persons to be registered with labor organizations as seeking employment, and the procedure to be followed in placing them in employment. In this connection it should be borne in mind that persons who by their social position are nearest to the working classes should be set to work in industry and transport.

5. As an exception to article 2 of this decree, the following persons may be engaged without resort to the labor organizations:

(a) Responsible administrative-technical workers and specialists;

(b) Workers leaving one undertaking, institution, or economic organization for another with the consent of the management of the undertaking, institution, or organization in which they are employed;

(c) Apprentices to handicraft workers, or to craftsmen working on their own or employing not more than two hired workers;
(d) Poor peasants, male or female, in 1-man peasant farms,

(d) Poor peasants, male or f and shepherds in peasant farms;

(e) Domestic servants;

(f) Other workers, by special agreement with the labor organi-

Lists of the situations for which, in accordance with (a), the employer is permitted to engage workers directly, and also the procedure for making agreements under (f) shall be fixed by the People's Commissariat of Labor of the U. S. S. R.

8. In order to insure a supply of skilled workers and specialists, for enterprises of the most important branches of the national other branches of the national economy or to other localities for utilization in the work for which they are specially qualified.

8. In order to insure a supply of skilled workers and specialists, for enterprises of the most important branches of the national economy (iron and steel, coal and chemical industries, machinery construction, capital construction, transport, and the electrical industry) at the expense of the less-important branches or the less-important undertakings of such branches, the People's Commissariat of Labor of the U. S. S. R. has the right, on notifying the economic organizations and in agreement with the tradeunions, to carry out, with the sanction of the Council of Labor and Defense, the transfer of skilled workers and specialists to other branches of the national economy or to other localities for utilization in the work for which they are specially qualified.

13. Malicious disorganizers of output, who leave their work in the socialized sector without authorization and without satisfactory excuse, are not, in the event of their applying for work to labor organizations, given employment in industry or transport for a period of six months.

The People's Commissariat of Labor of the U. S. S. R. is instructed to define within one month the category of persons falling within the purview of this article.

14. Persons registered with the labor organizations who refuse without satisfactory excuse to accept employment on work for which they are specially qualified, and to which they are directed by the labor organizations, are removed from the register for a period of six months.

Ехнівіт No. 18

DECREE OF THE PEOPLE'S COMMISSARIAT OF LABOR OF THE U. S. S. R. OF DECEMBER 23, 1930, NO. 374, CONCERNING THE REGISTRATION AND DISPATCH TO WORK OF PERSONS SEEKING WORK

(Published in Izvestia of December 29, 1930)

The severe shortage of labor caused by the tremendous growth of socialist construction necessitates the bringing in of fresh cadres into all branches of the national economy. To this end it is essential to widen the circle of persons registered by the reorganized labor exchanges (administration of cadres).

The registration of persons seeking work

1. All members of trade-unions may be registered at the reorganized labor exchanges.

Of the number of persons who are not members of tradeunions, such of the following as have the right to vote at the elections for the soviets may be registered:

- unions, such of the following as have the right to vote at the elections for the soviets may be registered:

  (1) Children of wage-earning and salaried employees, persons in military service; those under training in educational centers (although they may not have previously been employed for remuneration and have not received any special instruction);

  (2) Wives, divorced wives, and widows of wage-earning and salaried employees, of those in military service, and of students (although they may not have previously been employed for remuneration or received any special training);

  (3) Other members of families of wage earners and persons in military service whose work for remuneration has been interrupted, irrespective of the length of such interruptions;

  (4) The members of families of wage-earning and salaried employees who are dependent on those called up for service in the Workers' and Peasants' Red Army.

  (5) Members of families dependent on wage-earning and salaried employees who are sent to work on collective state farms; and members of urban soviets who are selected for aggricultural work.
- (6) Wage-earning and salaried employees whose work for remuneration has been interrupted, irrespective of the length of such interruptions;

(7) Persons discharged from the Workers' and Peasant's Red Army, if they have applied to the reorganized labor exchanges not later than one year from the time of their discharge from the Workers' and Peasants' Red Army;

(8) Those who have been discharged from service with the militarized auxiliary forces and the militarized fire brigades, at the expiry of their period of service, or as the result of reductions of establishment or on account of illness, if they have applied to the reorganized labor exchanges not later than one year from the time of their discharge from the auxiliary forces;

- year from the time of their discharge from the auxiliary forces;

  (9) Former Red guards and Red partisans;

  (10) Persons who have received an order of the Soviet Union;

  (11) War and labor invalids who have been classified as such by a committee or medical board in accordance with their medical condition and their vocational calling, and are recognized as fit for labor (having regard to their disability), and also the wives, divorced wives, widows, and children of labor and war in-
- (12) Former members of artels, which are incorporated into the system of industrial cooperatives, in cases where such members have worked in cooperative workshops and undertakings during the three years prior to their leaving the artels, and have applied to the reorganized labor exchanges not later than six months after their leaving;
- (13) Children of members of industrial cooperative organiza-tions and of individual handicraft workers;

(14) Inventors who are the holders of patents or certificates from organizations which assist inventors;

(15) Farm laborers, poor peasants who work their land themselves, members of collective farms and their children;

(16) Mothers living alone and women living alone, who are registered with the public-health or social-insurance organizations:

(17) Women who belong to the aboriginal population of the East

(18) Persons who have undergone any form of sentence (deprivation of liberty, compulsory labor, etc.), if, before proceedings were instituted against them, they belonged to one of the categories enumerated above, and had applied to the reorganized labor exchanges not later than six months after they had undergone their sentence.

2. Reorganized labor exchanges must also register persons who 2. Reorganized labor exchanges must also register persons who are not working at their own occupations, should they desire to transfer to another job in their own trade or profession, if there is a shortage in that trade or profession. Such persons must not be removed from their work by the reorganized labor exchanges until they can be given work in accordance with their qualifications. This article does not apply to persons who are employed in transport, in constructional work, or any seasonal work.

3. The persons enumerated in article 1 are only to be registered at the reorganized labor exchanges nearest to their permanent place of residence.

Members of collective farms must be registered at the office of the collective farm which communicates lists of registered collective farm which communicates lists of registered collective the collective farm which communicates lists of registered collective farm workers to the nearest reorganized labor exchange.

4. Registration with the reorganized labor exchange does not

4. Registration with the reorganized labor exchange does not give the right to any form of privilege.

10. Malicious disorganizers of production, or persons who, of their own free will, leave their work in socialized undertakings will not be sent to work in industry or transport for six months after applying to the reorganized labor exchanges.

A special register of such persons shall be kept by the labor exchanges

The class of person falling within the scope of this article shall be defined in a special decree of the People's Commissariat of Labor of the U. S. S. R.

11. Persons refusing, without good reason, an offer of work in their own trade or profession (even if in another part of the country) or refusing to undergo training in another trade or profession if their own trade or profession is slack, will be removed from the register for a period of six months.

Such persons, in the event of their applying for work within the period during which they are off the register, may be utilized in mass physical labor (forestry, timber-preparation work, peat cutting, loading and unloading operations, snow clearing, etc.)

The following will be considered as adequate reasons for refusal

The following will be considered as adequate reasons for refusal to take up work offered by the reorganized labor exchanges:

(a) Illness, if supported by a medical board attached to the administration of the cadres.

(b) A refusal based on the nonreceipt of sufficient living accommodation on transfer to a new locality.

(c) The refusal by a wife of work which would entail her departure from the place where her husband resides.

EXHIBIT No. 19

[Source: Moscow Izvestia, No. 292, October 22, 1930]

MEASURES FOR PLAN—GOVERNED SUPPLY OF LABOR MAN POWER TO NATIONAL ECONOMIC LIFE, AND STRUGGLE AGAINST THE TENDENCIES TO FREQUENT CHANGE OF EMPLOYMENT

(Translation)

Resolution of the Central Committee of the All-Union Communist Party of October 20, 1930

Party of October 20, 1930

The tremendous success of the socialistic industrialization of the country and the rapid rate of building up collective farms and Soviet farms have led to the complete elimination of unemployment in the Soviet Union and have created the need for additional hundreds of thousands of laborers. The shortage of labor man power in industry and in other sectors of national economic life has in the current year become a difficulty (literally, "tight place") which prevents the adoption of rapid rates of progress in socialistic construction work. The proper solution of this question is the most important economic-political task which, in all its gravity, confronts the organs of the commissariat of labor.

Notwithstanding this the Commissariat of Labor has been display-

Notwithstanding this the Commissariat of Labor has been display-ing a clearly bureaucratic attitude to economic tasks and instead ing a clearly bureaucratic attitude to economic tasks and instead of organizing a speedy distribution and utilization of the required labor man power it has been paying allowances to hundreds of thousands of so-called "unemployed" who were drawing tens of millions of rubles, no measures whatsoever being adopted against malingerers and floaters. The apparatus of the Commissariat of Labor as well as its local organs were unable to adapt their activities to the tasks of the reconstructive period confronting them; they were displaying an unpermissible slackness in the work and sundry individual officials in prominent positions were trying to tney were displaying an unpermissible slackness in the work and sundry individual officials in prominent positions were trying to camouflage the existing defects in the apparatus in connection with the task of solving the principal problems in the sphere of procuring labor man power, thereby bringing about a sham welfare.

The Central Committee of the All-Union Communist Party regards these facts as manifestations of practical right-wing opportunism within the former management of the Commissariat of Labor of the U. S. S. R.

With a view to guaranteeing to industry and the other sectors of national economic life sufficient labor man power, the Central Committee of the All-Union Communist Party has resolved:

Noting the extreme slowness and lack of plan in the matter of 1. Noting the extreme slowness and lack of plan in the matter of training labor man power for the most important branches of national economic life, such as metallurgy, the mining industry, the chemical industry, the transport service, and construction work, to make it incumbent upon the Supreme Soviet of National Economy, the Commissariat of Ways of Communication, and the Commissariat of Labor of the U. S. S. R. to arrange for these branches a plan-governed training and distribution of labor man power, appointing for this purpose personally responsible persons, who are to supervise the training and the correct distribution of laborers to the various establishments.

The supplementary man power of skilled labor required for the

The supplementary man power of skilled labor required for the year 1931 for the principal branches of industry amounts to 1,300,000, and this number must be found by training and retraining suitable persons, this to be done by the various organs of industry, the transport service, and the Commissariat of Labor, through the schools of works and factory apprenticeship, through the metallurgical apprentice schools, through accelerated training courses in industry itself, through the Central Institute of Labor, and through brief training courses arranged by the organs of labor, and also by means of promoting the existing cadres to work requiring higher skill.

To make it incumbent upon the Commissariat of Labor, the Supreme Soviet of National Economy, the Commissariat of Ways of Communication of the U. S. S. R., and the All-Union Central Soviet of Labor Unions to draw up within 20 days a practical plan for training labor man power for the year 1921 for the needs not only of the existing enterprises but also of these these are power. not only of the existing enterprises but also of those that are now in course of construction, and to furnish them with all that is necessary not only for the training of laborers but also for satisfying their needs in respect of housing, etc.

2. In view of the acute shortage of labor man power in all branches of economic life, to instruct the Commissariat of Labor to register at the labor organs the following categories, apart from those catagories of toilers which are now entitled to such registration:

(1) Members of families of laborers and employees who are not members of labor unions and who have not been working without interruption, no matter how long these periods of interruption

(2) Children of laborers and employees, even without special training and not employed for hire.

(3) Wives and widows of laborers and employees who are not members of labor unions and have no special education.

(4) Members of cottage-industrial cooperatives who were formerly working for hire, and children of cottage workers who are working without hired help.

(5) Farm laborers who are not members of labor unions, bed-naks, and collective farm workers.

Such registration has to take place according to the place of permanent domicile, and is not to imply any privileges in connection with unemployment.

To instruct the Commissariat of Labor, jointly with the All-Union Central Soviet of Labor Unions and the interested organizations, to elaborate within 10 days a method of assigning to work all these persons registered in such a way that members of families of laborers, cottage workers who are members of industrial cooperatives, and farm laborers and bednaks may be sent to the sundry industrial enterprises.

In the event of any of the persons registered refusing to accept the work to which they have been assigned, they are immediately to be taken off the lists by the pertinent organs of labor.

Within 20 days the labor exchanges are to be recognized, so that they may prepare and distribute labor man power in a plan-they may prepare and distribute labor man power in a piangoverned way.

3. With a view to supplying the principal branches of national economic life with skilled (literally, qualified) labor, to grant the Commissariat of Labor of the Union and the commissariats of labor of the several federal republics the right, by agreement with the labor unions and in response to indentations on the part of the economic organs, to remove and transfer skilled laborers and specialists from less-important branches of national economic life, enterprises and institutions to more important ones, such as the enterprises, and institutions to more important ones, such as the coal branch, berrpis metallurgy, the transport service, and large capital construction work, as well as from one rayon to the other.

4. To make it incumbent upon the Supreme Soviet of National

4. To make it incument upon the Supreme Soviet of National Economy, the Commissariat of Labor, and the All-Union Central Soviet of Labor Unions to check and scrutinize systematically the qualifications of laborers with a view to transferring them to higher posts, raising their skill and qualification through specially organized training courses

Such skilled-labor man power as will be found by the economic organs and labor unions to be employed outside the sphere of their specialty at the given enterprises shall be transferred to other their specialty at the given enterprises shall be transferred to other enterprises in a manner to be established by the organs of labor.

5. For not releasing labors and persons of the administrative-technical personnel who are subject to such transfer for incorrectly utilizing persons belonging to trades in which a shortness of man power is felt at the given enterprise, for luring laborers and technical personnel away from other enterprises, for violating the rules established in the collective contracts in regard to wages, and for employment of labor over and above the numbers required under the plan the managers of enterprises and institutions and also members of the technical personnel who avoid transfer shall also members of the technical personnel who avoid transfer shall be held responsible.

6. In view of the strong tendencies on the part of laborers and the technical personnel to change their places of employment frequently, and noting also the insufficiently energetic struggle against this phenomenon, to make it incumbent upon the economic of the content of the against this phenomenon, to make it incumbent upon the economic organs and the labor unions to adopt the following measures for the secure attachment (adscription) of labor and technical personnel to the given establishments:

(a) With a view to preserving the existing cadres of skilled laborers at the works and factories, to prohibit, for the next two years, the nomination of laborers from the workbench to any posts in the administration apparatus, nominating laborers from the workbench only for higher posts in the sphere of direct production work at the factory, and in the sphere of labor union activities:

production work at the factory, and in the sphere of labor union activities;

(b) Laborers and members of the technical personnel who have rendered good account of themselves in the sphere of direct production work (as members of labor shock brigades and participants in socialistic emulation), who are putting out work of the highest quality, and also persons who are employed at a considerable length of time at a given enterprise, who are coming forward with valuable proposals, suggestions, and inventions, shall be given encouragement by being granted preference in the matter of obtaining housing accommodation, of being sent to higher technical and other training establishments, to homes of rest, and to health resorts, in the matter of being sent abroad for their studying technique and the organization of production, and in the matter of supply with goods in respect of which a shortage of supply is experienced, etc.;

(c) Members of the family of a laborer belonging to a labor shock brigade, such as wife or husband, and children, shall have preference in respect of admission to work at the industrial enterprises at which the principal members of their families are employed. Such persons shall enjoy preference in the matter of admission to training courses, to works and factory apprentice schools, to higher technical, and other training establishments.

7. Laborers who have been employed for two years, commencing with November 1, 1930, in the mining industry, the metal industry, the chemical industry, the building-material industry, and at large construction works shall be entitled, in addition to the ordinary leave of absence established by law, to three days' extra leave, or a monetary compensation in lieu thereof amounting to three days' wages; also laborers employed in the textile industry and in the transport service shall be entitled to an extra leave of absence over and above the ordinary leave established dustry and in the transport service shall be entitled to an extra leave of absence over and above the ordinary leave established leave of absence over and above the ordinary leave established by law, to the extent of three days, or to a monetary compensation amounting to three days' wages.

8. To instruct the Commissariat of Labor of the U. S. S. R., the Supreme Soviet of National Economy of the U. S. S. R., and the Commissariat of Ways of Communication, jointly with the State Plan Commission of the Union, and with the All-Union Central Soviet of Labor Unions, to elaborate by January 1, 1931, suitable measures for eliminating the motley character in the matter of wages of laborers of equal skill, employed at one and the same enterprise or at different enterprises of one and the same district. To instruct the Commissariat of Labor, jointly with the Su-instruct the Commissariat of Labor, jointly with the Supreme Soviet of National Economy, to prepare cadres for the technical standarization of labor at the various interprises, and to increase the control exercised by the organs of labor in the matter of technical standardization of labor at the several enterprises; and with this end in view to increase the cadres of the labor organs by means of organizing special courses.

9. Being aware of the fact that industrial establishments have been contaminated by socially alien elements, it shall be incumbent upon the Commissariat of Labor of the U. S. S. R., jointly with the Supreme Soviet of National Economy and the All-Union Central Soviet of Labor Unions, to adopt measures for elimination.

Deserters and floaters shall be deprived, for a period of six months, of the right to be sent to work at industrial enterprises. It shall be incumbent upon the Commissariat of Labor of the U. S. S. R. to revise the rules regulating the internal life of establishments, as well as the tables providing fines and measures of punishment, in such a way as to promote the strengthening of labor discipline, the rational utilization of labor man power, and to stimulate the attachment (adscription) of the laborers to the enterprises.

10. Noting the fact of self-attachment (self-adscription) on a mass scale of laborers belonging to labor shock brigades for periods covering the time required for completion of the 5-year plan, this initiative on the part of the laborers should be given every encouragement; the All-Union Central Soviet of Labor Unions should be instructed to start a broad explanatory campaign among the labor masses concerning the importance of such initiative for the successful execution of the industrial and financial tive for the successful execution of the industrial and financial plan, and to see that this should take place on the principle of voluntary participation; in this connection the said soviet should in no case permit the collective contracts being set aside nor should it tolerate any administrative pressure.

11. Noting the exceedingly unsatisfactory composition of the body of qualified party workers in the apparatus of the labor organs, it shall be incumbent upon the secretariat of the control committee to map out measures for strengthening the Commissariat of Labor of the Union, as well as its local organs, by an infusion of qualified party workers.

12. With a view to intensifying the practical work of the labor unions in the organs of labor, the All-Union Central Soviet of Labor Unions shall be instructed to map out concrete measures for drawing the labor masses into the work of the organs of labor, bringing those masses as near as possible to the direct operative work of the organs of the Commissariat of Labor (preparing qualified cadres of laborers and specialists, questions of protectional labor, wages, schedule, and rationalization work).

13. To instruct the Commissariat of Labor of the U.S. S. R. to draw up and carry out, within one month, the necessary altera-tions in labor legislation and social insurance in conformity with

EXHIBIT No. 20

[Source: Moscow Za Industrializatsiu (For Industrialization), No. 239, October 11, 1930]

THE PAYMENT OF UNEMPLOYMENT ALLOWANCES HAS BEEN SUSPENDED. THE UNEMPLOYED ARE IMMEDIATELY SENT TO WORK

Resolution of the People's Commissariat of Labor No. 314, dated October 9, 1930

[Translation]

The People's Commissariat of Labor has resolved:

1. In view of the immense shortage of labor in all spheres of national economy, insurance-fund officers are instructed to suspend the payment of unemployment allowances.

No assignments for the payment of unemployment allowances have been provided by the budget of social insurance for the supplementary quarter of October-December, 1930.

2. It is incumbent upon the organs of labor to take all measures

2. It is incumbent upon the organs of labor to take all measures toward the immediate dispatch to work of unemployed—in the first place, persons entitled to unemployment allowances.

3. The unemployed should not only be directed to the fulfillment of work in accordance with their specialty but should also be directed to other work not demanding specific qualifications. Simultaneously, the organs of labor, taking local conditions for their point of issue (the need in one or another specialty), should haveled the state of metallicians.

their point of issue (the need in one or another specialty), should develop more broadly the work of restraining and training.

4. No excuses whatsoever, excepting that of sickness, confirmed by a medical certificate, for refusal to engage in work offered should be taken into consideration. Refusal to work will lead to removal from the registration lists of the labor exchange. Medical certificates must be issued to the unemployed by medical consultations and by medico-control commissions. An allowance reckoned as an unemployment allowance but paid from the security appropriation against temporary disability is paid to those unemployed who possess hospital certificates.

5. Personal responsibility for the timely and regular putting into effect of the present resolution is placed upon the managers of labor departments (and where labor departments do not exist, upon the directors of labor organs) and upon the chairmen of insurance offices.

insurance offices. 6. Article 1 of the present resolution is to be put into effect by telegraph.

TZIK HON. People's Commissar of Labor of the U.S.S.R. KOTOV

Chief of the People's Commissariat of Labor of the U.S.S.R.

EXHIBIT No. 21

[Source: Moscow Izvestia, No. 18, January 18, 1931]

RESOLUTION OF THE PEOPLE'S COMMISSARIAT FOR LABOR OF THE U. S. S. R., OF JANUARY 16, 1931, CONCERNING THE SENDING BACK TO WORK ON THE RAILWAY LINES OF PERSONS WHO FORMERLY WORKED IN THE RAILWAY SERVICE

[Translation]

In view of the importance of the railway transport for socialistic upbuilding work, and in order to obtain the required railway personnel, the People's Commissariat for Labor of the U. S. S. R.

resolves:

To send back to work on the railways all former transport workers of the categories enumerated below who have worked on the railways within the last five years.

1. Directors of enterprises and institutions (except transport enterprises and war industries) are bound to ascertain, with the help of local public organizations, and to discharge within 10 days from the day of publication of this resolution, paying them two weeks' wages as a discharge allowance, all persons belonging to the categories enumerated below, submitting lists of such persons to the local labor departments:

(a) Engine drivers and their assistants.

(b) Skilled laborers who have repaired rolling stock (lock-smiths, turners, smiths, boilermakers, founders, mechanics, welders, electric welders, fitters, assistant foremen, etc.).

(c) Skilled laborers of the line service (station masters on duty, station masters, employees in the line service offices, officials for making up trains, chief conductors, train dispatchers, rolling-stock foremen, instructors of engine drivers, instructors-inspectors for the repair of rolling stock and for the line service, etc.).

(d) Engineers and technical transport specialists.

2. Persons guilty of detaining and hiding persons who are re-

2. Persons guilty of detaining and hiding persons who are required to be sent back to the transport service will be held responsible for such acts by the labor organs in accordance with

3. Chiefs of railway lines have to submit to the labor organs within 10 days from the day of publication of this resolution, through the chiefs of regional stations, depots, and sections of the line, requests for transport personnel.

4. Special officials at the local labor departments shall be appointed for the general direction of the registration of transport workers, and of their distribution among railway lines, coordinating their work with the administration of the respective railway district and the Railway Workers' Union.

5. Former transport workers enumerated in article 1 of this resolution must appear within five days after their discharge from their former post, at the local labor department at their place of residence, in order to obtain information concerning their new appointments.

appointments.

6. In case there should be no demand for transport workers at their place of residence, chiefs of railway lines shall send them to other sections of the same railway line. In case there should be no demand for labor on the whole line, chiefs of lines must immediately inform the People's Commissariat for Labor of the U. S. S. R., and the Labor and Personnel Administration of the People's Commissariat for Ways of Communication, stating the number and qualification of the available transport workers, so that they may be transferred to other railway lines.

7. Republican, regional, and oblast labor departments must submit every five days to the People's Commissariat for Labor of the U. S. S. R. and the People's Commissariat for Ways of Communication reports concerning the dispatch of workers to the railway service, stating the number of persons who have been sent back, their qualification, the places to which they were sent, and from where they were taken.

8. The entire work of sending back former transport workers

8. The entire work of sending back former transport workers to the railways must be completed on or before March 1, 1931.

9. In view of the great importance of the recruitment of skilled laborers for the transport service, the people's commissars for labor of the constituent republics and the chiefs of labor departments are made personally responsible for the timely fulfillment of this recolution. of this resolution.

Penalties will be imposed on persons guilty of nonfulfillment and delay in fulfilling this resolution.

TSIKHON, The People's Commissar for Labor of the U. S. S. R. RUKHIMOVICH,

The People's Commissar for Ways of Communication of the U. S. S. R.
ALEXEEV,
Member of the Collegium of the People's Commissariat for Labor of the U. S. S. R. and Chief of the Department for the Training and Supply of Labor.

EXHIBIT No. 22

[Source: Moscow Izvestia, No. 19, January 19, 1931]

DEFINITION OF PERSONS WHO ARE REGARDED AS MALICIOUS DISORGAN-IZERS OF PRODUCTION—RESOLUTION OF THE PEOPLE'S COMMISSARIAT FOR LABOR OF THE U. S. S. R.

[Translation]

In order to make the fight against disorganizers of production more effective the People's Commissariat for Labor of the 'f. S. S. R., in accordance with article 13 of the resolution of the Central Executive Committee and Soviet of People's Commissars of tral Executive Committee and Soviet of People's Commissars of December 15, 1930, "concerning the employment and distribution of labor and the struggle against the fluctuation of labor" (Izvestia of the Zik of the U. S. S. R. and the Vzik, No. 346, of December 17, 1930), resolved as follows:

1. The following persons shall be regarded as malicious disorganizers of production:

(a) Persons who have left their work in enterprises and institutions of the socialized sector on their own authority without notifying the administration in due time, without awaiting their replacement by other laborers, and before the expiration of the term of work agreed upon when hired.

(b) Persons who have left on their own authority the work to which they were assigned after the completion of their education,

(b) Persons who have left on their own authority the work to which they were assigned after the completion of their education, if they left their work before the expiration of the fixed term.

(c) Persons discharged on account of violation of labor discipline, which found its expression in:

(1) The willful damaging and spoiling of instruments, machinery, and materials.

(2) Systematic loafing.
(3) Systematic production of defective goods.
(4) Absence from work without good reasons.
(5) Refusal without good reasons of work if such a refusal has caused the nonfulfillment of the production program or of an urgent task.

(6) Leaving work before the end of the working day (or work on duty), if this work was important for the whole or part of the enterprise, also if thereby the lives of the laborers were endangered (electric power station, engine department, boiler department) ment, locomotive, etc.).

(7) Hooliganism in production.

(8) Reporting for work in a drunken condition.

(9) Insulting the administrative and technical personnel during the execution of their official duties.

(10) Stealing of property belonging to the enterprise or institution.

2. The reasons for discharge must be entered by the administration in the labor booklet.

If a discharged person is not in agreement with the reasons given for his discharge, he is entitled to file a complaint in accordance with existing regulations.

3. Persons enumerated in article 1 of this resolution applying for work to the cadre administrations of the labor organs must be registered separately and must not be sent to work in industry and transport before the expiration of six months.

KRAVAL Assistant People's Commissar for Labor of the U.S.S.R. ALEXEEV,

Member of the Collegium of the People's Commissariat for Labor of the U.S.S.R. TSYBULSKI Coordinated with the All-Union Central Soviet of Labor Unions.

EXHIBIT No. 23

[Source: Moscow Za Industrializatsiu, No. 207, July 29, 1931] TO ALL LABOR ORGANS, COLLECTIVE FARMS AND COLLECTIVE FARM ORGANI-ZATIONS, AND TO ALL ECONOMIC ORGANIZATIONS

[Translation]

For the practical execution of all directives of the party and government, and with a view to assuring the successful progress of the operations for supplying national economic life with labor cadres in the second half of the year 1931, the People's Commissariat for Labor of the U. S. S. R., the Supreme Soviet of National Economy of the U. S. S. R., and the Kolkhozcenter of the U. S. S. R., with the concurrence of the People's Commissariat for Agriculture of the U.S.S.R., the All-Union Central Soviet of Labor Unions, and the People's Commissariat for labor of the R.S.F.S.R., establish the following rules for guidance:

1. The commissariats for labor of the several constituent republics and the oblast labor sections, jointly with the economic organs, and with the participation of the collective farm unions shall, within 10 days, sum up the results of the recruitment of labor in the several rayons and localities where recruitment is labor in the several rayons and localities where recruitment is being done, and, taking into consideration the new orders and applications of the economic organs for the recruitment of labor in the third and the fourth quarters, they shall inform the rayon organizations of how many and what workmen, and by what economic organs, will be recruited within the territory of the given rayon in the course of the second half year. In this connection partial alterations may be introduced in the allocation of recruitment rayons, taking into consideration any new conditions in the recruiting of labor as well as the progress of the execution in the recruiting of labor as well as the progress of the execution of the orders made in the several rayons.

2. The rayon labor organs, jointly with the economic organs, and with the participation of the rayon collective farm unions, and basing themselves on the tasks given them, shall apprise every economic organ of what village soviets and collective farms have been estimated to it for purposes of recruitment. In design this economic organ of what village soviets and collective farms have been assigned to it for purposes of recruitment. In doing this the number of the able-bodied population under the given village soviet, the number of collective farm members, the economic strength of the one or the other collective farm, and its production plan shall be taken into consideration.

3. In allocating the rayons and localities for recruitment, the labor organs shall assign to the economic organs for recruitment those rayons which customarily used to provide migratory labor for these economic organs for work endeavoring to arrange mat-those rayons which customarily used to provide migratory labor for these economic organs for work, endeavoring to arrange matters in such a way that in any given locality, or collective farm, such recruitment is carried on, if possible, only by one economic organization. In this connection the larger labor-employing concerns and the collective farms should be permanently assigned (in Russian zakrepit), and such assignment to one another must be put into effect before the end of 1931.

4. Not later than 10 days after having been notified by the labor organs to which collective farms they have been assigned for purposes of recruitment, the economic organs shall conclude with them contracts concerning the designation by them of migratory workmen and assistance in the matter of recruitment. These contracts are to be mutually binding obligations (Articles 5 contracts are to be mutually binding obligations (Articles and 6).

5. The collective farms shall assume, as a rule, the following obligations:

(a) To adopt measures for the best possible organization of labor within the collective farm, and for making the largest possible surplus of labor available for migratory work.
(b) To designate the number of migratory workmen required by the economic organ, and let them go to work with the economic organ without impediment.
(c) In lieu of providing migratory labor, the collective farms

(c) In lieu of providing migratory labor, the collective farms may conclude a contract for carrying out a certain task by their members, such as, for instance, the cutting and removing of timber on and from a given tract, the carrying out of loading operations at a given landing stage or wharf, in the course of a given period of time, etc.

6. The economic organizations shall assume, as a rule, the following obligations:

(a) To render to the collective farm assistance in the matter of organizing labor by means of detailing their own workers to the collective farm for a temporary period, or, if the collective farm supplies large number of laborers, by maintaining at the collective farm at the expense of the given economic organ a special worker for organizing labor;

(b) To render to the collective farm assistance in the matter of drawing up the production and labor plans, and in the matter of improving the financial and accounting work of the collective farm by means of temporarily detailing their own economists, plan workers, and accountants to the collective farm;

(c) To grant to the collective farms for each migratory workman supplied special sums for improving their production work in conformity with the rules established in the resolution of the People's Commissariat for Labor of the U. S. S. R., dated July 17, 1931 (No. 202), concerning the granting by economic organs of special sums to collective farms for the purpose of providing migratory labor: migratory labor;

(d) To organize at the enterprise or at the collective farm training courses for training qualified cadres from among the number of the collective-farm members for the needs of the enterprise as well as of the collective farm.

7. Apart from the obligations enumerated in articles 5 and 6, the economic organs and the collective farms shall be entitled to include on their own initiative in the contracts also other provisions concerning mutual aid that would assure the amplest possible supply, by the collective farms, of migratory labor to the permanent as well as seasonal branches of natonal economic life.

Soviet farms and soviet timber farms shall be entitled to take upon themselves the obligation of rendering assistance to a collective farm situated in the vicinity by supplying it with implements of production, draft power, and in the shape of repairing at its workshops the agricultural implements of the collective Enterprises may send to the collective farms artisan brigades for repairing implements and to supply at fixed prices any metal scrap, shavings, etc., that can be utilized at the collective farm.

Building organizations may render assistance to collective farms by drawing up projects for, and supervising building work at the collective farms.

collective farms.

8. Land and collective farm organs shall be instructed to set aside from the total amount of agricultural machinery in every rayon—a special reserve of such machinery for distribution to those of the collective farms that are supplying the largest numbers of migratory laborers. In this connection not only the absolute numbers of migratory laborers provided by the given collective farm shall be taken into consideration but also the percentage of such migratory labor in comparison with the total number of able-bodied members of the collective farm. Special privileges shall be given to collective farms which have fulfilled, and overfulfilled, their contracts with the economic organs.

and overfulfilled, their contracts with the economic organs.

The norms and the mode of preferential supply of agricultural machinery to collective farms (on the basis of this article) shall be established not later than August 1 by the commissariats for agriculture and the kolkhozcenters of the several constituent republics, but in the R. S. F. S. R. by the corresponding kray and oblast organizations.

9. At the same time that contracts are concluded with the col-lective farms, the recruiting organizations shall conclude then and lective farms, the recruiting organizations shall conclude then and there individual or group contracts with the collective-farm members, stipulating the duration, nature, and place of work, the housing accommodation and the food supply to be furnished, traveling expenses to and from the place of work (at the completion of the term of the contract), per diems, and principal conditions of work (wages, rate of pay, etc.), in conformity with the resolution of the People's Commissariat for Labor of the U. S. S. R., of March 30, 1931, sub No. 180.

30, 1931, sub No. 180.

10. In view of the great importance attached to the speedy effectuation of the directives of party and government, concerning the adoption of new methods of procuring labor man power, it shall be incumbent upon the commissariats for labor, the kolkhozcenters, and the economic combines of the several constituent republics, upon the kray and oblast labor sections, collective-farm unions, and economic organizations to mobilize the necessary number of workers for the speediest possible effectuation of this directive, and also to send to the more important localities where migratory work is being conducted, as well as to outlying districts, workers of their staff for the purpose of rendering assistance in the matter of inaugurating the new methods of procuring labor man power. of procuring labor man power.

11. The economic organs and recruiting organizations must overhaul their recruiting staffs by August 1 and replenish them with seasoned and qualified workers who are conversant with conditions of production as well as with the conditions prevailing in the rayons where the recruiting of labor is to be done. At the same time, responsible persons shall be selected in all recruiting organizations for supervising the recruiting of labor.

12. Information concerning the execution of this instruction must be submitted not later than by August 5, 1931.

TSIKHON People's Commissar for Labor of the U.S.S.R. FIGATNER

Supreme Soviet of National Economy of the U.S.S.R. GEL Kolkhozcenter of the U.S.S.R.

Concurring:

DZHIAN,
People's Commissar for Agriculture of the U. S. S. R.
ALEXSANDROV, All-Union Central Soviet of Labor Unions. SHELISHEV Commissar for Labor of the R. S. F. S. R.

EXHIBIT No. 24

[Source: Supply of man power to seasonal (periodical) industries (literally: * * to seasonal branches of national economic life, collection of directives * * * issued by the Commissariat of Labor of the R. S. F. S. R., Moscow, 1930]

CIRCULAR OF THE PEOPLE'S COMMISSARIATS OF LABOR OF THE U. S. S. R. AND THE R. S. F. S. R., OF THE COLLECTIVE FARM CENTRAL ADMINISTRATION OF THE U. S. S. R., THE SUPREME SOVIET OF NATIONAL ECONOMY OF THE U. S. S. R., AND THE PEOPLE'S COMMISSARIAT OF AGRICULTURE OF THE U. S. S. R., DATED MARCH 3, 1930, U. S. S. R. LABOR COMMISSARIAT'S NO. 87, CONCERNING THE ASSIGNMENT OF LABOR MAN POWER NO. 87, CONCERNING THE ASSIGNMENT OF LABOR MAN POWER TO WORK IN SEASONAL INDUSTRIES

(Published in Moscow Izvestia, * * * No. 8, 1930)

[Translation]

The rapid rate of development of socialistic construction work and the growth of industry require a correct organization of the labor market in the seasonal industries.

labor market in the seasonal industries.

In connection with a number of rayons and okrugs having adopted wholesale collectivization, the supply of man power to industry depends wholly on the labor drawn from the collective farms. The collective farms and the various labor organs should therefore apply themselves to procuring man power for seasonal industries with particular care and in an organized way.

In connection therewith, the People's Commissariats of Labor of the U. S. S. R. and the R. S. F. S. R., the Collective Farm Central Administration of the U. S. S. R., and the People's Commissariat of Agriculture of the U. S. S. R. urge the following rules to be taken into consideration:

into consideration:

 Man power should be directed to seasonal industries in a plan-governed and organized way, on the basis of agreements to be concluded by the organ of the People's Commissariat of Labor, concluded by the organ of the People's Commissariat of Labor, or by economic organs authorized by them, with the respective boards of management of collective farms. The Collective Farm Central Administrations of the several federal republics are to apportion within three days to the sundry oblasts and okrugs their share of the control figures concerning seasonal labor required, passed down from the Collective Farm Central Administration of the U. S. S. R.

2. By way of further particularizing the control figures, the okrug labor organs, jointly with the okrug collective farm combines, are to formulate within a week plans for levying man power from the individual collective farms in conformity with the plans for supplying labor to the sundry branches of national economic life, such as the building trade, timber floating, agriculture, loading and unloading work, etc., and for distributing such man power ing and unloading work, etc., and for distributing such man power between the various rayons and economic organs.

Construction laborers who are members of collective farms should be the first to be attached to building enterprises figuring in the pertinent lists as concerns entitled to preferential treatment in the perturbed state as contents that the presential treatment in the matter of supply of labor man power.

3. Immediately upon elaboration of the plans for the utilization of man power, as referred to in article 2, the okrug organs are to conclude agreements with the managing of the collective farms, concerning man power to be directed from the collective farms to work in seasonal industries.

All operations in connection with the conclusion of agreements must be completed by April 1.

4. Only the labor organs are entitled to conclude agreements with the administration boards of collective farms concerning the sending of members of collective farms to work in seasonal industries. The economic organs may conclude such agreements only tries. The economic organs may conclude such agreements only on special authority from the labor organs.

Members of collective farms, attached in 1920 to economic organs in conformity with the resolution of the commissariat of labor of the U. S. S. R., dated July 16, 1929, sub No. 225, concerning the organization of national economic life (vide izvestia of the Commissariat of Labor, No. 30), are to be summoned for work in compliance with the rules set forth in that resolution, through the administration boards of the respective collective farms. The administration board of the collective farm is to notify the member the administration boards of the respective collective farms. The administration board of the collective farm is to notify the member of the collective farms of such a summons being received. (This appears to be the meaning of the passage which in the Russian text is an obvious error, reading: "The collective farm members are to notify the administration board * * * of such summons * * being received." Translator's note.) In no case shall the boards of management of collective farms prevent collective-farm members attached to industrial enterprises from proceeding to work consequent upon such summons.

5. In the agreements concerning labor man power, the following data must be given:

data must be given:

(a) The numbers of laborers, according to their trades and specialties, that will be placed at the disposal of the labor organs or the economic organs, including also the number of women and juveniles under 18 years of age.

(b) The approximate duration of the work if the labor man power is to be placed directly at the disposal of the economic organs.

(c) The time when the laborers are to be dispatched.
(d) The places of destination and the period of time within which the laborers are to arrive at destination.
(e) Traveling conditions.

6. In such agreement must be provided in all cases the sending, along with the qualified laborers, also of a certain number of semiqualified and nonqualified laborers within the limits of the plan mentioned in article 2, who at the place of work are to be attached to brigades of qualified workers.

7. The remuneration of the work of the collective-farm members is not to exceed the rates of pay stipulated in the collective contracts of the pertinent economic organs.

8. Members of collective farms are to be dispatched to work only on the strength of requisitions issued by labor organs or upon the authority of the latter, on the strength of requisitions issued directly by the consenies are contracted in the strength of requisitions. issued directly by the economic organs; in the event of qualifications being alike, the first to be sent are farm laborers and bedniaks from the number of collective-farm members.

In such requisitions should be stated:

(a) The numbers of seasonal laborers to be sent, specifying of what trades and most lates.

what trades and specialties.

(b) Time of sending them.

(c) Place where to be sent from.

(d) Exact address of place of destination, stating where and to whom to report.

The board of management of the collective farm is to be held responsible for dispatching collective-farm members whose trade or specialty does not correspond to what is stipulated in the requisition.

9. Immediately upon receipt of the requisition the board of management of the collective farm is in its turn to issue orders to those of its members who are to be dispatched for work. In these orders the time of departure and the place of assembly should be stated. Noncompliance with such orders of the board of management on the part of members of the collective farm is to be regarded as nonfulfillment of a resolution of the board of management as well as nonfulfillment of the rules regulating the internal life of the collective farm.

10. Not later than three days after its members have been dispatched for work the boards of management of collective farms are to inform the okrug labor organ and the okrug collective-farm combine of the time of dispatch, and the number of persons dispatched, specifying their trades and specialties.

11. Managing boards of collective farms may recall their members engaged in seasonal work in the socialized sector of national economy before the completion of such work only with the consent of the economic organs for which the respective collective-farm members are working.

12. When drawing up their production plans the boards of management of the collective farms are held:

agement of the collective farms are held:

(a) To make provisions for such numbers of collective-farm members being sent to seasonal work in national economic life as are stipulated in the plans for utilizing their man power, mentioned in article 2, but at any rate not fewer members than were actually sent to such work in 1929;

(b) To distribute the volume of work over the various periods of the year between the individual collective-farm workers in such a way as to assure the number of workers required within the limits of the plan for seasonal work being sent in full.

a way as to assure the number of workers required within the limits of the plan for seasonal work being sent in full.

Any construction work within the limits of the collective farm itself should be done as a rule during the slack time in the seasonal industries, and in the summer period only such work should be attended to as can not be delayed on account of climatic con-

13. The organs of labor and the okrug collective-farm combines should provide in their plans the supply of man power to seasonal industries, and the extension of the markets for seasonal labor by means of using the man power of such collective farms and rayons that would be able to supply man power to all seasonal industries.

14. The okrug labor organs must keep special records of the man power dispatched from the collective farms to seasonal work. Once a month they are to submit to the territorial and oblast labor sections, and to the okrug collective-farm combines, and the latter to the labor commissariats of the federal republics, and the oblast collective-farm combines, respectively, tables containing data concerning the man power sent from the collective farms to the various seasonal industries, as well as the number of seasonal workers left at the collective farms.

15. The labor commissariats of the federal and autonomous republics, and the oblast and territorial labor sections should immediately send their representatives to all the principal regions requiring seasonal labor for the purpose of assisting the okrug labor sections in their work of preparing an organized distribution of the seasonal laborers from the collective farms.

SPECIMEN OF AGREEMENT CONCERNING THE SUPPLYING OF LABOR MAN POWER FROM COLLECTIVE FARMS TO SEASONAL INDUSTRIES, APPROVED BY THE PEOPLE'S COMMISSARIAT OF LABOR OF THE U. S. S. R. AND THE COLLECTIVE FARM CENTRAL ADMINISTRATION ON MARCH 12, 1930, SUBLABOR COMMISSARIAT'S NO. 106

In the town of ____, ____, 1930. We, the undersigned, _____ labor section (or economic organ, as the case may be) _____, hereinafter called the labor section (or the economic organ), represented by _____ acting on the basis of an authority issued by the _____ labor section on ____, sub-No. ____, on the one hand and the administration board of the collection. issued by the _____ labor section on ____, sub-No. ____, on the one hand, and the administration board of the collective farm "the collective farm," represented by _____ acting on the basis of an authorization issued by the administration board of the collective farm, dated _____ No. ____, on the other hand, have concluded the following agreement in conformity with the circular of the People's Commissariat of Labor, the Collective

Farm Central Administration, the People's Commissariat of Agriculture, and the Supreme Soviet of National Economy of the U. S. S. R., dated March 3, 1930:

1. The collective farm undertakes to appoint and send to work, in conformity with requisitions of the labor section (or the economic organ), in the period between _____ and _____, 1930, members of the collective farm to the total number of _____, the various trades being represented in this total number as follows: _____ follows:

Among the persons sent should be _____ women, and _

Among the persons sent should be _____ women, and _____juveniles between 16 and 18 years of age.

2. The labor section (or the economic organ) should issue requisitions for members of the collective farm to be sent to work in such time that the members of the collective farm would have three days for preparations.

3. As regards trade and qualifications, the workers appointed by the collective farms should fully answer the requirements stated in the requisitions.

stated in the requisitions.

4. The collective farm undertakes to dispatch the appointed members of the collective farm to the full number stipulated to that place which has been specified by the labor section (or the economic organ) not later than three days after the receipt of each separate requisition.

5. Within three days after the execution of each requisition received the collective farm shall be bound to inform the labor section and the Okrug collective farm combine of the execution of the requisition.

6. The labor section (or the economic organ) undertakes to provide work for the appointive collective-farm members to the total number and of trades as specified in article 1 not later than on _____, 1930, and for a period of not less than _____ months.

The labor section (or the economic organ) is to provide such ork in _____ rayon or in _____ of the economic work in _ organ. Note.-NOTE.—The dates of dispatching the collective-farm members and the duration of their work are to be fixed on the basis of the plans for supplying labor man power to the various seasonal branches of production and on the basis of the latter's working plans.

7. In sending its members to work the collective farm is to

7. In sending its members to work the collective farm is to furnish them with lists certified by the administration board of the collective farm, such lists to contain information concerning the deductions to be made from the earnings of the said members for the benefit of the collective farm.

8. The labor section undertakes to give work to the members of the collective farm not later than five days after they have arrived at their place of destination, in conformity with the corresponding requisition, and to furnish them with housing accommodations not later than 48 hours after their arrival responding requisition, and to furnish them with housing accommodations not later than 48 hours after their arrival.

Note.—If the agreement is signed directly by the economic organ authorized to do so by the labor organs, article 8 is to be eliminated and to be replaced by the following: "The economic organ undertakes to furnish work to the arriving collective-farm members not later than within 48 hours and housing accommodations not later than within 24 hours."

9. All collective-farm members start work on the conditions of the collective contract in operation at the given economic organ. 10. From the moment the collective-farm members are dispatched to work outside the limits of the collective farm the latter ceases to be responsible for them.
All claims of the economic organ against the collective-farm members at work, and vice versa, of such collective-farm members against the economic organs, are to be settled in the ordinary

The economic organ is to notify the collective farms of any violation of the rules regulating internal life on the part of the collective farm members at work.

11. The collective farm undertakes not to recall its members from work before the expiration of the season for the particular kind of work, not even in the period of the agricultural summer season.

12. This agreement is to become effective on the day it is signed.

13. The legal addresses of the contracting parties are (of the labor section, and of the economic organ)-

EXHIBIT No. 25

[Source: Moscow Izvestia, No. 14, January 14, 1931]

RESOLUTION OF THE CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE U. S. S. R., CONCERNING THE TRAINING OF SKILLED LABORERS FOR THE NATIONAL ECONOMY OF THE U. S. S. R.

[Translation of excerpts]

* * * Having heard and discussed the report made by the People's Commissar for Labor of the U. S. S. R., concerning the training of skilled laborers for the national economy, the Third Session of the Central Executive Committee of the U. S. S. R. resolves as follows:

resolves as follows:

1. The People's Commissariat for Labor of the U. S. S. R. and the economic organs are instructed to take measures to insure in due time, that the number of laborers and employees (not including the seasonal branches) are increased in 1931 by 2,000,000 persons, in strict accordance with the national economic plan of the U. S. S. R. (control figures).

First of all, heavy industry, transport, industrial building work, and the most important branches of agriculture must be supplied with skilled labor.

The People's Commissariat for Labor of the U. S. S. R. is inof labor and defense, plans for the training, utilization, and distribution of skilled labor for 1931 throughout the U. S. S. R., according to branches of national economy, and according to regions.

The State Plan Commission, Supreme Soviet of National Economy, and the People's Commissariat for Labor of the U. S. S. R. are instructed to elaborate within two months a plan for mechanizing the production process in those branches of national economy where the greatest shortage of labor is felt (coal, building work, peat production processes in the production of the production timber procurement, loading and unloading work, peat production, etc.).

2. National economy must be supplied with skilled labor by way of training new cadres, as well as by the more rational utilization of the existing cadres (struggle against excessive labor, and labor fluctuation at the enterprises and institutions, improvement of the organization of labor, etc.).

Chiefs of economic organs and enterprises (Supreme Soviet of National Economy, People's Commissariet for Maria of Commissariet for Maria

Chiefs of economic organs and enterprises (Supreme Soviet of National Economy, People's Commissariat for Ways of Communication, People's Commissariat for Agriculture, People's Commissariat for Supply, Centrosoyuz) shall be made personally responsible for the rational utilization of labor man power.

The People's Commissariat for Labor of the U. S. S. R. shall be charged with the supervision of the execution of this resolution, instituting proceedings against persons guilty of concealing excessive numbers of laborers and of an irrational utilization of labor, as well as against persons who do not fight against labor fluctuation, which is the most disorganizing factor in production.

3. The People's Commissariat for Labor of the U. S. S. R. must become the fundamental organizing, regulating, and planning center in matters pertaining to labor and labor utilization. All departments and organizations are bound to conduct their planning and operative work in the spere of labor, by agreement with the People's Commissariat for Labor of the U. S. S. R. Cultural and social work must be conducted in such a manner as to support the organs of the People's Commissariat for Labor of the U. S. S. R. in the matter of recruiting and training labor man power, and in the matter of struggling against labor fluctuation.

The People's Commissariat for Labor of the U. S. S. R. is instructed to transform and strengthen its organs within the shorts

The People's Commissariat for Labor of the U. S. S. R. is instructed to transform and strengthen its organs within the shortest possible period of time, in order to accelerate and improve the quality of work, fighting at the same time against all forms of red tape in supplying national economy with labor.

4. * *

5. The training of skilled labor cadres (besides raising the qualification of laborers by way of socialistic emulation, shock brigades, start-to-finish brigades, industrial-financial counter plans, etc.) must take place in the following manner:

(a) Through the factory schools ("fabzavuch"), schools organized at industrial building work ("strotuch"), schools organized at agricultural building work ("selkhozuch"). These three forms of education must become the fundamental form of training skilled laborers from among juveniles.

The factory schools, "strotuch," and "selkhozuch" schools must, in addition to the usual number of pupils, train in 1931 700,000 juveniles—children of workmen, employees, handicraft workers, labor hands, collective farmers, bedniaks, and acredniaks—so that the number of pupils would reach a total of 1,200,000 persons. Of this number at least 100,000 must be children of labor hands. About 50 per cent of all persons accepted at the factory schools must be girls. must be girls.

(b) Through brief training courses organized by labor organs, especially by the branches of the Central Labor Institute (TSIT). The brief training of skilled laborers must be organized by the organs of the People's Commissariat for Labor of the U. S. S. R. at institutions attached to the enterprise, building work, or establishment. In 1931 at least 500,000 persons must be trained in such a manner.

such a manner.

(c) By promoting laborers from a lower to a higher qualification. This promotion to higher qualification must embrace, in 1931, not less than 600,000 men by way of direct promotion and through evening lectures, schools for youths, and production courses.

It is necessary at the same time to increase the instructing of laborers directly at production, introducing the highest forms of expanization of labor.

organization of labor.

6. The principal sources for the supply of national economy with skilled labor shall be:

(a) Family members of laborers and employees.(b) Labor hands.

(c) Persons occupied in handicraft-production cooperatives.

(d) Collective farmers. (e) Bedniaks and seredniaks from the individual sector of agriculture.

7. Particular attention must be paid to the raising of the qualification of women, and their participation in production.
The People's Commissariat for Labor of the U. S. S. R. is instructed to elaborate within two months, and to submit for approval to the Soviet of People's Commissars of the U. S. S. R. measures to increase the participation of women in production. For this purpose living conditions must be changed (creation of public dining rooms, dwellings, creches, infant schools, laundries, canteens, etc.), in order to liberate the women from unproductive, stupefying domestic work.

9. The unused reserves of labor man power at collective farms must be maximally utilized. The People's Commissariat for Labor of the U. S. S. R. is instructed to elaborate corresponding measures within one month, with the concurrence of the People's Commissariat for Agriculture of the U. S. S. R. and the Kolkhozcenter.

M. KALININ. President of the Central Executive Committee of the U. S. S. R.
A. ENUKIDZE,
Secretary of the Central Executive
Committee of the U. S. S. R.

Moscow, Kremlin, January 10, 1931.

EXHIBIT No. 26

[Source: Moscow Informative Bulletin of the Centrosoyuz of the U. S. S. R. and R. S. F. S. R., Nos. 4-6, January 31, 1931, p. 36]

THE INTRODUCTION OF A UNIFORM SYSTEM OF SUPPLY TO THE TOILERS ON RATION TICKETS IN 1931

Resolution of the Collegium of the People's Commissariat for Supply of the U. S. S. R. of January 13, 1931, No. 42

[Translation]

For the purpose of establishing a uniform system of supplying the population with main food products and manufactured goods, of making the ration supply documents uniform, and of facilitating the work of the local organs in the matter of issuing ration tickets, the Collegium of the People's Commissariat for Supply of the U. S. S. R. resolves:

1. The population of all cities of the U. S. S. R. is to be divided from January 1, 1931, for the purpose of issuing ration tickets into the following categories:

First group-Laborers

"A." Industrial laborers.

"B." Other laborers, persons occupied in manual labor, and some other categories placed on the same level.

Second group-" Toilers"

Employees, members of laborers' families, members of employees' families, and other toilers.

Third group—Children up to 14 years of age

2. To Group "A" belong-

(a) Laborers in industrial enterprises.
(b) Laborers (and persons placed on the same level) occupied in the railway, water, and local transport service, communication

(b) Laborers (and persons placed on the same level) occupied in the railway, water, and local transport service, communication service, communal household, according to the attached list. (This list has not been translated, as it was not considered of sufficient importance.—Translator's note.)

(c) Persons occupying elected post at the place of their permanent work (for the length of time they occupy elected posts), if these persons belonged to Group "A" prior to their election.

(d) Laborers promoted to higher posts, formerly supplied under Group "A," during the first year of their service in institutions.

(e) Engineer and technical personnel, working directly in production—in a factory, plant, at structural or construction work, building of railway lines, investigation work, etc.—as well as scientific workers and apprentices in factory laboratories.

(f) Commanding and political personnel of the Red Army and Navy, of the O. G. P. U. troops, militarized defense force of the People's Commissariat for Communications, People's Commissariat for Post and Telegraph, Supreme Soviet of National Economy of the U. S. S. R., from the third category upwards, as well as the younger commanding personnel serving in excess of the length of active military service, if they do not receive rations in kind from the stocks of the war department.

(g) Active militiamen and active workers of the criminal investigation department.

vestigation department.

(h) Students, instructors, and permanent teachers in factory

3. To the first Group "B" belong:

(a) Laborers and persons occupied in manual labor not directly in production in industrial enterprises (cold-storage rooms, slaughterhouses, stores, elevators, soviet farms, pig-breeding establishments, etc.)

ments, etc.)

(b) Laborers (and persons put on the same level) employed in the railway, water, and local transport service, communications service, and communal households, according to the attached list.

[Translatora's Notz.—This list has not been translated, as it was not considered of sufficient importance.]

(c) Persons occupying elected posts at the place of their permanent work, if they belonged to Group "B" prior to their election.

(d) Laborers promoted to higher posts, formerly supplied according to Group "B," during the first year of their service in institutions.

institutions

(e) Handicraft workers who are members of cooperatives, workas well as invalids working in production artels; persons performing cartage work according to contracts concluded with state organs or cooperatives for a period of at least one year, provided they work the whole working day.

(f) Students in industrial schools, industrial technical institutes, and labor faculties, in transport and communication schools, as well as the permanent teachers in these schools.

Note.—The list of these educational establishments must be confirmed by a commission formed in accordance with article 12 of this resolution.

(g) Pensioners with personal documents from the People's Commissariat for Social Welfare, People's Commissariat for Finance, and the People's Commissariat for Military and Naval Affairs; members of the Society of Political Convicts, incapacitated for work, and of the Society of Old Bolsheviks.

(h) Persons performing manual labor, working in institutions and enterprises of the society and constraint trade establishments.

and enterprises of the sanitary department, trade establishments, etc.

etc.

4. To the second group belong employees, members of families of laborers of Groups A and B, students in nonindustrial schools, technical schools, and training courses, pioneers (except those persons who have documents from the People's Commissariats for Social Welfare, Finance, Military, and Naval Affairs), invalids depending only on their pensions, unemployed, and other toilers who are performing socially useful work and who do not exploit others for profit and who are not in the service of the Government, cooperative and other public institutions and organizations—particularly persons who receive a share of the profit in cooperative and other organizations—handicraft workers who are not members of cooperatives, individual craftsmen with registration certificates (personal craft certificates of the first category), invalids with gratis certificates, persons performing cartage (provided they are not connected with agriculture), private physicians, masseurs, artists, sculptors, economists, private teachers registered in educational organs, members of the board of legal advisers, and other persons of free professions, as well as persons dependent on others.

5. To the third group belong children up to 14 years of age (born in 1917, regardless of the date of birth) of all groups of the population (regardless of the occupation of their parents).

6. The ration tickets shall be issued exclusively in places entered in the lists of the People's Commissariat for Supply of the U. S. S. R., special list and list No. 1, and in places entered in the lists No. 2 and No. 3 of the kray (oblast) supply departments; the number of persons to be supplied on the basis of these lists shall be established by the People's Commissariat for Supply of the

7. In cities where the supply according to the special list and lists Nos. 1, 2, and 3 takes place simultaneously the issue of ration tickets to the population shall take place according to groups of the population mentioned in article 1, as follows:

(a) Laborers, employees, and members of their families must receive ration tickets with distinguishing marks of those lists to which their enterprises belong.

(b) Other toilers, not connected with a certain enterprise or plant, must receive ration tickets issued for the corresponding group according to the lowest list. There are, let us suppose, three factories and an important railway junction in a certain city. One factory belongs to the special list, the railway workers to list No. 1, the remaining factories to list No. 2, and the rest of the population to list No. 3. In such a case the ration tickets must be issued as follows:

The laborers, employees, and members of their families without independent earnings must receive ration tickets of groups I "A," I "B," and group II of the special list, without any distinction lines.

lines

Railway workers, laborers, employees, and members of their families must receive ration tickets of group I "A," I "B," and II of the same color as those of the special list, but with one vertical line on all coupons.

Laborers, employees, and members of their families of the other two factories must receive ration tickets I "A," I "B," and II with two vertical lines on each coupon.

Laborers, employees, members of their families, and other toilers of the city must receive ration tickets I "A," I "B," and II with three vertical lines on each coupon.

of the city must receive ration tickets I "A," I "B," and II with three vertical lines on each coupon.

Children up to 14 years of age of all groups of the population must receive ration tickets of group III. They have to be supplied from the special children's supply fund of the respective city.

8. Seasonal laborers (builders, peat workers, persons occupied in loading, etc.) have to be organized into a special supply group, to be supplied according to special rations and according to special half-monthly coupons.

9. The following categories of the population are to be deprived of their ration tickets, together with the members of their families regardless of whether or not they reside with them, if they are materially dependent on the head of the family (excluding children under 14 years of age):

(a) Disfranchised persons, and persons performing no public useful work; lessees living on earnings not derived from labor; owners and coowners of special offices, hospitals, bureaus, etc., if they use hired labor; lessees of trade and industrial establishments, and persons who have invested money in such establishments; private contractors and suppliers, private brokers, traveling agents of private enterprises; servants of religious worship of all faiths and doctrines, teachers and supervisors of religious communities; artists working for church councils and religious societies; publishers and editors of religious magazines, etc.

(b) Market, bazaar, and street venders; owners of tea rooms, beer shops, dining rooms, and similar establishments.

(c) Persons who have changed from a nontolling occupation to a toiling one, if less than one year has elapsed since the change

(d) Persons who purposely fail to procure registration documents showing their occupation or profession, as well as persons who fail to produce documents showing that they perform public useful work, or showing that they are unemployed, or materially dependent on some one else.

10. In order to improve the work concerning the issuance of ration tickets, the Centrosoyuz is instructed to designate within 10 days a person from among the members of the management, and to create a special organization for the practical fulfillment of this resolution, registration of the population, and registration of the ration tickets issued.

11. The Centrosoyuz is ordered to elaborate within one month 11. The Centrosoyuz is ordered to elaborate within one month a detailed instruction concerning the issuance of ration tickets in a centralized manner; in particular, to submit for confirmation to the People's Commissariat for Supply of the U. S. S. R., an instruction concerning the issuance of ration tickets according to groups in cities, where there are enterprises belonging to the special list, and lists Nos. 1, 2, and 3.

12. All oblast and kray supply departments are advised to form, during the time ration tickets are issued to the urban population, special commissions for the supervision of this work, consisting of the following persons: representatives of the kray or oblast executive committees, of the supply departments, workers' and peasants' inspection, central workmen's cooperative, and the labor union soviet.

union soviet.

union soviet.

13. During the time ration tickets are issued, a strict registration of the entire urban and suburban population must take place under the control of public opinion and of the laborers, organizing an actual inspection of the occupants of every house.

14. The kray or oblast supply departments shall issue obligatory orders making the administration of dwelling houses responsible for the strict fulfillment of all instructions concerning the issuance of section tickets.

of ration tickets.

Volkov,
Vice People's Commissar for Supply of the U. S. S. R.
Kumykin,

Assistant Manager of Affairs of the People's Commissariat for Supply of the U. S. S. R.

EXHIBIT No. 27

[Source: Moscow Izvestia, No. 45, February 15, 1930]

RESOLUTION OF THE ALL-RUSSIAN CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE AND SOVIET OF PEOPLE'S COMMISSARS OF THE R. S. F. S. R., CONCERNING MEASURES FOR THE EXPANSION OF TIMBER-PROCURING AND TIMBER-FLOATING OPERATIONS

[Translation]

The All-Russian Central Executive Committee and Soviet of

The All-Russian Central Executive Committee and Soviet of People's Commissars of the R. S. F. S. R. have resolved:

1. In cases when a general meeting of citizens (village meeting) has resolved to assume, as a task self-imposed by the whole village, the execution of certain work pertaining to the procurement, haulage, and floating of timber (including also cases when the undertaking stipulates the use of own teams), and when, in consequence, the undertaking has been allocated to each of the several farm holdings, the village soviets are permitted to impose of their own administrative authority on farmers who have failed to their own administrative authority on farmers who have failed to carry out in due time the above-mentioned resolution of the village meeting, fines up to three times the value of their quota, and in case of nonpayment, to sell at public auction the property of the persons concerned.

The teams belonging to kulak farm holdings which have failed to execute their quots of timber haulage and floating are to be appropriated by resolution of the village soviet for the needs of timber procurement.

2. In cases of resistance to the execution of timber procure ment and timber floating, as well as in cases of group refusal to carry out the above-mentioned work, the village soviets are instructed to start against such persons criminal proceedings in accordance with the corresponding sections of article 16 of the criminal code of the R. S. F. S. R.

3. (Summary.) This article provides that 25 per cent of the money received as fines is to be applied to the fund for assisting the indigent peasants to become members of cooperatives and collective farms, while the remaining 75 per cent is to be applied to the revenues of the local budget.

4. In cases when all other means of supplying logging and floating work with labor and teams have been exhausted, the central executive committees of the autonomous republics and the executive committees of krays and oblasts are permitted to proclaim logging and floating work a forced service and to commandeer labor and teams for a remuneration.

Persons belonging to the kulak class shall be made to perform that work at reduced pay, depending on local conditions.

The present resolution is to be made effective by telegraph.

M. KALININ, President of the All-Russian Central Executive Committee.

A. KISELEV, Vice President of the Soviet of People's Commissars of the R. S. F. S. R. Moscow, Kremlin, February 13, 1930.

EXHIBIT No. 28

[Source: Moscow Za Industrializatsiu, No. 225, September 25, 1930] CRIMINAL LIABILITY FOR EVADING MOBILIZATION.—DECISION OF THE COLLEGIUM OF THE PEOPLE'S COMMISSARIAT OF LABOR OF THE U. S.

[Translation]

The Collegium of the People's Commissariat of Labor of the U. S. S. R. discussed yesterday the progress of the mobilization of specialists for construction work on a large scale, and decided to institute legal proceedings against persons who resist such mobilization, as well as against engineers and technicians who have been already removed from their former work but have not yet proceeded to their new places of destination. It was proposed to make public the lists of such specialists, and to institute criminal proceedings against them for desertion from production

It was further resolved to investigate without delay how the mobilization of the specialists in the Ukraine is going on, and if it should transpire that the situation has not changed for the better, to institute legal proceedings against the workers of the Ukrainian People's Commissariat of Labor.

The mobilization must be finished by all means by October 1.

The collegium has instructed the Cadres sector, jointly with the various public organizations, to scrutinize the work of the organs of the commissariat of labor in connection with the mobiliza-tion of specialists, and subsequently to institute proceedings against those of the workers who have been displaying insuf-ficient energy in the pursuit of this work.

EXHIBIT No. 29

[Source: Bulletin of Financial and Economic Legislation, May 14, 17, 1931, p. 27]

CIRCULAR OF THE PEOPLE'S COMMISSARIAT OF JUSTICE OF THE R. S. F. S. R. OF FEBEUARY 6, 1931, NO. 13.—REGARDING THE EXTENSION OF COOPERATION BY ORGANS OF THE PROSECUTING OFFICE TO THE CARRYING OUT OF LUMBER OPERATIONS

To the Kray and Oblast prosecutors. Copy: To the prosecutors of autonomous republics.

[Translation of excerpts.]

On January 26, 1931, the Soviet of Labor and Defense approved the resolution regarding the results of the lumber operations during the special quarter of 1930 and regarding the measures to be taken to carry out lumber operations in the first quarter of 1931.

taken to carry out lumber operations in the first quarter of 1931. The nonexecution of the plan of the special quarter (36.3 per cent of marketable lumber was prepared, 36.2 per cent being shipped; 58 per cent of fuel was prepared, 42 per cent being shipped), the necessity to execute in full the plan of the trust lumber industry for 1931, and, particularly, the elimination of the gap which occurred in the special quarter, demand that all local organs take the most active part in carrying out that work. The organs of the prosecutor's office, some of which last year also devoted sufficient attention to lumber operations, should increase the pace of their work and should regard it as one of the first order. It is imperative to effect supervision over the work of the lum-

It is imperative to effect supervision over the work of the lumber trusts with regard to the execution of industrial programs and plans and to the bringing of the latter down to the lower economic plans and to the bringing of the latter down to the lower economic units, particular attention being devoted to questions pertaining to the recruiting of labor and horsepower, to their transfer from one rayon to another, and to the execution by the organs of labor of the orders they receive, and by collective farm and forest cooperatives of contracts for the supply of labor.

Decisive struggle against all kinds of kulak sallies and kulak resistance should be carried on, the guilty persons being brought to court under the chapter of counter-revolutionary crimes.

Kulaks and well-to-do peasants who do not fulfill the tasks set to them in connection with lumber operations should be brought to court under article 61 of the criminal code.

to court under article 61 of the criminal code.

The rates of speed attained in examining cases pertaining to grain collections should be attained in cases pertaining to the undermining of lumber operations.

The work of participation of organs of justice in the campaign of lumber operations should be clarified in reports submitted every 10 days.

ROGINSKY, Acting Prosecutor of the Republic.

EXHIBIT No. 30

[Source: Sobrante Uzakoneni I Rasporiazheni Raboche-Krest-Ianskovo Pravitelstva R. S. F. S. R., No. 45, June 18, 1930]

STATUTE OF THE BOARD OF MANAGEMENT ATTACHED TO THE CHIEF AD-MINISTRATION OF PLACES OF CONFINEMENT OF THE PEOPLE'S COM-MISSARIAT OF THE INTERIOR OF THE R. S. F. S. R. "COMBINE OF FACTORY LABOR COLONIES OF THE STATE ADMINISTRATION OF PLACES OF CON-FINEMENT AND ENTERPRISES OF THE COMMITTEE OF ASSISTANCE" UNDER THE ABBREVIATED NAME "COMBINE F. T. K. GUMZ."—AP-PROVED BY THE PEOPLE'S COMMISSARIAT OF THE INTERIOR ON FEBRU-ARY 25, 1930

[Translation of excerpt] 1. General provisions

Paragraph 1: In accordance with the resolution of the All-Union Central Executive committee and of the Soviet of People's Commissars of the R. S. F. S. R., dated May (date illegible), 1926, "concerning management boards attached to state institutions" and with the resolution dated September 27, 1926, and articles 227-231 of the penal labor code for the purpose of realizing an effect of labor correction on the convicts and of utilizing the labor of persons condemned to compulsory labor without keeping them under guard, as well as of granting temporary labor to persons liberated from places of confinement and to members of families of convicts, an enterprise named "Combine of Factory Labor Colonies of the State Administration of Places of Confinement" (and of enterprises of the committee of assistance) will be established under the general supervision of the People's Commissariat of the Interior and of its chief administration of places of confinement, and will be situated in Moscow. and will be situated in Moscow.

Paragraph 2: The combine of factory labor colonies will consist of:

 Weaving and knowledge
 Metal-stamping colony.
 Chemical colony. Weaving and knitting colony.

3. Chemical colony.
4. Silicate colony.
5. Colony of nonmining deposits.
6. "Kombinat" colony.
7. Burepolomsk factory labor colony.
8. Kazan factory labor colony.
9. Sardansk factory labor colony.
10. Vetluga lumber camps.

11. Avdotino-Tikhvin agricultural colony.
12. "Yushino-Voskresenskoe" agricultural colony.
13. Agricultural colony "Lobanovo."
Paragraph 3: The combine is an independent economic unit acting upon the principles of economic calculation, is entitled from the ing upon the principles of economic calculation, is entitled from the day of registration of the present statute at the People's Commissariat for Trade to all rights of a juridical person, and carries responsibility only within limits of the property, which is at its disposal and has not been exempted from circulation.

The Chief Administration of Places of Confinement, the People's Commissariat of the Interior of the R. S. F. S. R., and the state treasury are not held responsible for the debts of the com-

Note.—From the moment of registration of the present statute, the statutes of "the combine of industrial enterprises of the VKPZ," and of the "trade and collection enterprises of Moscow places of confinement" are regarded as no longer valid.

Note 2.—The statute of the combine of Factory Labor Colonies will be submitted for registration to the People's Commissariat for Trade of the R. S. F. S. R. within two weeks from the date of receipt of the funds granted to the enterprise.

Paragraph 4: For the purpose of realizing its task, the combine is granted the right to perform all operations authorized by the

such as:

(a) The right to conclude every kind of contract, obligation, and agreement pertaining to its economic and industrial activity;

(b) The right to purchase all material, property, and equipment required for production and to sell the product of enterprises entering into the combine, and of places of confinement of the

(c) The right of obtaining credit in state and cooperative institutions for the purpose of developing industry;
(d) The right of opening industrial enterprises, departments, stores, warehouses, etc., within the limits of the R. S. F. S. R. Paragraph 5: In its industrial and trade activity the combine will be subject to all acting regulations regarding industry and trade if such regulations are not amended in respect of enterprises of places of confinement by the Pengl Labor Code of the Prises.

trade if such regulations are not amended in respect of enterprises of places of confinement by the Penal Labor Code of the R. S. F. S. R. and by subsequent provisions in development thereof.

Paragraph 6: The industrial activity in enterprises of the combine is effected by: Convicts, persons condemned to compulsory labor without being kept under guard, and by persons under patronage (among them by members of the families of the convicts), hired employees being only admitted in the capacity of instructions, warehouse, responsible bookkeeping, and administrative technical personnel

Note.—Free hired labor is permitted within limits established the People's Commissariat of the Interior by agreement with the People's Commissariat for Finance.

Paragraph 7: With the exception of cases provided for by general regulations and instructions of the People's Commissariat of the Interior of the R. S. F. S. R. to the Chief Administration of Places of Confinement, and by the present statute, no state institutions or official persons are authorized to interfere in the administrative, economic, and operative activity of the combine.

Paragraph 8: The combine will have a stamp representing its

EXHIBIT No. 31

COURTS OFFICIALLY ORDERED TO INCREASE THEIR OUTPUT OF CONVICT LUMBERMEN

(Published in Sudebnaya Praktika (Court Practice) of the R. S. F. S. R., No. 17-18, December 30, 1930, page 18, edited by P. I. Stuchka, President of the Supreme Court of the R. S. F. S. R.)

[Translation]

Directions issued by the Court of the Northern Territory Concerning Lumbering, 1930-31

Having observed in its letter that in the conditions of the northern territory lumbering is the most important economic-political campaign of the present year, the court of the territory directs that the organs of justice of the territory, and in particular those situated in the districts of the timber industry, shall devote exceptional attention to lumbering.

Each people's judge shall be firmly aware that lumbering during the present year will be carried on in circumstances of acutened

The kulak, with a view to disrupting the lumbering program, will strive to disrupt lumbering operations, will in every way injure these operations, will carry on hostile agitation and not shun any means of kulak terrorism.

Therefore, fierce and crushing combat against the kulak is the chief task of the organs of justice of the territory during the present lumbering campaign.

The lumbering campaign demands the adherence to the class-line with exceptional strictness. While dealing crushing blows at the kulak, while isolating him at the proper moment, the court must, in regard to the seredniaki, the bedniaki, and collectivized peasants, be an organ to influence them and must apply to them measures of judicial repression which, like other pronouncements of the court, will play the part of instruments to mobilize their labor power; the court must be a means of uniting their ranks in the interest of fulfilling the lumbering program of the present vear.

year.

The court must also wage decisive war on persons allowing inactivistlessness, open practical opportunism, which are unquestionably harmful to the progress of lumbering.

Each people's judge in this extraordinarily responsible lumbering campaign must decide cases not only quickly and in full agreement with the policy of our party but must also take an active part in the campaign, must be bound up in the closest way with the timber industry of his district, must know the conditions of work in the forests and, together with the whole of the soviet public spirit, must be in the first ranks of the champions fighting for the execution of the lumbering program of the present year.

This is why the court of the territory, not limiting itself to the giving of mere political directions to the local courts of the territory, considers as absolutely necessary at the same time to form giving of mere political directions to the local courts of the territory, considers as absolutely necessary at the same time to form the whole machinery of justice in such an organized way that this or that section of the people's court, especially sections situated in the district of the timber industry where lumbering is in progress shall not be distinguishable from champions on the front for the fulfillment of the lumbering program.

fulfillment of the lumbering program.

For the direct and vital management and control of the whole of the lumbering campaign the court of the territory itself enters into this organization by attaching its members (to it) as responsible directors of a number of sections of the people's court. In view of what has been explained above, the people's courts and the court of the territory, in an organized way at the front for the struggle to fulfill the lumbering plan, shall be formed in the following way.

the following way:

1. Each people's judge, especially if he is in the lumbering district, shall thoroughly study all the places and sections of work and the speed at which they are working.

2. The people's court shall vigilantly look out for weak spots in the work, ascertain the reasons for diminishing the speed of work, discover persons guilty of disrupting work and those guilty of reducing speed.

3. Each people's court of a district in which direct lumbering or a timber industry is not being carried on shall nevertheless not release lumbering from its field of vision. The people's court shall in these cases help forward the mobilization of the living labor power in its district and the mobilization of the means necessary for lumbering operations, shall further the supplying of lumbering districts with grain products, means of transport, of lumbering districts with grain products, means of transport, and the like. The judge in such a district shall attentively watch the activity of the kulak, who unquestionably will strive in every way to injure and impede the recruiting of living labor power and the supplying of lumbering districts with all necessities. Here it is necessary to make timely discoveries of the undermining activities of the kulak, the wrecker, and the opportunist and to direct against them betimes the sharp edge of products. tunist and to direct against them betimes the sharp edge of prole-tarian judicial repression.

4. On the other hand, for the purpose of imparting constant instruction, for observation and rendering necessary and timely assistance to the people's courts in connection with the lumbering campaign, and to enable full responsibility for this campaign, members of the court of the territory shall be attached to groups of districts engaged in lumbering and the timber industry, and each member shall be held personally responsible for the work of the people's courts in matters concerning lumbering in the group of districts under his charge.

of districts under his charge.

Thus, for the real and full execution of the lumbering program this year and in order to render the greatest assistance to the lumbering operations, the court of the territory instructs:

1. In order to make clear the extent of the lumbering plan in the district served by each people's court—to maintain the closest contact with directive and economic organs (the timber industry and others) in charge of the program for lumbering and study in detail the measures which are being taken by these organs to insure the full execution of the lumbering program.

2. To maintain also throughout the lumbering campaign the closest contact with the prosecuting inspectorate for general and real judicial work for the fulfillment of the program for the current year.

current year.

3. To be constantly informed about the progress of the lumbering campaign in the separate sections of the front and to

LXXV--385 direct the chief judicial blows of proletarian repression against the sections which, influenced by wrecking and extreme carelessness, are the most backward.

4. To work on mass political lines throughout the lumbering campaign in conjunction with the prosecuting inspectorate, to explain the decisive importance to the whole 5-year plan of the fulfillment of the lumbering program.

5. During concrete cases before the court of wrecking and rup-ture of the lumbering plan by the class enemy, to reveal without mercy the essential class nature of his activity.

6. Also without mercy to lay bare any opportunist attitude on the part of administrators toward the class enemy, the kulak.
7. In respect to kulak class enemies brought to justice for willful refusal to fullfil duties undertaken by them, to apply to them article 61, part 3, of the Criminal Code.

 In all other cases counterrevolutionary agitation by kulaks, their wrecking activity on the front of combat for the lumbering program—to qualify their activity under articles No. 58-No. 10 and 58-No. 7 of the Criminal Code.

9. To qualify terrorist acts on the part of kulaks under article 58-No. 8 of the Criminal Code.

10. In regard to seredniaki, bedniaki, and members of collective forms.

farms, who may also be prosecuted for activity which disturbs lumbering and for refusal to perform the tasks self-imposed by the village assembly, the measure of social defense applied must agree with the political condition set forth in paragraph 11 of the present directions, and must follow the line of exerting influence on them by this or that judicial pressure which must preferably be in the form of compulsory labor.

11. All persons sentenced to compulsory labor by the people's court must be utilized to serve their sentences in lumbering.

12. The same order to be established for the regional court of Komi with regard to the Komi region.

13. On receipt of these directions the court of the territory must be immediately informed of the initial measures taken by the local courts.

14. Every 10 days the people's courts shall send reports to the organizing department of the court of the territory, with detailed information of the work done by them for the fulfillment of the lumbering program, set out as follows to show:

(1) What has been done by the judge in his district to secure maintenance of the speed of lumbering.
(2) To what degree public-political work has been unfolded among laborers; how the initiative of the timber-felling masses is manifesting itself (socialist emulation, shock service, etc.); in what ways productivity is being increased; and, particularly, what the judge has done to improve these stimuli.

(3) Class warfare in connection with lumbering (unfulfillment of prescribed standards, abandonment of work, wrecking, destruction of property, striving for personal gain, tolerant attitude toward the kulak; what work the judge has publicly undertaken to combat these phenomena).

(4) What faults are observed in the work of the organizations for lumber work and supplies in the districts under report, and what is being undertaken by the judge to remove these faults (abuses, indifference, inebriety, cheating of laborers, withholding wages, living conditions of timber hewers, forest service, and what judge has done to remove these deficiencies)

(5) How many journeys the judge has undertaken into the forest, the number of reports and conversations (themes).

(6) The number of demonstrative trials.

(7) The total number of prosecutions in connection with lumber work and the number of condemned: Kulaki, seredniaki, bedniaki, officials;

Length of time taken in bringing cases to court;

15. The first report by all people's courts must be dated November 10; i. e., for the first 10 days of November, and subsequently reports must be sent to the organizing department of the court of the territory every 10 days with the highest degree of punctuality.

Ехнівіт №. 32

[From the Moscow Economic Life, No. 249, October 27, 1930] (Translation of excepts from the Soviet press relating to labor in the forests of the U. S. S. R.)

TIMBER CUTTING PROGRESSING SLOWLY

Leningrad, October * * * In the timber-cutting districts the cadres of qualified workers are being mobilized for the purpose of sending them to the timber areas. (From our own corre-

[From the Moscow Economic Life, No. 269, November 22, 1929] A SHOCK-BRIGADE TEMPO MUST EE ADOPTED IN THE TIMBER-CUTTING AREAS

* * As was the case in the grain-purchase campaign, also the measures adopted for pushing the cutting and preparing of timber, meet, as the rule, with active resistance on the part of the kulak groups in the timber-growing regions. The sabotaging work of the kulaks should be countered by the development of mass political activity in the districts where timber-cutting operations are going on. The best cadres of timber cutters should be lined up and organized, methods of socialistic emulation should be sampled more broadly among the various timber collectives as be applied more broadly among the various timber collectives, as well as within them; labor shock brigades should be organized, and in a general way the vast experience in mass work, which has been accumulated in the recent past at industrial establishments as well as in the villages, should be turned to account at the timber-cutting operations * * * timber-cutting operations

[From the Moscow Economic Life, No. 272, November 26, 1930] FROM LOBOV'S SPEECH AT THE SECOND SESSION OF THE FOURTEENTH ALL-RUSSIAN CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE ON THE SUBJECT OF PREPARING TIMBER FOR SALE

 * * Things are bad also in regard to labor man power which is not furnished in a sufficient measure with food supplies and dwelling accommodation; the average wages of the laborer in the timber industry is lagging behind the average pay in other branches. The question of labor should be solved in a radical way, if we indeed mean to colonize on a broad scale the large, timber-growing areas, more particularly in the north. We should also increase supervision and control so that the timber specialists may be dispatched to work in the timber industry direct, as well as in forestry work. In the current year, 180 specialists who have completed their course of training at the Leningrad Forestry Academy, have settled down in Leningrad offices. This way of utilizing workers of the highest qualification should no longer be tolerated.

[From the Moscow Economic Life, No. 284, December 10, 1929]

SVARDIOVAK, December 8.—The Ural Oblast committee has resolved, in view of the shortage of labor, to mobilize in the oblast 10,000 Communist Youth Unionists to help in the timber-cutting operations. This mobilization is to be completed by February 1, ARCHANGEL, December 9.—The timber cutting in the territory is still going on at a slow (literally, creeping) pace. Instead of 27 per cent of the plan for the year, only 14.4 per cent was completed by December 1. For his lack of activity, for neglect, and for fallure to create cadres of permanent laborers, the director of the Archangel timber collective, Tiurikov, has been removed from his post. A number of directors have been reprimanded, and they have been warned that they will be dismissed and legal proceedings taken against them if by December 15 they will not have extended the timber operations on a larger scale. (From our own correspondent.)

[From the Moscow Economic Life, No. 8, January 10, 1930]

IN THE TIMBER-CUTTING REGIONS SOMETHING IS WRONG-PROCEEDINGS AT THE BUREAU OF THE CENTRAL COMMITTEE OF THE ALL-UNION LENINIST COMMUNIST UNION OF YOUTH

The last session of the bureau of the central committee of the All-Union Leninist Communist Union of Youth dealt with a report

The Communist Union of Youth dealt with a report concerning the situation in the timber-cutting regions.

The Communist Union of Youth has mobilized a huge army of 50,000 for work in the timber regions. However, the economic organs which have become used to the unorganized ebb and flow of voluntary peasant labor have turned out unable to absorb this vast army of new woodcutters.

Notwithstanding the exceedingly nonsolicitous attitude to the Youth Unionists on the part of the timber-cutting collective groups, the first results of the work of the Youth Unionists were positive. Part of the Moscow Youth Unionists have exceeded the daily output of 3½ cubic meters as established for the local weedcutters.

The bureau of the central committee of the All-Union Leninist The bureau of the central committee of the All-Union Leninist Communist Union of Youth has recognized that the principal causes of the plan of output of timber not being fulfilled are carelessness and inactivity on the part of the timber organizations, which border close on the criminal. It has been resolved to apply to the plenipotentiary of the Soviet of Labor and Defense in the matter of timber operations, Comrade Syrtsov, with a view to having legal proceedings instituted against the specific persons who are guilty of this. It has been resolved to appoint responsible workers from the central committee of the All-Union Leninist Communist Union of Youth to be furnished with pertinent auworkers from the central committee of the All-Union Leninist Communist Union of Youth, to be furnished with pertinent authority from the central committee of the said union, from the Soviet of Labor and Defense, and from the Central Control Commission and the Labor-Peasant Inspection—to scrutinize the situation in the timber-cutting areas, and to adopt the necessary measures. Further, to submit to the Central Control Commission and the Labor-Peasant Inspection the question as to the advisability of a speedy scrutiny and purse of the timber correlations. ity of a speedy scrutiny and purge of the timber organizations from top to bottom, with utilization for this purpose of the light cavalry of the Communist Union of Youth and of the shock brigade of the central committee of the agricultural and forest

[From the Moscow Economic Life, No. 21, March 27, 1930]

THE APPARATUS OF THE WHITE RUSSIA TIMBER TRUST SHOULD BE HANDED OVER TO THE COURT

* * The people of the White Russia Timber Trust have failed to mobilize public opinion around the timber opera-

In the Hainikov subdistrict the jobbers of the White Russia Timber Trust were paying the kulaks, who had been mobilized on the basis of the cartage liability law, at the same rate as the bedniaks and seredniaks who are working of their own free will. * * *

All this has led up to the cartage liability becoming disorganized, and it proves that the apparatus of the White Russia Timber Trust as a whole does not carry out and is not able to carry out the tasks confronting it.

[From the Moscow Economic Life, No. 26, April 2, 1930] MOBILIZATION OF SPECIALISTS

To the 28 organizations engaged in the floating of timber, approximately 1,100 specialists should be assigned, principally raftsmen and partly hydrotechnical workers. In Moscow the Commen and partly hydrotechnical workers. In Moscow the Commissariat of Labor of the Union has recently created a mobilization headquarters, upon which it is incumbent to extract from the various institutions the persons required for floating timber. The raftsmen and hydrotechnical workers who have crept into the various offices will be sent out where there is really a crying need for them; that is, into the thick of the forests and to the floating timber and rivulets.

floatable rivers and rivulets.

On the premises of those headquarters there is a lively coming and going all day long. Young and old are putting in an appearance, and the headquarters staff ascertain their ability and assign them then and there to suitable work.

In the course of four or five days about 150 persons have been mobilized. On the whole, the mobilization is going on satisfactorily, but some of the institutions are reluctant and are trying to keep the workers at their offices out of sight. By orders of the Commissar of Labor, Comrade Unglanov, the said headquarof the Commissar of Labor, Comrade Unglanov, the said headquarters has lodged a complaint with the Moscow oblast prosecutor, Comrade Maryshav, against the timber department of the Supreme Soviet of National Economy of the R. S. F. S. R. and against the administration of the Northern Rallways, which do not want to let their specialists go. The managers of the said institutions will be legally proceeded against. The same will be the case in respect to a number of other economic workers.

Among the mobilized are a few score of students of the third and fourth year at the hydrotechnical section of the Timiriazov.

and fourth year at the hydrotechnical section of the Timiriazov Agricultural Academy. The majority of these young people are quite willing to go, but there is a small group of students displaying selfish tendencies. The students' committee and the party germ call of the academy should give attention to this

Along with the above, another fact should be noticed, namely, the voluntary mobilization for timber floating of 12 prominent specialists of the water section of the Wood-Exploring Institute. All these people are sent to the weakest sector of the front—to the

[From the Moscow Izvestia, No. 253, September 13, 1930] THE TIMBER FLOATING UNDER THE MENACE OF DISORGANIZATION-THE TIMBER PROPAGANDA CAMPAIGN HAS YIELDED INSIGNIFICANT RESULTS

LENINGRAD, September 12 (by telegraph from our own correspondent).—A conference of the timber-floating organizations of the important basin of the Rivers Sjasa, Oyati, and Pasha has taken place. The managers of the floating operations in the basin of the River Oyati and Sjasa stated that the timber now affoat will be icebound unless heroic measures are adopted. Every one of the timber-floating managers is indebted to the laborers in tens of thousands of rubles, which negatively tells on the question of enrolling new laborers.

[From the Moscow Izvestia, No. 257, September 17, 1930] NOT A SINGLE CUBIC METER OF WOOD MUST BE ALLOWED TO REMAIN IN THE WATER OVER THE WINTER

The Soviet of Labor and Defense has mapped out a number of urgent measures with a view to assuring the floating, the shipment, and the unloading of timber. It has been decided to employ 182,000 laborers on this work. The Soviet of People's Commissars of White Russia, the territorial and oblast executive committees, and the Soviet of People's Commissars of the Autonomous Repub lics have been instructed to give within 24 hours to each rayon its tasks concerning the recruiting of labor man power, and to appoint for the purpose of promoting and controlling the execu-tion of this task the necessary number of responsible workers. The operations for recruiting labor should be started by the rayon executive committees immediately. It shall be incumbent upon the Commissariats of Labor of the U.S.S.R. and the R.S.F.S.R. the Commissariats of Labor of the U. S. S. R. and the R. S. F. S. R. to give by telegraph full directives concerning the conduct of recruiting operations, and to dispatch to the most threatened oblasts and regions responsible workers to take up the general management of operations. In addition to this, the official authorities, jointly with the timber organizations, labor unions, and cooperatives, are to elaborate within two days concrete measures for retaining the labor man power at their work of floating, loading, and unloading timber, resorting in this respect on a broad scale to the issue of bonuses and gratuities, issues of goods in kind, payment by the piece, etc. ment by the piece, etc.

For the work in connection with floating, loading, and unloading timber, as well as the necessary preparations, the required man power must be supplied fully not later than September 23, 1930. The Timber Trust of the Union, the various timber organizations, and the consumers' cooperatives shall be held to let the laborers engaged in timber-floating operations have industrial merchandise only on the condition that the said laborers have fully completed the amount of work imposed upon them. [From the Moscow Economic Life, No. 172, September 21, 1930] THE TIMBER-FLOATING OPERATIONS IN JEOPARDY * * Extraordinary committees of six have been organized in the timber-floating districts at the instance of the government, and additional quantities of food supplies and industrial merchandise have been made available for stimulating the said operations; the state steamship concerns have been instructed to attend tions; the state steamship concerns have been instructed to attend first of all, and in the greatest possible measure, to the timber-floating operations. All these measures render it possible to extend the timber-floating operations in an energetic way. This possibility has been all the more assured since the party organizations have mobilized for this purpose great numbers of Youth Unionists and party workers. The Timber Trust of the Union has given permission to its local branches in the most-threatened localities to temporarily stop work at the sawmills, employing all the labor for extracting from the rivers timber which has arrived.

The necessary measures for bringing about a change for the better have already been adopted. At present the outcome of the timber-floating operations depends only on the extent to which the local organizations will be able to materialize the broad powers and possibilities which have been given them. The efforts of all Soviet society, of all party, Soviet, and labor-union organizations must be concentrated upon the task of accomplishing the timber-floating program by the middle of October in order to avoid the floating program by the middle of October in order to avoid the excessively high percentage of damage to rafts, and to reduce as much as possible delays in operations. The timber-floating campaign must fully satisfy the requirements of our timber-export plan, as well as the colossal requirements of our capital construction region. tion work.

[From the Moscow Economic Life, No. 173, September 25, 1930] DISORGANIZATION OF TIMBER-FLOATING OPERATIONS IN THE NORTHERN REGIONS

Archangel: The figures characterizing the carrying out of the serious apprehension. * * * On September 15 there was a shortage of 37,000 laborers. Just now a mobilization of labor is being carried on with a view to filling in this breach.

[From the Moscow Za Industrializatsiu, No. 277, September 27, 1930]

SHORTAGE OF LABOR CAUSES DISORGANIZATION OF TIMBER FLOATING

SHORTAGE OF LABOR CAUSES DISORGANIZATION OF TIMBER FLOATING. The telegraph reports from Leningrad:

"The menace that the timber may remain over the winter on the spot where it has been taken out of the rivers increases ever more and more. On September 25 the quantities which had not yet to be pulled out of the water amounted to 828,000 cubic meters, or 11.2 per cent. Four hundred and fifty thousand cubic meters, or 7.1 per cent, are yet to be bound into rafts.

"There is an acute shortage of labor. Instead of 45,000 laborers, only 11,370 are employed in the timber-floating operations. The labor liability against pay, which was proclaimed by the rayon executive committees, has yielded unsatisfactory results, since the rayon executive committees fail to adopt any measures against those who shirk that liability."

[From the Moscow Za Industrializatsiu, No. 231, October 2, 1930] ALARMING CONDITIONS IN THE SPHERE OF TIMBER FLOATING-INSTEAD OF 175,000 CUBIC METERS, ONLY 30,000 CUBIC METERS PER DAY ARE BEING FLOATED

* * Just now energetic measures are being adopted for improving the prevailing situation. A broad mobilization of the laborers of the saw mills, of collective farm workers, of bedniaks and farm laborers, is being carried on with a view to supplying man power to the timber-floating operations. The saw mills in Archangel and Maimaksa have yielded 1,300 laborers, the laborers from Vologda have sent 1,530, from Velikiy-Usting 1,600 men. In all, about 9,000 laborers have arrived in the course of the last few days to carry on the floating operations. At present more than 17,000 laborers are employed on this work.

[From the Moscow Za Industrializatsiu, No. 234, October 5, 1930] THE RIVERS WILL SOON BE ICEBOUND-THE TIMBER-FLOATING OPERA-TIONS SUFFER FROM SHORTAGE OF LABOR

(Telegram from Leningrad)

Matters concerning timber-floating operations in Leningrad oblast have become exceedingly serious during the first part of October. In the course of the past five days the labor man power engaged in floating operations has increased by 5,690 men. However, this increase is not by a long way sufficient. In all, 17,475 laborers were employed on October 1, which is 41.7 per cent of the total number of laborers required. This increase of labor man power must be considered insufficient, the more so as the time for floating timber is drawing near an end. The rayon executive committees and the village soviets are not enforcing the man power must be considered insunction, the more so as the time for floating timber is drawing near an end. The rayon executive committees and the village soviets are not enforcing the labor liability law with sufficient energy, and they do not adopt any measures of coercion against those who are shirking this work. In the basins of the rivers Lovat, Pasha, Siassa, Siad, Mata, Volkov, Luga, and Pliussa the loading of river craft is proceeding very slowly owing to the shortage of labor.

[From the Moscow Za Industrializatsiu, No. 236, October 8, 1930] NOT SUFFICIENT LABOR FOR THE TIMBER-FLOATING OPERATIONS-CRIM-INAL PROCEEDINGS AGAINST THOSE WHO ARE RESPONSIBLE FOR THIS

At the People's Commissariat of Labor of the R. S. F. S. R. a conference took place yesterday concerning the question of how sufficient labor could be furnished for the timber-floating opera-tions. The plenipotentiaries of the Commissariat of Labor for tions. The plenipotentiaries of the Commissariat of Labor for the northern territory, for Karelia, the Urals, the western Oblast, and the Nizhni-Novgorod territory rendered account of their activities. Not only the various labor organizations but even some of the plenipotentiaries have failed to cope with the tasks imposed upon them. The conference decided to send to the northern territory the member of the Collegium, Comrade Mikhailov, who will adopt there extraordinary measures in the matter of recruiting labor man power and controlling the activities of the labor organs. As regards the chief of the labor section of the northern territory, who has failed to carry out the necessary measures in connection with recruiting of labor man power, it was resolved to connection with recruiting of labor man power, it was resolved to bring this to the notice of the public prosecutor, with a view to instituting legal proceedings against the above-mentioned person. For the purpose of stimulating the recruiting of labor man power and for supervising the work of the various labor organs special plenipotentiaries shall be sent to Karelia and to the Urals.

[From the Moscow Pravda, No. 259, September 19, 1930]

* * The very strained situation of the timber floating made it necessary for the Soviet of Labor and Defense (September 14) to introduce extraordinary measures in order to insure the fulfillment of the log-floating program.

On the basis of this resolution of the Soviet of Labor and De-

On the basis of this resolution of the Soviet of Labor and Defense, special extraordinary commissions, composed of six members ("schresvychainiya shesterki"), have been created at the regional executive committees and central executive committees of autonomous republics. At the most important floating places similar regional extraordinary commissions have been created.

The People's Commissariats of Labor of the U. S. S. R. and of the R. S. F. S. R. and their local organs have been requested to guarantee that on September 23 100 per cent of the number of laborers according to the distribution scheme of the Soviet of Labor and Defense will be available.

In view of the shortage of carts for the timber-floating work, the Soviet of Labor and Defense has advised the local executive committees and the autonomous republics in case of necessity to introduce compulsory labor service. * *

In order to insure the successful fulfillment of the floating operations, the Soviet of Labor and Defense instructed the economic and cooperative organs to supply manufactured articles only in case of a fulfillment of the work according to the program. * *

[From the Moscow Za Industrializatsiu, No. 226, September 26, 19301

TIMBER-FLOATING OPERATIONS IN DANGER

* * In case of necessity to mobilize for the (ac. timber floating—translator's note) operations the local population by introducing compulsory labor service.

[From the Moscow Za Industrializatsiu, No. 226, September 26, 1930]

DANGER SIGNAL AT TIMBER FLOATING

* * The principal difficulty is, as heretofore, the shortage of labor. The People's Commissariat of Labor has merely issued a circular order to the labor organs to recruit, according to the resolution of the Soviet of Labor and Defense, 182,000 laborers. Such circulars are naturally insufficient. * * *

In the Western Oblast the timber-floating operations are taking place under the control of shock brigades. The brigades have been sent to the places where timbering is being carried on. In the Ivanove Oblast all laborers of the Volgoless and Sevvoctlesa have declared themselves mobilized to help in the matter of timber floating. * *

[From the Moscow Za Industrializatsiu, No. 226, September 26, 1930]

THE SEVVOSTLESA REMAINS IDLE

There are few laborers, the recruiters are idle, the indebtedness to the laborers for unpaid wages is one of the causes why laborers leave the work.

[From the Moscow Pravda, No. 267, September 27, 1930]

STALINGRAD, September 26.—The presidium of the city soviet has declared compulsory labor service from September 24 up to the end of the unloading work. In the first 10 days of September discharging work has become worse; instead of 105,000 logs only 94,760 have been unloaded.

[From the Moscow Izvestia, No. 277, October 7, 1930] BATTLE ORDERS TO MEMBERS OF THE COMMUNIST UNION OF YOUTH The central committee of the Communist Union of Youth has resolved to bind all committees and germ cells of the union in timber floating regions, particularly in regions where the timber must be immediately taken out from the water, to organize de-tachments, battalions, collective groups, and brigades of members of the Communist Union of Youth who are not occupied in the cities and villages, and to use them until the end of the timber floating operations for taking the timber out of the water.

[From the Moscow Pravda, No. 270, October 9, 1930]

Archangel, October 7.—* * In order to obtain the required number of laborers for the floating operations the extraordinary commission has authorized in particularly threatened places of the coast region the introduction of compulsory labor service, increasing at the same time the political educational work among the masses.

[From the Moscow Pravda, No. 279, October 9, 1930] 17,000 LABORERS AVAILABLE, 43,000 REQUIRED

LENINGRAD, October 8.—The conditions of the timber-floating operations in the Leningrad region continues to remain extremely strained. Up to October 1 there were occupied 17,475 men, or 41.7 per cent of the required number. The regional executive committees and the village soviets have made very poor use of the compulsory labor service law and are not applying sufficient measures of coercion with respect to those who do not report for work.

[From the Moscow Za Industrializatsiu, No. 223, September 23, 19301

50 PER CENT OF LUMBER LIES IN THE WATER

* In regions where timber-procuring operations are unsatisfactory compulsory labor service has been introduced. Extraordinary commissions composed of three persons (troiki) have been formed.

[From the Moscow Economic Life, No. 200, October 24, 1930] DRIVE OUT THE OPPORTUNISTS

The regional executive committees take a conciliatory attitude toward the kulaks. The latter have been leaving work and going home unpunished. * * *

Goldin (the director of the Verkhne-Totensk Timber Works—translator's note) has been discharged, excluded from the party, and turned over to the court.

[From the Moscow Izvestia, No. 292, October 22, 1930] LABOR MOBILIZATION OF THE POPULATION IN THE NORTH

ARCHANGEL, October 21 (Rosta).—The labor mobilization, declared by the regional executive committee for floating operations, clared by the regional executive committee for floating operations, takes place successfully. Individual villages are sending 400 to 500 draftsmen for floating work. The peasants of many villages have shown an example of exceptional conscientiousness. In the Vinogradov region 720 peasants of the Pavline village voluntarily turned for floating operations. Some economists and opportunists met the labor-mobilization order with great dissatisfaction. The manager of the Goginsk timber camp sent 100 mobilized back to their homes. The brainless persons and saboteurs have been turned over to court. turned over to court.

[From the Moscow Pravda, No. 297, October 27, 1930] MISUNDERSTANDINGS IN THE MATTER OF LABOR MAN POWER MAKES THE KULAK CONTENT

As a result of the misunderstandings in the matter of labor man power the kulaks now and then succeed in escaping from the timber procurement and floating operations.

EXHIBIT No. 33

[Sources indicated below]

(Translations of excerpts from the Soviet press relating to labor in the coal mines of the U. S. S. R.)

[From the Moscow Za Industrializatsiu, No. 179, August 2, 1930] A DESERTER FROM THE LABOR FRONT

Artemovski 1. Rykovsky, the secretary of the party committee of the "Kresny Profintern" Mine, reports that Altunia, the assistant president of the Artsmov Okrug Soviet of Labor Unions, who was attached by the Okrug committee of the Communist Party to the mine in order to increase the production, has deserted from the enterprise.

[From the Moscow Pravda, No. 208, July 30, 1930]

The All-Union Central Soviet of Labor Unions has decided to send to the coal regions within a fortnight seven brigades to assist the local regions within a forthight seven brigades to assist the local organizations in raising production. Five brigades will be sent to the Donetz Basin, one to the Moscow coal basin, and one to the Kize district. To each brigade shall belong one member of the presidium of the central committee of the union, one specialist, and one economic worker from among the responsible workers of the Seyuzugol Trust. [From the Moscow Izvestia, No. 252, September 12, 1930]

DESERTERS FROM THE COAL FRONT HAVE BEEN EXCLUDED FROM THE COMMUNIST UNION OF YOUTH

KHARKOV, September 11 (Tass).—The mobilization of the members of the Communist Union of Youth was conducted in Chernogov very poorly. The Okrug Committee of the Communist Union of Youth treated the matter in a purely formal manner. As a result 75 men of those mobilized deserted.

The Central Committee of the Communist Union of Youth of the Ukraine has decided to exclude deserters from the Communist Union of Youth. Bureaus of germ cells, in which deserters have appeared, have been dissolved. The Chernigov bureau of the Communist Union of Youth has been severely reprimanded for inefficient management of mobilization and for the poor quality of the persons mobilized. Prytko, the secretary of the Okrug committee. mittee, has been discharged.

[From the Moscow Za Industrializatsiu, No. 188, August 13, 1930]

COAL IS NECESSARY FOR THE COUNTRY; IT WILL BE SUPPLIED—THE PRESIDIUM OF THE SUPREME SOVIET OF NATIONAL ECONOMY OF THE U. S. S. R. CONCERNING MEASURES TO LIQUIDATE THE BREACH IN PRODUCTION

* * The laborers are deserting (the mines) for the harvest (on their own or on other farms) and for work in collective and soviet farms on account of the unsatisfactory distribution of food and as a result of bad material and living conditions. * * *

[From the Moscow Izvestia, No. 223, August 14, 1930] TO CREATE NORMAL CONDITIONS FOR THE NEW LABORERS

ARTEMOVSK, August 13 (TASS) .- The experiment of the work of farm hands in the mines of the Donetz Basin (reference is made to the mobilization of 10,000 farm hands for work in the coal mines—translator's note) has shown that they quickly become accustomed to the work and that they conscientiously approach their duties.

The miners' organizations, however, are not creating everywhere satisfactory working conditions for the farm hands. Cases have been noted where certain backward miners have ridiculed the farm hands, causing them to leave the mines. * * * Out of 417 farm hands who arrived in an organized manner in July at the mines only 165 have remained.

[From the Moscow Za Industrializatsiu, No. 196, August 22, 1930] NO UNEMPLOYED PERSONS FOR RECRUITMENT

The recruitment of 6,000 farm hands for the Ural coal-mining industry has broken down. * * * The local organs of the People's Commissariat of Labor and the organizations of the Union of Agricultural and Forest Workers have failed to support the Ural Coal Trust. The Ural Coal Trust sent 17 miners to receive the farm hands and assigned special funds. In spite of this on August 1 there were recruited only 800 men instead of 4,500. * * *

[From the Moscow Za Industrializatsiu, No. 212, September 10, 1930.]

WHO WILL BE BROUGHT TO TRIAL FOR THESE OUTRAGEOUS ACTS AND WHEN?

According to the directions of the Soviet of Labor and Defense, According to the directions of the Soviet of Labor and Defense, in the month of September not less than 5,000 new laborers were to have been sent to the Donetz Basin. * * It is necessary now to examine carefully the results of the transfer of 10,000 farm hands which was to have been completed at almost this time. It must be said openly—that in the process of the transfer of this group, enormous organizational mistakes have been made, as a result of which a part of the farm hands have left the mines.

[From the Moscow Pravda, No. 292, October 22, 1930.]

The number of laborers who have not yet been sent (of those called for—translator's note) is as follows:

	Number
From the—	laborer
Black Soil region	9, 60
Central Volga region
Bashkir Republic	1, 60
Moscow Oblast
Ural Oblast	1, 89
Western Oblast
Lower Volga region
Nizhny-Novgorod region
North Caucasus region
Far East	3'
Central Asia
Kazakatan	79
Ukraine	8, 0

For the most important building work there must still be chosen:

	borers
Black Soil region	4.073
Western Oblast	4, 530
Tvanovak Ohlast	3, 010
Ivanovak Oblast	1, 854
Nizhny-Novgorod region	1.050
Lower Volga region	500
Tartar Republic	424
	424
For timber-floating operations there are still lacking:
From the—
Northern region	58,000
Urals
Leningrad Oblast	24,000
Nizhny-Novgorod region	15,000
Karella	7,000
Bashkir Republic	6,000
Ivanovsk Oblast	12,000
Siberia	10,000
Far Eastern Republic	3,000
Western Oblast	3,000
Moscow Oblast	3,000
White Russia	3,000
	A STATE OF THE PARTY OF THE PAR

[From the Moscow Za Industrializatsiu, No. 252, October 25, 1930] BOLSHEVIK SPEED IS REQUIRED-TO FINISH URGENTLY THE TRANSFER OF COLLECTIVE FARMERS, FARM HANDS, AND MEMBERS OF THE COM-MUNIST UNION OF YOUTH TO THE COAL MINES

* * In order to insure uninterrupted work at the mines, timber-floating operations, timber procurement, and construction, it is necessary to supply them with labor man power. The party and labor-union organs have given a battle order to the labor organs, "to complete the recruitment of 193,000 collective farmers, organs, "to complete the recruitment of 193,000 collective farmers, farm hands, and members of the Communist Union of Youth, and their transfer to coal regions not later than October 18"; "to furnish immediately 150,000 laborers for the important building work"; "to supply at once a sufficient number of laborers for timber-floating operations"; "to insure the timbering operations with a steady supply of labor totaling 964,000 laborers, without horses, and 1,109,000 laborers with horses (drivers) during the special quarter. (Translator's Note.—The quarter beginning October 1, 1930.)

[From the Moscow Economic Life, No. 277, December 1, 1929]

* Two thousand miners are working at the Rykov mine. Only 300 of them are regular working at the Rykov mine. Only 300 of them are regular workinen of the staff; 150 are kulaks (translator's note—members of the upper strata of the peasantry), the classification of whom has been determined upon the strength of reports from the village soviets, according to their wealth, or according to their talk and tendencies. There are no bedniaks. (Translator's note—members of the lower classes of the peasantry.) With the exception of 150 criminals sent to work in the mines as a punishment for their crimes, the rest are seredniak laborers (translator's note—the seredniaks are members of the middle classes of the peasantry), but the type of seredniaks who are more like kulaks than like bedniaks * * *

EXHIBIT No. 34

[Source: Moscow Izvestia, No. 211, August 2, 1930]

THE MARCH OF THE FARM LABORERS TO THE DONETZ BASIN-20,000 FARM LABORERS TO THE COAL-MINING AND METALLURGICAL INDUS-

[Translation]

[Translation]

Kharkov, August 1 (TASS).—The central committee of the Communist Party of the Ukraine approved on July 31 the initiative of the union of agricultural and forest laborers concerning the organization of a march of the farm laborers to the Donetz Basin to work there. (The word "march" is, of course, used here only in a figurative sense—Translator's note.)

The central committee enjoins the local party organizations to render to the said union all the necessary aid in the matter of organizing that march, which is meant to be a broad political campaign for the purpose of eliminating the tendency toward frequent change of employment on the part of the laborers and for the complete execution of the industrial and financial plan of the coal-mining industry.

for the complete execution of the industrial and financial plan of the coal-mining industry.

On August 15 the organizations of the agricultural and forest laborers' union are obligated to send to the Donetz Basin 10,000 farm laborers. After that, the mass dispatch of farm laborers to the coal-mining and the metallurgical industry must be continued so as to have not less than another 20,000 men sent there.

The Okrug Party committees shall be held to release immediately the 200 party members who were mobilized by the All-Ukrainian committee of the union of agricultural and forest laborers and who are acting as lower-grade workers of the union, so that they may be sent at the head of the farm-laborers' march to the Donetz Basin for permanent work there.

The Okrug Party committees, the Rayon Party committees, and

The Okrug Party committees, the Rayon Party committees, and the central committee of the agricultural and forest laborers' union shall be held to cater for the political requirements of the farm-laborer groups departing for the Donetz Basin, by organizing meetings, publishing leaflets, and by arranging cinema and radio shows. More particularly, the organizations of the Communist Union of Youth are to appoint a Youth-Unionist political instructor to each group of laborers.

The central committee has made it incumbent upon the Coal Trust and the All-Ukrainian committee of the Miners' Union to adopt suitable measures for creating adequate conditions for the farm laborers to work in.

farm laborers to work in.

The local as well as the central press organs have been instructed to give broad publicity to the march of the farm laborers to work in the Donetz Basin.

The central committee has resolved to deal in the second half of August with the information concerning the progress of the propaganda campaign in the matter of recruiting farm laborers for work in the Donetz Basin.

EXHIBIT No. 35

[Source: Archangel Pravda Severa, No. 24, p. 1, January 31, 1931] RESOLUTION OF THE NORTHERN KRAY COMMITTEE OF THE ALL-UNION COMMUNIST PARTY (OF BOLSHEVIKS) DATED JANUARY 29, 1931

[Translation of excerpts]

The Kray committee proposes:

To approve the decision of the secretariat of the

4. * * To approve the decision of the secretariat of the Kray committee to send up to 500 students to the lumber camps.

5. To see to the execution of set tasks by the kulaks and the well-to-do holdings and to subject to severe punishment those who do not execute the tasks. Under the threat of strictest responsibility not to permit kulaks to make payments instead of executing set tasks. Increased set tasks must be introduced with regard to well-to-do peasants, although they should not be placed on an equal basis with kulaks (the worst sections turned over to the kulaks should not be given to well-to-do peasants).

6. To propose to the Kray Court to organize in a period of three days for the entire period of lumber operations a start-to-finish court brigade for rapid examination of cases in the various localities and to subject kulak and well-to-do peasants to severe punishment for nonexecution of tasks. To bring to court, at the same ment for nonexecution of tasks. To bring to court, at the same time, persons who maliciously fail to execute self-obligations and who agitate for the breaking down of the lumber operations (on the basis of the decree of the All-Union Central Executive Committee of February 13, 1930).

EXHIBIT No. 36

[From Pravda, published at Moscow September 19, 1930] "EXTRAORDINARY SIXES" TO STIMULATE LUMBERING

[Translation]

* * On the basis of the decree of the Council of Labor and Defense September 14, extraordinary committees of six are being attached to the respective district executive committees and being attached to the respective district executive committees and the central executive committees of autonomous republics. In districts of mass congestion of timber, special district committees of six for floating operations are also being organized.

The People's Commissariat of Labor of the R. S. F. S. R. and the local organs have been ordered to secure 100 per cent of the demand for labor by September 25, according to the apportionment of the Council of Labor and Defense.

ment of the Council of Labor and Defense.

Taking into account also that the timber-floating operations are insufficiently supplied with hauling power, the Council of Labor and Defense has ordered the local executive committees of districts and autonomous republics to introduce compulsory labor service for hauling wherever necessary.

At the same time the supplementary grants have been made of money, fodder, food, and manufactured goods necessary for the completion of the floating operations.

In order to carry out the floating with success the Council of Labor and Defense has bound the economic organs and the cooperatives to issue industrial products exclusively to laborers who complete the tasks which have been set for them * * *. The floating of timber is in extreme difficulty. An abrupt change must be achieved. must be achieved.

The whole public spirit of state, party, and labor in the floating districts must be mobilized to overcome all obstacles with

The organs of the state and the Communist Party must throw their best forces into this sector in order to move the great mass of laborers into the floating operations and thus liquidate the danger which has arisen of the freezing in of 25,000,000 cubic meters of timber.

The breach in the fulfillment of the timber-floating plan must be repaired in the shortest possible time, cost what it may.

Ехнівіт No. 37

[From Za Industrializatsiu, published at Moscow September 23, 1930]

COMPULSORY TIMBER SERVICE IN URALS-EXTRAORDINARY TRIUMVIRATES

[Translation]

[Translation]

* * In the districts which SVERDLOVSK, September 21.— * * In the districts which are backward in their lumber work, compulsory labor service has been proclaimed and extraordinary committee of three have been formed.

EXHIBIT No. 38

[From Pravda, published at Moscow September 27, 1930] COMPULSORY SERVICE FOR UNLOADING TIMBER [Translation]

STALINGRAD, September 26.—The presidium of the town soviet has proclaimed compulsory paid labor service from September 24 until the unloading be completed.

Ехнівіт №. 39

[Source: Archangel Pravda Severa, No. 53, p. 3, March 7, 1931] DESERTERS SHOULD BE RETURNED TO THE FOREST AND TO TIMBER CUTTING

[Translation of excerpts]

The Kray committee of the All-Union Communist Party (of Bolsheviks) has intrusted labor-union organizations and labor organs with checking up on the laborers and employees taken into the employ of enterprises and institutions subsequent to December 1, in order to disclose kulaks who leave the rural districts for industrial plants and thereby evade the execution of self-obligations connected with lumber operations.

On February 27 the commission on the utilization of disclosed labor resolved to transfer 40 per cent of the laborers employed by the plants and who arrived from the countryside in an unsystematic manner, after December 1, to timber cutting, irrespective of whether they were employed through or without the medium of the labor exchange the labor exchange.

Carpenters employed in an unsystematic manner through or without the medium of the labor exchange will be placed by the city construction plants, dwelling-house associations, and other organizations of nonshock-troop importance at the disposal of the labor exchange for shipment in an organized manner to shock-troop construction plants. troop construction plants.

A. K.

EXHIBIT No. 40

[Source: Bulletin of Financial and Economic Legislation, No. 16, June 7, 1931, p. 74]

EXPLANATION OF THE PLENUM OF THE SUPREME COURT OF THE R. S. F. S. R. OF MARCH 16, 1931, PROTOCOL NO. 3—REGARDING THE MANNER OF SERVING TERMS OF COMPULSORY LABOR FOR MEMBERS OF COLLECTIVE FARMS SENTENCED TO COMPULSORY LABOR BY THE COURTS [Translation]

To explain that members of collective farms where all articles of production have been socialized (artel) sentenced by the court to compulsory labor for a term not exceeding three months, serve, as a general rule, their terms at the collective farm on the same basis as the laborers and employees sentenced to compulsory labor. basis as the laborers and employees sentenced to compulsory labor. The members of those collective farms sentenced to compulsory labor for a period of three months and over may be sent to work outside the collective farm, with the exception of cases when the board of management of the collective farm presents a well-founded request to the compulsory-labor bureau regarding the sending of the person sentenced to work at the respective collective farm. In the latter instance the person sentenced serves his term of compulsory labor by sentence on the same basis as persons condemned to compulsory labor at their place of employment—i. e., from 25 to 50 per cent of their income is subtracted for the profit of the compulsory-labor bureau. The members of associations for mutual tillage of the soil who are sentenced to compulsory labor serve their term on general principles in accordance with instructions from the compulsory-labor bureau.

EXHIBIT No. 41

[Source: Soviet Justice, No. 12, p. 6, April 30, 1931]

TASKS OF THE PRESS CONNECTED WITH THE STRUGGLE FOR REVOLUTIONARY LEGALITY IN THE PERIOD OF RECONSTRUCTION—SPEECH OF COMRADE KRYLENKO AT THE CONFERENCE OF THE PEOPLE'S COM-MISSARIAT OF JUSTICE AND OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE PRESS ON APRIL 4, 1931

[Translation of excerpts]

entirely facing production. We have reconstructed everything—both penal labor camps which are within the jurisdiction of the OGPU and not within ours and our penal labor institutions, both agricultural or factory and plant colonies, and houses for persons of age, and even exile at compulsory labor—on principles of production, and have made them assist the cause of socialistic upbuilding.

We may well be proud of the fact that our places of confinement, if they are still called places of confinement, though in the majority of cases they lack the principal characteristics of usual places of confinement—bars, locks, sentinels whom they sometimes have in a very limited number (100–120 men selected from among the convicts themselves to guard 5-10,000 convicts—do not cost a single kopeck to our proletarian state. Our lumber camps, our peat production, our homes for criminals under age, have been transformed into factory and plant educational institutions in order to produce after two to two and one-half years of study splendid cadres of qualified laborers out of men who enter places of confinement as waifs. * * *

EXHIBIT No. 42

[Source: Archangel Prayda Severa, No. 94, p. 3, April 27, 1931] KULAKS WHO HAVE PAILED TO EXECUTE THE TASKS SET MUST BE BROUGHT TO COURT WITHIN FIVE DAYS

[Translation of excerpts]

In a number of localities set tasks are not given to the kulak In a number of localities set tasks are not given to the kulak and well-to-do households, or are given at the wrong season, control by the fishing organizations to whom the kulaks turn over their production, by the rayon executive committees, by the village soviets, and by the rayon prosecutors over the execution of those tasks is almost completely lacking.

As a result, in a number of rayons the kulaks and well-to-do households have not been brought to court for nonexecution of set tasks on fishing.

The kray prosecuting office has proposed to the rayon prosecutors to bring to court within five days the kulak and well-to-do elements who failed to execute the tasks in the first quarter and to continue bringing them to court in the future.

EXHIBIT No. 43

[Source: Archangel Pravda Severa, No. 94, p. 1, April 27, 1931] TO SUPERVISE DAILY THE ACTUAL EXECUTION OF SET TASKS BY ALL KULAKS

[Translation of excerpts]

All responsibility being taken for the statement, it must be admitted that the placing of set tasks of floating upon kulaks and the well-to-do part of the population is not satisfactory. Not a single kray organization connected with floating can tell the number of kulaks drawn into the floating campaign; no one controls the setting of tasks.

Control should exist in order to give a timely blow to the right deviators and "left" perpetrators of excesses who distort the party line of policy in regard to the struggle against kulakdom. Undoubtedly the system of distributing "control figures" and tasks to the kulak and well-to-do part of the population must be considered as such a distortion.

Such "control figures" were sent to all village soviets of the Konoshsky Rayon.

Konoshsky Rayon. * * *
The control figures indicated 3 kulaks in the Tretinsky village The control figures indicated 3 kulaks in the Tretinsky village soviet, 2 kulaks in the Poduzhsky, and I kulak in the Khmelnitsky village soviet clear that if the chairman of the Khmelnitsky village soviet does not decide to overexecute the "control figures," the kulaks in the village soviet will evade the floating campaign, for who will believe that there is only one kulak in the whole village soviet? Such "management" is typically of a right opportunistic nature.

It is known that at the lumber camps in a number of rayons, the kulaks continuously and maliciously ignored set tasks, and deserted from the lumbering districts. This occurred because the opportunistic village soviets failed to exercise pressure over the kulaks, delayed the taking of repressive measures.

There should be more kulaks working at floating than at the There should be more kulasis working at hoating than at the lumber camps. Set tasks should actually be set tasks. The most severe repressions should be brought to bear upon the kulak from the very first day of his absenting himself from the floating, and he should be compelled under all circumstances to execute the set

At the floating the kulak, in the same manner as at the lumber camps, should work on an increased quota. At the floating in the same manner as at the lumber camps, the kulak should be placed in the worst sections.

EXHIBIT No. 44

[Source: Archangel Pravda Severa, No. 114, p. 2, May 24, 1931] THE BLOWS DEALT TO THE ENEMIES OF FLOATING SHOULD BE INCREASED [Translation of excerpts]

SEMENOVSKOE, 23.—The criminal investigation department of the Bereznitsky rayon is reconstructing its work in connection with the tasks of floating at a plainly insufficient pace. Criminalinvestigation brigades were sent but a few days ago, after great delay, to the floating regions. Trials of kulaks and well-to-do peasants for evading log stripping have taken place so far in only two localities of the rayon—Semenovskoe and Krivaya Gora. Not a single kulak or well-to-do peasant has been brought to trial for nonexecution of tasks connected with log floating, notwithstanding its termination—at any rate, the rayon prosecutor's office knows of no such case.

Criminal-investigation stations, notwithstanding categorical demands, give the public prosecutor's effice no information regarding the starting in court of cases connected with floating. An evident inertness and tardiness in the starting of floating cases against the kulak and well-to-do peasants is prevalent. EXHIBIT No. 45

[Source: Moscow Pravda, No. 145, May 28, 1931, p. 3] "WONDERS" ON THE SHORES OF RIVERS WHERE FLOATING IS TAKING PLACE

[Translation of excerpts]

The most alarming thing is the decrease in laborers at floating. According to the data of the Soyuzlesprom (All-Union combine of timber and woodworking industry) over 11 per cent left within 10 days, and only 63 per cent of the labor needed for the floating was on hand as of May 20.

In order to execute the floating program it is imperative to suspend immediately the outflow of labor, to verify the execution of self-obligations, and to achieve the complete attendance of the laborers in the forests and at the floating.

EXHIBIT No. 46

[Source: Lumber operations of the third year of the 5-year period. Archangel, 1931, p. 40]

THE WORK OF COLLECTIVE FARMS

[Translation of excerpts]

Collective farms which conceal their labor power and refuse to Collective farms which conceal their labor power and refuse to take part in lumber operations under various pretexts are not to be tolerated on any account. They are in substance pseudo-collective farms, inasmuch as one can not imagine collective farmers or their leaders who do not go hand in hand with the general line of party policy and who do not take into consideration the basic fact that lumber operations are the most important economic and political task in the Northern Kray.

All collective farms which evade lumber operations should be subjected to severe self-criticism and strict condemnation.

. All collective farmers who are able to work should be awakened. should be embraced by self-obligations by means of summons and direct agitation, and measures should be taken to assist in the incessant struggle against kulakdom and its agents.

CONCERNING SELF-OBLIGATIONS

In the third, the decisive year of the 5-year period, self-obligations as voluntary promises obtained on a basis of mass explanatory work and carried out and executed in a public manner must play an immense political and economic rôle.

The village soviets and the entire farm hand, bedniak, and seredniak cadres of activists in the rural districts must be drawn into the organization of the lumber operations campaign.

In order to do this it is necessary for the lumbering enterprises

In order to do this it is necessary for the lumbering enterprises to report their programs of lumber operations in the respective rayon to the rayon executive committee upon which it is incumbent to calculate the labor and horsepower in every village soviet, the lumber operations efficiency of the population, the distance of the lumber operations rayon to the respective village soviet, etc., and to assign the tasks to the individual village soviets in accordance therewith.

accordance therewith.

The village soviet, after having been assigned the task of the rayon executive committee, is charged with working out that task at meetings of farm hands and bedniaks, to which should also be drawn active seredniaks and managers of lumber districts. It is incumbent upon the village soviet, after having discussed the question in the bedniak and farm-hand groups, to summon a plenum and to assign at the latter tasks to individual villages plenum and to assign at the latter tasks to individual villages out of a calculation providing for the full execution of the plan. Supervision over the execution of the plan by each village and each elective district must be entrusted by the plenum to a member of the village soviet.

The member of the village soviet, after getting this task, must subject it to a preliminary discussion at the meetings of farmhand and bedniak groups, seredniak activists being also drawn in, and must then bring it out for discussion by the general meeting of citizens of the village. It is incumbent upon the farmhand, bedniak, and seredniak active workers to draw up a preliminary draft of the execution of the plan, assigning its execution to individual holdings in accordance with the labor and horseto individual holdings in accordance with the labor and horse-power of each holding and the production capacity of such power. These activists must also specify the quota of tasks for kulak holdings.

If the meetings of activists are carried through skillfully and sensibly, if all explanations are made during its course, it will be easy to bring about the acceptance of the execution of the plan on a basis of self-obligation—voluntariness—by the general meeting of the citizens.

EXHIBIT No. 47

[Source: Moscow Za Industrializatsiu (For Industrialization), No. 216, September 14, 1930]

TO ANSWER IN COURT FOR EVADING MOBILIZATION. -EXPLANATION OF THE PROSECUTING DEPARTMENT OF THE REPUBLIC

[Translation]

The Moscow oblast assistant prosecutor, Comrade Kabakov, has informed our collaborator that the prosecuting department of the Republic has proposed that judicial reprisals be resorted to against specialists who evade mobilization and transfers to the most responsible sections of socialist upbuilding work.

In cases like these the prosecuting department of the Republic recommends the application of article 61 of the Criminal Code, providing for a "refusal to perform important state work, or to perform labor important to the state in general."

EXHIBIT No. 48

[From Krasnaya Gazeta, published at Leningrad, August 30, 1930] COMPULSORY LABOR SERVICE FOR NEPMEN

[Translation]

Corvee

Tomsk, August 29.
Compulsory labor service has been introduced for men between the ages of 18 and 45 years living on income not derived from labor. Nepmen are being used for unloading trucks and barges.

Ехнівіт №. 49

[Source: Moscow Economic Life, August 29, 1930]

[Excerpt from newspaper article]

"* * The catastrophic labor situation in a number of the largest construction undertakings * * * has forced the People's Commissariat of Labor to take drastic measures for guaranteeing an ample supply of labor to these enterprises * * *. The provincial and regional labor departments have been instructed to execute the instruction of the center in order to make sure that they will supply the amount of labor required from them; not only should men be recruited, but they should be taken from their work in less important enterprises, if necessary."

EXHIBIT No. 50

[Source: Moscow Pravda, No. 272, October 2, 1930]

NOT A SINGLE LOG TO BE LEFT IN THE WATER—THE PROGRAM TO BE EXECUTED IN FULL

[Translation]

The special plenipotentiary of the Soviet of Labor and Defense, The special plenipotentiary of the Soviet of Labor and Defense, for timber operations, Comrade S. I. Syrtsov, has issued a resolution by which the full responsibility for the execution of the timber-floating program is laid upon the territorial and oblast executive committees, and upon the soviets of people's commissars of the autonomous republics. The mentioned organs shall be held to carry immediately into effect all the extraordinary measures stipulated in the resolution of the Soviet of Labor and Defense, with a view to finishing the timber-floating operations before the rivers are icebound.

It has been made incumbent upon the extraordinary timber-floating committees of six to ascribe all laborers engaged in

It has been made incumbent upon the extraordinary timberfloating committees of six to ascribe all laborers engaged in timber floating to their particular job till the work is fully completed. From the goods and supply reserves set aside for the persons engaged in the timber-floating operations, certain quantities of dry goods, fancy goods, ready-made clothing, tobacco, and sugar shall be assigned for granting bonuses and gratuities to laborers engaged in timber floating who have exceeded the stipulated standards of speed and volume of work and who have accelerated and speedily completed their work.

The committees of six shall be bound to adopt energetic measures for completing with the least possible delay the operations in connection with floating the timber down the small rivers, with clearing the river banks of timber, and with recovering sunken timber. All the able-bodied population of the territory adjacent to the river banks shall be mobilized for this work under the provisions of labor liability against remuneration. The committees of six are bound to accelerate as much as possible the floating and the dispatch of rafts, and at the places of destination to have the timber removed from the water before the waterways are the timber removed from the water before the waterways are icebound.

The initiative of the laborers should be broadly utilized, also The initiative of the laborers should be broadly utilized, also the method of friendly challenges (i. e., of challenging some other organization to perform one or the other piece of work as in competition—translator's note) and self-obligations, the moving of shock brigades and shock groups from localities where the floating has been finished to districts where it is lagging behind; furthermore, the patronage of works and factories situated in the vicinity over the various districts and divisions where timberfloating work is carried on should be organized.

Comrade Syrtsov urges strictest discipline among the laborers and the administrative personnel, not the slightest stopping of work, and nonattendance to work on the part of the laborers to be tolerated. The responsibility for any breaches of labor discipline in connection with timber-floating work shall first of all fall upon the administrative staff.

The controsoyuz is instructed to organize strict supervision and control over the arrival and unloading in due time of all merchandise and food supplies addressed to the regions where timber-chandise and food supplies addressed to the regions where timberfloating operations are going on.

The Commissariat of Ways of Communication, jointly with the central committee of the Union of Water Transport Workers and with the timber trust of the union, shall immediately establish the system and the rules for granting bonuses and gratuities in the shape of industrial products to the crews and masters of tug boats for maximum of work performed in the matter of towing and clearing timber.

It shall be incumbent upon the state political administration (OGPU) to render, in its sphere of activity, every assistance in all matters connected with the acceleration of timber-floating operations.

EXHIBIT No. 51

[Excerpt from a resolution of the Moscow Soviet, dated October 4. 1930]

[Source: The Izvestia of the Moscow Oblast Executive Committee, No. 109, of October 10, 1930]

1. In the sphere of the workers' supply at the largest and most important industrial enterprises, canteens shall be opened for supplying at least 275,000 laborers and their families, in accordance with the plan of the Moscow oblast executive committee and the Moscow soviet.

Moscow soviet.

2. * * To attach in the current quarter of the year the population of Moscow to shops for the supply of the most important rationed goods (meat, fats, sugar, soap, eggs, milk.)

To take away ration booklets: (a) From persons engaging in trade on the markets and bazaars and from street vendors; (b) from persons deprived of the right of franchise, and from persons doing no useful work.

* * *

EXHIBIT No. 52

[Source: Moscow Pravda, No. 289, October 19, 1930] INSTITUTIONS OF LEGAL PROCEEDINGS AGAINST THE PRESIDENTS OF THE RODVIN AND USTIANSK RAYON EXECUTIVE COMMITTEES

[Translation]

[Translation]

Archangel, October 18.—By decision of the territorial (party) committee and territorial executive committee, the presidents of the Rodvin and Ustiansk rayon executive committees have been removed from their posts and legal proceedings have been instituted against them, because they have been guilty of criminal inactivity in the matter of floating timber down the Vaga River. They permitted 500,000 logs to be carried into the Dvina River, besides, the crews deserted the rafts, and the rigging was cut. Thanks to the efforts of the timber floating committee of six, 300,000 logs have been recovered by now.

300,000 logs have been recovered by now.

The public prosecutor of the territory as well as the courts are adopting rigorous measures for intensifying the punitive policy in adopting rigorous measures for intensifying the punitive policy in respect of kulaks who are maliciously evading participation in the timber-floating operations. According to information received from the rayons, this directive is being ignored by the rayon organs of justice. Thus, for instance, the kulak Ilyin, who refused to take part in the timber-floating operations, and who induced a group of raftsmen to follow his example, was sentenced by the Kargopel rayon court to a fine of only 200 rubles. The kulak Vereschchagin was sentenced to three months at forced labor, with a deduction of 50 per cent from his wages, for having refused to participate in the timber floating. Similar facts were not infrequent in the practice of the Kargopol court. The public prosecutor of the territory and the president of the court of the fused to participate in the timber floating. Similar lacks were not infrequent in the practice of the Kargopol court. The public prosecutor of the territory and the president of the court of the territory have given orders that the Kargopol people's judge and the acting public prosecutor be removed from their posts.

SEMAKOV,

Member of the Control Commission.

EXHIBIT No. 53

[Source: Archangel Pravda Severa, No. 87, April 18, 1931] [Translation of excerpts]

- * * A mass exodus of labor was permitted in the Blagoveshchensky Rayon, 60 per cent, and in the Rovdinsky Rayon, 70 per cent; the same may be noticed in other village soviets. The Puiskaya commune admitted desertion from the woods of 40 haulers. * * The commissioned comrades should insist upon the execution of individual tasks by the kulaks. The errors of the Krayryba (Fishing Trust), which recruited fishermen for its brigades from among the kulaks, must be corrected. All the kulaks from the brigades must be transferred to actual fishing and forced to execute the task set to them. * * to execute the task set to them.

EXHIBIT No. 54

[Source: Lumber operations of the third year of the 5-year period, Archangel, 1931, p. 65]

PARTY WORK IN THE FOREST [Translation of excerpts]

Party germ cells should not forget that lumber operations are the front of class struggle. Kulaks should be compelled to execute increased quotas, and all evaders should be brought to court.

EXHIBIT No. 55

[From Krasnaya Gazeta, published at Leningrad March 17, 1930] LUMBERMEN TO BE PROSECUTED FOR LEAVING WORK-DESERTERS OF LABOR TO BE PROSECUTED

[Translation]

CHEREPOVETS, March 16.—The program of production of the lumbering work of the northern and western Timber Trusts has been fulfilled to the extent of 60 per cent, and 50.5 per cent of the hauling program. During the last 10 days the execution of tasks set has decreased by 3.6 per cent. During the last 10 days the number of timber hewers has fallen by 7,078 and horses by 4,238. The executive committee of the region has issued categorical orders to the district executive committees, to village soviets, and the Timber Trusts to prosecute timber hewers and carters who arbitrarily leave lumbering operations.

EXHIBIT No. 56

[Source: Archangel Pravda Severa, No. 93, April 26, 1931, p. 5] THE SEVENTH PLANT SPLITS A THOUSAND BEAMS PER DAY-A STILL GREATER NUMBER SHOULD BE SPLIT

[Translation of excerpts]

Instead of straining all forces to save the gold currency, the 29th plant is loafing; one beam a day per laborer is being split. . .

* * * Absentees and simulators should be entered upon the blackboard and should be brought to trial at the labor tribunal.

EXHIBIT No. 57

[Source: Moscow Trud, No. 96, April 7, 1931]

THOSE WHO WORK BETTER SHALL BE SUPPLIED BETTER-AUTHORITY HAS BEEN GRANTED TO COMPADELY TRIBUNALS TO TRANSFER DISORGANIZERS OF PRODUCTION TEMPORARILY TO A LOWER SUPPLY CATEGORY— INSTRUCTION CONCERNING THE PREFERENTIAL SUPPLY TO MEMBERS OF SHOCK BRIGADES

[Translation]

1. In order to coordinate the supply work with the fulfillment of the production plan, increase of labor productivity, struggle against labor fluctuations, and in order to stimulate the introduction of socialistic forms of labor (socialistic emulation, creation of shock brigades) in the works, factories, mines, and in the transport service, an out-of-turn and preferential supply to members of shock brigades as well as their preferential supply to bers of shock brigades, as well as their preferential admission to social-cultural establishments, shall be organized.

Members of shock brigades (laborers, technicians, and specialists) who have fulfilled and overfulfilled their share of the plan in quantitative and qualitative respects shall enjoy a preferential supply.

The cooperatives, workmen's cooperatives in the factories, canteens, and shop cooperatives will be charged with the execution of the out-of-turn and preferential supply to members of shock brigades, with the participation in the work of the labor-union organizations in the factories and the factory management.

The registration of members of shock brigades, the general and individual checking of the results of work (fulfillment of the industrial-finance plan, productivity of labor, labor discipline), as well as the registration of loafers and floaters, shall be accomplished by the factory management (the assistant director for labor matters, and the production conferences).

The factory committees and the production conferences must grant every possible support to ascertaining the best members of shock brigades, as well as pseudomembers, loafers, and floaters, by appealing to the socially conscious workers in the factory and by organizing trials of such persons at comradely tribunals.

by organizing to the socially conscious workers in the factory and by organizing trials of such persons at comradely tribunals.

The factory and shop organizations of the labor unions are charged with the organization and the systematic control of the out-of-turn supply to members of shock brigades from canteens, buffets, and itinerant buffets, and of the issue of special supply tickets for the supply of manufactured articles.

tickets for the supply of manufactured articles.

2. For this out-of-turn and preferential supply to members of shock brigades, the latter will receive in addition to the usual food-ration tickets a special "supply card for members of shock brigades" ("kartochka udarnika"). These cards will be issued for one month. In case of nonfulfillment of the fixed share of the production plan, or in case of violation of labor discipline, these cards may be taken away from the respective person, upon the advice of the brigade, by the factory management before its expiration. The cards shall be issued by the shop cooperative bureaus through the intermediary of the shock brigades according to lists, confirmed by the shop management in agreement with the shop confirmed by the shop management in agreement with the shop committee, in accordance with the results of work of the respective member of a shock brigade during the preceding month.

The factory management and the factory committee have the right to put laborers who formally do not belong to shock brigades but who overfulfill their share of the production plan on the same supply level as members of shock brigades. Information concerns supply level as members of shock brigates. Into marchi concerning the number of special cards issued must be supplied by the factory committee to the management of the workmen's cooperative of the factory, or to the central workmen's cooperative, which has to supply the required quantity of food and manufactured articles according to the number of cards issued, to the canteens or to the workmen's cooperative of the factory.

Bearers of "supply cards for members of shock brigades" shall receive food and manufactured articles from the canteens, buffets, and itinerant buffets, out of turn, or during hours specially fixed for the supply to members of shock brigades.

3. Industrial articles and foodstuffs which are received in a limited quantity at the dining rooms and canteens, shall be issued, first of all, on cards of members of shock brigades.

A system of advance orders for the supply of food products on cards of members of shock brigades shall be organized in the canteens, if possible, with a delivery of such foodstuffs to the place of residence.

of residence.

4. The distribution of special tickets for the supply of industrial goods of which there is a shortage (so-called deficit goods. translator's note)—overcoats, suits, footwear—shall take place in such manner that those members of shock brigades who have produced the best results of work in quantitative and qualitative respects, labor discipline, etc., shall be supplied first, in accordance with regulations established by the factory committee, factory workmen's cooperative, and cooperative bureau. When distributing the supplies, industrial articles issued to the laborers as a premium, must be taken into consideration.

5. The issue of premiums to the best members of shock bri-

5. The issue of premiums to the best members of shock brigades, in the form of manufactured articles issued free of charge from the premium fund of the enterprise, shall take place by decision of the factory management and the factory committee.

The selection of members of shock brigades entitled to premiums shall take place by decision of the brigades, the shop, and factory tries.

factory trios.

The issue of premiums shall take place once in a quarter, on the basis of the fulfillment of the industrial finance plan for the preceding quarter.

On the basis of the amount of the premium fund, approved by the factory management and the factory committee for the cur-rent quarter, the cooperative bureau shall submit to the central workmen's cooperative and to the workmen's cooperative of the factory a demand for a certain quantity and assortment of required industrial articles, one month before the beginning of the quarter.

The exact quantity and assortment of the goods destined for premiums shall be fixed by a commission attached to the supply department, composed of representatives of the supply department, the labor-union organization, the cooperatives, and the economic organs.

The issuance of industrial articles destined for premiums shall take place on special tickets or according to special lists.

6. Besides the preferential supply of industrial articles and food products to members of shock brigades, they shall enjoy:

(a) The preferential right to receive apartments and a prefer-

(a) The preferential right to receive apartments and a preference in the supply of firewood.
(b) The right of preferential admission to health resorts, rest homes, sanatoriums; preferential admission of their children to children's homes and creches.

(c) The right to be supplied with theater tickets on special terms

7. Trials of loafers and floaters in the various shops shall be organized in comradely tribunals. Willful loafers and floaters must be transferred by decision of comradely tribunals to a secondary be transferred by decision of comradely tribunals to a secondary supply group for a term of not more than three months.

8. Loafers and floaters who have been ordered by comradely courts to be transferred to a lower supply category are obliged to deliver their ration tickets to the workmen's cooperatives of the factory or to the cooperative bureau. The cooperative bureau must issue to them new supply cards for terms and according to the category indicated in the decision of the comradely tribunal.

In case of a refusal of the loafer to comply with the decision of the comradely court, the following penalties shall be applied: Non-admission to the canteen and discharge from the factory.

9. Laborers who leave the factory shall get the final wages due them only after presentation to the factory management of a note showing that their names have been crossed off the lists of the canteen and of the dining room.

canteen and of the dining room.

Loafers and floaters who have been transferred by decision of comradely tribunals to the second supply category shall get the final wages due them only after exchanging their supply tickets for supply cards in compliance with the decision of the tribunal, and upon presentation of a note showing that their names have been crossed off the lists of the canteen.

VEINBERG Secretary of the All-Union Central Soviet of Labor Unions.

Volkov,
Vice People's Commissar for Supply.
KHLOPLIANKIN,

Vice President of the Administration of the Centrosoyuz.

EXHIBIT No. 58

[Source: Moscow Economic Life, No. 30, February 6, 1930] RESOLUTION OF THE CENTRAL COMMITTEE OF THE ALL-UNION COM-MUNIST PARTY OF FEBRUARY 5, 1930

[Summary]

The resolution proposes to the kray committees, oblast committees, and central committees of the various national sections of the party that:

1. In view of the unsatisfactory progress of seed collection on the collective farms, "which threatens to frustrate the sowing campaign," a postponement of the dates for the completion of the collection of seed stocks shall be permitted up to February 25 in certain regions and up to February 15 and February 20 in other sections.

2. Work in connection with the sowing campaign should be concentrated mainly on collection of seed, since no sowing campaign is possible without seeds. In this connection a general check should be made as to whether the resolution of the People's Commissariat of Agriculture of the U. S. S. R., providing for the explaining of the seed-collection program in detail to every collective farmer has been everywhere carried out, and steps should be taken farmer has been everywhere carried out, and steps should be taken to hasten the execution of the tasks enumerated in this resolution.

3. "Those inactive leaders of land organs and collective farm organs who prove unable to perform their duties with respect to the due collection of seed must be given the most severe punishment, including dismissal from office and trial in court. All those removed from office should be immediately replaced by qualified workers really capable of doing administrative work."

4. "Until the completion of the collection of seed stocks on the collective farms and until after the organization of socialized machine the collective farms and until after the organization of socialized machine."

collective farms and until after the organization of seed stocks on the collective farms and until after the organization of socialized machinery and horse stations and machinery and tractor stations, persons mobilized for the sowing campaign shall be prohibited from leaving the collective farms."

from leaving the collective farms."

The resolution also enjoins the People's Commissariat of Foreign and Domestic Trade of the U. S. S. R.:

1. "To prohibit grinding of spring wheat delivered by peasants in regions of wholesale collectivization until after the program of seed stocking has been completely executed."

2. "To permit the acceptance of flour in exchange for selected seeds, the appropriate equivalents to be fixed within three days in agreement with the People's Commissariat of Agricuture of the U. S. S. R."

This resolution also provides that each section of the Control

This resolution also provides that each section of the Central Committee of the Party must acquaint itself with the latest summaries of the People's Commissariat of Agriculture of the U.S.S.R. regarding the progress of preparations for the sowing campaign.

EXHIBIT No. 59

[Source: Moscow Izvestia, No. 43, February 13, 1931. Advertisementl

[Translation]

Attention: Writers mobilized for the sowing campaign. A general meeting of writers mobilized by the federation for the sowing campaign, as well as those who signed voluntarily, is to be held on February 13, 1931, at 5 p. m., in the Club F. O. S. P., Vorovsky Street 52.

Attendance is absolutely obligatory.

Korenev, Organization Secretary.

EXHIBIT No. 60

[Source: Moscow Pravda, No. 113, April 24, 1931]

PARTY AND LABOR-UNION WORK AND THE TRAINING OF CADETS FOR THE NIZHNI-NOVGOROD AUTOMOBILE PLANT

[Translation of excerpts]

The central committee proposes:

To instruct the vato and the avtostroy to attach all the technical personnel to definite sections of the automobile plant in accordance with their specially strictly prohibiting the departure of the laborers contracted from auto industry, particularly of those who obtained special training in the United States of America. To make it incumbent on the People's Commissariat for Labor to return, within 20 days, all workers of the avtostroy who received special training in the United States of America and who left to work in other branches of industry or in the transportation branch work in other branches of industry or in the transportation branch.

EXHIBIT No. 61

[Source: Moscow Izvestia, No. 48, of February 18, 1931] PRODUCTION TRIAL OF RAPACIOUS WORKERS AND DESERTERS FROM THE TRANSPORT SERVICE

[Translation]

On February 16, in the building of the People's Commissariat for

On February 16, in the building of the People's Commissariat for Ways of Communication, a public-production trial of deserters and violators of the directions of the party concerning the mobilization of specialists for the transport service took place.

Before a large audience composed of engineers, economists, and scientific workers of the transport service appeared nine prominent workers. Among them were: Endimionov, chief of the central experimental bureau for standardization (TSNIB); Bogoslovski and Simonov, two workers of the labor unions at the same institution; Sherov, Ponomarev, Dishev, Gosdimer, Terentiev, Skvozniakov, specialists specialists.

The act of indictment shows clearly in what a poor and bureaucratic manner the workers of the People's Commissariat for Ways of Communication and the administration of the Moscow junction treated the directions of the Government concerning the mobilization of specialists for the strengthening of the transport service. Instead of drawing general attention to this problem, the chier and the labor-union workers at the various departments have displayed red tape, have started endless correspondence, and have protected loafers, simulators, and rapacious workers.

For more than two weeks they frustrated in a criminal manner the sending of "the irreplaceable specialists" to the transport service. Instead of organizing a decisive struggle against bureaucratism, Bogoslovsky and Simonov conducted a bureaucratic correspondence and negotiated as to "who was to be sent."

The court resolves to exclude Endimionov, Sherov, and Ponomarev from the labor union, to prohibit their employment in the transport service, and to turn their case over to the transport collegium of the supreme court to institute proceedings for sabotage; to reprimand Bogoslovsky and Simonov, and to elect other persons in their place as labor-union representatives; to create a special counts; to discharge Terentiev as an invalid, transferring him to the social welfare department. As regards Skvoznikov, who expressed the desire to be transferred to the transport service, the court took notice of his statement.

The sentence of the court was accepted with satisfaction by the audience.

EXHIBIT No. 62

[Source: Moscow Izvestia, No. 42, February 12, 1931] SEVERE MEASURES SHOULD BE APPLIED TOWARD LABOR DESERTERS

[Translation]

KUZNETSKSTROY, February 11 (Rosta).—The best part of the engineers and technicians of the Kuznetskstroy works, together with the labor class, under the most difficult conditions, are actively struggling for the execution and overexecution of the construction plan. At the same time, individual specialists at the plant interfere, by their antipublic actions, with the progress of construction. A vivid example is the disgraceful action of 11 engineers and technicians, who ran off during the most responsible period of the work

The extended plenum of the bureau of the engineering and technical section having heard the report of Comrade Peters, head of the cadres department, regarding the desertion of 11 engineering and technical workers, issued a resolution in which it stigmaing and technical workers, issued a resolution in which it stigmatized the malicious deserters who abandoned responsible sections while construction work was in full sway. "We expel those deserters from the ranks of the engineering and technical section," states the resolution, "and we request the building committee to expel them from membership in the labor unions. We demand that all public organizations, where these deserters have found refuge, dismiss them from work and deprive them of their status as engineering and technical workers. Those deserters and all their followers are close allies of the "industrial party." We consider the action of Engineer Korzukhin as that of sabotage. Under various pretexts he attempted to desert the plant area. We expel him from membership in the engineering and technical section and demand that a public exemplary trial be instituted in his case.

his case.

In connection with the resolution of the extended plenum of the bureau of the engineering and technical section the presidium of the building committee has resolved:

To approve the decision of the plenum of the bureau of the engineering and technical section with regard to the expulsion from labor unions and the dismissal from work at the sections where they are now employed of the specialists: V. S. Banige, G. I. Novozhilov, P. V. Sinyarev, V. A. Kuvakin, A. K. Ponomarenko, M. F. Bykov, N. A. Kuznetsov, V. I. Stepanov, V. I. Dorofeyev, G. F. Zhydkov, Lukashenko, for desertion from the labor front, but to repeal the resolution of the bureau of the engineering and technical section with regard to depriving them of their status as engineers and technicians.

To approve the sentence of the labor tribunal of the Marten.

To approve the sentence of the labor tribunal of the Marten workshop providing that Engineer Korsukhin be expelled from the union, dismissed from work, and deprived of his rights.

EXHIBIT No. 63

[Source: Moscow Za Industrializatsiu, No. 12, January 12, 1931. Advertisement]

DESERTERS FROM THE LABOR FRONT

[Translation]

Engineer Sergoi Vladimirovich Pikov and Evsey Yakovlevich Makhno, two young specialists who had been working at the Primorski rayon administration of the coal-mining industry of the east, having been directed there by order of the People's Commissariat for Labor, as well as V. V. Grushevsky, ordered by a traveling document of the former Soyuzugol for work at the Vostugol, dis-document of the former Soyuzugol for work at the Vostugol, disgracefully ran away from the labor front.

It is requested that all institutions and public organizations report the whereabouts of the above-named persons to the address: Moscow, Krasnaya Place, GUM third line, third floor, apartment 205, Moscow office of the Vostogol (Eastern coal. Translator's note), telephone 2-88, 76.

EXHIBIT No. 64

[Source: Tashkent Pravda Vostoka, No. 210, August 2, 1931, p. 1] DESERTER GORIELOV-ORDER TO THE CENTRAL ASIATIC COTTON COMBINE [Translation]

To dismiss Comrade Gorielov without dismissal allowance and To dismiss Comrade Gorielov without dismissal allowance and with annotation in his labor booklet from the employ of the Central Asiatic Cotton Combine and Central Asiatic Cotton Institute for categorical refusal to leave for Vakhsh (no data available), an All-Union shock-troop construction plant.

Shadunts,

Chairman of the Board of the Central Asiatic Cotton Combine.

EXHIBIT No. 65

[Source: Moscow Za Industrializatsiu, No. 228, September 28, 1930] FROM THE MOSCOW OBLAST PROSECUTION DEPARTMENT

The Moscow oblast public prosecution department hereby brings to the knowledge of Soviet public circles the names of the specialists who have been mobilized for the Magnitnaya-Gora construction works, the Kuznetsk construction works, and the Cheliabinsk tractor construction works, but who have evaded mobilization.

cheliabinsk tractor construction works, and the Cheliabinsk tractor construction works, but who have evaded mobilization:

(1) Ochagovsky, (2) Khlobnikov, (3) Ivanov (All-Union Oil Trust), (4) Pishvanov (VZO), (5) Izvekov (All-Union Coal Mining Trust), (6) Cherepakhin (N. I. S.—P. T. E. U.), (7) Teryaev (central offices for energetics), (8) Barabanov (central offices for energetics), (8) Barabanov (central offices for energetics), (9) Ageyev (transport equipment combine), (10) Golubovsky, (11) Poebedinsky, (12) Morgunov (heavy-machine building), (13) Pashehenko (Glass and China Trust), (14) Fritzberg (VTO), (15) Efremov, (16) Gladilyn (building combine), (17) Shpakovsky (Moscow Soviet of National Economy), (18) Galkin (ROMP), (19) Kontaedalov (ROMP), (20) Gurlev (Flax and Hemp Trust), (21) Gorokhov, (22) Somenov, (23) Sukhanov, (24) Vinogradov (Commissariat of Internal Affairs), (25) Ioffe, (26) Vsevolodsky, (27) Sviatsky, (28) Sutulin (Moscow oblast communal department), (29) Ishchenko, (30) Volkov (Commissariat of Internal Affairs), (31) Pekliashenin (Nonferrous Metal Trust), (32) Egorov, (33) Blinkov, (34) Debzhinsky (Supreme Soviet of National Economy of the U. S. S. R.), (35) Shkaev (Union Timber Trust), (36) Steinman (OROMETALL), (37) Raevsky (Union of Unions), (38) Margelin, (39) Volfson, (40) Spassky, (41) Orlaznov, and (42) Kiriushkin (Moscow Soviet of National Economy).

Any of the above persons who, within 24 hours from the moment of publication of this list in the newsreper Za Industrialia.

Any of the above persons who, within 24 hours from the moment of publication of this list in the newspaper Za Industrializatsiu, will not have reported in person at the places to which they have been assigned, will be criminally prosecuted in accordance with the second part of article 61 of the criminal code.

Assistant Moscow Oblast Prosecutor.

H. KABAKOV.

EXHIBIT No. 66

[Source: Moscow Za Industrializatsiu, No. 129, May 12, 1931, p. 4]

FROM THE EDITOR'S MAIL

[Translation of excerpt]

The stubbornness of deserter Klevetsky knew no bounds. Having finished his two months' term of convict labor at the sentence of the oblast labor session (for refusal to go to Yakutia), Engineer Klevetsky refused to depart for the Bashkir Republic. The board of management of the State Electro-Technical Plant (GET), where Klevetsky obtained employment, while having knowledge of this fact, continued, however, to take steps toward obtaining permission for him to remain in Moscow. (From a letter of the cadres sector of the All-Union Soviet of National Economy of the R. S. F. S. R.).

Ехнівіт No. 67

[Source: Moscow Za Industrializatsiu, No. 49, February 19, 1931, p. 4, c. 5. Advertisement]

[Translation]

The board of the All-Union motion picture and photography combine SOYUZKINO requests all organizations, institutions, enterprises, and individuals knowing the whereabouts of Engineer Ermakov, a deserter from the labor front, to advise thereof to Moscow, N. Gniezdikovsky, House No. 7, Soyuzkino.

All the purging of the trust of the All-Union chemical industry

Ermakov was removed from managerial work and detailed to production work. Concealing this fact, he entered the service of the Soyuzkino with the position of chief engineer of the division for technical and economic planning.

technical and economic planning.

Notwithstanding the order given by the administration, and the resolution of the engineering and technical section, Ermakov refused to depart for his work on production (construction of a motion-picture film factory at Shostka).

Ermakov was dismissed as belonging in the second category, by the purging commission of the Soyuzkino, having been forbidden to occupy any managerial positions, and having been instructed, under obligation, to proceed to outlying districts.

EXHIBIT No. 68

[Source: Moscow Za Industrializatsiu, No. 47, February 17, 1931. Advertisement]

[Translation]

Citizen Roman Makarovich Malyar, an engineer in the food industry, a graduate from the Kiev Institute of National Economy in 1929, and who was sent by the Soyuzkonserv to work in the outlying districts

HAS DESERTED

It is requested that, in accordance with the resolution of the People's Commissariat for Labor, all Soviet, labor union, and public organizations refrain from employing him and that they report concerning his whereabouts to: Moscow, Center, Petrovka, No. 7. Sovuzkonserv.

EXHIBIT No. 69

|Source: Moscow Za Industrializatsiu, No. 38, February 8, 1931, p. 4, c. 5. Display advertisement]

[Translation]

While the yearly report at the Dubensky plant (Dubna, Tula Province) was being compiled, E. N. Shcherbakov, accountant-instructor, deserted-escaped, and the plant administration of the Dubensky plant requests all organizations to apply to him the laws regarding deserters of labor.

EXHIBIT No. 70

[Source: Moscow Za Industrializatsiu, No. 25, January 26, 1931, p. 4, col. 6]

[Translation]

The northern Caucasus Kray office of the "Selstroy" and the northern Caucasus Kray Labor Department hereby make it publicly known that M. A. Tomashevsky, a technician employed in grain soviet farm No. 3, and A. N. Krashennikov, a foreman in grain soviet farm, No. 8, have abandoned their work without turn-grain soviet farm, No. 8, have abandoned their work without turning it over and have run away, thereby disrupting the execution of urgent work connected with the upbuilding of agriculture.

The northern Caucasus "Selstroy" and the Kray Labor Department proclaiming technicians N. A. Tomashevsky and A. N. Krashennikov to be fraudulent deserters of labor, request that they be not employed and that, in case they apply for work, local organizations be informed in order that they might be sent back to Rostov, to the Kray office of the "Selstroy."

SELSTROY,
Northern Caucasus Kray Office of the Northern Kray Labor Department.

neg/fk

EXHIBIT No. 71

[Source: Moscow Za Industrializatsiu, No. 23, January 24, 1931, Advertisement]

[Translation]

Matvei Petrovich Ovchinnikov and Petr Petrovich Zotov, foremen employed at the Chusovsky metallurgical plant on the construction of a tunnel between furnaces 1 and 3, have run away without turning over their work and special clothing, as well as money in cash. The first slipped away on December 27, 1930; the second on January 12, 1931. Tikhon Vasilievich Kaveshnikov, a laborer and blacksmith, has also run away.

It is requested that all organizations knowing the whereabouts of the above-named persons take measures toward their detention through the administrative department.

EXHIBIT No. 72

[Source: Moscow Za Industrializatsiu, No. 21, January 21, 1931. Advertisement]

[Translation]

Constructor A. A. Maximenko, at a time of responsible planning of coke and chemical plants, deserted from the Dnepropetrovsk Planning Office of the Giprokoks.

Organizations and persons who know of his whereabouts are requested to advise thereof.

EXHIRIT No. 73

[Source: Moscow Za Industrializatsiu, No. 18, January 18, 1931. Advertisement1

[Translation]

To all economic organizations:

It is requested that the place of work of Citizen Ivan Dmitrievich Vasiliev, a graduate of the Vyaznikovsky Textile Technicum, be reported to: Station Vyazniki, factory "Rosa Luxemburg."

This party was contracted by us and, after finishing his studies, deserted from work, having obtained a month's vacation.

We request the economic organizations where Vasiliev has obtained employment to turn him immediately over to us.

EXHIBIT No. 74

[Source: Moscow Za Industrializatsiu, No. 16, January 16, 1931. Advertisement1

[Translation]

The administration of the Constantinovsky Electrokoltso employed Engineer Pykhteyev, a former resident of the city of Tver, who, having obtained a wage advance, ran away.

It is requested that all institutions where Citizen Pykhteyev is working report this fact to: Elektrokoltso Administration, village of Konstatinovka, Donetz Basin.

ADMINISTRATION.

EXHIBIT No. 75

[Source: Moscow Za Industrializatsiu, No. 53, February 23, 1931, p. 4, c. 3. Advertisement]

[Translation]

Fedor Mikhailovich Kondratiev, a technician, deserted on December 12, 1930, from the Liudinovsky plant in the Western Province without turning over his work to the shop management.

He was graduated from the technical school in 1930. The plant administration requests all enterprises knowing Kondratiev's whereabouts to report thereon.

EXHIBIT No. 76

[Source: Moscow Economic Life, No. 196, October 19, 1930] COMRADES' COURT IN JUDGMENT OVER LABOR DESERTERS

[Translation]

The comrades' court at the Commissariat of Ways of Communication, presided over by Comrade Kefalidi, with Comrade Diakonov acting as social prosecutor, has been examining the charge brought against a number of workers of the central communication station (probably meaning the central telegraph and telephone station. Translator's note) of the transport service, who are members of the union (what union? Translator's note), the women Lebedeva, Drieger, and Mikhalenko, of having hounded the activist female worker, Kulikova, who is a scout of the battling post (meaning member of a sort of germ-call at the given establishment. Translator's note), and also of having intentionally frustrated sundry measures for the consolidation of labor discipline.

The workers of the telegraph: Privato, Isaaiov, Yuroshkevich, Efimov, Kuchinsky, Kassatkin, and Tsukanov are charged with systematic nonattendance to work, with inebriety when coming to work, with neglect in the performance of their duties, with disorganization of the surrounding milieu, with propaganda against the shock-brigade movement, and with intentional frustration of measures meant for the consolidation of labor discipline.

The entire body of workers of the said central telegraph and telephone station of the transport service is charged with insufficient vigilance, and with absence of class sentiment. As a result of this, class-alien elements, idlers, and drunkards managed to creep into the apparatus of the station. By the preliminary investigation and the examination in court all the charges were fully proved.

The court found that the activities of the group of class-alien elements had not met with rebuff on the part of the body of workers. The leading body of activists failed to display sufficient initiative, energy, and decision in the matter of reeducating those who were lacking in class consciousness and of driving the class aliens out of the apparatus. The unsatisfactory social composition, the low cultural level, and the political illiteracy of the considerable majority of workers of the said central station were the principal causes of the bad conditions in regard to labor discipline. The court resolved to expel from the union and dismiss from the service the following persons: The women Frechistenskaya, Lebedeva, and Drieger, and the men Issalev, Tsukanov, Kassatkin, Yuroshkevich, Kuchinsky, Efimov, and Privato.

Taking into consideration the difficult conditions of her family life—she has a baby in arms—the court decided to give her a comrades' warning. The woman Smirnova was given a public reprimand. In addition to this the court bound her over to raise the level of her political education.

The court further decided to forward the evidence concerning the party member Nikhailov to the bureau of the party collective, broaching the question as to his continuance in the ranks of the party. The court pronounced the social work of the entire body of workers of the central station to be unsatisfactory, and suggested that it be raised to a due level, turning to account the lessons taught by this trial. To the branch committee it was suggested to broadly develop class educational work on the basis of socialistic emulation and participation in the shock brigade movement

As regards Comrade Kulikova, the court recommended her as an exemplary worker and suggested that more responsible work be intrusted to her.

The decisions of the comrades' court were carried into effect.

EXHIBIT No. 77

[Source: Moscow Izvestia, No. 243, September 3, 1930]

TO ALL PARTY, ECONOMIC, LABOR-UNION, AND COMMUNIST YOUTH ORGANIZATIONS—MESSAGE OF THE CENTRAL COMMITTEE OF THE ALLUNION COMMUNIST PARTY (OF BOLSHEVIKS)

[Translation of excerpts]

One month hence the new fiscal year—the third year of the quinquennium—will begin. This approaching year raises a number of most intricate and most responsible economic and political problems. It will be of decisive importance for the execution of the 5-year plan in 4 years, and it must assure the shifting of not less than one-half of all peasant households to the socialistic path—the path of collectivization.

The execution of this gigantic economic program is possible only with a most active and immediate mobilization of all the forces of the working class, of all party organizations, all labor unions, the entire Communist Union of Youth, and all economic organizations without exception. Failure to realize this fact means failure to remember the fundamental Bolshevik obligation to secure the success of the upbuilding of socialism, and it represents a direct crime committed against the party, in the very first instance, by all the leaders of these organizations.

Mere verbal recognition of the general line of the party, and failure to adopt in actual fact drastic and prompt measures for mobilizing the whole working class for the execution of this economic program is unworthy of Bolsheviks and represents the worst form of right-wing opportunism in practice.

economic program is unworthy of Boisneviks and represents the worst form of right-wing opportunism in practice.

Only by immediately developing operations for preparing the execution of the production program of industry for the next year will it be possible to assure the realization of the Bolshevik paces of the development of industry adopted by the Sixteenth Congress of the Party.

Especially important to the execution of the industrial plan this year have been the changes which occurred in the economic situation and which were felt most keenly in the labor problem and, first of all, in the problem of the excessive turnover of labor. The enormous extent of socialistic industrialization, the employment in this connection of all the old staffs of workingmen and of a huge number of new workingmen, especially from the villages, and the simultaneously developing collective and soviet farm organization, together with the yield of a heavier crop, have caused most serious changes as compared with the period when there were still considerable numbers of unemployed in the cities and when the excess of working hands made itself felt particularly on the small individual farms.

These changes in the small individual farms.

These changes in the situation were not taken into account by the economic organs and by the labor unions. Yet this implies on the one hand, and influx into the industrial enterprises of new workingmen who have not gone through the training of large-scale industry and who are often imbued with the selfish spirit of the petty proprietor; on the other hand, it involves the departure of a certain number of such workingmen for the village, especially during the harvesting period and during the distribution of the crop. Instead of rendering themselves a clear account of the existing situation and adopting the necessary measures (by developing proletarian public opinion, by a proper adjustment of the workingmen's supply organizations, and by special rewards for the best producers), so as to attach the working personnel firmly to the enterprise, and instead of fighting resolutely against the selfish elements who accidentally find their way into the estabiishments ("rovers," etc.), the economic organs and the labor unions, as well as the party organizations, have displayed absolutely intolerable passivity in this matter, and thus permitted an excessive turnover of labor to take place.

It is especially necessary to point out the bureaucratic attitude assumed by the organs of the People's Commissariat of Labor and by certain labor unions toward economic problems. Suffice it to say that, in the presence of an obvious labor scarcity at factories and other industrial plants, in the mines and at construc-

It is especially necessary to point out the bureaucratic attitude assumed by the organs of the People's Commissariat of Labor and by certain labor unions toward economic problems. Suffice it to say that, in the presence of an obvious labor scarcity at factories and other industrial plants, in the mines and at construction works, in all industrial regions, the organs of the People's Commissariat of Labor have until recently confined themselves to the printing of bureaucratic "data" regarding hundreds of thousands of unemployed, and paid out tens of millions of rubles in benefits "for unemployment," conducting no struggle against the selfish elements, against rovers refusing to work, etc.

Not less bureaucracy and incapacity in solving new problems has been displayed by the consumers' cooperatives, which did not know how to carry out the necessary reorganization of their work in order to accomplish the task of firmly attaching the laborers to the industrial plant and which failed to mobilize all their productive possibilities to obtain an effective improvement in the supply of the laborers to promote mass control by the workingmen and workingwomen over the work of all cooperative organs. To a certain extent the organs of the People's Commissariat of Foreign and Domestic Trade are also responsible for it.

As the most striking manifestation of the confusion prevailing

As the most striking manifestation of the confusion prevailing among the economic organs and labor unions and of the fact that they have failed to adopt prompt measures for the struggle against the excessive turnover of labor, which is undermining labor discipline and carrying disorganization into industry, may be regarded the labor situation which has arisen because of the new economic situation in the enterprises of the All-Union Coal Mining Combine in the Urals in a number of building enterprises, and even in certain enterprises at Moscow and Leningrad, and which has resulted in serious failures of production programs.

omenia in the Urais in a number of building enterprises, and even in certain enterprises at Moscow and Leningrad, and which has resulted in serious failures of production programs.

The inability to organize and take the lead in the tempestuously growing activity of the working class still remains the principal and decisive defect in the economic work. Notwithstanding the gigantic scale of socialistic rivalry and of shock-troop work at factories and mills our economic, labor-union, communist youth and party organizations not infrequently lag behind in this respect, and at times they trail behind the proletarian activists in an factories and mills our economic, labor-union, communist youth and party organizations not infrequently lag behind in this respect, and at times they trail behind the proletarian activists in an opportunistic manner, for example, at Sormovo and other places.

The development of socialist rivalry and shock-troop work is in no small measure promoted by bringing the tasks of the production program all the way down to each workshop, labor brigade, and work bench. On the other hand, socialistic rivalry and shock-troop work are rising to a higher level on the basis of the development of proletarian activity, of a utilization of the productive achievements of the shock-troop workers, and of their initiative in rationalization, as well as on the basis of a practical use of proposals from workingmen as regards utilization of powerful additional sources of production. This finds its expression in the elaboration of the industrial and financial counterplan by the workingmen at the factories and mills; its significance lies in a greater saving of the resources of the enterprise when carrying out the production, but more particularly in a further acceleration of the Bolshevik pace of industrial building operations. The industrial and financial counterplan acquires particular importance as a method for the effective enlistment of all laborers in the cause of socialistic upbuilding and as a most important means of fighting counterrevolutionary sabotage.

In reality, however, in many instances the party and other factory organizations not only fail properly to support the initiative of the workingmen in the elaboration of the industrial and finanof the workingmen in the elaboration of the industrial and financial counterplan, but there is also lacking the necessary organization of socialistic rivalry in diverse and ever new forms (start-to-finish shock brigades, "social towage" (the use of the press and of other agencies of what is known as "Soviet public opinion," but mostly the direct help rendered by a successfully operating establishment, to speed up the operations of industrial and other enterprises lagging behind scheduled performance—Translator's note), and others). Yet without this it is impossible to make sure of Rolsheyik speed in the development of socialist industry. Inand others). Yet without this it is impossible to make sure of Bolshevik speed in the development of socialist industry. Instances of sham shock-troop work in industry and in transportation are still numerous, and there is still a purely formal bureaucratic attitude toward rivalry. There are quite a few party members who do not understand the rôle and the obligation of communists in the enterprises to act as skirmishers in the struggle for the execution of the industrial and financial plan.

for the execution of the industrial and financial plan.

Among the economic workers who actually stand at the advanced outposts of socialistic upbuilding work, there is not infrequently a lack of consciousness of the exceptional responsibility they assume for their work, and there is no understanding of their positive duty to combine the firm establishment of individual authority of chiefs at the enterprise with the ability to rest, in all their activities, for support upon the party, labor-union, and Communist Youth organizations, upon all the communist and nonparty active elements among the workingmen and working women.

The most serious defects of socialistic rivalry and shock-troop work have found their expression in the failures of production work have found their expression in the failures of production which have revealed themselves and in the grave danger of a breakdown of the industrial and financial plan of the current year.

The situation which has been created in industry demands determined and immediate measures for the mobilization of the forces of the whole party and of the whole working class, so as to execute the industrial plan of the current year adopted by the party. This is the more necessary and the more urgent, since the closing of the gap which has been disclosed in the industrial and financial plan represents the principal condition for assuring the execution of the production program for the third year of the the execution of the production program for the third year of the quinquennium.

This involves the following fundamental tasks of the party and of the whole working class.

1. All forces of the party and Communist Youth organizations, of the labor unions and economic organs must be devoted to advancing the cause of socialistic rivalry and shock-troop work, to the support of the initiative taken by the workingmen in this matter in all its forms (start-to-finish shock brigades, "social towage," and others). All forces must be devoted to the promotion of the industrial and financial counterplan in the factories and mills, in the mines and at construction works, on the railways, and on the waterways

The central committee wholly and fully supports the initiative taken by the All-Union Central Soviet of Labor Unions in the organizations, during the month of September, of an extensive campaign by the labor unions for the industrial and financial counterplan and for the organization of an All-Union shock-troop day on October 1. The central committee points out the fact that this campaign will become an effective means for stopping the gaps in the industrial plan and that it will assure the execution of the production schedule only if all labor-union organizations will be drawn into this campaign immediately, in actual fact, and not merely by word of mouth.

2. Measures which will assure a decisive strengthening of labor

2. Measures which will assure a decisive strengthening of labor discipline and an effective struggle against disorder and against loafing must be adopted at once. These measures must assure an early change with a view to increasing the output of labor and to the actual realization of the principle of individual authority of chiefs in economic management, without which it is impossible to overcome the difficulties which have arisen in industry.

3. The development of technical initiative among engineers and echnicians must be assured, and the training of new staffs of technicians must be assured, and the training of new staffs of the working class must be pushed by every means, by a more determined and persistent promotion of the more advanced workingmen to managing posts and especially those workingmen who organize rivalry, so as to overcome inertia, bureaucracy, and opportunistic lack of confidence in the ability of the working class.

4. For the purpose of combating the excessive turnover of labor at the enterprises, a whole system of measures must be carried into effect, which will assure the firm attachment of the workingmen to industry by the appropriate development of proletarian public opinion, by means of workingmen's "self-obligation" in the face of proletarian public opinion to work at the given enterprise not less than a stipulated period, and by applying all measures of social pressure, including a boycott, against malicious deserters from production, as well as by providing for various forms of premiums and of supply allotments which would induce the laborer to work long periods of time at the factory.

In view of the fact that a number of legal provisions, and in particular the statutes on labor exchanges, do not in the present economic situation satisfy actual requirements, there must be an economic situation satisfy actual requirements, there must be an immediate revision of these laws, with a view to repealing those sections which obstruct the fight against rovers, deserters from production, etc.; at the same time a more extensive employment of the working youth at production, as well as of the wives of the workingmen and other toilers, should be secured.

5. The organization of supplies for the workingmen is of ex-ceeding importance for the execution of the industrial and financial plan.

For the purpose of improving the distribution system, the co-operatives must promote those forms of distribution which have operatives must promote those forms of distribution which have justified themselves in practice and which safeguard to the greatest possible extent the interests of the workingmen engaged in production (shop canteens, the attachment of workingmen who are shareholders to their own stores, a merciless struggle against thievery in the cooperative system, stronger reprisals for abuses with ration tickets, purchase cards, etc.). In the industrial regions they must push the organization of suburban farms (vegetable, dairy, livestock). The party, labor-union, Communist Youth, and economic organizations must render every possible aid in fostering initiative among the workingmen in such matters, strengthen the cooperatives, and by all means promote mass control by workingmen and workingwomen over the operations of the cooperative system.

cooperative system.

6. The press has performed important work, on the basis of a promotion of self-criticism, in mobilizing the laboring masses for the execution of the industrial and financial plan. At the same time, in many instances, the press, confining itself to a superficial campaign agitation, has failed to obtain an intensification of the struggle against the most glaring, concrete defects of economic work, and has not been able to manage the task of a prompt organization of the masses to cope with the new problems which have come to the fore because of the changes in the economic

7. A determined fight must be carried on against the slackening pace of work due to summer vacations which, in a number of economic organs, have taken the intolerable shape of leaving institutions without management and which represent one of the most serious obstacles to the execution of the current industrial and financial plan and to the preparation for the third year of the quinquennium. Without an immediate and thorough eradication of this kind of laxity, which represents one of the obvious manifestations of opportunism in practice, the mobilization of the party forces and of the workingmen for closing the gap and carrying out the industrial tasks will remain mere words.

These are the most important problems of the day.

The production program of the current year and the economic plan of the third year of the quinquennium signify a practical program of socialistic upbuilding and a fully deployed offensive against the capitalistic elements all along the front. nomic organs, have taken the intolerable shape of leaving insti-

The overcoming of the difficulties which face us depends, first of all, upon our work, upon our ability to wage a consistent and uncompromising fight against disorder and bureaucracy within our organs, but especially upon our ability to mobilize the working class, which represents a source of rapidly growing and practically inexhaustible revolutionary energy, in the cause of the struggle for communishm for communishm.

The industrial and financial plan is in danger. This threatens the program of the third year of the quinquennium. Let us draw from this a Bolshevik conclusion, namely:

All forces of the party, all forces of the working class, must rally to the execution of the industrial and financial plan, to assure the execution of the program of the third year of the quinquentium.

EXHIBIT No. 78

[From the Small Soviet Encyclopedia, vol. 8, col. 977, published at Moscow in the beginning of 1931 by the Communist Academy of the Central Executive Committee of the U. S. S. R.]

[Translation]

CONVICTS FOR HEWING TIMBERS-PENITENTIARY COLONIES

Penitentiary labor colonies are establishments with a semifree Penitentiary labor colonies are establishments with a semifree régime. In their interior arrangement they resemble economic organizations. Labor colonies, which facilitate the utilization of the labor of prisoners and the instilling into them of the habits of labor, are becoming the fundamental type of prison during the reconstructive period. Penitentiary colonies are of two types, the open and the closed. Open-labor colonies are organized chiefly beyond the towns (for agriculture, road making, timber hewing, peat cutting, etc). Closed penitentiary colonies are transformations of the prison buildings and isolators, which are most adapted for factory production.

EXHIBIT No. 79

[Extracts from Solovetskie Ostrova, the monthly journal, the organ of the management of the Solovetsky camp of the O. G. P. U., No. 7, p. 10, printed and published at the Solovetsky Island camp in the White Sea, July, 1926]

O. G. P. U.'S SKETCH OF A SMALL CONVICT TIMBER CAMP-DESCRIPTION OF BAB-CUBA CONVICT TIMBER CAMP

[Translation]

Bab-Cuba is 3 versts from the town. Bab-Cuba is a marine gulf, broad and calm, which at ebb tide pushes out its waters, and over the whole of its broad expanse shimmers the yellow of the drying sand.

This spring Bab-Cuba became vociferous with the screaking of saws, the chopping of hatchets, the "stimulating" cries of gangers. The sawmill, which had been idle, sprang into activity.

Tons and sometimes hundreds of people swarmed round the mill and blended with the yellow-gray sands of the ebb tide. But unusual work is now going on at the sawmill. Through its gloomy corridor, over the thick movable lifting chain, over the lines of the trolley wheels, pass thousands of enormous tree trunks, driven to the bank in rafts. The mill lifts these trunks, passes them along, and throws them out to be turned into sleepers, with which operation the whole "bourse" on the bank of Bab-Cuba is now occupied.

In May a contract was concluded between the Karelian Timber Trust and the management of the Solovetsky camps, by which the camps undertook to provide a great working artel for the summer season to serve the enterprise of Bab-Cuba. During the summer months 150,000 trunks must be transformed into finished raliway sleepers by the Solovetsky artel.

Immediately after the contract was signed, artels of up to 200 men were formed out of the number of prisoners confined in the Kem convict prison camp. These artels began at once continuous work, and at the present time the whole shore of Bab-Cuba makes the impression of a real "bourse," strewn with timber merchandise transformed in the process of the work.

This work is quite different in pheroters from other work.

chandise transformed in the process of the work.

This work is quite different in character from other work. It goes on the whole 24 hours round. This does not mean, of course, that the people do not close their eyes during the 24 hours, but the different scenes and the purely local conditions (the tide) do not stop the work either by day or at night.

The sawmills are worked entirely by laborers of the Solovetsky artel. Each member of the artel earns money for the camp, amounting on an average to 2 rubles per day. The prison laborer gets the benefit of a tenth part of his earnings, which is handed out to him once a week gets the benefit of a tenth part of his earnings, which is handed out to him once a week.

Of all the work at Bab-Cuba, floating is the only part which is performed by nonprisoners. For this process the Karelian Timber Trust has engaged freemen laborers. Thus, there is a peculiar sort of emulation between the two classes of laborers. The floaters are interested in delivering the rafts to the shore in good time. The prisoners, for their part, who perform all the other forms of labor, strive not to log behind the floaters in working up the timber. the timber.

Work goes on in the conditions produced by this voluntary and peaceful competition. Two offices are at work side by side. One is in a big new house with a mezzanine which has recently been put up. This is the office of the sawmills. The employees in it are all in the service of the Northern Timber Trust (Severoless), with the exception of one bookkeeper, who is from the Solovetsky Islands.

The other office is in an old gray barrack. This is the office

The other office is in an old gray barrack. This is the office which carries out all settlements and manages the whole life of the Solovetsky artel. There the accounts are kept from day to day. An account of the results of the day's work is given to the office of Severoless, in return for a receipt to acknowledge that this work has been performed.

In this old barrack which has turned brown, there are figures, rattling of counting boards, and reports without end. This is the place for the rations and medical aid, and the rare placing in the cells of an erring "leopard."

And what about the life? There is life only in repose. The minutes do not suffice for anything else. Everything else will come later, when the summer months are over, when the trolleys have conveyed 140,000 newly finished sleepers to the railway trucks. Life consists only of labor and rare periods of repose—repose in the new barracks, in the smell of fresh wood, pitch, and shavings.

Bab-Cuba is a peculiar corner, separated from everything, a strange settlement cut off from towns, from the world, from songs. Nothing but the whistles of passing locomotives.

And the silent salls of the sea, sometimes shining on the horizon, far away where the gray sands of the ebb tide and the broad, smooth surface of the White Sea begins.

smooth surface of the White Sea begins.

On this shore, above the gray sands, by the toil on the timber "bourse," people are repairing their lives.

They are hewing them with their hatchets, they are planning them, too. And from the bare rocks above the wretched Karelian coast, they look out toward the islands seen in the distance. And they think * * it must be they think of how good it will be when a fresh life for them begins, a life which may be likened to a railway sleeper, newly hewn and planed.

EXHIBIT No. 80

[From Ekonomicheskaya Zhizn, published at Moscow, July 29, 1928]

DWELLINGS OF LUMBERMEN LIKE THE LARS OF WILD BEASTS—IN THE NORTHERN FORESTS—INTERRUPTION IN FINANCING—PLANTATION METHODS OF USING LUMBERMEN AND THEIR TEAMS-REGULATION OF LABOR—SUPPLY OF BREAD AND FODDER, SOMETIMES NONE, OTHER TIMES TOO MUCH—LAIRS OF WILD BEASTS INSTEAD OF DWELLINGS—CULTURAL AND EDUCATIONAL WORK

[Translation]

(From our Cheropovetsk correspondent)

A great number of lumbermen in the period of their operations have been left in an extremely difficult position through the inter-ruption of special credits. Thus the local industrial combine re-ceived nothing at all in one quarter instead of the 232,000 roubles which figured in the industrial finance plan. Advances date at different times and places. All this retarded lumbering operations, and sometimes even threatened them with disruption. The lumbering organization had to be maintained, but lumbering operations came to a standstill. Besides this another trouble happened: Recruiting agents appeared in the district enticing happened: Recruiting agents appeared in the district enticing the peasants with earnest money, promising all kinds of good things, and they carried off hundreds of people with their horses to Murmansk, to Archangel, and other less distant places. By this the lumbering of the local organization was endangered. The recruiting agents were dealt with by suitable measures. The agiotage was lessened and the question of the distribution of labor brought back into the channel planned. Outrageous cases of deceiving the peasants by the recruiting agents must be noted. In some localities the conditions proved to be considerably worse than those promised prior to departure. Many peasants having sold their horses trudged hundreds of versts and returned to their native villages crushed and often ill. The prosecuting magistrates have taken up the question of these plantation methods of recruiting labor, but this should not prevent a further investigarecruiting labor, but this should not prevent a further investiga-

It must be mentioned that extraordinarily difficult work in severe winter is carried out mostly under extremely unfavorable living conditions. The men in charge of lumbering operations (especially those engaged in annual cutting) have made insufficient provision of dwellings for haulers and hewers. Thus, after the working day the hewers return to rest in primitive smoke huts.

They crawl in (not walk but literally crawl) as into a wild beast's lair; the air is oppressive, smoke hurts the eyes. They dry, warm, and rest round the open log fire. Medical aid is often no better. * * often no better.

EXHIBIT No. 81

[Source: Vsia Moska, 1930]

STATE TRADE COLLECTION ENTERPRISE OF THE MOSCOW PLACES OF CONFINEMENT

[Translation of excerpts]

Plant "Shtampmet" (aluminum articles)—B. Ekaterininskaya 4. telephone 5-79-69.

Handkerchief, filling, stocking, and knitting workshop—Sretenka, 11, telephone 5-06-37

Photolaboratory—Belinskovo Ulitza, 4, telephone 2-11-01.
Factory labor colonies: Burepolm (lumber plant and timber camps)—Sherstki junction, Moscow-Kursk railway; Vetluga (lumber camps)—Yakshanga station, Northern railway; Zavidovo (peat operations)—Zazidovo station. October railway; Kimro-Kaliazin (gravel production)—city of Kaliazin; Kriukovo (brick plants)—Valikara station. October railway: Lienezovo (brick plants)—Lienezovo (brick plants) (gravel production)—city of Kallazin; Kriukovo (brick plants)—Li-kriukovo station, October railway; Lianozovo (brick plants)—Li-anozovo station, Sevelovo railway, telephone 2-77-67; Second Mos-cow (joiner-carpenter, mechanical locksmith, radio equipment)— M. Ivanovsky p., telephone 2-55-00, 1-36-14, 4-04-62; Sardansk (lumber plant)—city Mozhga, Votsky Oblast.

Ехнівіт №. 82

[Source: V. O. K. S., No. 2, 1931, p. 7, K. Radek] OBLIGATORY LABOR OR FORCED LABOR

[Excerpt from English-language article] .

Just because the adversaries of the new régime daily see this they can not imagine that obligatory labor should not in practice to forced labor.

They pick out those cases where there exists forced labor in our country, in order to generalize them and to represent our whole labor system as a system of forced labor. We never concealed that we apply force to representatives of the overthrown class. We are destroying the kulaks as a class on the basis of all-around collectivization of peasant farms. This is a fact which we never concealed, which we consider as a great accomplishment of our country. Yet we do not at all aim at the physical destruction of country. Yet we do

After having come to power, we have left the old tsarist ministers and the capitalists alive, and still less can we want the physical destruction of the comparatively numerous class of the kulaks. Shall we then keep them in prison? Even if it were possible to put thousands of people in prison, the socialist government would not take such measures without absolute necessity. Our mission consists not in the physical destruction of the kulaks and the proposentatives of the explicitive classes but in foreign than the representatives of the exploiting classes but in forcing them to begin a laboring life under adequate conditions. Not until they have entered this laboring life and have forgotten their dreams of restoration of their former privileged position can we leave them the possibility to move about freely or allow them to enter our factories and our collective farms and undermine our work from within. We put them on distant sectors of the economic front, where they have to earn their livelihood by heavy labor.

The proletariat does not renounce force even in regard to the more backward members of its own class which are too slow in overcoming the habits of grafting inherited by them from capital-ism. Comradely tribunals, verdicts of workers' general meetings, and the fight of proletarian public opinion—all these are means of forcing which we do not renounce for a moment. We would be very glad if capitalist morality and capitalist views on labor would suddenly perish in our country, together with capitalism. But, unfortunately, mass habits and views have a persistent life and often survive when the conditions which have molded them have already disappeared. The working class, which builds a new and better society not for itself but for the whole mass of the people, for the vast sea of peasantry, which has up to now known only hard toil, has a right to apply force, because the working class applies this force not in the interest of a minority but in the interest of that mass of the majority of the people whose vanguard

EXHIBIT No. 83

[Source: Soviet Penal Labor Law, Moscow, 1931. E. Shirvindt and B. Utevsky, p. 90]

[Translation of excerpts]

The resolutions of the sixth congress of legal workers speak already of the necessity to expand the network of penal labor colonies. But only in 1929, when the "fetishism of window bars" proved considerably shaken there appeared economic preliminary conditions for the application of convict labor at mass work requiring much labor power and, in connection therewith, for the growth of labor colonies.

One principal form—penal labor colonies—was founded instead of the complicated and variegated system of places of confinement. The places of confinement in which existed sufficiently powerful The places of confinement in which existed sufficiently powerful industrial enterprises, requiring much labor, were transformed into colonies of a closed type (i. e., bound by the walls of the respective place of confinement). As to all the convicts not engaged in work at such enterprises, they are brought out to places of mass work where they create open colonies, agricultural, irrigation, connected with mining, the building of roads, etc. Certain of these colonies (for example, road constructing, irrigation) are considered as movable, not established firmly in one place, but traveling together with the transfer of the work to a new spot.

The following table shows the results of the work performed in

The following table shows the results of the work performed in

Type of colony	Number of colonies as of Sept. 1, 1929	Newly or- ganized and reor- ganized after Sept. 1, 1929
Lumber operations	6 17 4	19 12 26

EXHIBIT No. 84

.

[Source: Soviet penal labor law, Moscow, 1931, E. G. Shirvindt and B. S. Utevsky, p. 89]

1. The replacing of prisons by labor colonies for convicts.

[Translation of excerpts] .

The desire to bring convicts out of the prisons into institutions with a semifree system, from the cities into the rural districts stimulated the creation of factory and plant colonies in the rural districts, in addition to agricultural and economic colonies. Particularly large colonies of that type were created in the Leningrad and Moscow Provinces. It is sufficient to say in order to characterize these colonies that the number of convicts at the Lianozovo-Krukov factory (Lianozovo Station, 14 kilometers from Moscow on Savelovo railway) labor colony exceeds 3,000 during the summer months. The colony is entirely self-sufficient. The brick factories which are situated within the territory of the colony and which were in a dilapidated condition have been rebuilt, developed, and now produce during the summer about 30,000,000 developed, and now produce during the summer about 30,000,000 bricks.

EXHIBIT No. 85

[From Sovietskoye Ispravitelno-Trudovoye Pravo, the official university course on Soviet penitentiary labor justice, published by the Commissariat of the Interior of the R. S. F. S. R. for the State Institute for Studying Crime and Criminals, Moscow, 1931]

[Translation from page 90]

Places of confinement which have producing enterprises of sufficient power and labor capacity are transformed into colonies of the closed type (i. e., limited by the walls of the place of confinement). But all the prisoners who are not occupied in such enterprises are taken out to the places of mass labor, where they form open colonies—agricultural, improvement, mining, road making, etc. Some of those colonies (e. g., road making and improving) are regarded as mobile, and are not fixed to one spot but move as the place of work changes to a new place.

The result of what has been done in this direction may be seen from the following table:

Type of colony	Number of colonies before Sept. 1, 1929	Number of colonies organized and reor- ganized since Sept. 1, 1929
For preparing timber Agricultural Manufacturing	6 17 4	19 12 26

It is not difficult to see that the change from closed places of confinement to the system of labor colonies is quite in keeping with the principles of Soviet corrective-labor policy, explained in article 4 of the corrective-labor code of the R. S. F. S. R. and that the corrective-labor reform which has been made is in complete harmony with the basic foundations of the Soviet corrective-

This circumstance is the best proof that the organization of the Soviet penitentiary is right, expressed as it was with full deliberation as early as 1918 and given its real form in 1929.

EXHIBIT No. 86

[Source: Small Soviet Encyclopedia, Moscow, 1930, vol. 8, p. 978] [Translation of excerpts]

Labor colonies are:

2. Penitentiary-labor institutions with a semi-free régime ap-2. Peninentary-labor institutions with a semi-free regime approaching in their inner organizations corresponding economic enterprises. Labor colonies which give a wide possibility of rational application of the labor of persons deprived of freedom and of inculcating in them labor habits are becoming in the reconstructive period the basic type of places of confinement. Labor colonies are of an open or closed type. Open labor colonies are organized principally outside cities (agricultural, road, lumber, and need production, etc.) peat production, etc.).

EXHIBIT No. 87

[Source: Sovietskaya Yustitsia, No. 30, p. 33, November 7, 1931] TO THE KRAY AND OBLAST BOARDS OF MANAGEMENT OF PENITENTIARY-LABOR INSTITUTIONS AND TO THE BOARDS OF MANAGEMENT OF PENI-TENTIARY-LABOR INSTITUTIONS OF THE AUTONOMOUS REPUBLICS CON-CERNING THE REMUNERATION FOR THE LABOR OF PERSONS BANISHED AND PERFORMING PENITENTIARY LABOR

[Translation]

The following procedure to be followed in remunerating the labor of persons banished and performing penitentiary labor is hereby established:

labor of persons banished and performing penitentiary labor is hereby established:

1. The remuneration for the labor of persons banished and performing penitentiary labor who, while proceeding to their place of banishment are held in places of confinement, shall be paid on a basis similar to that of all persons deprived of freedom but without deductions to the permanent funds.

2. At the place of banishment the persons banished and performing penitentiary labor, both those working in economic organs or working in enterprises of penitentiary-labor organs, shall have, as regards the conditions of labor and the remuneration for the same, an equal status with workers (rabotnik) of a similar qualification, who perform the same work by labor contract.

A definite percentage decreasing with every year and which is calculated at the rate set for workers (rabotnik) performing work by labor contract, shall be deducted from the earnings of persons banished by penitentiary-labor organs as indemnification for expenses incurred in connection with banishment and penitentiary labor.

In addition thereto, a certain percentage shall be deducted during the first years of banishment which goes to the personal-supply fund of the person banished.

3. No deductions or assessments shall be made from the remuneration for the overexecution of quotas, for overtime work, or from any kind of premium for achievements of an industrial nature.

4. The amount of salary paid directly to the person acroning it nature.

4. The amount of salary paid directly to the person earning it, of the assessments therefrom, and of the deductions for the supply fund shall be established for all persons banished and executing penitentiary labor in the following form:

All other deductions and assessments from the earnings of persons banished and performing penitentiary labor (for example for the extension of production, for cultural work, etc.) shall be categorically prohibited:

	In percentage of total earnings
Term of banishment	Immediate- ly issued to person ban- ished	supply	Deducted by peni- tentiary- labor organs
First year Second year Third year Fourth year and following	65 75 85 95	10 10 5	1. 25 1. 5 0. 0 5. 0

5. The issuance of money from the supply fund, belonging to the person banished and performing penitentiary labor, shall be permitted by order of the respective penitentiary-labor organ, provided there are valid reasons therefor, such, for example, as the arrival of his family, and provided six months have elapsed since the beginning of the term of banishment.

At the end of the term of banishment or of the term of peni-tentiary labor accompanying banishment, all the money listed in the supply fund of the person banished shall be issued to him personally.

6. If the annual term of banishment expires in the middle of a

6. If the annual term of banishment expires in the middle of a month the salary shall be calculated at a new rate only from the beginning of the next month. If the first year of banishment, for example, ends on November 12, 1931, 75 per cent of the salary will start being issued only beginning with December 1, 1931.

7. The procedure to be followed in remunerating persons banished and performing penitentiary labor, which is established by this circular, shall be introduced on November 1, 1931. The terms indicated in paragraph 4 shall be calculated from the moment the term of banishment actually begins and, therefore, persons who at the present time have been banished for over a year shall immediately receive 75 per cent of their earnings.

The chiefs of boards of management of penitentiary-labor institutions in krays and oblasts, where banishment takes place, are instructed immediately to take the necessary steps to carry into effect the system of remuneration of persons banished and performing penitentiary labor, which is being introduced by the chief administration of penitentiary-labor institutions, to make the persons banished broadly acquainted therewith, and to explain that deductions from their earnings are substantially decreasing with every year of banishment.

Linting

Acting Director of the Chief Administration of Penitentiary Labor Institutions.

October 23, 1931.

EXHIBIT No. 88

[Source: Sovietskaya Yustitsia, No. 28, p. 31, October 10, 1931. Circular No. 105]

TO THE CHIEFS OF THE KRAY AND OBLAST BOARDS OF MANAGEMENT OF PLACES OF CONFINEMENT. TO THE CHIEFS OF THE BOARDS OF MAN-AGEMENT OF PLACES OF CONFINEMENT IN THE AUTONOMOUS OBLASTS, AND TO THE CHIEFS OF THE BOARDS OF MANAGEMENT OF PLACES OF CONFINEMENT IN AUTONOMOUS REPUBLICS, REGARDING THE INDUS-TRIAL AND FINANCIAL PLAN FOR THE FOURTH QUARTER OF 1931

[Translation]

1. The preliminary summary of the execution of the industrial enterprises and by mass works of penitentiary-labor institutions for the first six months of 1931 serves to show that the industrial and financial plan of the first six months has been underexecuted to a considerable degree, as may be seen from the following table:

Name of Kray (Oblast) board of management of places of confinement	Percentage of execution
	Plan for six months	Yearly plan
East Siberian Far Eastern Western Western West Siberian Uvanovo Industrial Leningrad Moscow City of Moscow Nizhny-Novgorod Lower Volga Northern North Caucasus Central Volga Ural Central Black Earth	79, 7 107, 3 122, 4 70, 4 74, 5 84, 6 84, 9 99, 0 79, 5 (1) 118, 9 94, 3 94, 0 139, 9	39. 2 73. 7 44. 6 30. 4 37. 4 41. 6 38. 9 45. 4 45. 4 31. 9 45. 5 6. 7

1 No full report.

2 No information.

Notwithstanding, the labor conditions which, in general, are favorable, the execution of the six months' industrial and financial plans failed at the majority of places of confinement.

If we examine the principal industries in the penitentiary-labor institutions, we shall find that they have executed the industrial and financial plan for the first six months as follows:

Name of industry	Percentage of execution
	6 months	Year
Woodworking Metal articles Leather and footwear	71. 7 85. 6 84. 1 70. 3 105. 3 109. 4 82. 2 ,135. 7	31. 6 38. 4 47. 6 19. 7 47. 8 58. 7 42. 4 61. 0
Leather and footwear  Silicate and nonmineral mining  Textile  Clothing and dresses
Food Paving (bridge building)

The principal industries (woodworking, silicate, metallurgical articles, leather and footwear) show a considerable underexecution of the industrial and financial plans also if examined from the point of view of various branches.

Refraining from analyzing the reasons for this underexecution until it receives the reports of the boards of management of places of confinement, the Chief Administration of Places of Confinement notes that the control figures for the first six months of 1931 have been underexecuted in a number of krays and oblasts and in the most important industries.

2. In accordance with the instructions of the State plan commission of the R. S. F. S. R. concerning the procedure to be followed in working out the quarterly plan for the fourth quarter of 1931, the Chief Administration of Places of Confinement

(1) To devote particular attention to the plan of the fourth quarter, introducing therein all corrections suggested by the course of execution of the industrial and financial plan for the course of execution of the industrial and financial plan for the first six months and for the third quarter, and to provide therein the maximum industrial tasks for enterprises producing building materials, for enterprises connected with the food industry, and for all enterprises of light industry (textile, sewing, clothing and dresses, leather and footwear, etc.) within the limits of the industrial and financial plan of these enterprises.

(2) To devote particular attention to the completion in the fourth quarter of all work of extension and reconstruction and of capital repairs in order to complete it by January 1, 1932

(3) To devote particular attention to questions connected with the organization and productivity of labor and to questions connected with the mechanization of industrial processes.

(4) To work out with particular care measures assuring fodder base to animal husbandry.

3. The Chief Administration of Places of Confinement proposes to the chiefs of the boards of management of places of confinement to devote the maximum of attention to the careful working out of plans for the fourth quarter on the basis of the above instructions, and to the necessity for filling the gaps which have occurred in the execution of the industrial and financial plan, and instructs them to forward to the Chief Administration of Places of Confinement on October 15, 1931, at the latest, a precise quarterly industrial and financial plan for the fourth quarter of Acting Director of the Chief Administration of Places of Confinement.

SEPTEMBER 14, 1931.

EXHIBIT No. 89

[Source: Archangel Prayda Severa No. 108, May 17, 1931, p. 3] SHAMEFUL SITUATION ON THE VAMSHERENGA RIVER [Translation of excerpts]

[Translation of excerpts]

Sherenga, 16. Fifteen thousand cubic meters of lumber on the Vamsherenga River, Rovdinsky Rayon (Rovdinskoe—Archangel Province, 450 km. from Archangel) is threatened with being stranded. * * *

* * Instead of the 185 laborers required for the river by the plan, only 50—6 per cent were working at the most necessary time during the first days. Due to laxity on the part of the village soviet, the laborers stayed home.

At the hottest time of the work Pyshkina, chairman of the village soviet, forwarded a list of 44 men to the person responsible for work on the river with the request to let them go home, supposedly for the purpose "of carrying out the sowing campaign." The raftsmen, having learned of the list, began deserting for home, and others followed their example.

And at the decisive fighting moment, when the water was in good condition, about 50 raftsmen left the river, thanks to the opportunistic chairman of the village soviet.

But this is not all * * Pyshkina, the chairman of the village soviet, entered kulak Kostyleva and lishenets Shylov upon the lists of organized brigades consisting of bedniaks and seredniaks lists of organized brigades consisting of bedniaks and seredniaks and working on the Vamsherenga River.

These brigade members listed by an opportunist from the village soviet for work of sluicing and floating lumber, worked the whole time, without set tasks, on an equal base with all raftsmen before the very eyes of Fedotov, who was responsible for work on the river, and of Pervushin, a representative of the rayon executive committee.

The list of persons whom the village soviet authorized to leave floating work for the sowing campaign included the name of Nesgovorov, a well-to-do-peasant.

Thus is the brigade method, the method of socialistic organization of raftsmen being shamefully distorted.

EXHIBIT No. 90

[Source: Moscow Za Industrializatsiu, No. 179, July 1, 1931] PRIVILEGES TO PEASANTS MIGRATING FOR SEASONAL WORK. RESOLUTION OF THE CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE AND SOVIET OF PEOPLE'S COMMISSARS OF THE U. S. S. R.

[Translation]

Moscow, Kremlin, June 30, 1931.—In order to induce members of collective farms, as well as individual farmers to migrate for seasonal work, the Central Executive Committee and Soviet of People's Commissars of the U.S. S. R. have resolved;

I. Privileges to members of collective farms migrating for seasonal work

The following privileges shall be established for members of collective farms who conclude contracts concerning work to be performed in the state industry (including titmber procurement, floating operations, peat production, fishing, etc.), transport, soviet farms, as well as in state construction enterprises, and construction enterprises of the consumers' and dwelling cooperatives:

1. Members of collective farms migrating for seasonal work shall be relieved from the payment of all kinds of contributions from their wages to the social funds of their collective farm.

2. In order to assure the participation of members of collective farms who migrate for seasonal work in the distribution of monetary income and income in kind of the collective farms, work must be given to them in preference to the other members of the farm, after their return from migratory work.

3. When distributing the harvest of the collective farm, a part of it must be reserved for the supply of the members who migrate for seasonal work, at prices and in quantities established for the other members of the collective farm who have consciously performed their duties.

4. Members of the families of migrants who stay in the collective farm are entitled to participate in the work the same as other members.

members.

If the family of a migrant is unable to account for a number of work days sufficient to assure its supply with the required quantity of food and forage, or in case there are no persons fit for work in the family, the management of the collective farm is bound to deliver to them against cash and at the usual prices, the same quantity of food and forage which is granted to the other conscientious members of the collective farm.

other conscientious members of the collective farm.

Note.—If the able-bodied members of the family of a migrant refuse to perform work in the collective farm, the family shall not enjoy this privilege. The migrant himself, however, enjoys the privilege set forth in article 3.

5. Migrants are entitled to participate in the distribution of dividends of a collective farm the same as other members, on the basis of the extent of their socialized property.

6. Members of the families of collective farmers who have migrated for seasonal work enjoy the same privileges regarding medical attention and supply of deficit goods, as the other members of the collective farm. Members of these families enjoy the preferential right of admission to schools, training courses, etc., in order to improve their qualification.

7. Members of the families of collective farmers who have migrated for seasonal work are entitled to the support of the collective farm on the same principles as the other members (supply of implements for the cultivation of vegetable gardens, supply of

- 8. Collective farmers who have migrated for seasonal work shall be exempt from payment of the agricultural tax assessed on the nonsocialized part of their holding, including the tax from non-agricultural occupations.
- 9. The contracts between economic organizations and collective farmers migrating for seasonal work must provide for the following: The supply of the migrant with—

  (a) Food and dwelling.

  (b) Payment to the migrant by the economic organizations of

- the actual traveling expenses from the place of residence to the place of work, and return (after expiration of the contract).
- (c) Payment to the migrant of a per diem allowance of 2.50 rubles while traveling.
- 10. The above-mentioned privileges shall apply to the following persons:
- (a) Collective farmers migrating for seasonal work according to contracts concluded with the respective economic organs.
  (b) Other members of collective farms, if they are able to present certificates from economic organs certifying that they have
- been working there.
- 11. Collective farmers migrating for seasonal work, who have left their work before the expiration of their contract, forfeit their rights to the above-mentioned privileges.
- II. Benefits to collective farms which conclude contracts with economic organs, undertaken to designate members for migratory work, or facilitating the recruitment of their members for such work

The following benefits shall accrue to collective farms which onclude contracts to designate migratory workmen or facilitate their recruitment for migratory work in state industry, transport, soviet farms, as well as in state construction enterprises, and construction organizations of the consumers' and dwelling cooperatives:

12. In the contracts concluded between economic organs and collective farms concerning the designation of workmen or concerning their recruitment, a special clause must be included establishing that the economic organs must grant special funds to the collective farms for the improvement of their production, according to the number of collective farmers who have signed contracts with economic organs for migratory seasonal work.

13. The People's Commissariat for Agriculture of the U. S. S. R. and the soviets of people's commissars of constituent republics are charged with supplying with agricultural machinery preferentially those collective farms which designate considerable numbers of collective farmers for seasonal migratory work.

14. The soviets of people's commissars of constituent republics are charged with extending to such collective farms preferential treatment when establishing schools and other cultural-educational institutions, crèches, children's homes, etc.

15. The consumers' cooperative system must establish privileges for collective farms which supply the largest number of members for seasonal migratory work, when appropriating funds and equipment for the organization of social-cultural institutions (dining rooms, etc.).

16. The above-mentioned privileges shall apply to those collective farms which assure the actual fulfillment of the contracts concluded with economic organs concerning the designation of laborers for seasonal migratory work or facilitating the recruitment of such laborers.

III. Privileges to individual farmers migrating for seasonal work

17. The agricultural tax assessed on the income of individual farmers derived from nonagricultural occupations shall be reduced by one-half for individual farmers migrating for seasonal work, who fulfill conscientiously their obligations to the economic

18. Individual farmers migrating for seasonal work shall be supplied with food and dwelling at the place of work and shall be paid their traveling expenses and granted daily allowances while traveling on the same basis as members of collective farms migrating for seasonal work. (Art. 9.)

IV. Measures concerning the organization of recruitment of seasonal migratory labor

- 19. When compiling their production plans the collective farms must register those of their members who are specialists in certain kinds of work (coal miners, peat workmen, joiners, carpenters, bricklayers, etc.). Those collective farmers must be given the opportunity by the collective farm to work in industry, transport, soviet farms, at structural work, and only a minimal number left for work on the collective farm.
- 20. Managements of collective farms must immediately issue certificates to collective farmers declaring their intention to migrate for seasonal work, showing that they are members of a collective farm.
- 21. Managements of collective farms shall be held responsible for detaining members who desire to migrate for seasonal work.

  Managements of collective farms are forbidden to recall their members from work before the expiration of the contract.

22. The Kolkhozcenter of the U.S.S.R. is instructed to issue within 10 days instructions to collective farms concerning the designation of workmen for seasonal migratory work, and concerning the active support of economic organs in the matter of recruiting labor, and in the struggle against the nonfulfillment of contracts by members of collective farms migrating for seasonal

V. Amendments in the legislation of the U.S.S.R.

23. The following amendments resulting from this resolution shall be made in the existing legislation of the U. S. S. R.:

(1) Article 26 of the Consolidated Agricultural Tax Law for 1931 (Collection of Laws of the U. S. S. R., 1931, No. 19, article 171) shall be supplemented by the following paragraph "d":

"d. The nonsocialized part of the property, including income from nonagricultural sources, of those members of collective farms who have obligated themselves to work in state industry (including timber procurement and floating work, peat production, etc.), transport, soviet farms, state construction enterprises, as well as construction establishments of the consumers' and dwelling co-operatives, shall be completely exempt from taxation. Members of collective farms who leave their work before the expiration of their contracts shall forfeit this privilege."

(2) The above-mentioned law shall be supplemented by article 64/1, reading as follows:

Privileges to persons migrating for seasonal work.

"64/1. In assessing the agricultural tax on the farmstead of an individual farmer migrating for seasonal work, who has concluded a contract for work in state industry (including timber procurement and floating operations, peat production, etc.), transport, soviet farms, state construction enterprises, as well as construction enterprises of the consumers' and dwelling cooperatives, his earnings from such work shall be assessed only at one-half of the scale stipulated in article 47. The migratory seasonal workman forfeits this right if he violates the contract concluded with the economic organ."

(3) The note to article 15 of the standard charter of an agricultural artel (Collection of Laws of the U. S. S. R., 1930, No. 24, article 255), shall read as follows:

"Note.—Of the amounts earned by members of the artel from seasonal migratory work, from 3 to 10 per cent shall be deducted for the common funds of the artel. The actual percentages shall be established by the artel or by the association of collective

"Those migratory workmen who have obligated themselves for work in state industry (including timber procurements and floating operations, peat production, etc.), transport, soviet farms, state construction enterprises, as well as in construction enterprises of consumers' and dwelling cooperatives, shall be relieved from the payment of these contributions. These members shall forfeit this privilege, however, if they leave the work before the expiration of the term provided in their contract."

M. KALININ,

President of the Central Executive

Committee of the U. S. S. R.

V. Molotov (Skriabin), President of the Soviet of People's Commissars of the U.S.S.R. A. ENUKIDZE, Secretary of the Central Executive Committee of the U.S.S.R.

EXHIBIT No. 91

[Source, Moscow Izvestia, No. 259, September 19, 1931, p. 4] RESOLUTION OF THE CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE AND SOVIET OF PEOPLE'S COMMISSARS PERMITTING ENTERPRISES, INSTITUTIONS, AND ORGANIZATIONS OF THE SOCIALIZED SECTOR TO HIRE WORKMEN AND EMPLOYEES WITHOUT APPLYING TO LABOR ORGANS

[Translation]

The Central Executive Committee and Soviet of People's Commissars of the U. S. S. R. have resolved:

1. To permit enterprises, institutions, and organizations of the socialized sector to hire workmen and employees in cities, as well as in rural districts directly without applying to labor organs.

2. To instruct the People's Commissariat for Labor of the U. S. S. R. to submit within 10 days to the Soviet of People's Commissars of the U. S. S. R. the alterations in the legislation of the U. S. S. P. Regulting from the recent that recent views of the U. S. S. P. The alterations in the legislation of the U.S.S.R. resulting from this resolution.

M. KALININ,
President of the Central Executive of the U.S.S.R. YA. RUDZUTAK, Vice President of the Soviet of People's Commissars of the U. S. S. R.

A. ENUKIDZE,
Secretary of the Central Executive
Committee of the U. S. S. R.

Moscow, Kremlin, September 13, 1931.

EXHIBIT No. 92

[Source: Sovetskaya Mustitsia (Soviet Justice), organ of the People's Commissariat of Justice of the R. S. F. S. R., April 10, 1931]

THE TRANSITION FROM COMPULSORY LABOR BY COURT SENTENCE TO VOLUNTARY LABOR—AT THE SECTOR OF LAW OF THE INSTITUTE OF SOVIET CONSTRUCTION AND LAW, A LECTURE BY COMMADE P. I. STUCHKA WAS HEARD, IN WHICH ONE OF THE MOST VITAL PROBLEMS OF CRIMINAL-LAW POLICY WAS TOUCHED UPON-WE PRINT HERE A SUMMARY OF THIS LECTURE

Introduction: The science of criminal law has for its object the fight to overcome the phenomenon designated by the historical name of "crime." It conducts this activity under the motto of "The struggle against crime." But the word "crime" is nothing but a pernicious survival of bourgeois science. While among the bourgeoisie it still had the practical significance of a naturalbourgeoisie it still had the practical significance of a natural-born trait (the anthropological or physiological school) or of a peculiar "condition" created by social environment (the socialist school) or of a "criminal type" of a psychological or, generally speaking, pathological kind, to us it represents a purely abstract conception, from which it is attempted to draw concrete conclusions (cf. the word "crime" in the Short Soviet Encyclopedia). To this corresponds another abstract term, measure of social protection, from which in turn the conception of crime is deduced in the opposite manner ("everything that entails punishment"). The abstract conception of crime is analogous to abstract legal rights. "The criminal," "the criminal world," etc., as a specific category or bourgeois concepts or, more exactly, products of the bourgeois state and law. In order to launch an effective struggle, it is necessary in the very first place to demolish this breeding place of abstract ideas and to formulate this problem concretely as a class struggle in some cases and as a means of introducing or consolidating a new cultural, social, and working discipline in other cases.

other cases.

1. To us, the problem of criminal-law policy has always been in a considerable measure a labor problem. To the bourgeoisie, deprivation of liberty, pure and simple, to which productive labor was sometimes added, or, more properly, tolerated, as it were by way of a supplement—had become an almost exclusive, or, at least, ideal "equivalent of recompense" or "punishment." Deprivation of liberty and senseless physical labor served the bourgeoisie at the same time as a means of isolation and intimidation, and, as the same time as a means of isolation and intimidation, and, as a result, a means of depriving the convict of his opportunity to commit further criminal acts, or of restricting it by physically or mentally crippling him (insanity, religious hypocrisy, etc.). Such a view was unacceptable to us in principle, in so far as the convicted did not belong to a class hostile to us, because our standpoint has been that of a utilization, and even further extension, of the labor of prisoners.

2. For this reason we attempted as far back as in 1918, when we took over from the old society the deprivation of liberty as a means of punishment, together with its jails, at once to shift the center of gravity to compulsory labor, which in our country obligatorily accompanies the confinement of an accused or a convicted individual. Basing ourselves upon the constitution then in force, under which labor duty was consistently introduced in our country ("he who does not labor shall not eat"), we naturally did not exempt from this rule the prisoners, and among them also did not exempt from this rule the prisoners, and among them also those awaiting trial.

3. At the same time, however, basing myself upon the preeminence of the labor principle, I introduced for the first time a special kind of "measure of social protection" (then still "punishment"—compulsory labor without confinement—organizing simultaneously on this principle, outside of the cities, farm colonies for compulsory labor without confinement, making, of course, a certain selection among those condemned to deprivation of liberty among whom no inclination to escape was presumed to exist.

4. However, compulsory labor without confinement met with a most hostile attitude: (a) among the labor unions, which had firmly adopted the traditional point of view of the trade-unions of capitalist society, opposed to the "competition" of "cheap" labor; (b) among the administrators, who failed to organize such labor properly, with the result that this measure actually turned labor; (b) among the administrators, who failed to organize such labor properly, with the result that this measure actually turned out to involve no punishment whatsoever; (c) among large strata of our public, who had inherited from the bourgeoisie the faith in prisons as a universal remedy, and who accordingly regarded every escape of a convict from work as serious harm. Theft and many other crimes were regarded as considerably less dangerous to society than escape from prison or from compulsory labor. Only through constant struggle has it been possible to retain compulsory labor without confinement in our system as a measure compulsory labor without confinement in our system as a measure compulsory labor without confinement in our system as a measure of social protection.

5. As a result we had a steadily mounting budget of expenditures on the execution of court sentences (reaching a maximum of 16,000,000 rubles for the R. S. F. S. R. in 1928). At the same time there was a chronic overcrowding of the prisons and the necessity for their purely mechanical unloading by means of general and specific amnesties.

of general and specific amnesties.

6. The triumph of industrialization, which is being inaugurated by the Soviet Government at an unprecedentedly rapid rate, alters the relationships also on this front, and the enormous demand for labor meets our policy of crime suppression, which aims to apply the labor principle in a more concrete manner to the utilization of the labor of prisoners for the general purposes of socialist upbuilding. But this requires at the same time a more strict division of the prisoners themselves according to the class principle, setting apart as a special group the incorrigible elements of a positively hostile class, who are to be subjected to a régime differing from that applied to the whole remaining mass; also, of violators of social discipline according to their qualifications, occupations, state of health, age, etc.

mass; also, of violators of social discipline according to their qualifications, occupations, state of health, age, etc.

7. The year 1930 was conspicuous for the fact that in the R. S. F. S. R. the inauguration of corrective-labor measures was decisively and concretely shifted to a paying basis. The budget for 1930 reduced this item to 10,000,000 rubles. For 1931 this appropriation disappeared entirely, for not only is the covering of all expenses expected but even a certain balance.

8. At the same time there has been allotted from the "revenue" of compulsory labor, in 1931, a credit of 1,000,000 rubles for turning the places where the juveniles are confined into model factory schools which are to train the confined juveniles as highly skilled factory workers. The same aim is pursued by the system of work for adult convicts in production at prisons. The necessity arises for utilizing technical skill of a criminal character for the purpose of rationalizing the convict's capacity for work and encouraging the corresponding technical inventive faculties. faculties.

9. The problem of unemployment in prison has been solved; there are no longer any unemployed excepting those unable to work either because they are too old or ill or "malicious" loafers or still awaiting trial and not bound to perform labor duty.

10. From these facts follow new problems:

(a) A fight against "malicious" unemployed in prisons;

(b) Elimination of invalids among the prisoners;

(c) Effective check-up of those temporarily incapacitated by illness;

(d) Drawing also those prisoners still awaiting trial into obligatory labor, but (1) regulating the so-called prevention of relations with the outside world (usually a purely fictitious matter in the ordinary houses of detention for prisoners awaiting trial and (2) working out a plan of compensation (at the expense of the state or of those responsible for the imprisonment) for those "innocently" convicted, compensating them ment) for those "innocently" convicted, compensating them also for unpaid labor at the house of detention.

11. The paying basis—this important problem which until now had prevented us from going deeper into the problem of reducing the number of "crimes"—has now been established. But there is the danger that this achieved object may turn into an end in itself, when the whole system of our social-protection measures, in so far as they are not aimed at the class enemy, has it for its object to transfer those brought to trial, and those convicted, to the general category of toilers, and after that to discover practical methods for obviating the necessity of resorting to such measures. Besides, there lurks a certain fictitiousness in the fact of the paying basis; it is done at the expense of compensation of losses for those who have suffered them, and in the very first place for the state.

12. The question arises: Is it "normal" that there should exist in our country, side by side, two categories of toilers, of whom the basic mass works voluntarily at socialist upbuilding, and—more broadly speaking—at production in general, and the others under compulsion, but for the same object? Is there no way of find-compulsion, but for the same object? Is there no way of finding that bridge which would enable the second group to join the basic one, freeing itself from measures of compulsion? This is the most important problem of the immediate future.

13. Our approach to this subject was usually either of a bourgeois-philanthropic character, i. e., a purely mechanical imitation of the bourgeoiste (e. g., the so-called "patronates" (semipublic societies for aid of released convicts) or naïve (simply to turn the "criminal," through improving his literacy, into an "honest" member of society), or Utopian (in an atmosphere of deprivation of liberty, to "correct" a person), and so forth.

The results of all these measures thus far have proved negligible, and this not only for lack of funds. It is necessary to find a new approach.

a new approach.

a new approach.

14. There is no doubt that the only solution can be to destroy the artificially instilled solidarity of the criminal elements—this coalition upon the platform of imprisonment shared in common—and that a naturally reliable means in this struggle may be the instilling of labor and class solidarity in the minds of convicted toilers. Already Marx and Engels had shown how painfully slow is the birth of the class consciousness of solidarity because "separate individuals forms a class contributed for the class consciousness of solidarity because "separate individuals forms a class contributed for the class consciousness of solidarity because "separate individuals forms a class contributed for the class consciousness of solidarity because "separate individuals forms a class contributed for the class consciousness of solidarity because "separate individuals forms a class contributed for the class consciousness of solidarity because "separate individuals forms a class contributed for the class consciousness of solidarity because "separate individuals forms a class contributed for the class consciousness of solidarity because "separate individuals forms a class contributed for the class consciousness of solidarity because "separate individuals forms a class contributed for the class contribu rate individuals form a class only in so far as they have to wage a common fight againt a certain social class; in all other things they face each other in hostility as competitors." But "a social they face each other in hostility as competitors." But "a social class becomes en entity existing independently of its constituent individuals, so that the latter find the conditions of their existence prearranged; the class prescribes their station in life, and their personal progress with it; it subjects them to itself. • • • This subjection of the individual to the class is at the same time turned into their subjection to all kinds of ideas * * *."
(Marx and Engels. See Arkhiv 1, p. 243.)
15. Instead of feeling aversion to the "criminal world" or of

15. Instead of feeling aversion to the "criminal world" or of being fascinated by it as by something revolutionary (recall the popularity of the play "In the Abyss," and its songs), it is necessary to approach the convicts in the most sober manner as ordinary people, in so far as they are not diseased. And this approach can be a class approach only.

It is necessary to enlist the public (the labor unions) for serious participation in the work among the imprisoned tollers and for their benefit suppressing the prejudice against them in the same way as the prejudice of the trade-unions of bourgeois society against "unaffiliated" unemployed. Labor-union methods alone can painlessly and successfully organize anew the transfer back from compulsory labor or again to the general community of toilers. The means are: Propaganda by the example, concrete assistance in the transfer, while discarding mere adaptations from bourgeois "science" and practice, e. g., the so-called progressive system of confinement, hated in the West because it places the "political prisoner" as an incorrigible outside the advantages of this system, if for no other reason.

16. Only after solving this problem shall we be able to put

16. Only after solving this problem shall we be able to put properly the question of preventive measures against the perpetration of crimes, in so far as they have not been due to class motives, and the question of the efficacy of social protection measures generally and of individual measures particularly; and all these questions, too, we must put in a new way.

The Canadian Government, relating to the question of goods manufactured or produced by forced labor, took direct and effective action, placing an embargo against certain soviet products affecting her internal affairs, issuing the following statement:

"The Government is convinced that there is forced labor in the cutting and transport of timber and in the mining of coal; that political prisoners are exploited; that the standard of living is political prisoners are exploited; that the standard of living is below any level conceived of in Canada; and that, broadly speaking, all employment is in control of the Communist Government, which regulates all conditions of work and seeks to impose its will upon the whole world.

"This is communism, its creeds and its fruits, which we as a country oppose and must refuse to support by interchange of trade."

trade.

We submit herewith articles and extracts from various publications, books, etc., with reference to the enforcement and interpre-tation of the laws, decrees, and statements hereinbefore sub-

[Birmingham Bureau of Research on Russian Economic Conditions, Russian Department, University of Birmingham] COMPULSORY LABOR IN THE U. S. S. R.

[Excerpt from Memorandum No. 1, May, 1931]

The question of compulsory labor in the U.S.S.R. has lately The question of compulsory labor in the U. S. R. has lately drawn upon itself a great deal of attention in the European and American press, and, as always happens, with burning questions of such a nature, it has become the subject of a large number of contradictory assertions and denials. Some of these statements, though issued from responsible quarters, are either based on insufficient information (Cf. Mr. Gillet's statement in the House of Commons on May 11, that "he had received information from all quarters on the question [compulsory labor] for the last 18 months and he still found it very difficult to know exactly the true position of Russia" (the Times, May 12, 1931)) or else contain incomprehensible inaccuracies.

Let us take one striking example. M. Molotov, the president

Let us take one striking example. M. Molotov, the president of the people's commissars, in his report to the Sixth Congress of Soviets, made the following statement on the imposition of compulsory labor in the Soviet Union. "In our lumbering districts which are now so much discussed abroad, we employ at present 1,134,000 persons, who all work in normal conditions of free labor; convict labor has nothing to do with the lumbering industry." Further on the report provides information on the use industry." Further on the report provides information on the use of convict labor on certain municipal and road works in the north where 60,000 convicts are employed, and M. Molotov states once more: "As you see, compulsory labor and convict labor have no relation with our lumbering industry, and with products manufactured for export. These facts can not be denied by those who are engaged in antisoviet campaigns generally, and in the antisoviet campaign against compulsory labor in particular." (Italics by the editor, Izvestia, March 2, 1931.)

are engaged in antisoviet campaigns generally, and in the antisoviet campaign against compulsory labor in particular." (Italics by the editor, Izvestia, March 2, 1931.)

However, it is sufficient to be acquainted with Soviet legal practice to deny this statement. Compulsory labor is used and to a very large extent in the lumbering industry. Thus, for instance, at its plenary sitting (minutes of the 18th of February, 1930) the supreme court of the R. S. S. F. R. dealt with the question of "increasing punishments for offenses connected with the lumbering industry and the rafting of timber" and passed the following resolution: "Those who deliberately refuse, or make attempts at refusing to fulfill their share in the work, the village assembly has undertaken in respect of hewing, carting, or shipping timber, are liable under article 16 of the Criminal Code."

"Whenever circumstances permit, the courts in passing judgment on the bednyaki and the serednyaki (the peasants are divided into three categories: The bednyaki, the serednyaki, and the kulaki, or poor, middle, and well-to-do peasants) must as a measure of social defense preferably impose a punishment of compulsory labor in such a way as to make the offenders available for work in the cutting and rafting of timber." (Italics by the editor, quoted from the Legal Practice of the R. S. S. F. R., supplement 2 of Sovietskaya Yustitsia, Moscow, 1930, No. 3.)

In a circular issued by the northern district court concerning lumbering work for the 1930-31 season we find the following order: "For the purpose of securing the execution of this year's lumbering program, and also for the purpose of giving the maximum assistance to the lumbering works, offenders of the enemy lumbering program, and also for the purpose of giving the maximum assistance to the lumbering works, offenders of the enemy class, the kulaki, who are accused of deliberately failing to fulfill their obligations in connection with the lumbering industry, shall be made liable under section 3 of article 61, of the criminal code. All those sentenced by the people's courts to compulsory labor shall be made to serve their punishment at a lumbering station. The District Court of Kom shall enforce the above regustation. The District Court of Rom shall enforce the above regulation in its own district, and furnish every 10 days, detailed schedules of the work done by the people's courts in connection with their assistance to the lumbering industry." (Italics by the editor; quoted from the Legal Practice of the R. S. S. F. R., Moscow, No. 17-18, 30-XII-30).

If the above regulations speak unequivocally of the use of compulsors labor for the autiting and rafting of timber the president pulsory labor for the cutting and rafting of timber, the president of the people's commissars could not have been ignorant of a practice known to every judge in the country. Thus, in forming our judgment on the question of the use of compulsory labor in the U. S. S. R., we shall have to sift most carefully any official dec-

From information provided by the legislation and the legal and administrative practice of Soviet Russia, we have established three principal categories of cases in which compulsory labor is used:

1. Direct compulsory labor inflicted by the courts and the various administrative bodies as a punishment for offenses.

2. Compulsory labor concealed under a cloak of imposed services

3. Indirect administrative compulsion to accept work, exercised through limitation in free choice of work, and restriction with regard to changing of occupation and the right to refuse work of a certain character, etc.

We will now examine each category.

I. DIRECT COMPULSORY LABOR

The criminal code of the R. S. S. F. R. divides compulsory labor into

(a) Compulsory labor with detention under guard.
(b) Compulsory labor without detention under guard.
Article 52 of the Correctional Labor Code of the R. S. S. F. R. runs as follows:

runs as follows:

"Work is obligatory for all able-bodied persons under arrest, and the administration of 'houses of detention' (a euphemistic designation of prisons, police stations, and other institutions where offenders are kept under arrest) shall take steps to provide all able-bodied convicts with such work." (Collection of codes of the R. S. S. F. R., Moscow, 1928, 4th official edition, p. 720. Cf. Russia, No. 1, 1931, Cmd., 3775, p. 61 and ff.)

This work shall be carried on in:

1. Houses of detention.

Houses of detention.
 Correctional-labor camps.

3. Labor colonies. (Agricultural, technical, and industrial.) (Arts. 46 and 62.)

For the purpose of achieving the greatest possible productivity of convict labor in the detention houses a system of remuneration by results and piecework will be adopted." (Art. 73.)

"The proceeds of convict work shall belong to houses of detention and shall be expended (1) for the organization of production, (2) for the purchase of raw material, (3) in payments for technical staff, (4) in remuneration to sentenced persons. * * The net profits derived by the houses of detention from the inmates' work will be distributed in the following manner: (a) 40 per cent toward expansion of production, (b) 12.5 per cent toward improvement of food supply, (c) 15 per cent as a contribution to the relief committee for the assistance of ex-offenders, (d) 20 per cent to the penitentiary fund of the supreme administration of houses of detention, and (e) 12.5 per cent to the fund of the inspectorate of the houses of detention, for the payment of bonuses to the organizing industrial staff." (Art. 79.)

The work is carried on both in the houses of detention and in other places. In the latter case the convicts have to stay out of other places. In the latter case the convicts have to stay out of prison for a considerable time, and a daily return to the house of detention is not required. (Cf. for details: Arts. 53-81 of the above code, pp. 720-724.)

As we see, the work of those detained in prisons is organized on a commercial basis for the purpose of making a profit to develop production.

develop production.

Compulsory labor without detention under guard is classified under three headings. They differ as to the limitation of personal freedom they impose on the person affected.

1. Compulsory labor carried out at the domicile of the person sentenced, and not exceeding a term of six months.

2. Compulsory labor carried out both at the domicile of the sentenced person or in provincial, district, or regional centers for a term exceeding six months.

term exceeding six months.

 Compulsory labor for wage earners who serve their term of compulsory work in the place of their employment, in which case their remuneration does not exceed the minimum wage fixed by the state for the locality. (The Labor Legislation of the U.S.S.R., by E. N. Danilov, Moscow, 1929, p. 202.)

The organization of compulsory labor without detention under guard is intrusted to a compulsory-labor bureau. (Ib., arts. 24 and 25 p. 203.)

and 25, p. 203.)

and 25, p. 203.)

"Whenever the Bureau of Compulsory Labor or its branches find it impossible to utilize the work of those lable to compulsory labor in their industrial establishments they shall transfer them to other establishments selected by agreement with the People's Commissars of Labor, or with its local branch offices." (The Correctional Labor Code of the R. S. S. F. R., arts. 28 and 29.)

"Persons who serve a sentence of compulsory labor without detention under guard, at their habitual place of employment, shall receive 50 per cent of their wages for the period of their sentence; the balance shall be paid to the Bureau of Compulsory Labor or its branches." (Art. 33.) "As a general rule, all persons serving sentences of compulsory labor except those who come under article 33, shall receive no remuneration for their work. Payment of wages to persons who are sentenced to compulsory labor ment of wages to persons who are sentenced to compulsory labor without detention under guard shall not exceed the minimum wage fixed by the government, and can only be allowed when the court sentence states that the person in question is without other means of subsistence. No compensation is paid for the use of the tools and implements of the person under sentence. If bednyaki and serednyaki provide their own livestock, a refund in accordance with a fixed scale will be allowed for the cost of fodder." (Labor Legislation of the U. S. S. R., art. 34, p. 205.)
"The profit accruing from the deductions made in the wages of "The profit accruing from the deductions made in the wages of persons sentenced to compulsory labor shall be distributed in the following manner at the end of every year: (a) 70 per cent for the extension of the Compulsory Labor Bureau and its branches, (b) 15 per cent to a relief fund for the assistance of exoffenders, (c) 10 per cent to the penitentiary fund of the Supreme Administration of Houses of Detention, (d) 5 per cent for bonuses to the members of the organizing and technical staff of the Compulsory Labor Bureau." (Labor Legislation of the U. S. S. R., art 36a.)

art. 36a.)
We thus see that compulsory labor without detention under guard may be applied to every branch of industrial and economic activity. A person sentenced to compulsory labor can be made to continue the work done before the imposition of compulsory labor, but for his work he will receive considerably less than normal pay, and is bound to give the use of his implements or his animals free of charge. Most of the net profit (70 per cent) received by undertakings working on compulsory labor is used for increasing the production of those undertakings.

The imposition of such compulsory labor without detention under guard, which is a peculiar feature of the Soviet legislative system, is very extensively used as a punishment by the criminal courts and by the administrative bodies of the Soviet State. Thus the criminal statistics of the U.S.S.R. for 1927 show that sentences of compulsory labor without detention under guard formed 21.2 per cent of the total number of sentences; 216,339 persons out of 1,020,469 were sentenced to compulsory labor with-persons out of 1,020,469 were sentenced to compulsory labor without being detained under guard. (Statisticheskoe Obozrenie, Moscow, 1930, Nos. 3-4, pp. 88, 94.)

Of the total number of administrative fines imposed during the first half of 1929, 7.7 per cent, or 114,765 persons, were fined with compulsory labor without detention under guard (Statisticheskoe Obozrenie, 1930, No. 5, pp. 101-104), and this form of compulsory labor has become especially widespread since 1928. In fact, on March 26, 1928, the All Russian Central Executive Committee and the Council of the People's Commissars of the R. S. S. F. R. issued an enactment defining their policy in respect of punishments and houses of detention and ordering a more extensive application of compulsory labor without detention under guard. The commissars of justice and the commissar of the interior were instructed to make effective use of compulsory labor as a means for repressing crime and to prepare a bill for future enactment. The guiding principles of the bill were to make compulsory labor free of cost to the state and remunerative to the state industries. (Ezhenedelnik Sovietskoy Yustitsii, Moscow, 1928, No. 14, pp. 417-418.)

In July, 1928, the People's Commissariat of Justice and the People's Commissariat of the Interior issued a circular to the effect that all sentences of imprisonment for a period not exceeding one year should be commuted to compulsory labor without dentention under guard. (Statisticheskoe Obozrenie, 1929, No. 5, p. 107.)

As a result of these enactments the provincial judges, when passing sentences, have almost consistently begun to impose compulsory labor instead of short-time detention under guard. (The Legal Practice of the R. S. S. F. R., 1930, No. 9, p. 2.)

It is to be regretted that no statistical data have been published regretions the extent of the reserved to the processive technique.

lished regarding the extent of the repressive measures taken by the criminal court. As to the administrative fines, the increase in the imposition of compulsory labor as a punishment is represented in the following table (first half year of 1927 equals 100):

	Adminis- trative fines	Compul- sory labor
First half year of 1927 Second half year of 1927 First half year of 1928 Second half year of 1928 First half year of 1928	100 115 138.6 138.5 148.6	100 114. 1 218. 5 248. 2 408. 6

We see that as compared to 1927 the total administrative fines increased by 48.6 per cent, while the corresponding increase in the imposition of compulsory labor amounted to over 300 per cent, the imposition of compulsory labor amounted to over 300 per cent, 1. e., was four times more frequent than in 1927. There are also indirect indications that the imposition of compulsory labor was considerably more frequent in cases dealt with by the criminal courts. (See Statisticheskoe Obozrenie, 1929, No. 5.)

In any case, in 1929 no fewer than 350,000 persons were sentenced to compulsory labor without being placed under guard, and together with those who were kept in the houses of detention (in the R. S. S. F. R. on January 1, 1929, there were 118,888 persons under arrest.—Statisticheskoe Obozrenie, 1929, No. 5, p. 105) about 450,000 to 500,000 persons served sentences of compulsors and the sentences of compulsors. 105), about 450,000 to 500,000 persons served sentences of compulsory labor in various agricultural settlements, factories, worknops, labor colonies, prisons, and deportation regions.

The draft of the New Criminal Code for the R. S. S. F. R., prepared in 1930, considers the imposition of compulsory labor as one of the fundamental and guiding principles of criminal law. In this code the forms of compulsory labor not connected with incarceration are worked out in much greater detail. (Draft of the New Criminal Code for the R. S. S. F. R., Moscow, 1930, arts.

The 1930 policy of wholesale collectivation is known to have caused a new flood of repressive measures (expulsion of kulaki, the persecution of those who failed in the sowing campaign or in the persecution of those who failed in the sowing campaign or in fulfilling their contracts or contractual agreements, etc.), and one may safely assert that at present the number of those who serve sentences of compulsory labor by far exceeds the figures of 1929. In a report read by Professor Auhagen in January, 1931, at the research institute of Prof. M. Sering, 500,000 persons were stated to be engaged in compulsory labor in the north of Russia and in Siberia. (Der Deutsche Forstwirt, No. 11, June

II. CONCEALED FORMS OF COMPULSORY LABOR

In accordance with the Labor Code of the R. S. S. F. R., the population may be called upon to render transport services and execute work either in cases of elemental calamities, with which the government and municipal bodies are unable to cope, or for the purpose of assisting the Red Army when under mobilization orders. (Soviet Labor Legislation, p. 384.) Nevertheless, the imposition of compulsory labor and transport services is given a much wider scope. The method practiced for enlarging the applicawider scope. The method practiced for enlarging the applica-tion of such compulsion assumes the form of the so-called self-imposition. Thus, for instance, a village assembly may by a tion of such compulsion assumes the form of the so-called self-imposition. Thus, for instance, a village assembly may by a majority of one vote undertake an obligation to carry on a certain amount of work, and even those who did not participate in passing the resolution are considered bound by the self-imposed obligation of the village assembly. The nature of the work carried out by such self-impositions is very varied, and frequently affects large groups of the population. We will only quote here a few instances of such self-imposition and of its consequences: During the spring sowing operations the plenary sittings of the supreme court of the R. S. S. F. R. issued a circular to the effect that a willful refusal by an individual peasant owner to perform his respective share in the sowing plan, self-imposed upon the village by the village assembly, would make him liable to punishment under article 61 of the Criminal Code. (The Legal Practice of the R. S. S. F. R., 1930, No. 2, p. 2.) As we have seen, the punishment provided for in that article is either compulsory labor, a money fine, or detention under guard. In support of the lumbering and rafting activities of the various state work, the plenary sitting of the supreme court of the R. S. S. F. R., again issued a similar circular making any willful refusal by an individual householder to do his full share of the self-imposed work a punishable offense under the same article 61 of the Criminal Code. (The Legal Practice of the R. S. S. F. R., 1930, No. 3, p. 1.)

These circulars further instruct the courts "to qualify the

1930, No. 3, p. 1.)

These circulars further instruct the courts "to qualify the offenses committed by the class enemy, the kulaki, in connections so as to make tion with the lumbering and rafting operations, so as to make them liable under section 3 of article 61 of the criminal code.

As regards the serednyaki, the bednyaki, and the members of the kolkhosy (collective agricultural units), who may be tried for any act hampering the lumbering operations or for a refusal to do their share in the work "self-imposed" by the village meeting, the punishment inflicted shall preferably be that of compulsory labor." (The Legal Practice of the R. S. F. R. 1930, Nos. 17 and 18, p. 19). At the same time the local courts are instructed to "cooperate in the fulfillment of the 'industrial' plans." See for instance the instructions concerning the "responsibility for acts hampering the execution of the indusrial' plans." See for instance the instructions concerning the "responsibility for acts hampering the execution of the industrial financial plan" or the regulations concerning the breaking of the contractual agreements contained in No. 16 of the Legal of the contractual agreements contained in No. 16 of the Legal Practice of the R. S. S. F. R. for 1930.

Lately these concealed forms of compulsory labor in various industrial operations have become very widespread. There are no statistical data covering these forms of compulsory labor, but as we have already stated, it is quite sufficient for the village meetings to undertake a certain "self-imposed" liability, to bind all householders, including those who did not participate in the assembly. As administrative pressure can be exercised in every sphere of Russian economic life, it is easy to influence village meetings into passing such "self-imposed" resolutions. The U. S. S. R. daily press is full of instances of such resolutions, which are in substance nothing but a concealed form of compulsory labor imposed on large numbers of persons belonging to the agricultural and industrial classes. agricultural and industrial classes.

III. INDIRECT COMPULSORY LABOR

Article 4 of the Labor Code of the R. S. S. F. R. reads as follows: "Any labor contract or agreement tending to impair the conditions of labor unfavorably as compared with the regulations of the present code shall be considered null and void." (Collection of Codes of the R. S. S. F. R., 275.) Nevertheless, a number of enactments issued lately contradict the spirit of the labor code and tend to lower the conditions of labor in the U. S. S. R. instance, the labor code decreed grants for the unemployed (art. 176), yet on October 11, 1930, the People's Commissariat for Labor issued an enactment suppressing these grants, and ordering the unemployed to take on work irrespective of their vocational qualifications; and no reasons excepting illness, confirmed by a qualifications; and no reasons excepting liness, confirmed by a hospital certificate, were to be considered valid for refusing to undertake work offered by the respective authorities. (Economicheskaya Zhisn, Moscow, October 11, 1930.) This enactment was issued at the time when there were over a million unemployed in the country. (For information on unemployment see the Bulletin No. 83 of Prof. S. N. Prokopovich, Russian Economic Service Progress 1930.) Work of all kinds was provided for the Service, Prague, 1930.) Work of all kinds was provided for the unemployed, and a refusal to accept such work deprived the person concerned of the right to obtain work for a period of six months. Subsequently, the Central Executive Committee of the Soviet and the Council of the People's Commissars, issued a further decree abrogating the article of the labor code which prohibited the compulsory transfer of a working man from one undertaking to another, or from one locality to another. (The Labor Code, art. 37.) On the contrary, the regulation of the Central Executive Committee submitted that: "In order to pro-Labor Code, art. 37.) On the contrary, the regulation of the Central Executive Committee submitted that: "In order to provide with skilled workmen and specialists the most important branches of the paid industries (the metal works, coal mines, chemical industries, machine industries, capital construction industries, transport undertaking, and electrical industries), as against the less important industries, the People's Commissariat of the U. S. S. R. be authorized, subject to approval by the council for labor and defense, to transfer such skilled workers and specialists from one undertaking to another, and from one locality to another; to preclude from receiving employment in transport and industrial undertakings those who maliciously disorganize the industrial operations by wilfully leaving the socialized industries without good cause; to take off the register for a period not exceeding six months persons registered in the labor exchanges, who refuse, without showing good cause, to accept work offered them within their vocational specialty." (Za Industrializatiu, Moscow, December 17, 1930.) In further development of this enactment the Labor Commissariat of the U.S.S.R. and the All-Russian Federation of Trades Union issued a regulation which runs as follows: "Persons who wilfully leave employment in the socialized industries without giving sufficient a regulation which runs as follows: "Persons who wiltuly leave employment in the socialized industries without giving sufficient and previous notice to the administration of the works, without waiting until they are replaced by others, or before the expiration of their agreement; persons who leave their works more than once within 12 months, even if their agreement was concluded for an indefinite period; persons who leave before the appointed time the work to which they were sent, after having been given the necessary training; persons who refuse to undertake a certain kind of work without showing good cause for so doing, are hereby declared malicious disorganizers of industry; such persons, when applying for work to the appropriate labor organization, shall be entered on a special register and shall not be admitted to industrial and transport undertakings for a period of six months." (Economicheskaya Zhisn, Moscow, January 20, 1931.)

Subsequently a new enactment was issued ordering the retransfer to the transport industry of all persons who, during the five preceding years had been engaged in railway work. (Economicheskaya Zhisn, Moscow, January 18, 1931.) Irrespective of their wishes all these persons were compelled to leave the work on which they were engaged, and return to work in the transport industry.

Lately a new enactment was promulgated ordering the issue of labor books to workmen; these books were to contain all the fines imposed upon the holder, the causes of any of his dismissals from employment, and the general characteristics of his work. (Za Industrializatiu, Moscow, February, 12, 1931.)

It should be added that recently it has become a widespread and frequently adopted practice to transfer skilled workmen from one sphere of work to another (see, for instance, the order of the People's Commissariats of Labor, Agriculture, and Finances. This order deals with the transfer of agricultural specialists to work connected with the spring-sowing campaign. All state, cooperative, and social undertakings are ordered to "send out within three days of the publication of the order 60 per cent of all agronomists, veterinary surgeons, zoology technicians, and agricultural engineers. These specialists are to be directed to take part in the engineers. These specialists are to be directed to take part in the sowing campaign and must remain engaged in the campaign for two months." (Socialisticheskoe Zemledelie, Moscow, February 12, 1931)), or, on the contrary, to attach skilled workmen permanently to one undertaking.

The outcome of this practice is that the conditions recently created in the U. S. S. R. restrict very considerably the free choice of work the right to dealine any kind or conditions.

of work, the right to decline any kind or conditions of work, the freedom to change work or even the right to accept work in any freedom to change work or even the right to accept work in any given locality. A refusal to proceed to work in another locality may not only bring about the loss of employment for a period of six months, but will also be entered in the labor book of the offender, who would thus be stigmatized as a "malicious disorganizer of industry" and made to feel the effects of such a stigma when compelled to apply for work again.

It is obvious that all the enactments enumerated have created conditions tantamount to indirect compulsion, for the population is offered work under conditions dictated by the state or its representative organizations. Economic compulsion is greatly engaged.

sentative organizations. Economic compulsion is greatly sentative organizations. Economic computation is greatly enhanced by administrative pressure.

From all these facts, we are entitled to conclude that compulsory labor is practiced in the U. S. S. R. in variegated form, and in many spheres of the economic life of the union. The extent to which compulsory labor is practiced is very considerable and affects hundreds of thousands of people. The use of compulsory labor is the direct conscious of people.

its direct, concealed, or indirect forms is not only a judicial measure of repression but also a policy intended to promote industrial and commercial development and profit.

[Reprinted from the London Times, May 18, 1931] THE RUSSIAN CONSCRIPTS-I. LABOR IN THE TIMBER CAMPS-MOBILIZATION LAWS

Publications which have been issued recently at Moscow show that five chief forms of labor are employed in the timber industry of Soviet Russia:

Labor of local peasants.
 Indentured labor raised on the countryside in other districts and other "republics."

3. Statute labor.

4. Labor of imprisoned convicts.

5. Labor of unimprisoned convicts.

The labor of the local population in the timber regions if performed according to the general plan of timber operations is called in the official Soviet terminology "self-obligations" or "self-imposed tasks."

The task which each village is called upon to impose on itself The task which each village is called upon to impose on itself is planned by the Soviet timber department and submitted to the general meeting of the respective villages for confirmation. Disfranchised members of the community (kulaks, priests, and other "class enemies") are not allowed to attend the meeting, and one-quarter of the total number of voters in the village is sufficient for a quorum. If fewer than half of the voters present abstain from raising their hands in objection, the task is formally recorded as voluntarily undertaken.

From this stage onward there is no preferes that the fulfill.

recorded as voluntarily undertaken.

From this stage onward there is no pretense that the fulfilment of the "self-obligation" is optional. It has acquired the force of Soviet law and is binding on all able-bodied members of the community, whether they be present at or absent from the meeting. The assembled peasants then distribute the different parts of the task among the individual villagers, and instructions issued from Moscow require them to bear heavily on the disfranchised or declassed members of the community.

THE PENALTIES

When the "self-imposed" system was first introduced the peasants showed insufficient zeal in fulfilling their tasks, and the Government ordered that article 61 of the criminal code should be applied to all defaulters. On February 15, 1930, Kalinin, as chairman of the All-Russian Central Executive Committee, issued chairman of the All-Russian Central Executive Committee, issued a new decree amplifying this article in its application to delin-quents on the "self-obligation front." Under this decree delin-quents who fail to fulfil "self-imposed" tasks undertaken for them by the village assembly shall be summarily fined up to five times the value of the work undone, and in default of payment their possessions shall be sold by auction. The horses and hauling equipment of kulaks may also be confiscated. If peasants resist in groups, the penalty is imprisonment with compulsory labor up to two years and the confiscation of the whole or part labor up to two years and the confiscation of the whole or part of their possessions, with or without subsequent banishment from the locality. These penalties had already been prescribed by the Criminal Code for offenses of general state importance; the new decree added that in the event of necessity the local authorities should proclaim paid compulsory service in the locality for hewing and floating timber, the wages paid to kulaks being less than those of other peasants. The local peasantry in the great timber regions are insufficient for carrying out the Soviet plan for felling and floating timber, especially since the introduction of the extended program for exporting timber according to the 5-year plan, which began its course on October 1, 1923. The import of more than a million indentured laborers for timber service in forests and on rivers has been planned for 1931, and, according to Pravda of January 10, 1931, the collective farms and the timber cooperative artels are to supply 900,000 of these, which is "half the total number of laborers required."

DRAFTS OF WOMEN

The raising of gangs of indentured lumbermen has been en-The raising of gangs of indentured full between has been entrusted exclusively to the Commissariat of Labor, and the rules are laid down in decrees published in "Izvestia of the People's Commissariat of Labor of the U. S. S. R." on January 25 (pp. 35, 36), February 10 (p. 52), and February 28 (p. 99), 1931. The Commissariat of Labor orders each collective farm to "detail" a definite number of laborers to be sent to one particular timber (or other) organization on conditions which have been arranged by the commissariat and the hiring organization. The management of each collective farm must sign a contract before a given date (this year March 10) binding itself to supply the number of men, women, and juveniles required. In order that the greatest number of men may be detached without injury to the agricul-tural plans, the commissariat has ordered all collective farms to replace men by women for farm work as much as possible. But women are drafted from the farms for hewing and floating timber, too. On March 15, 1931, Pravda wrote that the female gangs in the forest and on the rivers were giving better results than men in some places.

Peasants who have not been enrolled in collective farms are drafted into timber gangs by special recruiting agents sent to the villages by the Commissariat of Labor, and assisted by an "active group" of Young Communists which has been formed in each village to support the recruiting agent. Each village is ordered to detail a definite number of men, and these have nothing to do with drawing up the contract of service, as this has been concluded for them in advance by the Commissariat of Labor with the organization for which their labor is required. The "uncollectivized" peasant, like the peasant on a collective farm, can also not choose his master or the place where he is to be sent. These details have been arranged for him by the labor planning department, but the rules require that the recruiting agent shall inform him of the name of his master, the period for which he has been mobilized, and some other important conditions of the contract. The peasants are organized into gangs of 40, one of each gang is appointed "foreman" and is given a list of his men, a representative of the hiring organization meets the gangs and the recruiting agent at a "railway station, an embarcation wharf, or some other agent at a "failway station, an embarcation whart, or some other spot," and gives the recruiting agent a receipt, certifying that he has accepted delivery of the gangs, according to contract. If a recruiting agent fails to fulfill his "fixed task," he is prosecuted as a criminal. (Izvestia September 21 and October 6; Za Industrializatsiu, October 8, 1930.) Administrators, Judges, and public prosecutors are treated in the same way if they are slack in supporting ecutors are treated in the same way if they are slack in supporting recruiting agents. (Pravda, October 19, 1930.)

During the 1930 season, neither the system of "self-obligation" nor the employment of indentured laborers had worked efficiently, and they were supplemented by the proclamation of "compulsory-labor service" on a great scale. On September 14, 1930, the council of labor and defense ordered the formation of "extraordinary sixes" or "committees of six" in the timber regions. A "six" was attached to each local executive committee in order to proceed the fulfillment of the lumbering program. Commade S. I. mary sixes or committees of six in the timber regions. A "six" was attached to each local executive committee in order to enforce the fulfillment of the lumbering program. Comrade S. I. Syrtsoff, chairman of the Soviet of People's Commissars of the R. S. F. S. R., was endowed with special powers and placed in authority over these "sixes" (Pravda, September 19; Izvestia, October 6, 1930), and he ordered them to "go to the farthest limits in their measures" to stimulate the transport of timber to the ports for export. The council of labor and defense had ordered the introduction of compulsory service wherever necessary; Syrtsoff issued instructions to "mobilize" all able-bodied inhabitants of districts along streams for compulsory paid labor in order to get timber hauled and floated, and published in Izvestia the statement that he had called upon the O. G. P. U. (political police) to help accelerate the operations. At the same time the council of labor and defense ordered the cooperatives to issue no industrial products to any laborer who failed to complete the timber task set for him, but men who exceeded certain standards of work should be given sugar, makhorka, and some other goods as special bonuses to stimulate them and their fellows. (Izvestia, October 6, 1930.)

COMPULSORY SERVICE

COMPULSORY SERVICE

Compulsory labor for preparing and transporting timber had been officially introduced in many places before this general order was issued. In April the authorities at Archangel introduced compulsory lumber service in the Archangel region and the whole northern district where timber was being prepared for export and ordered the "mobilization of all political, economic, and cultural resources" to hurry on the work. In some parts of the Archangel region force was used to keep laborers at their timber tasks. (Izvestia, April 6 and 9, 1930.) In Karelia overtime service and work during holidays were admitted in July. At Tomsk class enemies were conscribed in August for compulsory labor in unloading trucks and barges. Instead of "sixes," the authorities in the Urals enforced compulsory timber service in September by means of "extraordinary trios" in districts where lumber work was backward. (Za Industrializatsiu, September 23, 1930.) At the same time compulsory labor was proclaimed at Stalingrad (Tsaritsyn) for unloading timber, but this was apparently timber for syn) for unloading timber, but this was apparently timber for domestic uses and not for export. On September 28 Izvestia published an official statement from Leningrad complaining that the introduction of compulsory labor had not removed the difficulties in transporting timber. On October 6 the same newspaper (the official organ of the Soviet Government) published a similar report of conditions at Petrozavodsk, and Pravda amplified it on October 9, complaining that insufficient compulsion was being applied to delinquents.

October 9, complaining that insufficient compulsion was being applied to delinquents.

Izvestia wrote on October 22 that after compulsory service had been introduced 720 peasants in one district even went voluntarily to serve in the timber-floating operations, but some "blockheads and wreckers" had been prosecuted for failing in their duty. An order was issued by the council of labor and defense that work should go on continuously day and night and that steamers should not cease their operations even during fog. The difficulties continued in the new year, and the Archangel correspondent of Izvestia (January 8, 1931) telegraphed that self-imposed tasks were "being enforced" badly by the local authorities. On January 16, 1931, Krasnaya Gazeta stated that an anonymous person at an election meeting in Leningrad dared to present a written question asking when forced labor would be abolished. Krasnaya Gazeta replied that the questioner himself deserved to be sent to forced labor for making such an inquiry which should be addressed to "Westminster Abbey" and not to a soviet election meeting. A poet was prosecuted as a counterrevolutionary and the whole staff of a journal dismissed at Smolensk in March for publishing a poem with uncomplimentary references to labor conditions in Soviet Russia. applied to delinquents.

DESERTERS

But it is not only peasant laborers who are pressed into lumbering service. The compulsory mobilization and dispatch of certain classes of employees to the timber and other "fronts" has certain classes of employees to the timber and other "fronts" has long become a regular practice, and men who evade this service are denounced and punished, their names being published in special "lists of deserters." Advertisements calling on all citizens to apprehend individual "runaways" are very frequent in the Soviet press. (See Za Industrializatsiu, September 25, 28, November 26, 1930; January 16, 18, 21, 24, 26, February 8, 11, 12, 17, 18, 19, 23, 28, March 13, 28, 1931; Trud, August 30; Izvestia, February 13.) The most recent general mobilization of specialists for compulsory timber service was carried out in February and March in fulfill.

The most recent general mobilization of specialists for compulsory timber service was carried out in February and March in fulfillment of a decree issued by the supreme economic council. In March the Commissariat of Labor ordered the institutions and enterprises of the state and the cooperatives to give up all men who had experience in floating, and these were compelled to leave their present positions to serve two months in floating timber.

On April 26, 1931, Izvestia published a decree by the Commissariat of Labor ordering all men who had worked on sea-going and river craft within the last 10 years to give up their occupations and go back to work permanently on the water. Organizations employing these men were instructed to dismiss them within five days after receipt of the orders of the commissariat and not to give them any "leaving grant," to which they are nominally entitled under article 89 of the "Labor Code" (the code is translated in Blue Book Cmd. 3775, p. 10). Retired captains of sea and river craft, engineers, mechanics, mates, boatswains, firemen, and others who had attempted to change their professions since 1921 were ordered to report themselves within five days and be allotted their posts under the water-transport department. since 1921 were ordered to report themselves within five days and be allotted their posts under the water-transport department. This decree was to be applied not only to the transport of timber but also to all overriver and sea freight. The decree adds that all who evade or abet others in evading this service are to be prosecuted in the ordinary way, which means that they are liable to fines, confiscation of possessions, imprisonment, and compulsory labor under article 61 of the Criminal Code.

It has been pointed out above that the withholding of "leaving grants" is a violation of the Soviet Labor Code, but it should be observed that the whole system of recruiting, mobilizing, and shunting labor about as practiced at present is illegal according to this code. Article 37 lays down that "a wage-earning or salaried employee shall not be transferred from one undertaking to to this code. Article 37 lays down that "a wage-earning or salaried employee shall not be transferred from one undertaking to another, or removed from one locality to another without his consent." The code is held up to the outside world as representing the conditions which govern labor in the Soviet Union; but if it has ever been anything more than a display card, it has long ceased to have any practical application inside the Soviet frontiers.

[Reprinted from the Times, May 19, 1931] II.—LIFE AT THE "FRONT"—SHORTAGE OF FOOD

According to the plans for this year, there are about 2,000,000 laborers working on the timber "front." Some 900,000 of these are drafted from collective farms and timber cooperative artels, and they are distributed over vast areas of forest, from Karelia to the far east of Siberia. The conditions under which the men live are not and can not be uniform. The plans drawn up at Moscow prescribe that the laborers be provided with barracks and food supplies, the feeding being on a collective basis as far as possible; but complaints continue to come from the forests that the lumber organizations neglect this part of the program. Barracks have been put up at the chief centers in some of the timracks have been put up at the chief centers in some of the tim-ber regions, but they are not sufficient to keep pace with the new

All through last winter demands kept pouring into the forests from Moscow for a greater output of marketable timber; consequently the living conditions of the lumbermen could not receive adequate attention, and they remained on the whole in the ceive adequate attention, and they remained on the whole in the same stage as they were at the beginning of last year. Volume I of "Lesa i Lesnaya Promyshlennost S. S. S. R." ("Forests and the Timber Industry of the U. S. S. R."), which was published at Leningrad in 1930, gave a brief description of conditions prevailing in the northern territory, where the chief industry is the preparation and transport of export timber.

When the men arrive at the place of work in the forests, no barracks or huts have been prepared for them; they have to construct log cabins for themselves and begin work as soon as possible. The cabins are mostly of two types, the only difference between them being in their height. One type is only 2 to 3 feet high, the other is high enough for a man to walk in "if he keeps his back bent." The walls consist of logs laid one upon another. One layer (sometimes two layers) of logs is put on the top of this in lieu of a roof. A log fire is kept burning in the middle of the hut, and the men lie around this fire in their spare time, their only bedding being straw and the brush of fir trees, which is strewn directly on the ground. Ekonomicheskaya Zhizn, in its issue for July 29, 1928, described these cabins as being like "the lairs in which wild bears live," except for the fire and the smoke, which filled them, as they had no chimneys. "Forests and the Timber Industry" explains further (p. 437) that occasionally, though rarely, one comes across cabins which have petroleum lamps, and that in 1928 the Comissariat of Labor had started making plans to improve living conditions, as these were the chief reason for the reluctance of peasants to enter the lumber industry. barracks or huts have been prepared for them; they have to con-

NEGLECTED PLANS

The complaints which continue to come from the forests show

The complaints which continue to come from the forests show that until the end of 1930 the plans of the commissariat had been neglected. On November 17, 1930, Pravda wrote:

"In a number of trusts the constructing of dwellings for timber laborers is quite unsatisfactory, the reason given being a shortage of constructors and—a shortage of building materials!"

On October 24, 1930, Izvestia had state of that in the Komi region of the plant of the complex of the construction of the complex of the co many responsible timber officials did not even know that there were any plans for constructing dwellings, that only 58 forest cabins had been constructed instead of the 758 which were shown in the plans. These are not isolated complaints, but taken from great number which have been received from all of the timber districts. On October 7 Izvestia stated that no building of barracks for hewers and haulers was in progress in Karelia; on September 17, 1930, Za Industrializatsiu explained that laborers abandoned work at Archangel chiefly on account of bad living conditions; Pravda stated on November 17, 1930, that wherever barracks might be found in the Khabarovsk region, it was impossible to live in them.

The maintenance of food supplies in the lumber regions during the last two years has been a problem with which the Soviet au-thorities have found great difficulty in coping. The cooperatives and the Commissariat of Trade in charge of this department have time and again been the subject of special decrees instructing them to adopt heroic measures and throw great quantities of food and fodder into the lumbering centers. Adequate consignments have figured in the programs and have, to a great extent, been dispatched to their northern destinations, but the chief difficulty has been the distributing of supplies among the far-flung localities and the prevention of pilfering on the way.

PRESCRIBED RATIONS

The daily rations prescribed by the Commissariat of Trade were:

For timber hewers: 1 kilo flour, 150 grammes groats. For timber haulers: 600 grammes flour, 150 grammes groats.

horses: 600 grammes oats.

In districts where lower standards had been established, these were to remain in force, but in no districts should the prescribed limits be exceeded. This does not mean that in all districts the men actually received flour and groats. In some localities they remen actually received flour and groats. In some localities they received corresponding quantities of bread; at others they had the option of taking different products or taking their meals at collective eating houses, organized by the authorities; but this option could obviously not be general, in view of the fact that a large proportion of the lumbermen were employed in remote places where no special facilities for feeding existed. Supplies were maintained satisfactorily in some regions, but in many places they were very precarious. Forests and the Timber Industry, which has already been quoted, says that men in the forest suffer very much from bad supplies of water, being obliged to drink ground water and in very extreme cases to use thawed drink ground water and in very extreme cases to use thawed snow. Epidemics of stomach illnesses have in some cases been caused by the bad supplies of water.

At the end of February (February 25), 1930, Izvestia wrote that the rations of free lumbermen in the Urals were not so good as received by convict lumbermen working at the same place; and they were obliged to herd together in filthy barracks, while the 10,000 convicts employed in lumbering by the same organithe 10,000 convicts employed in lumbering by the same organization had quarters which were comparatively far superior. In August the Commissariat of Labor ordered an investigation of what had been done by the different organizations for the housing, collective feeding, and bathing of timber hewers. Investigations of this nature appear in the program from time to time, but if they are carried out, the results are not, as a rule, made public. Complaints were published in October that the feeding of lumbermen in Karelia was neglected. On November 17, 1930, Pravda gave a general description of conditions in the timber industry, pointing out that the organization of food supplies was lame. The Commissariat of Trade, the cooperatives, and the

ame. The Commissariat of Trade, the cooperatives, and the grain department contented themselves with planning and distributing foodstuffs on paper, but did not see that the consignments really reached their destinations as planned.

There are no signs that the authorities are overcoming the difficulties of feeding lumbermen regularly. On January 8, 1931, Izvestia wrote that in one part of the Nizhni Novgorod territory "the supplies of the timber hewers are in an abominable state. Symetimes there are not even the most ovaluate results. Sometimes there are not even the most ordinary products. As to cultural service, this exists exclusively on paper." On March 7, 1931, Izvestia stated that in the northern territory (including Archangel) the arrangements for collective feeding were most un-satisfactory, and the people who were fed on this system found that they would do better if they could take their rations of products and make their own arrangements for cooking them. In the middle of April the Central Control Commission and the Workmen and Peasants' Inspectorate considered the report of the bureau of complaints, and came to the conclusion that the arrangements for feeding men engaged in floating timber had worked out badly.

BONUSES

On September 13, 1930, Izvestia wrote that in Karelia every manager of the floating operations owed the laborers under him some tens of thousands of rubles. Za Industrializatsiu published a similar complaint in regard to the Vyatka region a fortnight later, stating that the debt to lumbermen had become enormous, and they were deserting the floating operations. Syrtsoff, who was empowered to carry out a shock campaign in all the important timber regions, gave orders that men should be "bound to their posts" and induced to remain there and work harder by the imtimber regions, gave orders that men should be "bound to their posts" and induced to remain there and work harder by the immediate introduction of a system of bonuses, in which crews and captains of river craft should also be entitled to share. At first sugar, makhorka, and other articles of everyday consumption were offered, but a few weeks later the Commissariats of Trade and Labor issued joint instructions that henceforth bonuses should not consist of bread, fodder, groats, sugar, tea, fats, fish, meat, vegetables, makhorka, or soap, but clothing should be given instead. The reason why the giving of foodstuffs and soap was stopped is not explained. The value of bonuses should be calculated according to the amount by which a laborer exceeded his quota of work, and should range from 2 to 16 per cent of the recipient's wages. The instructions forbade the giving of bonuses to convicts engaged in lumber work. (Pravda, November 13, 1930.) During the last few months the Soviet press has published a great number of testimonials, ostensibly sent to the newspaper offices or given to correspondents by individuals and organizations engaged in preparing and transporting timber, certifying that the conditions in which they work are satisfactory and promising to respond to accusations of compulsory labor and other slanders circulated abroad by exerting themselves to the utmost to produce still more timber and fulfill the 5-year plan. Some of these testimonials may be genuine, but it is quite certain that none but favorable testimonials could be sent abroad legally or published in the Soviet Union.

There is no real evidence that the living conditions of lumbermen have improved since last year, when the official Soviet press published the descriptions cited above. As late as March 7 this year Izvestia published a general article on conditions in the lumber industry under the heading "Alarm in the Forest," and this year Izvestia published a general article on conditions in the lumber industry under the heading "Alarm in the Forest," and although the language is more guarded than that of earlier descriptions and the kulak is blamed for conspiring with foreign enemies to create disorder in the timber industry, the unwillingness of laborers to serve in the lumber industry is admitted. Izvestia says that although the advantages offered to the backward strata of the peasantry are quite obvious, these listen to cunning antisoviet agitation and will not hurry into the forest. The article explains that the timber trusts are themselves largely to blame for the slow development of operations, especially in the northern territory, because they keep men at work for months before informing them of the conditions of payment for their work, and have not yet organized a satisfactory system of feeding them.

[Reprinted from the London Times, May 20, 1931] III. COLONIES OF CONVICTS-CLASS-WAR COURTS

According to the new University Course for students of penitentiary-labor justice in the Soviet Union, published at Moscow this spring, the number of special convict colonies for felling and hewing timber has increased threefold since 1929, when all prisoners serving periods of more than three years' confinement were transferred to the O. G. P. U. Before September, 1929, there were only six of these convict timber colonies, but since 1929 the number has risen to 19. The University Course (p. 90) explains that all prisoners who are not employed within the walls of places of confinement are taken out to the places of mass labor, where they are known as a labor colony. Volume 8 of the Small Soviet Encyclopedia, which has been published this year, describes the Encyclopedia, which has been published this year, describes the labor colonies under the new system as follows:

"Penitentiary-labor colonies are established with a semifree régime. In their interior arrangement they resemble economic organizations. Labor colonies, which facilitate the utilization of the labor of prisoners and the instilling into them of the habits of labor, are becoming the fundamental type of prison during the reconstructive period. Penitentiary colonies are of two types, the open and the closed. Open labor colonies are organized chiefly beyond the towns (for agriculture, road making, timber hewing, peat cutting, etc.). Closed penitentiary colonies are transforma-tions of the prison buildings and isolators, which are best adapted for factory production."

Besides these 19 timber colonies there were 142 convict state farms in 1928, cultivating over 60,000 acres of arable land, and, farms in 1928, cultivating over 60,000 acres of arable land, and, although no figures are available to show the number of convict farms to-day, they are officially described as "increasing from year to year." There are 26 "manufacturing convict colonies," too.

When the prison reform was carried out in 1929, Krylenko, the public prosecutor, explained that the object of organizing the new colonies or convict camps was to free town prisons and make prison establishments pay their own way, as the camps would have to exist entirely on their own earnings, and thus bring about an enormous saving for the State budget. A start was to be made he said by immediately transferring about 30,000 prison. be made, he said, by immediately transferring about 30,000 prisoners to the camps of the O. G. P. U.

PROFITS OF EXPLOITATION

The University Course says the change of policy has been very useful in diverting prisoners to productive work just at the time when all financial resources had to be mobilized for the 5-year plan; and the reformed places of confinement have justified the hopes which were then raised, for, although total figures are not available for last year, the balance sheets of seven of them situated near Moscow show a net profit of more than 2,500,000 rubles. But the profits would have been still greater if the class war in the villages last year had not borne heavily on the prisons by increasing the number of inmates, who, though they had not yet been organized for work, had nevertheless to be maintained. maintained of the O. G. P. U. are officially "isolated from The camps society," and the conditions in them are not discussed or de-scribed, as a rule, in the ordinary Soviet press. Izvestia men-tioned 10,000 convicts as working for the timber industry in the Ural forests in February last year, and complained that they had better housing and feeding conditions than freemen lumberers working at the same place. Prayda, on November 13, 1930, published in outline a decree issued at Moscow, in which prison laborers are referred to as working in the lumber industry.

prison laborers are referred to as working in the lumber industry. The convicts are employed under contracts concluded directly by the O. G. P. U. and the timber organizations on the basis of article 78 of the Penitentiary Labor Code of the R. S. F. S. R.

This code lays down rules for the employment of persons sentenced after a hearing in the court, or summarily by the administrative authorities, to compulsory labor without imprisonment. This form of punishment may legally be inflicted for a period not exceeding one year. Article 34 of the code stipulates that "as a rule" no wages shall be paid for this labor, an exception being made if delinquents are allowed to work out their sentences at the places where they are ordinarily employed: but the organiat the places where they are ordinarily employed; but the organizations for which unimprisoned convicts work must pay an amount equivalent to what their wages would be into a special fund to be used for the extension of forced-labor workshops and

ORDERS TO THE JUDGES

The judges and the whole machinery for administering justice in the timber regions have received direct instructions to demonstrate their efficiency in the production of this class of labor for felling and hewing timber. Sudebnaya Praktika (Court Practice), the official periodical journal edited by P. I. Stuchka, president of the Supreme Court of the R. S. F. S. R., published on December 30, 1930, instructions to local judges, prosecutors, and court officials of the northern territory (the most important region for export timber, comprising almost the whole of the former Provinces and districts of Archangel, Vologda, Vyatka, North Dvina, and a part of Komi). They are ordered to make the fulfillment of the timber program their first care, to make themselves "champlons on the lumber front," and to use the courts as much as possible to stimulate the zeal of lumbermen. The courts must prosecute the campaign by means of fierce and crushing war against the kulak and strict adherence to the class line when dealing their blows. But they must also bring judicial pressure The judges and the whole machinery for administering justice dealing their blows. But they must also bring judicial pressure to bear on the middle and poor peasants, and their pronounce-ments must be instruments for mobilizing labor man power to ments must be instruments for mobilizing labor man power to fulfill the lumber program.

Every judge is ordered to act quickly and in harmony with the present policy of the Communist Party, to bind himself closely to the timber industry, and to keep in the front ranks of the fighters for timber. The court must direct and control the whole lumbering campaign, must "make timely discoveries" of undermining activities by the kulaks, wreckers, and opportunists, and make them feel "the sharp edge of proletarian judicial repression." Each representative of the court shall be personally responsible for the success of lumbering operations in the districts placed under his direct supervision. The court shall "show no mercy," and all cases not specified in the instructions shall be qualified under article 58, paragraphs 7, 8, and 10, of the Chiminal Code (where the penalty prescribed is death by shooting). The court shall force peasants to fulfill the "self-imposed" tasks undertaken for them by the village assemblies, and in its decisions shall give preference to the sentence of compulsory labor, to be served in all cases in the lumbering operations.

The instructions are wound up with a few directions to the

The instructions are wound up with a few directions to the local courts to send in reports once every 10 days, explaining what political work the court has done among lumbermen, how the judges are waging class warfare, how many times each judge has gone into the forest personally, how many demonstration trials have been arranged, how many kulaks, other peasants, and officials have been prosecuted in connection with their lumber work, etc

Although these instructions were not published until December 30, they were sent to the local officials in October, 1930, for immediate application. On January 10, 1931, a circular was published, which Krylenko, as deputy commissar of justice of the R. S. F. S. R., had sent to all prosecutors in the Republic, urging them to stimulate lumber operations by immediately prosecuting all persons who had failed to carry out the Government's instructions for the proguragent of laborers and teams to work in the tions for the procurement of laborers and teams to work in the forests, as the highest administrative officials in each timber region were to be held personally responsible for the successful recruiting and delivery of man power, and cases were to be hurried through the courts as fast as possible.

THE PURGE

The number of persons administratively condemned to labor in the forests was augmented in December and January by the sifting of allen elements from Soviet factories and the excluding of all disfranchised persons from employment in other forms of labor. The sifting campaign was explained in Trud, of December 6, 1930. Special committees of five were appointed at all factories and enterprises to examine the workmen and employees occupied there. Persons who, when under examination, manifested that their mentality was "alien to the working class" were enrolled in manuallabor gangs and sent to "hew timber, cut peat, etc." The examination began with all the persons who had for the first time obtained employment in Soviet industry during the preceding three years, and 100 of the biggest enterprises were selected to start the years, and 100 of the biggest enterprises were selected to start the experiment. When these were finished another batch would be taken, until the whole of the Soviet industrial and other enterprises were purged. Whether the sifting has been completed has not yet been made known.

On December 23, 1930, the Commissariat of Labor decreed that On December 23, 1930, the Commissariat of Labor decreed that no disfranchised person nor any person dismissed from employment and put on the list of "first category dismissals" should be given employment except in manual-labor gangs for "hewing timber, lumber work in the forests, floating timber, procuring peat, loading and unloading freight, combating snowdrifts, etc. These persons might refuse the work offered, but article 4 of the decree instructs that they be then struck off the register and not be eligible for any work at all for the period of one year. It appears only fair to include this class of unfortunates among the forced laborers, although official Soviet terminology describes them as free and their service as voluntary. In the villages, the counteras free and their service as voluntary. In the villages, the counterpart of these town-dwellers is the kulak class of peasants. There is no satisfactory definition to explain what a kulak is at the present time, and the standards by which a man may be relegated to this class are by no means fixed. One who has been officially dubbed a kulak is an outcast from society, and the law appears to afford him no protection at all. He may not save himself even by pooling his possessions with his fellow peasants and joining a collective farm. His goods are confiscated and he is banished to the north or to some part of Siberia. But he remains an outcast even there. Administrators who show symptoms of mercy for this quarry, which the Government continually orders them to bait, are themselves prosecuted as criminals. In Pravda of October 19, Ekonomicheskaya Zhisn of October 24, 1930, and Izvestia of January 8, 1931, complaints appear from the timber regions that officials are too gentle with kulak lumbermen, and are consequently being prosecuted.

cials are too gentie with kuiak lumbernien, and are consequently being prosecuted.

On February 18, 1931, Trud admitted in a leading article that the element of cruelty against sections of the community was necessary under the Soviet system, but the Soviet Government acted with "exceptional mildness" in sending their class enemies, the kulaki, to lumber work instead of killing them. No records are available to show the death rate among the kulaki deported to the timber regions from the temperate parts of central and courts. Puesta but it must be appallingly high: and it is certain south Russia, but it must be appallingly high; and it is certain that only a small proportion can survive the hardships to which they are admittedly subjected by the Soviet authorities and the cruel weather of the north.

It should be borne in mind that all the information in Soviet newspapers and books passes through official channels before reaching the press, and nothing can be printed without official sanction. The publications cited above are all the official organs of one or another of the Soviet Government departments or the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, and the citations have, therefore, the weight of official documents.

[Leading article-reprinted from the Times, May 20, 1931] THE RUSSIAN DANGER

In another column of this page is printed the third and last of a series of articles on the Russian conscripts, a dispassionate attempt to discover the truth about conditions in the Russian attempt to discover the truth about conditions in the Russian timber camps, so far as that truth is revealed in the official decrees of the Soviet Government and in the Russian press. As nothing can be published in Russia without official sanction, all the information used in these articles may be regarded as official. No use has been made of affidavits from escaped prisoners or of any source that has not the imprimatur of the Soviet authorities. No attempt is made in them to draw inferences or to pass judgment. They merely set out the facts, not as they are seen by the hapless convicts and so-called free laborers sent to hew and transport timber for the foreign markets, but just as they are described by the Soviet authorities themselves when they are addescribed by the Soviet authorities themselves when they are addressing their own people—not, of course, when they are talking propaganda for export. Even so, the conviction they carry is inevitable, except to those who are firmly resolved to keep the wool pulled over their own eyes, that the conditions are deplorable—such, in fact, as would not be tolerated for a day by any civilized people, and that a deep discredit rests on any country which encourages an industry carried on with so much cruelty its products naturally are cheaper than those of its competitors. These three articles deal exclusively with labor conditions in These three articles deal exclusively with labor conditions in the lumber trade, but it is a fair assumption from them that the same ruthless organization is characteristic of the whole campaign to carry out the 5-year plan. Only a people of whom the masses are too ignorant and too disorganized to offer any resistance, and who have through long generations become callous to suffering and oppression, would endure such dragooning. If it can go on enduring, the small but enthusiastic and well-disciplined minority which controls every lever of power in Russia will succeed in its ambition to create a huge industrialized slave will succeed in its ambition to create a huge industrialized slave state, monopolizing the whole production, trade, and industry of nearly 150,000,000 of people. The creation of such a huge monopoly under a single centralized direction will confront the rest of the world—organized as it is on the basis of free labor, free exchange, and free competition—with problems for which no solution is yet visible, but for which a solution will have to be found if a great catastrophe is to be avoided. If the directors of this monopoly were inspired by the most benevolent intentions toward the rest of the world, it would still be impossible to watch the growth of their power without the greatest anxiety; but every student of their utterances in their own press—they naturally use a different language when they are negotiating with foreigners for credits and other concessions—and every student of the activities of the Comintern and the Profintern knows that they are animated by an implacable hatred and a fierce desire to rethe activities of the Comintern and the Profintern knows that they are animated by an implacable hatred and a fierce desire to reproduce in other countries the horrors and the oppression they have inflicted upon their own. Anxiety can only be deepened by the weak complacency with which foreign governments, bankers, industrialists, and traders allow the Soviet organization to use them for its own purposes and to play them off one against the other. In that respect our own Government have played, perhaps, the most pittable rôle of all.

In Monday's debate Mr. MacDonald proudly described himself

the most pitiable rôle of all.

In Monday's debate Mr. MacDonald proudly described himself as a "realist" who "faced the facts," but only succeeded in exhibiting himself as a victim of weak self-delusion. His whole speech was quite unworthy of the occasion. Opening with a cheap and foolish gibe at the Times news service in Riga, which, with consistent fidelity, transmits to London the information published in the Russian press, he devoted practically the whole of the rest of his time to an elaborate tu quoque, arguing that in his time at the foreign office Sir Austen Chamberlain had been just as at the foreign office Sir Austen Chamberlain had been just as patient with breaches of Russian engagements as the present Government have been. He is evidently not a reader of the Krasny International Profsoyuzov, the official organ of the executive bureau of the Profintern, the Red Trade Union International, or he reau of the Profintern, the Red Trade Union International, or he would not have ventured to challenge the accuracy or the fairness of our Riga correspondent. And the parallel with Sir Austen Chamberlain's patient handling of Soviet provocations could only have been intended to elude the point of the indictment. Neither Sir Austen nor Mr. Baldwin ever gave the House of Commons the explicit pledges which were given by Mr. MacDonald and Mr. Henderson when they resumed relations with Russia. The complaint explicit pledges which were given by Mr. MacDonald and Mr. Henderson when they resumed relations with Russia. The complaint is that, having given those pledges, either light-heartedly or victims of the self-delusion to which they fall victims in all their dealings with Russia, they have since made no attempt to carry them out. It is true they are in what is for them a very difficult position, being forced to choose between breaking the promises they gave in the most emphatic terms to our own country and making it plain to Moscow that the Comintern and similar organizations must cease their anti-British activities if relations are to continue. This, however, they have not the moral courage to do. The Soviet diplomatists, having thoroughly bamboozled them during the negotiations and having treated them with open contempt ever since, have now established over them a moral ascendancy which they are incapable of breaking. It is not as if they had no means of bringing pressure to bear. Quite apart from the worthless pledges which Mr. Henderson believed himself to have extracted from the Soviet Government, they have other weapons in their armory. But they are afraid to use them and prefer to allow their pledge to the house to remain a dead letter. More than that, they persist in guaranteeing credits, already amounting to several millions of pounds, to finance the 5-year plan, and thus put more power into the hands of those who are openly working for their overthrow and for the destruction of the British Empire.

[Bulletin issued by International Entente against the Third International, Geneva, Switzerland]

FORCED LABOR ESTABLISHED BY LEGISLATION IN THE U. S. S. R. FOR THE EXECUTION OF THE 5-YEAR PLAN

The difference between free labor and forced labor may be

"In free labor the worker has the right to choose the kind of work and the category of workers in the factory to which he will belong; he can discuss the amount of his wages and the terms and conditions of his work, either individually or through his trade-union; he is free to choose his house and where he will live; he has right of redress before the courts against his employer and the right to strike. He spends his wages as he pleases.

"We are quite aware that, as in the case of all liberties and human rights, the above liberties and rights are not without exceptions, but they incontestably exist. If they are suppressed, work ceases to be free and becomes forced labor, of which the following are the characteristics:

following are the characteristics:

"(1) There is no free market for labor.

"(2) The employer alone has the absolute right to choose the kind of work, the category of workers, and the factory in which the worker is to be engaged.

"(3) The employer fixes the place of residence and the quarters.

"(4) If the worker refuses to submit, the penalty is loss of work and consequently of wages.

"(6) The right to strike is refused.

"(7) The worker enjoys no trade-union protection.

"(8) The employer fixes unilaterally and without appeal the amount of the wages and the terms and conditions of work.

"(9) The worker can only procure the food and clothing which he needs for himself and his family by means of cards received from the employer.

from the employer.
"(10) The worker enjoys no rights."

We shall show that this régime of forced labor has just been set up in the U.S. S. R. by the most recent legislation.

For this purpose we will take one by one the conditions which determine the character of forced labor and will set down below each the text of the Soviet laws.

These texts are mainly:

The decree of the central executive committee of the council of people's commissars of the U. S. S. R. of December 15, 1930, published in the Pravda of December 17, 1930. Our reference will indicate this as the decree.

The order of the Labor Commissariat of the U. S. S. R., No. 374, of December 23, 1930, on the mode of registering and sending to work persons in search of employment, published in Isvestia of December 29, 1930. We shall call this the order in our references.

(1) THERE IS NO FREE LABOR MARKET IN THE U.S. S. R.

"Registration of persons in search of work. May be registered at the direction of cadres; all members of trade-unions and 18 categories of persons enjoying electoral rights." (Order, sec. 1.) Other persons can not find work. In fact:

"All the undertakings, the economic establishments, and individuals are compelled only to engage workers and officials through the labor organs, with the exception of cases mentioned in the present regulations." (Decree, sec. 2.)

The exceptions referred to only prove the rule, for they concern only a very small minority of workers in industry, commerce, and administration, a minority purposely circumscribed and subject to special regulations.

(2) THE EMPLOYER, THAT IS TO SAY, THE STATE, ALONE HAS THE EIGHT TO CHOOSE THE KIND OF WORK, THE CATEGORY OF WORKERS, AND THE FACTORY IN WHICH THE WORKER WILL BE ENGAGED

He proceeds to this by means of the registration of which we have just spoken.

"The organs of production will assure the rational distribution of labor within the limits laid down by the corresponding organs of the plans of production." (Decree, sec. 1.)

"The Labor Commissariat of the U. S. S. R. will divide into categories the persons who are to be registered in the labor organs as persons in search of employment and will direct their sending to work." (Decree, sec. 4.)

The dispatch to work should be done in taking strict account of

The dispatch to work should be done in taking strict account of the principles of class selection and in conformity with the demands of the employer concerning the qualifications of the workers." (Order, sec. 7.)

The heads of the undertakings are required to set at liberty within the time intended by the labor organs, the workers who are to be transferred to another undertaking according to sections 7 and 8 of the present regulations." (Decree, sec. 9.)

(3) THE EMPLOYER FIXES THE PLACE OF RESIDENCE AND THE QUARTERS

To assure a sufficient number of qualified workers and specialists in the undertakings of the most important branches of national economy (iron and steel, chemical, and coal industries, machine making, industrial constructions, transport, and elecmachine making, industrial constructions, transport, and electrical industry) to the detriment of the less important branches of national economy or less important undertakings, the Commissariat of Labor of the U. S. S. R. has the right, on the demand of the economic organs, to proceed after agreement with the unions and ratification of the labor and defense council, to transfer trained workers and specialists to other branches of national economy or to other regions so that they may be used according to their specialty. (Decree, sec. 8.)

The workers, mechanics, and engineers who have distinguished themselves in the organization of "shock brigades," the participants in these brigades or in the "socialist emulations," as well as all who have worked for a very long time in the same undertaking or have made interesting propositions for the rationalization of production or inventions, will benefit by the following advantages:

advantages: (a) If they live in mediocre lodgings, they will be the first to receive new lodgings from the reserve of lodgings of the under(e) The members of their families, in case they apply to the labor organs for employment, will be sent, as far as possible, where the heads of the families are employed. (Decree, sec. 11.)

It is therefore a privilege to be able to work in the same place as the head of the family. This shows how far the right of the State to dispose of the individual is carried in the U. S. S. R., and gives the measure of forced labor. The only exception is for a married woman.

(4) IF THE WORKER REFUSES TO SUBMIT, THE PENALTY IMPOSED ON HIM IS THE LOSS OF WORK AND THEREFORE OF WAGES OR DISPATCH TO THE HARDEST LABORS

"Persons who refuse without plausible reasons the work in their own trade offered them (even if this work necessitates removal) as well as those who refuse to change their occupation if their own is 'stagnant' are struck off the books for a period not exceeding six months.

"Should these persons apply to the direction of cadres for work before the expiry of the period of prohibition, they may be used for mass bodily work (forestal exploitations, turf cutting, loading and unloading, snow sweeping, etc.)." (Order, sec. 11.).

(5) NO APPEAL IS POSSIBLE AGAINST THE DECISIONS OF THE EMPLOYER-THE STATE

Neither the decree nor the order contains any provision permitting the worker any appeal whatever against the decisions taken in arbitrary application of the above provisions.

(6) THESE PROVISIONS APPLY ALSO TO WORKERS ON THE COLLECTIVE FARMS

"The members of collectivist undertakings may have themselves registered at the direction of the 'kolkhoze,' which will send the lists to the nearest direction of cadres." (Order, sec. 3.)

(7) THE RIGHT TO STRIKE IS REFUSED

The Soviet Labor Code provides for compulsory arbitration in article 172.

For the solution of a dispute with an undertaking or state institution, an arbitral tribunal is organized by the labor organ at the request of one of the parties. In this case acceptance of the tribunal is compulsory for the other party."

The undertaking or state institution thus prevents all strikes by asking for the organization of the tribunal, and as it is the "labor organ," that is to say, another institution of the employer state, which organizes the arbitral tribunal, the employer-state is thus both judge and adversary.

Voitinsky, the Soviet jurist, comments on this provision as "In the undertakings of the state and in its institutions, the Communist Party and the trade-unions naturally reject the strike as a method of defense of the interest of the workers. The strike can not be recognized as a normal means of settling disputes concerning labor between the workers and the administration of the undertakings and the institutions of the state, the administration being here the organ of the proletarian state." (Voitinsky, Soviet Labor Law, p. 115.)

(8) THE WORKER IS NOT PROTECTED BY HIS TRADE-UNIONS; ON THE CONTRARY, THIS LATTER ASSISTS IN THE TYRANNY EXERCISED BY THE STATE EMPLOYER OVER THE WORKER

Article 157 of the Labor Code determines the activity of the trade-unions in the sense of a cooperation in the normal course of production in the state undertakings. It is no longer a matter of defense of the interests of the worker in relation to the employer, but of support given to production.

And yet, according to article 151 (ibid.), these unions alone have the right to represent the workers for the discussion of collective contracts and in disputes with the employer. And, moreover, it is only the superior organs of the unions which are admitted to this representation.

The meetings of workers called to examine the clauses of col-tective contracts can not modify them in any way, since it is only the higher organs which are qualified to contract in the name of the workers, and these latter have no right of veto.

Now, the communists form 12 to 15 per cent of the total membership of the unions, but they form the enormous majority and up to 100 per cent of the higher organs of these unions.

Tomsky was ejected because he wished to return to a real protection of the workers by the unions. He and his partisans were replaced by "pures."

According to the Pravda of July 1, 1930 (No. 179), this is the present point of view:

"As soon as the trade-unions took into consideration the needs of the workers, they no longer took the standpoint of those of the state industry. The Soviet Government, through the organs of the party, simply removed all those persons who were at the head of the trade-union movement in the U. S. S. R."

In these conditions it may be affirmed that the trade-unions, being alone qualified to conclude labor contracts in the name of workers but making common cause with the employer state, this latter fixes unilaterally and without appeal the amount of wages and the terms and conditions of work.

(9) THE WORKER CAN ONLY PROCURE THE FOOD AND CLOTHING WHICH HE NEEDS FOR HIMSELF AND HIS FAMILY BY MEANS OF CARDS PRO-CURED FROM THE EMPLOYER STATE

This is a fact of public notoriety. We only mention it to complete the picture of the total subjection in which the Socialist state which governs the U. S. S. R. holds the worker.

In truth, under the U. S. S. R. the worker has become a serf, taxable and liable to forced labor at pleasure. The state disposes of him as it likes. It is true that this is in the logic of Marxism and socialism. The worker is no longer anything but an inert portion of the mechanism of the state, to be moved about or thrown aside at the will of the dictators.

JANUARY, 1931.

[Extracts from Forced Labor in Soviet Russia, by William Armstrong Fairburn]

* * When men are drafted or conscripted into an army, When men are drafted or conscripted into an army, they lose all their liberty of action; they become part of a machine. They are required and compelled to obey any and all orders; they are given no personal choice. This condition exists in Russia in toto. There can be no such thing as unemployment in a conscripted military army; in this sense there is none, or should be none. In Russia, for the Soviet Union is at war—at present primarily in the economic redm; it drafts all the labor that it wants marily in the economic realm; it drafts all the labor that it wants and discards into a sort of human junk pile those whom it does not want; and all who can work and are permitted to work are assigned tasks like soldiers, and are subjected to discipline far more severe, exacting, and humiliating than that affecting any army or any other people in the world. In a military army, men are given a periodic leave of absence; in Soviet Russia (within the confines of the border of the union) there are no such relaxing * sessionsthe pressure of drastic discipline is relentlessly and constantly maintained, both at work and when away from work. Soldiers in military armies in "capitalistic" countries have liberty of thought, but not so in Russia. Every printed and informative word, radio program, "movie" and "talkie," stage performance, etc., is censored, and secret police and spies abound on every hand, so no man knows who his enemy is, and no man dares to express himself freely and honestly.

There can be no such thing as "unemployment" on a plantation operated entirely with slave labor. Slaves are held in bond-tion operated entirely with slave labor. Slaves are held in bondage and in a state of compulsory subjection and servitude. Slaves to live must work and be useful to their masters. If they do not work, they die; if they do but little work or indifferent work, and if they are careless and damage property and tools, they are punished; if they attempt to escape they will either be recaptured and severely treated or shot; they can not wander from one plantation to another; they can not choose their jobs. If they are obedient to the commands of their owners and work well, they will be fed housed and clothed. This is the condition existing in be fed, housed, and clothed. This is the condition existing in Russia to-day among the most favored of the population. A large percentage of the Russian people, however, have neither the social standing in the eyes of the dictator nor enjoy the great boon of food, housing, and clothing that is granted the plantation slave. slave.

Russia is a vast and soulless prison for its people, who are robbed of all freedom, individuality, and self-respect. They can not escape from its boundaries, and, to live, they must work as decreed by the State when, where, and as arbitrarily decreed.

Russia is governed by an arbitrary autocratic dictator, who functions through committees, the Communist Party, the trade-unions, the International, the army, and O. G. P. U. He controls some two million members of the Communist Party (about 1¼ per cent of the population) and they in turn control the trade unions and the proletariat; there are unions for every class of work, and the possession of a trade-union card carries with it such tremendous benefits and privileges that it is natural for adult workers of all types, if they want to live, to desire to be enrolled. * * The Soviet State is the sole employer of labor, the sole purveyor of food and of other articles of consumption, and the sole importer and exporter of goods. All workers in Russia are employed by the state and must bup or otherwise receive their sustenance from the state. * * All workers are deprived of the privilege of her state and must bup or otherwise receive their sustenance from the state. * * * All workers are deprived of the privilege of bargaining or of selling their services; they have no voice with regard to wages, or working hours or days—all are arbitrarily decreed by the state. * * * All work performed in Russia is exacted by the state from any and all persons of working age, without regard to sex, under the menace of the penalty of withholding food, shelter, and the necessities for sustaining life, for its nonperformance, and, to perform this work, the worker does not offer himself voluntarily, but is conscripted, drafted, and compelled by force to serve when, where, and as arbitrarily directed. No labor in Russia is free. All labor in Russia is forced labor.

Eve Garrette Grady, wife of an American mining engineer, who recently returned from Russia, states in an article printed in the recently returned from Russia, states in an article printed in the Saturday Evening Post on June 20, 1931:

"Congress has defined forced labor for American tariff-regulation purposes as labor for which one does not voluntarily offer oneself, and for the nonperformance of which there is a penalty. According to this definition one may unqualifiedly state that there is no line of industry, no human endeavor in Soviet Russia to-day in which there is not forced labor.

"First of all, it must be understood that Soviet Russia is under absolute military dictatorship.

* * *

"Consider the following decree of the Commissariat of Labor published on November 5, 1930: 'Skilled workmen refusing the work offered to them are put onto unskilled heavy labor, and if they refuse this, they are struck off the employment register.'

* * Just exactly what does being 'struck off the employment register 'mean? It means, first, that a man is deprived of his food book—the greatest calamity that can befall a Russian. Loss of the food book means the loss of the right to buy in the stores—in other words, starvation by slow inches. Second, he is ejected from his lodgings. Only those on the employment register have the right to shelter, the right to a roof over their heads.

* * It means that he can not buy medicine or even see a doctor, for only those in good standing on employment registers have that privilege. Furthermore, he becomes a social outcast, a pariah, for no man or woman is going to run the risk of giving him succor. The Argus-eyed secret police, the O. G. P. U., are ever alert to apprehend friends of deserters from the glorious cause of building for socialism."

alert to apprehend friends of deserters from the global distinction building for socialism."

"The Soviet Government holds the people of Russia in the hollow of its hand. It pulls the strings and they dance. It tells them where to work, and if they refuse, it exacts a penalty. Yet every time the subject of forced labor is mentioned abroad, there are shrieks of rage and shouts of fury; in fact, as I write, I can hear the Bolsheviki crying from the housetops: 'You are telling capitalistic lies'."

capitalistic lies'."
Prof. Paul Haensel, of Northwestern University, who was associated with the University of Moscow for more than 20 years, when he held the chair for public finance, and with the School of Economics in Moscow, in an article Labor Under the Soviets, in Foreign Affairs magazine, stated:

LABOR UNDER THE SOVIETS

By Paul Haensel

When the Soviet Government boldly adopted the 5-year plan it had three aims in view: First, to bring about the rapid industrial-ization of Soviet Russia—a natural desire for a government bent ization of Soviet Russia—a natural desire for a government bent on socializing a peasant country; second, to liberate the country from foreign dependence and to make it economically self-sufficient; third, to increase the military strength of the Red Army. The plan also had important international aims, and these constitute a further reason why no effort has been spared to carry it to fulfillment. (Gf. my recent book, the Economic Policy of Soviet Russia, published in English by P. S. King & Son, London, 1930, 200 pp., and in German by J. C. B. Mohr, Tubingen, 1930, under the title "Die Wirtschaftspolitik Sowjetrusslands.")

In spite of many failures in both quality and quantity of achievement, the results of the 5-year plan have as a whole been quite remarkable. To no small extent this has been due to the enthusiasm of the workers in the state factories. But the chief cause of what progress has been made is to be found in the drascause of what progress has been made is to be found in the drastic exploitation of the working class and in the pressure which has been put on all other classes. The methods applied by the

has been put on all other classes. The methods applied by the Soviet Government in dealing with labor would be impossible in normal times in any civilized democratic country.

The system of piece-work wages has been introduced wherever possible. This system is contrary to all socialistic conceptions, but the Soviet rulers realized very well that they had a powerful incentive with which to increase the productivity of labor and an important means of swelling the profits of the employer, i. e., the state. A special order signed by the presidium of the Central Council of Trades Unions and the Supreme Council of National Economy on December 13, 1930, seeks "to regulate wages by encouraging laborers to increase the quality and output of by encouraging laborers to increase the quality and output of their labor, by means of the utmost possible application of piece-work wages, and by forcing skilled laborers (or unskilled laborers where there is a lack of such) to remain in their respective fac-

Means like these stimulate the worker's zeal to increase production; on the other hand, the quality of production is lowered, and the worker's health suffers. Overstrain is very noticeable among Soviet workmen and the administrative personnel.

In order to spur the workers on to still further efforts, special "shock brigades" of experienced communist workmen are sent on tours to the various factories. They work as foremen and "stimulate the enthusiasm" of the rest. Experienced and highly "stimulate the enthusiasm" of the rest. Experienced and highly paid foreigners are also employed for the purpose of increasing the efficiency of the Soviet workmen. Competitions, too, are held in all factories, and special premiums, gifts, and decorations are awarded to those who produce the most. The names of inefficient or delinquent workmen are exhibited on special blackboards or published in the newspapers for public derision.

Needless to say, such devices as these are condemned by all traditional trade-unionist practice.

The production of the Soviet factories has been greatly increased.

The production of the Soviet factories has been greatly increased by the introduction of two measures which—it should be noted were not foreseen at the time the 5-year plan was inaugurated, namely, the abolition of Sundays and the adoption of the so-called uninterrupted working week, and the introduction of a case before, viz, seven hours, and no increase of staff was allowed. The 7-hour working day was introduced in October, 1929, and will be applied to 92 per cent of all workmen in state factories in 1931. It was a clever measure to increase the profits of the state factories, because three shifts of seven hours each insure a higher yield on capital investments and reduce the overhead charges. The main reason why the Government added a third shift, however, was to absorb the large number of unemployed. On April 1, 1930, some 1,300,000 unemployed were registered, in comparison with a total number of workmen in all state factories of only 2,500,000. By adding a new shift the Government achieved a considerable saving on the unemployment doles. siderable saving on the unemployment doles.

7-hour working day with two or three shifts. Thus the Soviet factories work 360 days a year and 21 hours (3 shifts of 7 hours each) a day. Under this system every laborer gets a day of rest after four days of toil, but the work at a factory never stops. It is interesting to note that under the present arrangement the Russian workman works on the average 10 days more in the year than he did during the Tsarist régime, when Sundays and many holidays were observed and factories closed. With the introduction of the uninterrupted week, the clerical staff and employees in institutions were ordered to work one hour more than was the case before, viz seven hours and no increase of staff was allowed. case before, viz, seven hours, and no increase of staff was allowed.

LABOR UNDER THE SOVIETS

Nevertheless, the system has its dark spots. In particular, it Nevertheless, the system has its dark spots. In particular, it entails the introduction of night work and, consequently, lower efficiency. A special investigation by the shock brigades of the Central Council of Trades Unions in the Moscow and Leningrad factories revealed an "absolutely inadmissible attitude of the night shifts of workmen toward their factories. The workmen arrive too late for work, the machines are kept idle, the workmen sleep during working hours, and such a state of affairs is now usual." (Izvestia, October 20, 1930.)

In order to eliminate the constant friction which existed be-

In order to eliminate the constant friction which existed be-In order to eliminate the constant friction which existed between the factory managers and the Communist Party "cells" (which exist in each organizations) or the trade-unions, it has been ordered that henceforth all authority and responsibility within a factory shall rest exclusively with the manager, who is entrusted with the selection of the technical and administrative staff. "On appointing or discharging any worker, the management shall be bound to take into consideration the opinion of the Communist Party or the factory trade-union representatives, which in the event of disagreement concerning any appointment or dismissal shall be entitled to appeal to a higher body of the party or trade-union. But such a course shall not invalidate the enforcement of the management's decision." This principle of the independence of the factory management, adopted at the the enforcement of the management's decision." This principle of the independence of the factory management, adopted at the end of 1929, has since been applied with increasing rigor. One of the reasons for poor efficiency in the Donetz coal mines is stated to be that the principle of "one-man power" has not been fully adopted there, and orders have been given that it is to be adhered to strictly in the future. (Izvestia, December 17, 1930.)

The execution of the 5-year plan involves an enormous investment of capital. The necessary funds are accumulated by means of high taxation, compulsory loans, and artificially high profits in state enterprises. The state factories are monopolistic. The prices of manufactured goods are kept at a very high level (computed at about 250 per cent of the prices prevailing in the international market). (See Kontrolniye Ziffri, 1928–29, Moscow 1929, p. 280), while wages and salaries are low. vailing in the international market). (See Kontrolniye Ziffri, 1928-29, Moscow 1929, p. 280), while wages and salaries are low. The average wage of a workman in a Russian factory to-day amounts to 3 rubles, 10 kopeks a day. This is nominally about $1.60, but the purchasing capacity is much smaller; according to the computation of a German economist, it is equivalent to about 3.50 Reichsmarks, or 87 cents a day. (Cf. Berkenkopf, in Schmoller's Jahrbuch, August, 1930, p. 35. Soviet leaders frequently emphasize the Government's expenditure of large sums for "welfare" projects. A large item is the expenditure for creating new dwellings, which represents ordinary investment (it is ridiculous to count capital invested in workmen's dwellings in the wages' fund). Workmen do not get free housing; they spend on the average about 14 per cent of their wages on housing, heating, and light.)

and light.)

The great pressure exercised to increase production, the low wages, the inadequate and unbalanced food supply, and the bad housing conditions resulted in 1930 in a "catastrophic" flight of housing conditions resulted in 1930 in a "catastrophic" flight of workmen from the factories. During the three summer months of last year the Leningrad factories engaged 225,000 new workmen and during the same period 134,000 workmen left. In some cases the turnover reached 125 per cent. Not only workmen, but engineers and technicians began to leave the factories.

The Government ordered drastic measures against all these "deserters." A general mobilization of specialists has now been pro-serters." A general mobilization of specialists has now been proclaimed; engineers who do not remain at work or do not accept positions offered by the state are to be criminally prosecuted. (See the official Soviet paper Za Industrializatsiu, September 25, 1930.) Mobilizations of this kind, which hardly differ from mobilization in time of war, have been applied many times lately to engineers, teachers, railroad workers, and students. By an order of October 4, 1930, not less than 50 per cent of the students in all mining schools were commandeered for work in the Donetz mines, and their period of study has consequently been prolonged for one year. On January 29, 1931, all students in agricultural institutes and schools were mobilized for the spring sowing campaign.

&lt;sup>1</sup>Professor Haensel left Soviet Russia in 1928 and has written a book on the Economic Policy of the Soviet Russia, which deals with this subject. From 1921 to 1928 he was president of the financial section of the Institute of Economic Research, attached to the Commissariat for Finance of the U.S.S.R.

The latest and most drastic mobilization was that of all railroad workers in January, 1931. All who were ever employed in any sort of railroad service, including porters, have to appear before the labor boards for assignment to railway work. Criminal proceedings will be taken against defaulters and against employers who conceal such workers. Also, the Central Government Board of Collective Farms has recently given orders (January, 1931) that the collective farms shall send laborers regularly to industry and threatens defaulters with criminal prosecution. Moreover, the Government proclaimed a series of coercive measures designed to prevent the large labor turnover and to punish those who refuse the jobs offered to them. In the aggregate, these various measures amount to the introduction of forced labor. All unemployment doles have been abolished since October 1, 1930. Instead of labor exchanges, special boards for recruiting workmen have been organized.

been organized.

The Government has also attachked the labor problem from other angles. A law passed on December 15, 1930, prescribes: 1. Factories are allowed to engage workmen or clerical employees only through the governmental boards whose duty it is to recruit and assign labor. 2. Skilled laborers and specialists engaged in occupations alien to their qualifications are to be employed in the work for which they are fitted. 3. Willful disorganizers of production—that is, those who leave their jobs without permission and for no reasonable cause—shall not be assigned new jobs in industry or transport for six months (which means that they will be unable to get work for that period). 4. Registered candidates who refuse a job which is offered them without giving a reasonable excuse are to be suspended from the register for a period of not more than six months (which means that during this time they are prevented from getting a job). 5. Directors who employ laborers irregularly or in excessive numbers, or offer higher wages than prescribed, or entice laborers from other undertakings, or resist the orders of labor boards with reference to the transference of employees to other places, shall be punished by their respective authorities or the labor boards. 6. Workers in the mining, metal, chemical, textile, and building-material industries, in transport, and in important new construction undertakings, who have worked not less than two years, beginning on November 1, 1930, shall receive for each year an additional leave of three days or an equivalent remuneration in cash.

In the new regulations issued by the Labor Commissariat workmen and other employees who systematically disregard discipline are to be dismissed without warning and without payment of the regular two weeks' dismissal compensation; moreover, it is forbidden to employ them in industry or transport for the

In the new regulations issued by the Labor Commissariat workmen and other employees who systematically disregard discipline are to be dismissed without warning and without payment of the regular two weeks' dismissal compensation; moreover, it is forbidden to employ them in industry or transport for the next six months; and not only shall willful disorganizers of discipline be dismissed but a criminal prosecution shall be started against them. The administration is given the right to fine a delinquent workman or to withhold his wages either for the time lost or to compensate for spoilage of materials or for using raw materials which are defective if he has not informed the administration beforehand about them. Workmen leaving a factory or dismissed before the lapse of a year shall have their wages cut for each day of leave they enjoyed during the year. (Every workman has the right to a two weeks' leave once a year.) Willful disorganizers include men who leave a factory without waiting for the appointment of a substitute.

for the appointment of a substitute.

Another regulation (published December 1, 1930) binds to their respective jobs all building laborers engaged in construction work. Labor deserters, "fliers" and "graspers" (those demanding excessive wages), are not to be allowed to take up construction work or work in factories preparing building materials, but should be sent for six months for "physical mass work" (i. e., unloading, wood cutting, etc.); in case of their refusal to do such work, their names must be erased from the registers of the labor boards. This means they will not be allowed to get other jobs. Further, the authorities threaten workers who decline assignments with eviction from their homes—a severe threat indeed, considering the acute housing shortage in the cities.

from their homes—a severe threat indeed, considering the acute housing shortage in the cities.

In order to prevent "flying" from work, other drastic measures have been proclaimed. These include the introduction of black lists in all the principal factories as a means of preventing workmen who have left one factory from getting work in another (this became necessary partly because some skilled workmen left their factories and reappeared elsewhere as unskilled workmen), and the expulsion of delinquent workers from the trade-unions—a very severe measure, depriving the worker and his family of many civic rights. Those who remain at work receive special premiums and privileges, such as the admittance of their children to the universities, better housing, etc. For example, in order to induce miners in the Donetz region to stay on the job, the Government promised to give each a special premium of 13 pounds of wheat flour a month on condition that he maintained a normal output. Members of the Communist Party or Communist Youth organization, as well as peasant laborers, are from time to time "mobilized" and sent to the factories to replace "flers." Labor Commissar Tsikhon is now urging the introduction of "behavior passports" for workmen, these to be produced whenever a man seeks employment. (Izvestia, January 4, 1931.)

output. Members of the Communist Party or Communist Youth organization, as well as peasant laborers, are from time to time "mobilized" and sent to the factories to replace "filers." Labor Commissar Tsikhon is now urging the introduction of "behavior passports" for workmen, these to be produced whenever a man seeks employment. (Izvestia, January 4, 1931.)

Railway workmen must submit to an even more drastic rule. According to a law passed on November 3, 1930, they may be punished for breaches of discipline by reprimand, by imprisonment for not more than three months with or without the deduction of 50 per cent of their wages, by reduction in rank, or by dismissal. These various forms of punishment are meted out to them by their respective chiefs and are executed by the O. G. P. U. The law expressly provides that protests shall not postpone the execution of the sentence. It should be noted that a special tribunal exists for dealing with serious delinquencies on the railways.

exists for dealing with serious delinquencies on the railways.

The new military conscription law of August 13, 1930, provides that military service for the usual 2-year period may be performed in factories, and military instruction is given to such recruits during their employment. On occasion they may remain voluntarily for further work after the two years are up, serving as military instructors. On the other hand, recruits who by reason of their class status are deprived of the right to serve "with arms" in the Red army (traders, clergymen, etc., and members of their families) are to be assigned compulsory work for two years under the direction of the labor boards.

Extensive use is now being made of compulsory work in order

Extensive use is now being made of compulsory work in order to maintain the supply of different commodities. Wherever necessary the population, chiefly peasants, are compelled to appear for work with horses and vehicles. This procedure is followed, for instance, in the transportation of timber, wood for fuel. (The Izvestia of December 17, 1930, describes the "castatrophic situation" in wood cutting in central Russia.) The reports blame the kulaks (well-to-do peasants) who "in many districts scarcely get any 'hard assignments' (in wood cutting and transportation) and become so insolent that they beat and kill poor wood cutters." It is urged that the kulaks be given "hard assignments" wherever this has not yet been done and that no mercy be shown in dealing with them, hay rafting, and so on. (Cf. the decree issued by the council of labor and defense on September 21, 1930, on hay collecting. In October, 1930, the situation with regard to wood rafting became critical. The Government issued orders "to bind" (zakrepit) all laborers engaged in this work till the end of the rafting season; to engage as helpers by means of "compulsory paid work" all the able-bodied population along the rivers where wood rafting is done; and to insist on the "utmost discipline" in dealing with absenteeism. The administration was charged with full responsibility and the O. G. P. U. was directed to help the management.—Izvestia, October 6, 1930.)

It should be borne in mind also that the Soviet Government uses another powerful weapon to compel the population of certain districts to do "prescribed work," namely, the threat not to supply the district with manufactured goods or with necessities such as salt and sugar. All railways and other means of transportation are in the hands of the Government, and no private automobiles exist; outside supplies, therefore, depend entirely on the Government. In this way the Government is able to force the population into submission without having actually to send military detachments to enforce its orders.

The most severe pressure, however, is that which springs from fear. Intimidation takes every conceivable form. Every official knows that if any Government plan or order is not fulfilled, he may be held responsible, whether or not he is directly to blame. Officials very often are simply scapegoats for the governmental blunders. Nobody is safe in this respect, and for the slightest misadventure people directly or indirectly responsible are shot, imprisoned, exiled, starved, or humiliated. There is no redress, and, of course, escape by emigration is impossible. By ordinary standards this amounts to a refined system of slavery.

and, of course, escape by emigration is impossible. By ordinary standards this amounts to a refined system of slavery.

In the matter of grain collection, all well-to-do peasants (as a rule, those whose produce is valued at over $300 a year are considered kulaks) receive orders every year as to the amount of grain and other agricultural products which they are to turn over to the Government. This is in addition to the regular heavy taxes which they have to pay. In case they do not fulfill the requirements they undergo very severe punishment. The following item is taken from a list of innumerable similar cases related in Izvestia on October 30, 1930:

"In the village of Denissovka three kulaks who willfully withheld their assignments of grain have been sentenced to 3, 5, and 10 years in jail, in addition to being fined. In the Lebedinsky district several kulaks have been fined. In the Gadiach district the local soviet has confiscated the property of several kulaks who did not surrender grain."

It might be noted at this point that for murder of father or mother the highest penalty in Soviet Russia is 10 years' imprisonment. For withholding grain the punishment may be more severe; in addition to 10 years in jail the delinquent may be sentenced to a heavy fine and have his property confiscated.

There can be no doubt that convict labor exists, particularly in the porthern timber districts of Furnacean Pussia but it is

There can be no doubt that convict labor exists, particularly in the northern timber districts of European Russia, but it is extremely difficult to get reliable details. However, Sir Hilton Young, M. P., recently published (the Times and Daily Telegraph, December 16, 1930. Conditions in the Soviet concentration camps were described by a former O. G. P. U. official in the New York Times, January 31, 1931. The number of prisoners in these camps was given as 662,200) the story of three Russian prisoners who escaped from Archangel timber camps and who described the appalling conditions under which the prisoners work there. In a letter in the London Times on December 31, 1930, these reports were confirmed by an English eyewitness. "These men," he remarks, "are certainly not convicts as civilized people understand the word, nor are they of convict type. They are slaves pure and simple."

Persons sentenced to forced labor have been used in lumber and forestry work since 1929. This is confirmed by the soviets themselves in an order, issued June 1, 1929, by the Commissariat of Agriculture (from which the following paragraph is taken), quoted in the recent British Blue Book ("Russia No. 1 (1931): A selection of documents relative to the labor legislation in force in the U.S. S. R." Cmd. 3775) on the subject:

"The present instructions are the first attempt to utilize on timber and improvement work the labor of persons sentenced to forced labor without detention under guard. Considering this experiment of exceptionally great importance, the People's Commissarlat of Agriculture instructs all agricultural organizations to begin forthwith from the current season to explore all existing possibilities of utilizing the labor of persons sentenced to forced labor for forestry and improvement work of a mass character and to establish for this purpose permanent relations with the bureau of forced labor."

The whole economic system of Soviet Russia to-day is based on pressure and forced labor. No doubt great masses of workmen earnestly believe, or are made to believe, that they will achieve a true and happier socialistic state in the near future. Present sufferings are always described as temporary and it is promised that the communist golden age will dawn on that not-distant day when the capitalist regimes existing in the rest of the world fall in hopeless disaster. But there is no victory of socialistic methods of "planned economy" over the "chaotic system" of capitalist production. There is merely a display of fanatical brute force.

[Translation]

FORCED LABOR IN SOVIET RUSSIA

(From researches made by the committee for study of economic conditions, formed by the Russian Commercial, Industrial, and Financial Union, and comprising N. H. Denissoff, president; I. Avnatamoff, P. H. Apostol, Prof. M. V. Bernatzky, P. A. Bourishkin, Prof. K. I. Zaitzeff, N. Isnar, M. A. Kritzky, Prof. A. P. Markoff, Prof. A. Michelson, V. N. Novikoff, I. Poplavsky, B. N. Sokoloff, Prof. P. B. Struve, and Prof. N. S. Timasheff, members.)

I. Industrial proletariat

The public opinion of Europe and America has lately become more and more interested in one of the most characteristic facts connected with the carrying out of the 5-year plan in U. S. S. R.—which is forced labor. The interest this question has aroused is connected with the carrying out of the 5-year plan in U. S. S. R.—which is forced labor. The interest this question has aroused is quite comprehensible and natural. As stated in the preface to the statute of the International Labor Bureau, the efforts made by the civilized countries to create more humane conditions of work, would be a failure should only one country establish its labor regulations on a different basis. The entire world is at present carrying on trade with the soviets, in spite of the fact that if forced labor is really employed in Russia, the competition of Soviet goods manufactured by such labor will impede social progress in all the other countries.

CONVICT LABOR

The object of this report is to throw more light on this question which begins to worry the entire civilized world. The public opinion pays the greatest attention to convict labor in U. S. S. R. The use of convict labor has indeed taken in U. S. S. R. an unprecedented development as it can be seen from a number of special decrees issued in 1930 and approved by the last session of the All-Union Central Executive Committee. According to these decrees, any sentence of imprisonment for a period longer than three years is to be served by the convict in work camps under the supervision of O. G. P. U. (General State Political Administration). Moreover, of O. G. P. U. (General State Political Administration). Moreover, the tribunal has the right to replace any sentence of imprisonment foreseen in the criminal code by deportation connected with hard labor. Such tribunal decisions do not at all depend upon the maximum term of sentences, as stipulated in the Criminal Code, and the tribunal can, in every case, sentence to deportation and hard labor for a period up to 10 years. The number of people who have been deported and sentenced to hard labor (mostly for opposition to "collectivization") without any judgment, simply by order of the Government, and this both for offenses foreseen in the decree of August 10, 1930 (regarding hard, labor), and often by order of the Government, and this both for offenses foreseen in the decree of August 10, 1930 (regarding hard labor), and often without any lawful justification, is also very considerable.

However significant the question of convict labor is another fact, that of compulsory work applied to all the workers in U. S. S. R., and especially to those employed by the industry and the railways, is still more important. One can show the importance of this question only by carefully analyzing the recent Soviet decrees and regulations, as the Soviet Government—which is attentively watching the campaign raised abroad for the limiis attentively watching the campaign raised abroad for the limitation of trade with U. S. S. R., as a country employing forced labor—has composed its decrees in such a way as to render their meaning not easily comprehensible abroad.

LABOR REGULATIONS IN THE PERIOD OF N. E. P. (NEW ECONOMIC POLICY)

The soviets have attained the above object without difficulty owing to the fact that in the period of N. E. P.—when the intention of the soviets was to apply "economic methods of capitalistic countries in earnest and for long"—the position of workers, both industrial and agricultural, was in many cases similar to that of workers in "bourgeois" countries. Though the contents of labor contracts were in U. S. S. R., more than anywhere else, regulated by a special law, the conclusion and breaking off of such contracts were always done, during the N. E. P., of free accord between the two agreeing parties. Outside of very special cases, nobody could then be compelled to work for the state, if he wanted to earn his living otherwise. Those who wanted to work were free to choose their place of work. Moreover, at that time, there were no indications in the law that the right of free work, in any branches of industry, did not belong to all the citizens, but only to certain categories of people.

This labor statute still exists in U.S.S. B. and the Belsheriks.

This labor statute still exists in U. S. S. R. and the Bolsheviks, referring to it, can assure even now that their labor regulations are based on the principle of free agreement. However, in one of the last copies of the Soviet publication, Soviet Justice (No. 30, 1930), there is a very remarkable article which calls attention to the anomalous fact that Soviet labor regulations enacted in 1922— 23 have remained unchanged though the Soviet economic policy has since then been greatly modified. In the publication, For Industrialization (Nov. 15 and 16, 1930), is a report on a conference about labor, in which it is openly stated that the existing labor regulations impede the social reconstruction and must be revised, such a revisal to be done in the nearest future, as officially appropriated in Expessive of Jonus 4, 1931. announced in Isvestia of January 4, 1931.

THE RIGHT TO WORK

In fact, such a revisal of labor regulations has begun long since, and there can be no question any more of free agreement as basis of Soviet labor regulations. It is to be noted that such a revisal of labor regulations has been closely connected with a number of measures taken by the Government and which have changed the right every citizen had to work, into a privilege of only a few classes of people.

This change has been gradually and inconspicuously operated by a number of decrees and instructions to trades-unions, issued since 1926. Such decrees and instructions to trades-unions, issued since 1926. Such decrees and instructions directed that, on one hand, those who had not been heretofore employed by the soviets should not be registered on the labor exchange, and on the other hand, those who were not registered on the labor exchange could not be applicated by applications.

hand, those who were not registered on the labor exchange could not be employed by anyone.

Subsequently began the enslavement of the industrial workers. In autumn, 1930, the problem of labor was such that it obliged the soviets to revert to the policy suggested in its time by Trotzky (at the end of military communism), which seemed to have been forgotten long since. Trotzky's opinion was that the development of Soviet production could not be carried out without forced. of Soviet production could not be carried out without forced labor. His belief was that the fiction of free labor must be rejected and replaced by the obligation for everybody to work, such an obligation to be enforced, if necessary, by penalties. (Terror and Communism, p. 133.) The same ideas were repeated in a slightly different form in the program of the Communist Party, issued in

THE PROBLEM OF LABOR

What were the above-mentioned conditions which compelled the Bolsheviks to attach the industrial workers to respective enterprises? The labor problem of that period can be characterized by the so-called "changeability of labor." In one of the Soviet publications, this fact is called the "chief disease of industry and even of agriculture." (For Industrialization, August 2, 1930.) No figures as to this movement of labor are, or can be obtained from figures as to this movement of labor are, or can be obtained from Soviet official sources. However, there are interesting figures obtained in this respect from private sources. In the Donetz region for the six months of the last economic year, 167,000 workers; i. e., about 75 per cent, have left their work and been replaced by others. In some of the factories on the Ural, 30 per cent of all the workers have been changed. (Isvestia, August 18, 1930.) The most remarkable figures are, however, those given for the district of coal mining and forges, which development is considered to be most important for the 5-year plan. In this district, during one month, 94 per cent of all the workers have been changed. This leaving of factories did not only apply to ordinary workmen. As seen from the report of Kaganovich made at the session of the Communist Party (Pravda, July 1, 1930), the same movement was to be noticed among the technical personnel and the communists. The Soviet Government had no illusions as to the reasons which prompted the workers to leave so easily one place for another.

The Soviet Government had no illusions as to the reasons which prompted the workers to leave so easily one place for another. In the publication For Industrialization (July 29, 1930) this is explained on one hand by the fact that the conditions on the labor exchange were such that each worker had the hope to find somewhere else better conditions of work and a higher salary, as the salaries paid by various enterprises differed very much, and, somewhere else better conditions of work and a higher salary, as the salaries paid by various enterprises differed very much, and, on the other hand, also by poor living conditions, insufficient protection of labor, and difficulties for the workers to supply themselves with necessities. The Economic Life (August 22, 1930) adds to these reasons another very important one—the revival of the so-called meshechniks. ("Meshechnik" means a person who carries a bag. When food supply became so difficult in cities, especially division will be a supply became so difficult in cities, especially division will the some supply the sound of the sound ries a bag. When food supply became so dimcult in cities, especially during military communism, crowds of people were going with bags to the villages, exchanging there everything they could against food products, which they were bringing back in their bags.) This revival of meshechniks showed that workers were leaving factories simply because they could not live on the very low remuneration they received both in money and in products.

SALARIES

Such a statement may seem questionable from the standpoint of Soviet official data as regards workers' salaries. According to these data, toward the last session of the Communist Party (June-July, 1930) the average salary of workers represented 139 per cent of pre-war salaries, and by adding to it payments for social insurance and payments made to divers funds for the improvement of workers' living conditions it reached even 167 per cent. It is true that, according to official data, the increase in salaries has lately considerably slowed down and in certain cases even ceased entirely. According to information given by Soviet Trade (September 1, 1930), the nominal salary was in 1929–30 8 to 9 per cent higher than the same salaray for the previous year. However, as the cost of living has risen exactly to the same extent, the salary in reality has remained the same. According to data given in the report of the December session of the central executive committee of the All-Union Communist Party and of the central controlling commission (Isvestia, December 17), the nominal salary has increased 12 per cent during the second year of the 5-year plan. There is no mention, however, of an actual increase in salaries—i. e., an increase in salaries which would have been greater than the increase in the cost of living—which mention would certainly have been made if such an actual increase existed. At the same time, the communists who are in opposition to Stalin's policy are all the time calling attention to the decrease in salaries (for instance, Pravda of the Communist Youth, December 7, 1930).

If the above given official figures, as to an increase of 39 or 67 per cent in salaries, were exact, Soviet workers should be satisfied with their lot. But these figures, as it was openly acknowledged by Kalinin on a local conference of the Communist Party in the lower Volga district, "can appear to many not at all convincing if one takes into consideration the great need experienced by the workers in articles of first necessity and especially in food products. What is then the reason," continued the speaker, "for this apparent disagreement between the figures of salaries received by workers and their insufficient means of living? The reason lies in the fact that the high salaries mentioned as those of the entire working class are only the salaries received by a small category of workers." (Pravda, June 19, 1930.)

In these conditions, the figures given by Soviet statistics, as to

In these conditions, the figures given by Soviet statistics, as to the increase in salaries, lose all their significance. This is not all. In figuring out the actual salary received by a Soviet worker in comparison with pre-war salaries, one must remember that in Soviet Russia there are two different prices for the same article, whether it is sold at an established price by governmental or semigovernmental institutions, or by private dealers. The difference between these prices has always been very considerable in U. S. S. R., but at present it is enormous. The Soviet press, in autumn 1930, is full of indications that the prices in the free market are eight, ten, and even twenty times higher than those established by the Government.

It is, therefore, necessary, in order to be able to correctly compare present and pre-war salaries, to figure out: (1) What percentage of necessities the worker can buy from the Government and what percentage he has to get in the free market; and (2) what is the real index of prices in the free market.

In both cases, Soviet statistics are very insufficient. The calculation is based on the presumption that the worker buys in the free market 20 per cent of the things he needs. (Economic Survey, October, 1929.) However, Stalin himself acknowledged at the session of the Communist Party that this figure has increased to 25 per cent. (Pravda, June 29, 1930.) According to other official data it has in reality reached 44 to 47 per cent. (For Industrialization, July 25, 1930.) The relation between the index of prices in the free and in the official market is 2.23. (For Industrialization, July 25, 1930.) In reality, it is much more considerable.

In thus making the necessary corrections in the calculation of Soviet statisticians, one sees that the real salary received by the workers does not represent 139 per cent of the pre-war salary, but about 70 per cent. To this must be added that: (1) The figures of salaries given by the soviets represent only the salaries received by a privileged class of workers; and (2) that about 15 per cent of all the salaries are retained by the Soviet Government for the buying of governmental bonds, "voluntary" contributions to all kinds of workmen's associations, etc.

Such inferences as to the real salary of a Soviet worker, based on Soviet statistical data, have been confirmed by an interesting document recently published in the German press. (Dortmunder Zeitung, Dec. 12, 1930.) It is the relation of experiences through which have passed several German miners who went to work in the Donetz district at an invitation of the soviets. This relation is especially interesting because its authors not long ago were convinced communists and played leading parts in local communist organizations. The following extracts relate to the question of workmen's salaries and their standard of living.

"The 140 rubles which were promised us when we were still in Germany were not fully paid to us for all kinds of reasons.

* * * The Russian workers receive 3 rubles 50 kopeks a day, but young working women not more than 21 rubles a month, so that they have to revert to prostitution to earn some more.

"The food was bad, though we German workers received more

"The food was bad, though we German workers received more than the Russian workers, who had to work as much as we did. The dinner was uneatable, but it was forbidden to complain.

"The Russian workers have no shoes. They put on old bags on their feet and are in rags.

"In order to live the life of a German unemployed, who exists on the allowance granted by the Government, the Russian worker should earn twice the salary he earns at present."

This statement of German workers shows that the salary received by Russian workers is even insufficient for their exceedingly small needs.

But perhaps such a low salary is compensated by light work?

It is well known that the Bolshevik law has from the very beginning established an 8-hour working day. After the tenth year of Bolshevik power working hours were even officially reduced to seven hours a day.

year of Bolshevik power working hours were even officially reduced to seven hours a day.

However, these official figures again do not concern all the workers, but only a small part of them. In fact, the working day is much longer. A long time ago has been established a system of overtime work, and lately all kinds of surplus work in the form of "socialistic competition" among the workers, etc. The Soviet press mentions a 10 and even 12 hour working day. (Work, Feb. 10, 1930, and Pravda of Communist Youth, Jan. 5, 1928.)

The above-mentioned statement of German workers gives on

The above-mentioned statement of German workers gives on this question interesting information: "We could not even think of a 6-hour working day (officially established in mines). We were compelled to do a certain amount of work, and to accomplish it we had to work 11 hours. To that must be added several hours to get to the place of work and back."

were compelled to do a certain amount of work, and to accomplish it we had to work 11 hours. To that must be added several hours to get to the place of work and back."

Thus, according to the testimony of German workers, the working day is more than 12 hours long, even in such hard work as coal mining.

coal mining.

There are also indications about, on one hand, impossible housing conditions in which the average Soviet worker has to live and the insufficient measures taken for his protection, and, on the other hand, the fictitiousness of social insurance and all the other privileges the Soviet worker is supposed to obtain, by giving a certain amount of his salary to the fund for the betterment of the workmen's standard of living. What has been said above is, however, sufficient to prove that the conditions of life of Russian workers are absolutely unbearable.

NEW CONDITIONS ON THE LABOR EXCHANGE

Nevertheless, the present conditions on the labor exchange appear to be such that it seems to be precisely the time for the Russian worker to improve his position. Though the success of Soviet industrialization, as announced by official statistics, seems rather doubtful, one thing is certain, that the demand for labor on the part of state enterprises has greatly increased. On one hand, the establishment of uninterrupted work (i. e., the abolishment of Sundays and holidays, each workman getting one day off after five days of work), and, on the other hand, the development of industry are sufficient reasons for it.

It is true that the country has enormous reserves of labor owing to peasant "overpopulation." But the Soviet factories are not open to all those who want to enter them, as, first, it would upset the political program of the soviets to take all the applicants in, because elements antagonistic to communism would penetrate in the working class (such as former rich peasants, deprived of their means of existence), and, secondly, because it would upset the plans of the soviets regarding the peasants whom they are otherwise compelling to join the collective farms.

Therefore, the Soviet Government, as it will be seen further,

Therefore, the Soviet Government, as it will be seen further, has but carefully increased the number of people who can work in the factories and has so organized their being accepted by factories, that the less passive elements fall off after their first contact with the administration. The result is that the reserves of labor for industries and railways have remained very limited. As regards skilled workers, their number is more limited than ever. It would have seemed, therefore, that not only the specialists but even the workers who are a little more skilled than the average could have put forward their desiderata and improved their position. But this would have upset the main object of the 5-year plan, which is to reconstruct industry with the help of cheap labor and at the cost of the health and life of Russian workers.

The opportunities which are opened to workers in U. S. S. R. are indeed quite different from those which they would have under a normal economic régime. In U. S. S. R., the trade-unions, as it has recently been confirmed by their president, Shvernik, at a session of the Communist Party (Pravda, July 14, 1930), are not intended to represent the interests of the workers before their employer—the state—but to facilitate the enlisting of workers for the "social reconstruction." Since a long time already, strikes are considered inadmissible in state enterprises (Voitinsky, working regulations of U. S. S. R., Moscow, 1925, p. 115).

Therefore, the only possibility the workers have to improve their condition and take advantage of the present state of things, is to change one factory for another in search of a better position. Thus the "changeability of labor" appears as a peculiar reaction of the working class against the impossible living conditions created by the Soviet Government.

The soviets could solve this problem only in two different ways, either by improving the condition of workers and thus making it unnecessary for them to change their place of work, or to attach them to the enterprises where they were needed. The first solution would have meant for the soviets the giving up of the 5-year plan, and therefore the Government decided for the second solution.

DISTRIBUTION OF LABOR

Consequently, from September to December, 1930, the Government decreed a number of measures which though increasing the ment decreed a number of measures which though increasing the number of people who could work in factories at the same time made it obligatory for those who accepted such work to be employed only in the factory where they were first appointed by the Government. The significance of this reform is explained in Clause I of the decree of December 15, 1930, issued by the Central Executive Committee of U. S. S. R., and can be summarized by the following sentence: "Labor is to be systematically distributed by labor organizations." Thus, the idea of Trotzky is, in this new decree, embodied in a law.

labor organizations." Thus, the idea of Trotzky is, in this new decree, embodied in a law.

The decrees regarding labor issued during the autumn of 1930 refer to: (1) The classes of people who are to be sent to work in factories; (2) methods of labor distribution; (3) the obligation for the worker to accept any work offered; (4) penalty for not complying with this obligation.

WHO HAS THE RIGHT TO WORK

WHO HAS THE RIGHT TO WORK

The decree of December 15 (p. 4) definitely establishes "the classes of people who can be registered by work organizations as being in search of work." Those privileged classes are defined in the decree of the Labor Commissariat of December 23 (Isvestia, December 29 and 30). Besides those who have already worked in Soviet enterprises, the following persons will be permitted to register in order to find work: (a) Wives and children of Soviet workers and employees, and with some limitation other members of their families; (b) members of workers associations ("artel") if these associations are comprised "in the system of professional cooperation," and their children; (c) farm hands, poor peasants, col-associations are comprised "in the system of professional cooperation," and their children; (c) farm hands, poor peasants, collective farmers, and their children; (d) former red soldiers during one year after the end of their service.

Class distinction is fully maintained: People who belong to "socially antagonistic elements" not only are not registered (par. a, clause 9, decree of December 23) but if they already work and their origin is found out they are immediately discharged (par. 1, p. 9, decree of October 20, 1930, issued by the central executive committee of the All-Union Communist Party).

In order to prevent the number of workers to decrease, meas-

In order to prevent the number of workers to decrease, measures were also taken to restrict the possibility the workers had to be transferred from factories to offices to higher posts. The decree of October 20, 1930 (par. a, p. 6), prohibits the promotion of any worker before two years have elapsed since the worker has begun work in an enterprise.

METHODS OF LABOR DISTRIBUTION

In the decree of December 15, page 2, distribution of labor is thus defined: "All the enterprises, institutions, farms, and individuals can engage workers and employees only through labor organizations" organizations.

organizations."

It is true that there are cases when workers, who already work in an enterprise, can change their factory for another without referring for that purpose to "labor organizations" (called now personnel administration). But this can be done only with a special permission from the management of the said enterprise. (Par. b, p. 5, decree of December 15.) This measure will evidently permit to transfer from one enterprise to another the eventual surplus of labor.

Special regulations concern students who have graduated from Special regulations concern students who have graduated from universities. (Decree of December 15, p. 5.) They can accept work only in the enterprises which belong to the same department as the university they were studying in.

Exceptions to the above regulations as to the hiring of workers

Exceptions to the above regulations as to the hiring of workers and employees are applied to a very restricted class of people. In centers of minor importance such exceptions are, however, applied more generally. Thus everywhere only "responsible executive and technical workers" are exempt from passing through "labor organizations" in order to obtain work. (Above decree, par. a, p. 5.) In minor centers, however, the following persons can be hired directly without referring to such "labor organizations": (a) Farm hands to work on individual farms (farms not belonging to peasants who have been declared "kulaks"—rich peasants; (b) shepperds (without the above restriction): (c) apprentices to be peasants who have been declared "kulaks"—rich peasants); (b) shepherds (without the above restriction); (c) apprentices, to be employed by workmen who either work at home or have a small workshop, but do not employ more than two hired persons; (d) charwomen. (Above decree, pars. c, d, e, p. 5.) As seen above, these exceptions do not concern industrial workers who are compelled to follow the regulations regarding the "distribution of labor."

To these regulations must be added a decree which can be characterized as "the abolishment of unemployment."

The decree of the Labor Commissariat published in the Isvestia of October 11, 1930, prescribed all the organizations for the hiring of labor to take immediate steps to find work for the unemployed, especially for those who had a right to an allowance, and all allowances to unemployed were at the same time canceled. In order to facilitate the carrying out of this measure it was decreed that the unemployed must be put to work not only according to their profession but must be employed at any kind of work which did not demand a special qualification.

OTHER RESTRICTIONS OF THE LIBERTY OF WORK

The regulations regarding the "distribution of labor" have greatly restricted the right of the worker to choose his work or to change it. Other regulations have still more restricted liberty of work. A number of measures compel the worker to (a) accept a new kind of work, even if he does not want to leave his old work, and (b) to remain at his post, even if he would like to work, and (b) to remain at his post, even if he would like to leave it.

This concerns only skilled workers and specialists. This measure can be applied to them in two cases: (1) If they are not employed in the branch of industry they are skilled in and (2) if skilled workers are not proportionately distributed among the more and less important branches of industry. The first case is referred to in the decree of December 15, paragraph 7, which stipulates that all skilled workers and employees of enterprises which are situated in the "socialized" parts of the country (where "collectivization" and industrialization have intensively been carried out) must be so distributed among the various enterprises as to work in the branches they are skilled in (they thus can be employed not only in industrial enterprises but in state farms, collective farms, timber industry, etc.). There are indications in the Soviet press that such a distribution of labor has already begun. (Evening Red Paper, December 28, 1930.)

In the second case the decree of December 15, paragraph 8, authorizes the transfer of specialists and skilled workers (a) in general, from less important enterprises to more important ones, and (b) in the same branch of industry, from less important enterprises to more important ones, even if they are situated in a different part of the country. In both cases the acceptance on the part of the worker for such a transfer is not required.

There is no open interdiction for the workers and employees to leave their work, but it naturally derives from all kinds of penalties for abandoning work.

alties for abandoning work.

PENALTIES FOR ABANDONING WORK

The penalties inflicted to workers for not following the regu-tions of the "systematical distribution of labor" are the following:

(a) As far as the refusal to accept the work offered by the Government is concerned, the most severe punishment is applied to workers, especially to the former unemployed. The refusal to accept the work offered is immediately followed by the exclusion of such a person from the list of workers, i. e., his exclusion from the privileged class, having the right to work. The only acceptable reason is illness, which must be attested by a document from a hospital. (Decree of October 11, p. 4.) The exclusion from the list of workers is final. It is evident, therefore, that the measthe list of workers is linal. It is evident, therefore, that the measures taken by the Government for abolishing unemployment have in fact put the unemployed in such a position that they have to choose either to take any kind of work, even cutting wood in the far north, or to lose not only their allowance as unemployed but even their right to work, and therefore starve. This measure is explained by the fact that the Soviet Government found it superfluous to continue to give the unemployed the same food rations it was giving to other workers, and considered that the best solution was to put all the unemployed to work, even if this work was not the one they were used to, so that they should earn the food they were given.

The tood they were given.

The other cases are mentioned in the decree of December 15, paragraph 14. This paragraph states that all those who have refused without any acceptable reason, to work in the branch they are skilled in and where they were appointed by the labor organization, are barred from the list of workers for a period up to six months. This category comprises those who refuse to change their line of work, though there is constant unemployment in their profession. Decree of December 23, 1930, par 11.

their line of work, though there is constant unemployment in their profession. (Decree of December 23, 1930, par. 11.)

(b) As to the transfer of specialists to other places of work, the nonexecution of such orders is put entirely on the responsibility of the management. (Decree of December 15, par. 15.) Evidently it is supposed that the latter will know how to compel the workers to change their place of work, if necessary by threatening to discharge them. The tribunal has another view on the subject and sentences to hard labor those specialists who have refused to change, when ordered, their place of work. (Pravda, January 6, 1931.) 1931.)

(c) The penalty for leaving work without permission is the measure through which the enslavement of workers has really begun. Already on September 26, 1930, the Isvestia communicated a circular letter of the Labor Commissariat of the Highest Council of National Economy, and of the all-union council of trades-unions, which directed to take away from those harmful bunglers. unions, which directed to take away from those narmful bunglers, loafers, and tramps their pay book, i. e., depriving them in fact of their right to work. At present this question is regulated by paragraph 13 of the decree of December 15, which states: "If the harmful disorganizers of production who leave of their own will and without acceptable reasons the work in enterprises of the socialized sector, apply for work to labor organizations, they must not be given work in industry or on railways during a period of six morths."

To this principal measure of punishment—the deprival of the right to work always or only a period of time—are sometimes added other measures, in Provinces. Thus in Ukrainia the harmful loafers and deserters of work are deprived of the right to receive food products and other necessities from the state. (Ivestia, October 1998) tober 11, 1930.)

COMPLETE ENSLAVEMENT OF WORKERS

If considered separately, each of the above measures might appear not so exceedingly strict; but when put together, they constitute a system which has abolished any freedom of work.

Let us suppose for instance, that a worker registered with the personnel administration would refuse the work offered to him.

He will then lose, forever or for a period of time, the right to be given any kind of work. We know that not only the Soviet institutions and enterprises but also all the private concerns and individuals can not hire a worker without applying to these labor organizations. If the person who refused work offered by these labor organizations can not otherwise find work as shepherd or farm hand (and a woman as a servant), this person will simply starve. Moreover, in connection with the development of col-lectivization and the ruination of the well-to-do classes in Soviet Russia such positions which the outcasts can fill, become rarer and rarer.

Let us suppose now that a worker has decided to change his place of work. If the management of the concern he worked in protests against his leaving his work, he will find himself in a very difficult position, as the labor organizations will refuse to register him and give him any other work.

Finally, let us suppose that a worker refuses to be transferred to a new post, when ordered by his employers to do so. In that case he will be discharged. The personnel administration will register him (there is no legal reason for refusal), but evidently will send him to the post he has just refused.

We see that in final analysis all this clever system of enslavement is based on the fact that the worker is economically dependent on the state. The above-mentioned measures contribute to dent on the state. The above-mentioned measures contribute to enslave the worker precisely because he can not escape their network. The industrial worker is bound to state industries and railways, and there he can work only by submitting to the orders of his employer as to the place and conditions of work, however unbearable such conditions might be. The worker has always to obey as it is the only possibility for him to keep his right to a ration (i. e., to be supplied with food in exchange of part of the money he earns). There can be no doubt as to the fact of the enslavement of the Russian workers. There can also be no doubt money he earns). There can be no doubt as to the fact of the enslavement of the Russian workers. There can also be no doubt that the condition of Russian workers answers the paragraph 307 of the new tariff regulations of the United States, which says: "The term 'compulsory work' in the present regulation, means any work or services required from any person under the threat of a punishment for not executing this work, and work which a worker is not performing of his free will." As seen above, for not accepting the work offered by the personnel administration, the worker is inflicted as severe a punishment as being put, for a worker is inflicted as severe a punishment as being put, for a period of six months, in the category of those who have not the right to work. Moreover, work which can not be left without fear of the same kind of punishment, can not be considered work done of free will.

The civilized world must realize that in buying Soviet products, it is buying products manufactured by means of forced labor. In making such deals, it is wrecking the noble program of social progress projected in the above-mentioned preface of the Statute of the International Labor Bureau, by allowing competition to exist between the production of its free workers and the production of forced labor employed by a country which, in bitter irony, is called the "country of workers and peasants."

II. Agricultural proletariat

HIRED LABOR BEFORE N. E. P. (NEW ECONOMIC POLICY). INTERDICTION OF HIRING LABOR IN PEASANT FARMS

Before the introduction of N. E. P., the problem of hired agricultural labor did not exist in Soviet Russia. The existence of agricultural proletariat was legally admitted only in "sovkhoz" (state farms), i. e., in those few remaining landin "sovkhoz" (state farms), 1. e., in those few remaining landlords' estates which were not divided among the peasants and which were transformed into state farms. In the peasant farms, the hiring of labor was officially prohibited. The idea was that the land, stock, and implements must be either divided among peasant families who can cultivate their land themselves or be taken by the so-called "kolkhoz," 1. e., collective farms (communities and all kinds of associations for the cultivation of land), where there should be no workers and employers, every-body working on the same terms. The cultivation of land by sepa-rate peasant families was the prevailing type of farming adopted by the peasants hamiles was the prevaining type of farming adopted by the peasants, but the soviets, through all kinds of repressive measures and in having the land constantly subdivided among the poorest peasants, soon stopped all development of individual farming. The peasants producing strictly for their own needs and having entirely retired from the market, there could be, at that time, no question as to any extensive hiring of labor.

THE BEGINNING OF A SHARP WEALTH DIFFERENTIATION BETWEEN THE PEASANTS DURING THE TIME OF MILITARY COMMUNISM

The above, however, does not mean that, at that time, there did not exist in villages a movement of differentiation between the peasants, as to property owned. On the contrary, one can assert that it is precisely during this period of the so-called military communism and the following famine that the weakest elements of the peasants not only lost all they could have acquired during the revolution, but even what they had before the revolution. It is in this period that personal property, especially stock, began to pass from the hands of the lower peasant class to the upper class of peasants, the latter having been able, during these upper class of peasants, the latter having been able, during these hard times, to store away surplus of corn, which they gave to other starving peasants in exchange for various personal belongings. At that time also appeared those crowds of "biedniaks" (poor peasants), who, after the origination of N. E. P., passed into the class of farm hands. THE GROWTH OF AGRICULTURAL PROLETARIAT LEGALIZED DURING THE PERIOD OF N. E. P.

This transformation of "biedniaks" into farm hands was dividual farms, such labor was more or less legally authorized only in 1925, during the so-called new N. E. P. period. The law then established working hours and salaries for such hired labor, and the obligation for the employer to insure his workers and give them an allowance in time of disease, etc. The contracts were to be made in a written form and be registered in the village soviet. Special tribunals of peace, to settle differences between workers and employers, were attached to each communal executive committee. All the workers had to be organized into tradeunions. The number of such legally authorized and recognized agricultural workers was rapidly increasing and it reached toward 1927 (together with the workers employed in "sovkhoz") the important figure of 7,500,000. (On the Agrarian Front, Nos. 6-7, 1928, p. 85.) 1928, p. 85.)

THE DIFFICULT FINANCIAL SITUATION OF THIS LEGALLY AUTHORIZED AGRICULTURAL PROLETARIAT DURING THE N. E. P.

What was the position of agricultural workers at that time? It was very bad, as confirmed by trade-unions' representatives, Soviet leaders, and Soviet press. The law regarding the protec-tion of work remained dead letter. "The greatest number of was very bad, as confirmed by trade-unions' representatives, Soviet leaders, and Soviet press. The law regarding the protection of work remained dead letter. "The greatest number of employers and workers do not know the working regulations at all "states, for instance, Poverty, May 21, 1927 (publication especially concerned with peasant life). The legal standing of farm hands both in peasant farms and in state farms was not better than before the revolution, and their financial situation much worse. The salary a farm hand received was, according to the statement of Molotoff on the XV Session of the Party (in 1927), 6 roubles 75 kopeks per month. Several Soviet economists consider it to be slightly higher, but they also recognize that the salary of farm hands represented (in 1926) less than two-thirds of the pre-war salary. (On the Agrarian Front, No. 7, p. 83.) These figures concern not only farm hands employed on peasant farms, but also the workers employed on state farms. The latter are engaged for a certain period of time and paid at the end of their term. In peasant farms the system of engaging journeymen was more usual. "The study of the budget of state farms," it was stated at a conference of "workers of fields and forests," has shown that the salary of the greatest part of the workers is insufficient for the very restricted needs. If one compares the salaries received by workers in "sovkhoz" with those they formerly received in landlords' estates, one will find that these salaries have decreased 25 to 30 per cent.

SURREPTITIOUS EMPLOYING OF HIRED LABOR

However, the majority of agricultural workers were not those "authorized" farm hands. As stated above, the process of sharp property differentiation between various classes of peasants, which property differentiation between various classes of peasants, which started during the period of military communism, took a definite shape in the first years of the N. E. P. All the peasant communities were divided into "real property owners" and "pseudoproperty owners," the latter having become in fact but farm hands, working for the benefit of their richer neighbors. The relative freedom in passing contracts for the hiring of labor and in leasing land, which was established in 1925, was an insufficient remedy to this division of the village into two distinct classes. The wealthy peasants were afraid to show their power too apparently, as the Government has never stopped its fight against them. The result was that the village life was subordinated to a peculiar system of was that the village life was subordinated to a peculiar system of relations between the various classes of peasants, which entirely escaped the Government. A "biedniak" (poor peasant) or "seredniak" (middle peasant) officially appeared as landowners employing hired labor, because they officially rented the implements and stock of richer peasants, sometimes even the services of the latter as journeymen. In fact, it only meant that the land of these "bledniaks" or "seredniaks" has passed into the hands of their richer neighbors, who employed them as farm hands, giving them part of the crops in payment for their land and services.

THE GREAT NUMBER OF "PSEUDOFARMS"

What was the number of such "pseudofarms"? It was very great. There can naturally be no exact statistical figures as to such illicit methods of farming, but one can judge of their expansion by the following fact: In 1926, in western Siberia, 40 per cent sion by the following fact: In 1926, in western sideria, to soviet of farms had neither stock nor implements, according to Soviet of farms had neither stock nor implements, according to Soviet of farms had neither stock nor implements, according to Soviet statistics. (On the Agrarian Front, 1927, No. 6, p. 121.) This figure seems to be more or less an average figure for entire Russia; instance, in Ukrainia farms which had no stock represented 44.8 per cent. (On the Agrarian Front, Nos. 11-12, p. 27.) If one takes into consideration that, according to Soviet press, the collective farms existing at that time were in majority organizations in which the richest peasants exploited surreptitiously the poorest peasants, by compelling them to work as farm hands, one can say, without fear of exaggeration, that after 10 years of Bolshevik power, at least one-half of the Russian rural population was changed into proletarians and, without legal status, made dependent on the richer peasant class.

THE PRESSURE EXERCISED BY THE GOVERNMENT ON THE WEALTHY PEAS-ANTS AND THE STILL GREATER IMPOVERISHMENT OF THE "BIEDNIAKS."

The Soviet Government did not cope with this situation by The Soviet Government did not cope with this situation by improving the condition of the poorest peasants and regularizing their relationship toward the wealthy peasants, but by ruining the wealthy peasants and by kindling against them class hatred among the lowest classes of the village. This naturally resulted in a still greater impoverishment of the "biedniaks." As farming under the pressure of the Soviet Government was regressing, the under the pressure of the Soviet Government was regressing, the demand for help in the farms fell considerably, creating the so-called problem of "peasant overpopulation," and the peasants who had no personal property were simply starving. Thus the interruption of the growing wealth of a class of peasants and the ruination of the richest peasants (in which the Bolsheviks did fully succeed) did not diminish poverty in villages but, on the contrary, made the poverty still greater.

THE CHANGE TO "GENERAL COLLECTIVIZATION"

The change in Stalin's policy, according to which all the farms in Russia had to be "socialized," has entirely altered the aspect of the labor question. Hired labor now exists mostly in state farms. For the rest, the hiring of labor is strictly prohibited only in the districts of "general collectivization." During the period of the violent carrying out of the program "the liquidation of the kulaks (rich peasants) as a class" this applied to enormous territories; but later on, after the famous "retreat" of Stalin, many collective farms fell to pieces and at present individual farms are again the majority. However, the wealthy peasant class received from the soviets such a blow that it could not recover. Therefore the hiring of labor, though not prohibited at present as a general rule, is very limited. Individual farming is doomed to disappear. The future belongs to a new type of collective farms—large agricultural enterprises subordinated to a strict supervision and control on the part of the state and comstrict supervision and control on the part of the state and comprising a great number of peasant farms, with all their land, stock, and implements. In the next few years all peasant Russia will have to accept this new régime. All the farmers will have to join large collective farms, which will take possession of their land and personal property.

HOW IS WORK ORGANIZED IN THE COLLECTIVE FARMS CREATED BY STALIN?-DIFFERENT KINDS OF COLLECTIVE FARMS

How is work organized in these collective farms? In fact, they are state farms, which though supposed to be supervised by elected members of the collective farms, in reality are supervised elected members of the collective farms, in reality are supervised by appointed boards of directors, which are headed by communists sent by the Government for that purpose. However, there exists still a great difference between the "sovkhoz" (state farms) and "kolkhoz" (collective farms). The peasants employed in "sovkhoz" are mere workers who receive a salary for their work. The members of the "kolkhoz" are officially not workers, they are not hired, they live from the revenue of the "kolkhoz," and if they receive any money it is not as a salary but as an advance payment of such revenues. of such revenues.

IN THIS DIFFERENCE LIES THE REASON OF THE ENSLAVEMENT OF COLLECTIVE FARMERS

This difference between state farms and collective farms is not to the benefit of collective farmers. When compared to workers in state farms, the collective farmers are in a still greater bondage. The fact, precisely, that collective farmers are not mere workers who receive a salary for their work, but that they are bound to the collective farm as (officially) its collective owners, is the reason of their enslavement.

TOO MANY MOUTHS TO FEED IN "COLLECTIVE FARMS"

state farms workers are engaged only when needed and at established salaries. It is otherwise in the collective farms where there is no relation between the labor needed and the number of peasants who constitute a collective farm. Land is taken away from a group of farmers, their property is "socialized," and though for the time being the farmers themselves continue to live though for the time being the farmers themselves continue to live in their houses and keep their household belongings, they all depend on the collective farm for their food and other necessities. Already at its origination every "kolkhoz" includes a certain number of people who represent "superfluous labor." Soviet economists figure this excess of rural workers to represent about one-half of all the agricultural labor needed. (On the Agrarian Front, 1930, No. 6, p. 42.) If a "kolkhoz" adopts machinery for the cultivation of land, this excess of labor is still greater. The technical improvement of collective agriculture in U. S. S. R. will only considerably increase this surplus of labor and this "peasant overpopulation," owing to which the "kolkhoz" have too many mouths to feed in comparison to the labor they need.

THE STATE DOES NOT WANT TO FEED THOSE UNWANTED MOUTHS

The Soviet Government is interested that these "mouths" should not put claim on the Government. The mass joining by peasants of the "kolkhoz" was called forth at the beginning by the desire of famished and desperate peasants to receive a governmental allowance, and the "retreat" of Stalin is to a certain extent a "counteraction," which for a time returned the peasants to their former "individual" condition, so as not to have to feed all this mass of starved peasants. Up to the present time, Stalin constantly reminds the local authorities that it is in-admissible to make any comparison between state and collective farms. The members of collective farms must not count upon any help on the part of these collective farms, outside their share in the revenue.

IN ORDER NOT TO BE COMPELLED TO FEED THIS EXCESS OF WORKERS FOR NOTHING AND IN ORDER TO RECEIVE CORN FOR ITS OWN NEEDS, THE GOVERNMENT HAS ORGANIZED FORCED LABOR

The object of the Government is not only to escape feeding "collective farmers," but also to get as much corn as possible from the "kolkhoz." For that purpose, the Soviet Government has established forced labor in the "kolkhoz." Collective farmers are bound to the "kolkhoz." Those who "voluntarily" have joined a "kolkhoz" will not be given land, stock, and implements if they left it. "The kolkhoz is not a thoroughfare," said ments if they left it. "The kolkhoz is not a thoroughfare," said Molotoff at the last session of the party. Where can "collective farmers" go? Any stimulus of work is dead in the "kolkhoz." The maximum ambition of the "kolkhoz" peasant is to be fed. It is very much in Russia at the present time, and this makes the peasant remain in the "kolkhoz." but does not make him work any more intensively. Everybody must be fed in the "kolkhoz." The efforts of the Soviet Government to introduce a piecework system in the "kolkhoz" was unsuccessful precisely because of the necessity to feed all the members of the "kolkhoz." What is there to do? The only thing is to organize forced labor. All the workers of the "kolkhoz" are divided into gangs and sent to work under the most strict discipline. By thus organizing labor the "kolkhoz" are resembling those rare estates in the old times of serfdom in Russia, when the landlords took the land and stock away from peasants in order to organize production on a large away from peasants in order to organize production on a large important career.

TO USE THE WORKERS WHICH ARE NOT NEEDED INSIDE THE "KOLKHOZ" THE GOVERNMENT HAS ORGANIZED FORCED LABOR OUTSIDE THE KOLKHOZ" Forced labor inside the "kolkhoz" under the form of a daily "communistic" service (during the time of serfdom in Russia "communistic" service (during the time of serdom in Russia peasants could be made to work for the landlord only three days a week; this "communistic" exploitation of the peasants would have been considered unlawful in those old times) does not solve the problem of the excess of labor. At the time of serfdom the peasants who were not needed on the estate went away to cities or other centers to earn their living by all kinds of trades, paying only the landlord certain dues. This was rather beneficial for the serf; he paid the landlord a sort of income tax, but otherwise was free and often made a fortune, and sometimes even an important career.

In Soviet Russia the peasant has nowhere to go, as there is no free economic intercourse on the entire territory of Russia. Here, also, the Bolsheviks have to apply compulsion. They have already found a solution of the above problem. Officially, part of the "collective farmers" is put on the "dues" system. In fact, another comparison seems to be more adequate. In the old days of serfdom landlords sometimes established their own factories, employing as workers their own peasants. It was a much more harder service than the work in the fields. Stalin, in transferring part of the "collective farmers" to factories or organizing gangs for all kinds of nonagricultural work, is, in fact, creating a new type of servitude more cruel than the work in the "collective farms." Russia is gradually transformed into an enormous estate, which will produce and manufacture by means of forced labor everything it needs.

Stanley Baldwin, in a statement at the Conservative Party session, at Albert Hall, London, in 1931, stated:

"The Bolsheviks, by bringing engineers from Germany and the United States, and having forced labor at their disposal, are flooding England with cheap merchandise. That is not commerce, but a veritable economic war which is, perhaps, much more dangerous for England than actual warfare. The present situation in Russia can do nothing but having for the beant situation in Russia can do nothing but having for the beant situation.

sia can do nothing but bring fear to the hearts of us all."

We submit herewith official statements made by the various Secretaries of State and other officials with reference to the character and purposes of the Soviet régime, most of which is probably already in your files.

On August 10, 1920, Hon. Bainbridge Colby, Secretary of State, issued a statement against the recognition of the Soviet Union, from which we give the following quotations:

"That the present rulers of Russia do not rule by the will or the consent of any considerable proportion of the Russian people is an incontestable fact. * * * At the moment when the work of creating a popular representative government based upon uni-versal suffrage was nearing completion, the Bolsheviki, although, in number, an inconsiderable minority of the people, by force and cunning seized the powers and machinery of government and have continued to use them with savage oppression to maintain themselves in power. * *

themselves in power. * * *
"It is not possible for the Government of the United States to recognize the present rulers of Russia as a government with which the relations common to friendly governments can be maintained. This conviction has nothing to do with any parmaintained. This conviction has nothing to do with any particular political or social structure which the Russian people themselves may see fit to embrace. It rests upon a wholly different set of facts. These facts, which none dispute, have convinced the Government of the United States, against its will, that the existing régime in Russia is based upon the negation of every principle of honor and good faith, and every usage and convention, underlying the whole structure of international laws the vention, underlying the whole structure of international law; the negation, in short, of every principle upon which it is possible to base harmonious and trustful relations, whether of nations or of individuals. The responsible leaders of the régime have frequently and openly boasted that they are willing to sign agreements and undertakings with foreign powers while not having the slightest intention of observing such undertakings or carry-the slightest intention of observing such undertakings or carrying out such agreements. They have made it quite plain that they intend to use every means to promote revolutionary movements in other countries. * * * "In view of this Government, there can not be any common ground upon which it can stand with a power whose conceptions of international relations are so entirely allen to its own, so utterly repugnant to its moral sense. There can be no mutual confidence or trust, no respect even, if pledges are to be given and agreements made with a cynical repudiation of their obligations already in the mind of one of the parties. We can not recognize, hold official relations with, or give friendly reception to the agents of a government which is determined and bound to conspire against our institutions, whose diplomats will be the conspire against our institutions, whose diplomats will be the agitators of dangerous revolt, whose spokesmen say that they sign agreements with no intention of keeping them." * *

On March 25, 1921, Hon. Charles Evans Hughes, then Secretary of State, said: "It is man "It is manifest to this Government that in existing circumstances there is no assurance for the development of trade, as stances there is no assurance for the development of trade, as the supplies which Russia might now be able to obtain would be wholly inadequate to meet her needs and no lasting good can result so long as the present causes of progressive impoverishment result so long as the present causes of progressive impoverishment continue to operate. It is only in the productivity of Russia that there is any hope for the Russian people and it is idle to expect resumption of trade until the economic bases of production are securely established. Production is conditioned upon the safety of life, the recognition by firm guaranties of private property, the sanctity of contract, and the rights of free labor. If fundamental changes are contamplated involving due regard for the mental changes are contemplated, involving due regard for the protection of persons and property and the establishment of con-ditions essential to the maintenance of commerce, this Governditions essential to the maintenance of commerce, this Government will be glad to have convincing evidence of the consummation of such changes, and until this evidence is supplied this Government is unable to perceive that there is any proper basis for considering trade relations."

President Calvin Coolidge, at a joint session of the Senate and House of Representatives, on December 6, 1923, on the convening of Congress, stated:

"I do not propose to be the presentation of the senate and the post propose to be the presentation of the senate and the post propose to be the presentation of the senate and the post propose to be presentation."

of Congress, stated:

"I do not propose to barter away for the privilege of trade any of the cherished rights of humanity. I do not propose to make merchandise of any American principles. These rights and principles must go wherever the sanctions of our Government go."

The Department of State, officially addressing the press, on September 18, 1922, said:

"The text of a statement by the Soviet authorities concerning the inquiry recently made with regard to their attitude, should this Government consider sending to Russia in the future an expert technical commission to study and report on the economic situation there, has been received at the State Department. It is not different in purport from the text reported in press dispatches from Moscow September 15. In view of the definite refusal contained therein, the matter is considered to be ter-

On March 21, 1923, Hon. Charles Evans Hughes, Secretary of State, stated, in part:

"Not only would it be a mistaken policy to give encouragement to repudiation and confiscation, but it is also important to remember that there should be no encouragement to those efforts of the Soviet authorities to visit upon other people the disasters that have overwhelmed the Russian people. I wish that I could believe that such efforts had been abandoned. Last November, Zinoviev said: 'The eternal in the Russian revolution is the fact that it is the beginning of the world revolution.' Lenin, before the last Congress of the Third International last fall, said that 'the revolutionists of all countries must learn the organization, the planning, the method, and the substance of revolutionary work. Then I am convinced,' he said, 'the outlook of the world revolution will not convinced, he said, the outlook of the world revolution will not be good but excellent.' And Trotsky, addressing the Fifth Congress of the Russian Communist Youths at Moscow last October—not two years ago, but last October—said this: 'That means, comrades, that revolution is coming in Europe as well as in America, systematically step by step, stubbornly and with gnashing of teeth in both camps. It will be long protracted, cruel, and sanguinary."

On December 19, 1923, the Department of State issued to the press a release for publication:

"The Department of State made public to-day the text of in-structions given by Zinoviev, president of the Communist Inter-national and president of the Petrograd Soviet, to the Workers' Party of America, the communist organization in the United States. The Department of Justice has assured the Department of State of the authenticity of these instructions. The Communist International, with headquarters at Moscow, is the organ of the Communist Party for international propaganda. The Soviet régime in Russia is the organ of the Communist Party for the governing of Russia. As Steklov, member of the Russian Communist Party and of the All-Russian Central Executive Committee and editor of the Izvestia, official organ of the Soviet régime, has stated in this official paper:

"The close organic and spiritual connection between the Soviet Republic and the Communist International can not be doubted.

And even if this connection had not been admitted many times by both sides, it would be clear to everybody as an established fact.

* This connection is not merely of a spiritual but also of a rial and palpable character. * * * The mutual solidarity material and palpable character. * * * The mutual solidarity of the Soviet Republics and the Communist International is an accomplished fact. In the same degree as the existence and the stability of Soviet Russia are of importance to the Third International, the strengthening and the development of the Communist International is of great moment to Soviet Russia."

The following is an account from a content on titled "Economy."

The following is an excerpt from a statement entitled "Foreign Relations," by the Hon. Frank B. Kellogg, Secretary of State, published in 1928:

"* * No State has been able to obtain the payment of debts contracted by Russia under preceding governments or the indemnification of its citizens for confiscated property. Indeed, there is every reason to believe that the granting of recognition and the holding of discussions have served only to encourage the present rulers of Russia in their policy of repudiation and confiscation, as well as in their hope that it is possible to establish a working basis, accepted by other nations, whereby they can continue their war on the existing political and social order in other nations.

"Current developments demonstrate the continued persistence "Current developments demonstrate the continued persistence of Moscow of a dominating world revolutionary purpose and the practical manifestation of this purpose in such ways as render impossible the establishment of normal relations with the Soviet Government. The present rulers of Russia, while seeking to direct the evolution of Russia along political, economic, and social lines in such manner as to make it an effective 'base of the world revolution,' continue to carry on, through the Communist International and other organizations with headquarters at Moscow, within the borders of other nations, including the United States, extensive and carefully planned operations for the pur-States, extensive and carefully planned operations for the purpose of ultimately bringing about the overthrow of the existing order in such nations."

Hon. Charles Evans Hughes, now Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, in a 500-page memorandum submitted to the Senate on January 21, 1924, in his capacity as Secretary of State, is quoted in part as follows:

"It is believed that the evidence presented by the Department of State (to a Senate committee considering the recognition of the Soviet Government) establishes the unity of the Bolshevik organization known as the Communist Party, so-called Soviet Government, and the Communist International, all of which are controlled by a small group of individuals technically known as the political bureau of the Russian Communist Party. Second, the trolled by a small group of individuals technically known as the political bureau of the Russian Communist Party. Second, the spiritual and organic connection between this Moscow group and its agents in this country—the American Communist Party and its legal counterpart, the Workers' Party. Not only are these organizations the creation of Moscow, but the latter has also elaborated their program and controlled and supervised their activities. While there may have existed in the United States individuals and even groups imbued with the Marxist doctrines prior to the advent of the Communist International, the existence of a disciplined party equipped with a program aiming at the overthrow of the institutions of this country by force and violence is due to the intervention of the Bolshevik organizations into the domestic political life of the United States. The essential fact is the existence of an organization in the United States created by the existence of an organization in the United States created by and completely subservient to a foreign organization striving to overthrow the existing social and political order of this country. Third, the subversive and pernicious activities of the American Communist Party and the Workers' Party and their subordinate and alied organs in the United States are activities resulting from the flowing out of the program elaborated for them by the Moscow group."

Moscow group."

In presenting this petition we wish to stress the close relationship and unity of the Communist Party, the Third (Communist) International, and the Soviet Government, as brought out in the various State Department statements given above, for the purpose of submitting that any statements made by any one of these organizations is equally binding on the other and has in reality the support and approval of the other groups, and that the use of three separate names for groups that have the identical purposes is solely as a subterfuge to avoid responsibility of one or purposes is solely as a subterruge to avoid responsibility of one or more of the groups, the Soviet Government in particular.

The Third International is the child of Lenin, and its policies are dictated by the political bureau of the Communist Party. To illustrate the interlocking directorates of these three bodies, we give the case of Zinovieff (or Zinoviev) (who was referred to in the State Department reports): In 1924, Zinoviev ranked next to Stalin in power in the Russian Communist Party, when Lenin was the Soviet dictator, belong at that time a member of the political contents. was the Soviet dictator, being at that time a member of the politrical bureau and central committee of the Russian Communist Party; a member of the all-Russian central executive committee of the Russian Soviet Republic, and a member of the federation central executive committee of the Federation of Soviet Republics; and at the same time on the executive committee of the Communist International, and chairman of the presidium of executive committee. At the Fourth Congress of the International, speaking on the relations of the Communist International and the Communist Party, Zinoviev stated:

"It would be laughable to ask who has the advantages and who is the subject and who is the object. It is the foundation and roof of the same building. One belongs to the other."

The attached chart, submitted as part of this petition, gives the actual connections of the high officials in Soviet Russia in the Communist Pary, the Third International, and the Soviet Government, and is submitted as evidence that the policies and actions of the one are identical to the other.

Chart showing control by the All-Union (formerty Russian) Communist Party of the Government of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics and of the International Revolutionary Organizations

[Abbreviations are shown at the end of the table]

	All-Union (form	Bolsheviks).	nunist Party (of	Union of Soviet Socialist Republics (U. S. S. R.)
Political bureau (I), (2) Mb: 10; Alt: 3	Organization bu- resu (1), (2) Mb: 10; Alt: 4	Central commit- tee (1), (2) Mb: 69; Alt: 67	Central control commission (1), (2), (33) Mb: 187	Central executive committee of the U. S. S. R. (Mb: 610) and its Presidium (x) (Mb: 27; Alt: 23) (3), (4)	Soviet of People's Commissars of U. S. S. R. (4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16) (52)	Soviet of Labor and Defense (STO) (14), (17)	All-Union Central Soviet of Labor Union (x), Pre- sidium (y), and Secretariat (2) (18, 14, 19, 20)
Kaganovich	Control of the Contro	M. (8).		Kaganovich, L. M. (x). Kalinin, M. I.(P)		A STATE OF THE PARTY OF THE PAR	Kaganovich (x, y)
Kirov Kosior, St Kuibyshev		Kirov, S. M Kesior, St. V Kuibyshev, V. V		Kirov, S. M. (x) Kosior, St. V. (x) Kuibyshev, V. V		Kuibyshev, V. V. (VP).	Kuibyshev (x).
Molotov	and the second second	Molotev, V. M Ordzhonikidze, G.	Ordzhonikidze, G.	Molotov, V. M Ordzhonikidze, G.	Molotov, V. M. (P) (4). Ordzhonikidze, G. K.	Molotov, V. M. (P). Ordzhonikidze, G.	Ordzhonikidze (x)
Rudzutak	Stalin	K. Rudzutak, Ya. E. Stalin, I. V. (GS). Voroshilov, K. E. Chubar, V. Ya. Mikoyan, A. I. Petrovsky, G. I.	K. Rudzutak, Ya. E. (P) (33).	K. Rudzutak, Ya. E. (x). Stalin, I. V. Voroshilov, K. E. Chubar, V. Ya. (x). Mikoyan, A. 1. Petrovsky, G. I.	(4). Rudzutak, Ya. E. (VP) (4). Voroshilov, K. E. (4) Mikoyan, A. I. (4)	K. Rudzutak, Ya. E. (VP). Stalin, I. V. Voroshilov, K. E. Mikoyan, A. I.	Rudzutak (x).
Tenovary (A)				(P) (x).			Abolin, A. K. (y, z) (S).
	Series and the series of the s	The second secon	Akulov, I. A	(x). Akulov, I. A.			Akulov (x).
		Amosov, A. M. (A).		Amosov, A. M	Amosov, A. M. (AC)		Amosov (x, y).
		Antipov, N. K	Andreyev, A. A. (33).	Andreyev, A. A. (x). Antipov, N. K	Andreyev, A. A. (6) Antipov, N. K. (AC)	Andreyev, A. A. (VP).	Andreyev (x).
		Antselovich, N. M. (A).		Antselovich, N. M.	(7). Antselovich, N. M. (AC) (8).		Antselovich (x, y, z) (S). Avdeyeva, (x, y).
	Bauman	Bauman, K. Ya. (S).	Belenky, Z. M	Bauman, K. Ya	Belenky, Z. M. (AC)		111403014, (2, 3).
	Bubnov	Bryukhanov, N. P. (A). Bulat, I. L. (A) Bubnov, A. S Bukharin, N. I		Bryukhanov, N. P. Bulat, I. L. Bubnov, A. S.	(16). Bryukhanov, N. P. (AC) (9).
		Bukuarii, N. I	Chemodanov, V.
	Događov, (A)	Događov, A. I. (A). Eliava, Sh. Z. (A).		Dogadov, A. I Eliava, Sh. Z			Događov (x).
Sa Page 5			Enukidze, A. S Evreinov, N. N	Enukidze, A. S. (S) (x). Evreinov, N. N	(10)	A CONTRACTOR OF THE CONTRACTOR	Evreinov (x, y, z) (S). Figatner (x).
	Gamarnik	Gamarnik, Ya. B. Gei, K. V. (A)	Figatner, Yu. P	Gamarnik, Ya. B. Gei, K. V	Gamarnik, Ya. B. (AC) (11).		Figatner (x).  Gei (x).
		Kalmanovich, M. I. (A).	Gusev, S. I	Kalmanovich, M.	Grinko, G. F. (4) Kalmanovich, M. I. (AC) (12).	Grinko, G. F Kalmanovich, M. I.
		Khloplyankin, M. I. (A).	Kirkizh, K. O	Khloplyankin, M. I. Kirkizh, K. O	Khlopiyankin, M. I. (AC) (13).		Kirkizh, K. O. (x,
	Kosarev (A)	Knorin, V. G Kosarev, A. V. (A)		Kosarev, A. V Khodzhayev, F.			у).
		Kosior, I. V		(P) (x). Kosior, I. V	Kosior, I. V. (AC) (14) Krinitsky, A. I. (AC) (14).
		G. M. Lyubimov, I. E		Krzhizhanovsky, G. M. Litvinov, M. M Lyubimov, I. E	Litvinov, M. M. (4) Lyubimov, I. E. (52) _		Lyubimov (x).
	Lobov	Lobov, S. S. Lozovsky, S. A. (A). Manuilsky, D. Z.		Lobov, S. S.	Lobov, S. S. (52)		Lozovsky (x, y).
		Mezhlauk, V. I.	Milyutin, V. P	Mezhiauk, V. I Milyutin, V. P	Mezhlauk, V. I. (AC) (15). Milyutin, V. P. (AC)		Melnichansky (x)
	Moskvin	Moskvin, I. M. (AS). Mussabekov, G.		Mussabekov, G.	(14).

Chart showing control by the All-Union (formerty Russian) Communist Party of the Government of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics and of the International Revolutionary Organizations—Continued

	All-Union	(formerly Russian Bolshevil	) Comn ks)	nunist Party (of		U	nion of S	oviet Socialist	Republics (U. S. S. I	2.)
Political bureau (1), (1) Mb: 10; Alt; 3	Organization reau (1), (2) 10; Alt: 4		ommit-	Central contr commission (1 (2), (33) Mb: 14	), (Mb: 610)	of R	Com	of People's missars of U. S. (4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, , 12, 13, 14, 15, 2)	Soviet of Labor and Defense (STO) (14), (17)	All-Union Centra Soviet of Labor Union (x), Pre sidium (y), and Secretariat (z) (18, 14, 19, 20)
Petrovsky (A)	The second second		A COLUMN	the fall on sall	(P) (x).	м.	3 700
	The second second second second			Ozersky, A. V Pavlunovsky, P.	I. Pavlunovsky P. (xA).		Pavlum (AC)	ovsky, I. P.
	Postyshev	Perepechko (A). Pyatnitsky, Postyshev,	, I. A		Perepechko, Postyshev, P					(S) (x, y, z) (19)
		Rykov A	I	Rozengoltz, A. I	Rykov A I	N. P	Rykov,	A. I. (7)		Schmidt (x).
	Shvernik	Shvernik, N	N. M		Shvernik, N. (x). Skrypnik, N.					Schwartz (x). Shvernik, N. M (S) (y, z).
	Emirnov, A. P	Strievsky, E	K. K.	Soltz, A. A	Strievsky, K.	K				Strievsky, K.K.(y
	Tsikhon (A)	Tomsky, M	I. P		Tomsky, M.	P	Tsikho	n, A. M. (4)		Tsikhon, A. M
		Unshlikht,	I. S.		Unshlikht, I.		(AC)	ht, I. S. (AC)		(4, 3).
		Veinberg, (A). Yakovlev, Y	Ya. A	Yanson, N. M.	Yakovlev, Ya Yanson, N. M	a. A	Yakovi Yanson	ev, Ya. A. (4)	Yakovlev, Ya. A.	Veinberg, G. D (x, y, z) (S).
			102	Yaroslavsky, En (S).	1. Yaroslavsky,	Em.	127			Yuzefovich, I. S. (x).
	c	ommunist Interna	ational		Red Interna- tional of labor unions
Political bureau (1), (2), Mb: 10; Alt. 3	Executive committee (x) international control commission (y) (21) and commission for Working out the program of Communist International (z) (22)	Presidium of executive committee (x) and political secretariat (y) (23)	es a vari sion: mur	ates to congress- nd members of ous commis- s of the Com- nist Interna- al (24)	Central Soviet (x) and execu- tive bureau (y) (25), (26)			I	Remarks (27*)
Kaganovich	STORY OF THE STORY OF THE STORY	Control of the second of the second of the	100 CO 100 CO	novich (V, VI)		10-24		Moscow Ob	soviet of Moscow M l. Party Committee	(28).
Kalinin			Kirov	(VI)r (V, VI)		P. n	nb. 1904	(29). S. of Leningra Obl. E. C. ( S. G. of Ukrai	nian Party Central (	of Pres. of Leningrad Committee (31).
Molotov	folotov, V. M. (x, z).		Ordzh	r (V, VI) yshev (V, VI) tov (V, VI) nonikidze (VI) utak (V, VI)		P. n	nb. 1904 nb. 1906 nb. 1903 nb. 1905		tee on Fuel at STO ( sion of Review (17). is, of Review (8); C
Rudzutak Stalin S Voroshilov S	talin, I. V. (x, z).	Stalin, I. V. (x)	Stalin Vorosi	(V, VI)		P. n	nb. 1898 nb. 1903	Peas. Insp. STO (32).	(33); P. of Com. of	n Transportation at
Chubar (A) Mikoyan (A) Petrovsky (A)						P. n	nb. 1907 nb. 1915 nb. 1897	Ukrain, Cor	n Sovnarkom (34); M n. Party (31). an C. E. C. (34); M n. Party (31).
CARSON SECTION					(26).	P. n	nb. 1908 nb. 1922 nb. 1907	editor of True P. of Turkmen First Vice Pre	of "Red Intem, of I ad until Dec. 16, 1931 a Centr. Exec. Commesident of United Sta	abor Unions" (35); (36).— nittee (37).
			Amoso	ov (V)	Amosov (x)	Р. п	nb. 1914	istration (38 Mb. of Budge Railway Tr		(37); P. of C. C. o
			Antsel	lovich (V, VI)		P. n	nb. 1905	at STO (63) Mb. of Gospl Commis. U	t Commis. (37); P. of an of U. S. S. R. (	Com. on Inventions 40); Mb. of Budget

Charl showing control by the All-Union (formerty Russian) Communist Party of the Government of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics and of the International Revolutionary Organizations—Continued

	c	ommunist Interna	ational	Red interna- tional of labor unions
Political bureau (1), (2), Mb: 10; Alt. 3	Executive committee (x) international control commission (y) (21) and commission for working out the program of Communist International (z) (22)		Delegates to congresses and members of various commissions of the communist International (24)	Central Soviet (x) and executive bureau (y) (25), (26)	Remarks (27*)
Petrovsky (A)			Bauman (VI) Belenky (V)		P. mb. 1907 P. mb. 1905
			Bubnov (V, VI)	Bulat (vA) (26)	P. mb. 1902 P. mb. 1912	Mb. of Presid. of Budget Commis. of U. S. S. R. (37)
			The second secon		The same work	Com-ar for Education of RSFSR (29); Mb. of Gospla of USSR (40); Mb. of Budget Commis. of USSR (37
	Bukharin, N. I.		Bukharin (V. VI)		P. mb. 1906	Mb. of Presid. of VSNH of U. S. S. R. & Chief of i Scientific Research Sector (14).
		Chemodanov (x, yA).			P. mb. 1924	Polit. S. of Young Communists International (41).
			Chervyakov (V, VI)		The second second	P. of White Russian Central Executive Committee (42).
			Dogadov (V, VI)	Događov (x)	P. mb. 1905	Mb. of Budget Commis. of USSR (37); Del. to Cong Profintern in 1928 (39).
			Enukidze (V. VI)		P. mb. 1904 P. mb. 1898 P. mb. 1912	Mb. of Budget Commis. of U. S. S. R. (37). P. of Central Election Commission, U. S. S. R. (43)
					P. mo. 1912	From Bergary of Profinters until Aug 1020 (44)
	William Control of the Control of th	AND DESCRIPTIONS OF THE PARTY O	Company and the second		P. mb. 1903	Mb. of Presid. of VSNH of USSR (14); Mb. of Presid. All-Un. Sov. of Communal Economy (57). Mb. of Budget Commis. of USSR (37); Chief of PURE
				DESCRIPTION OF THE PROPERTY OF	100	KA (45); VOIOSIIIOV'S SUBSTITUTE IN STO (46).
			Gusev (V, VI)	Gei, K. V. (x)	P. mb. 1916 P. mb. 1919	S. of White Russian Party C. C. (47).
	(YA)	(TA)				Chief of Press Dept. of Party C. C. since 1928 (48).
	Khitarov (x, z)		Khitarov (VI)		P. mb. 1917 P. mb. 1919	P. of State Bank of U. S. S. R. (14).
					P. MD. 1914	Mb. of Budget Commis. USSR (37); P. of C. C. Machine Building Workers (14); A. M. b. of E.
	Vaccin V.C. (r.4 v.)		From (V VI)		D mb 1010	Bureau of Profintern until Ang 1030 (44)
of the the second	Knorin, V.G.(xA, y)		Knorin (V, VI) Kosarev (V)		P. mb. 1910. P. mb. 1919	Mb. of Gosplan of USSR (49); S. G. of All-Un. Youn
			Khodzhayev (V)		P. mb. 1920	Comm. Union (50). P. of Uzbek Sovnarkom (51).
			Krzhizhanovsky (V)		P. mb. 1908 P. mb. 1915 P. mb. 1893	Mb. of Gosplan of U. S. S. R. (40). Mb. of Presid. of VSNH of USSR (62); Mb. of Gospla
			Kizinzuanovsky (V).		P. mb. 1898	of USSR (62); VP of Academy of Science (30).
					P. mb. 1902 P. mb. 1912	Mb. of Budget Commis. of U. S. S. R. (37).
	Lozovsky, S. A.	(T. V.A)	Lozovsky (V, VI)	(US).	P. mb. 1900
	Manuilsky (x, z).	Manuilsky (x,	Manuilsky (V, VI)		P. mb. 1904
			Melnichansky (V)	Melnichansky (x).	P. mb. 1902
			Milyutin (V, VI)	77.00	P. mb. 1917 P. mb. 1903	P. of Society of Agrarian Marxists (14).
					P. mb. 1911 P. mb. 1919	Mb. of Presid. of VSNH of U. S. S. R. (14). P. of Trans-Caucasus Sovnarkom (53).
					P. mb. 1917	P of Tadzhik Central Executive Committee (54)
					P. mb. 1905 Pr mb. 1914	Trade Representative in England (55).  Mb. of Budget Commission of U. S. S. R. (37).  Mb. of Presid. of All-Un. Soviet of Communal Econom
	Pyatnitsky (x)	Pyatnitsky (x,	Pyatnitsky (V, VI)	Pyatnitsky (x,	P. mb. 1898	(57); Del. to Congress of Profintern in 1928 (39).
		у).	Postyshev (VI)	v) (26)	P. mb. 1904	Mb. of Commis. of Review (17); S. & Mb. of Politi
			-1		P. mb. 1905	bureau of Ukr. Comparty (31).
	Rykov, A. I. (x, z)		Rykov (V, VI) Sehmidt (V, VI)		P. mb. 1899 P. mb. 1905	Del. to Congr. of Profintern in 1928 (39); Mb. of Budge
			Schwartz (V, VI)	Schwartz (x)	P. mb. 1899	Del. to Congr. of Profintern in 1928 (39); Mb. of Budge Commis, of USSR (37); Chief Arbiter at STO (56). Del. to Congress of Profintern in 1928 (39).
			a	198)	P. mb. 1905	Mb. of Commiss. of Review (17); Mb. of Gospian, USS. (40): Mb. of Presid of VSNH of USSR (14).
	Skrypnik N. A. (x, z).		Skrypnik (V)		P. mb. 1897	The state of the s
	-2-11-11-1-11-11-11-11-11-11-11-11-11-11		Smirnov (VI) Soltz (V, VI)		P. mb. 1896	P. of All-Un. Soviet of Communal Economy (57).
	Soltz, A. A. (y)				P. mb. 1000	mb. of Presid, of Supreme Court, RSFSR&F. of Conmission Private Amnesty Cases at VTSIK (58).
			Stuchka (V, VI)		P mb 1007	Education of Ukr. SSR (34); Mb. of Politbureau of Ukr. Comparty (31).  P. of All-Un. Soviet of Communal Economy (57).  Mb. of Presid, of Supreme Court, RSFSR&P, of Commis, for Private Amnesty Cases at VTSIK (58).  Mb. of Budget Commis. USSR (37); P, of VSNH of RSFSR (29); Mb. of Presid. of VSNH of USSR (14).  P. of Supreme Court of RSFSR (58); Director of Moscov Institute of Soviet Law (50)
	2)				P. mb. 1905
			Tomsky (VI)	Tormosove /r	P. mb. 1905 P. mb. 1904.	1. 01 SOVIIM RUIL R.S.F.S.R. (29).
	1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1	TO COME AND DESIGNATION AND ADDRESS OF THE PARTY OF THE P	The state of the s	yA) (26).	P. mb. 1906	Mh of Budget Commission of H C 9 P (97)
			Tskhakaya (VI)		P. mb. 1898	Mb. of Budget Commission of U. S. S. R. (37). P. of Trans-Caucasus Central Executive Committee
	(y).		Ukhanov (VI)		P. mb. 1907	(51), P. of Moscow Obl. Exec. Com. and Mb. of Presid. of
			Unshlikht (V, VI)	and the second	P. mb. 1900	One of the foundary of the MOPP in 1922 (60): P
			Cusinikus (v, vi)	200000000000000000000000000000000000000	1. mo. 1900	Moscow Sov. & Moscow City Exec. Com.(14). One of the founders of the MOPR in 1923 (60); P. o "Oscaviakhim" of USSR & RSFSR (61).

Chart showing control by the All-Union (formerly Russian) Communist Party of the Government of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics and of the International Revolutionary

Communist Inte		ommunist Interna	tional	Red interna- tional of labor unions
Political bureau (1), (2), Mb: 10; Alt. 3	Executive committee (x) international control commission (y) (21) and commission for working out the program of Communist International (z) (22)	Presiduum of executive committee (x) and political secretariat (y) (23)	Delegates to congresses and members of various commissions of the communist International (24)	Central Soviet (x) and executive bureau (y) (25), (25)	Remarks (27*)
Petrovsky (A)	Yaroslavsky, Em.				P. mb. 1913 P. mb. 1905 P. mb. 1898 P. of Central Soviet of Militant Atheists (Bezbozhniks)
	(xA).		Yuzefovich (V, VI)	Yuzefovich (x, y) (26).	(14). P. mb. 1917
e day te samuel			ABBR	EVIATIONS
A	Alternate member.			MOPR	International Red Aid.
				Obl	Oblast.
A8	Assistant commissar Assistant secretary.			O. G. P. U	United State Political Administration, IIM. Society for Air and Chemical Defanse.
All-Un	All-Union.			OSOAVIAKI	IIM. Society for Air and Chemical Defanse.
All-Ukr	All-Ukrainian.			P	President.
C. C.	Central committee.			Presid.	Presidium.
C. E. C.	Central executive co	mmittee.		P. mb	Party member.
Com	Committee.			P. C	Party committee.
Com-ar	Commissar.		Complete Complete Complete	Profintern	Red International of Labor Unions.
Comm	Communist.			PURKKA	Political Administration of the Red Army.
Commis	Commission.			Repres	Representative. Revolutionary Military Soviet.
Congr	Congress.			Revvoensoviet	Revolutionary Military Soviet.
Colleg	Collegium.			8	Secretary,
Comintern	Communist Interna	tional.		8G	Secretary General.
Del	Delegate.			Sov	Soviet.
Distr	District.			Sovnarkom	Soviet of People's Commissars.
E. C	Executive Committe	00.		810	Soviet of Labor and Defense.
Edit	Editor.			Тт	Trade.
Educ	Educational.				Turkmen.
Empl	Employees.		HILL STORES	Uzb	Uzbek.
Ex	International Comm	ittee of Workman		VP	Vice president.
I. C. W	International Comm	neted of workmen.		VSNH	Supreme Soviet of National Economy.
InternMb	International.			VTSIK	All-Russian Central Executive Committee,  Data concerning party membership appearing in this column

SOVIET OF PEOPLE'S COMMISSARS OF THE U. S. S. R.

President, V. M. Molotov; vice presidents, Ya. E. Rudzutak, V. V. Kuibushev; commissar for foreign affairs, M. M. Litvinov; assistant commissars, N. N. Krestinsky, L. M. Karakhan; commissar for military and naval affairs, K. E. Voroshilov; assistant commissars, Ya. B. Gamarnik, M. N. Tukhachevsky, S. S. Kamenev; commissars for supply, A. I. Mikoyan; assistant commissars, K. V. Ukhanov, N. P. Bryukhanov, M. I. Khloplyankin, M. A. Chernov, P. Ya. Volkov, M. N. Belenky; commissar for workers' and peasants' inspection, Ya. E. Rudzutak; assistant commissars, N. K. Antipov, N. M. Antselovich, G. E. Prokofiev, Z. M. Belenky, A. I. Krinitsky; commissar for ways of communication, A. A. Andreyev; assistant commissar (first), I. N. Mironov, assistant commissars (second), G. I. Blagonravov; assistant commissars, P. S. Shushkov, A. M. Amosov, V. S. Shatov; commissar for foreign trade, A. P. Rosengeltz; assistant commissars, S. K. Sudyin, A. V. Ozersky, Sh. Z. Aliava, I. Ya. Veitzer; commissar for post and telegraph, A. I. Rykov; assistant commissars, A. M. Lyubovich, M. L. Granovsky; commissar for agriculture, Ya. A. Yakovley; assistant commissars, I. G. Birn, S. S. Odintsov, A. V. Odintsov, T. A. Yurkin, P. D. Akulinushkin, F. A. Tsylko, A. M. Markevich; assistant commissar (for forestry), A. V. Grinevich; commissar for labor, A. M. Tsikhon; assistant commissar, I. A. Kravel; commissar for finance, G. F. Grinko; assistant commissars, V. N. Mantsev, M. I. Kalmanovich, E. B. Genkin, R. Ya. Levin; commissar for water transport, N. M. Yanson; assistant commissars, V. I. Zof, V. I. Fomin, E. F. Rozental; commissar for heavy industry, G. K. Ordzonikidze (formerly supreme sovereign of national economy); assistant commissars for sasistant commissar for black metallurgy, A. I. Gurevich; assistant commissar for aviation industry, P. I. Baranov; commissar for light industry, I. E. Lyubimov; assistant commising; M. M. Kaganovich; assistant commissar for black metallurgy, A. I. Gurevich; assistant commissar for aviation industry, P. I. Baranov; commissar for light industry, I. E. Lyubimov; assistant commissars, I. G. Eremin, A. M. Fushman, M. M. Karklin, P. Ya. Voronova; commissar for the timber industry, S. S. Lobov; assistant commissars, I. G. Rudakov, A. K. Albert, K. Ya. Rozental; president of state plan commission (gosplan), V. V. Kuibyshev, vice president (first), V. I. Mezhlauk; vice presidents, I. G. Unshlikht, I. T. Smilga, V. V. Osinsky, V. P. Milyutin, G. I. Lomov, L. N. Kritzman.

SOVIET OF PEOPLE'S COMMISSARS OF THE R. S. F. S. R.

President, D. E. Sulimov; vice president, D. Z. Lebed; vice president, T. R. Ryskulov; commissar for labor, M. M. Romanov; commissar for workers' and peasants' inspection, N. I. Ilyin; commissar for agriculture, A. I. Muralov; commissar for justice, N. V. Krylenko; commissar for finance, V. N. Yakovleva; commissar for supply, N. V. Elsmont; commissar for education, A. S. Bubnov; commissar for health, M. F. Vladimirsky; commissar for social welfare, I. A. Nagovitsyn; commissar for communal economy, N. P. Komarov; commissar for light industry, K. K. Strievsky; president of state-plan commissariat, M. I. Rogov.

SOVIET OF PEOPLE'S COMMISSARS OF UKRAINIAN S. S. R.

President, V. Ya. Chubar; vice president, A. M. Dudnik; vice president, A. K. Serbichenko; vice president, V. P. Zatonsky; vice president, D. I. Petrovsky; vice president, V. I. Poraiko; commissar for labor, K. M. Gulyi; commissar for workers' and peasants' inspection, V. P. Zatonsky; commissar for agriculture, N. N. Demchenko; commissar for justice, Polyakov; commissar for finance, K. F. Koval; commissar for supply, Malorov; commissar for education, N. A. Skrypnik; commissar for health, Kantorovich; commissar for social welfare, G. N. Pokornyi; commissar for light industry, K. V. Sukhomlin; plenipotentiary for military and naval affairs, I. E. Yakir; plenipotentiary for ways of communication, S. L. Shimanovsky; plenipotentiary for foreign affairs, S. S. Alexandrovsky; plenipotentiary for foreign trade, M. A. Kattel; plenipotentiary for water transport, S. N. Krupko.

SOVIET OF PEOPLE'S COMMISSARS OF WHITE RUSSIAN S. S. R.

SOVIET OF PEOPLE'S COMMISSARS OF WHITE BUSSIAN S. S. R.

SOVIET OF PEOPLE'S COMMISSARS OF WHITE RUSSIAN S. S. R. President, N. M. Goloded; vice president, K. F. Benek; vice president, A. Ya. Kalnin; vice president, G. P. Grisevich; commissar for labor, K. F. Benek; commissar for workers' and peasants' inspection, A. Ya. Kalnin; commissar for agriculture, Rachitsky; commissar for justice, M. A. Levkov; commissar for finance, A. I. Khatzkevich; commissar for supply, Baltin; commissar for education, A. M. Platun; commissar for health, M. I. Barsukov; commissar for social welfare, P. U. Kalinin; commissar for light industry, G. P. Grisevich; plenipotentiary for military and naval affairs, I. P. Uborevich; plenipotentiary for foreign trade, A. Ya. Reder; plenipotentiary for post and telegraph, A. V. Dubin; plenipotentiary for water transport, N. D. Ershov.

SOVIET OF PEOPLE'S COMMISSARS OF TRANS-CAUCASUS S. F. S. R.

President, G. Mussabekov; více president, S. M. Ter-Gabrielyan; commissar for labor, Ragimov; commissar for workers' and peasants' inspection, Dogadov; commissar for justice and public prosecutor, A. G. Dolidze; commissar for finance, Vagan Eremyan; commissar for supply, Svanidze; commissar for light industry, Kurulov; plenipotentiary for military and naval aff. Fedko; plenipotentiary for foreign affairs, N. F. Sivolap.

SOVIET OF PEOPLE'S COMMISSARS OF TURKMEN S. S. R.

President, Kh. Atabayev; vice president, Ya. M. Galperstein; commissar for labor, T. Gladyshev; commissar for workers' and peasants' inspection, Kullev Kary; commissar for agriculture, Tashly Anna-Muratov; commissar for finance, I. I. Kalnin; commissar for justice, Anna-Mukhamedov; commissar for education, Artykov Anna-Kuli; commissar for health, I. V. Ventsenostsev; commissar for social welfare, A. Makarov; commissar for light industry, N. S. Sergeyev; plenipotentiary for military and naval affairs, Kh. Atabayev; plenipotentiary for ways of communication, G. I. Must; plenipotentiary for foreign trade, Berdy Atayev; plenipotentiary for foreign affairs, A. V. Zaslavsky.

SOVIET OF PEOPLE'S COMMISSARS OF UZBEK S. S. R.

President, F. Khodzhayev; vice president, I. D. Martynov; commissar for labor, I. Ibragimov; commissar for workers' and peasants' inspection, Karimov Abdulladzhan; commissar for agriculture, Burnashev Khanifa K.; commissar for justice, Mavlyanbekov Akhmed-bek; commissar for finance, Pulatov Kari-Yuldash; commissar for supply, Khodzhayev; commissar for education, Ramzi Mannan; commissar for health, F. T. Pridannikov; commissar for social welfare, Mavlyanbekov Bababek; commissar for light industry, Nasyrbayev Satter; plenipotentiary for ways of communication, I. P. Kravnikov; plenipotentiary for foreign affairs, G. A. Apresov; plenipotentiary for post and telegraph, Matkulov Alibek.

SOVIET OF PEOPLE'S COMMISSARS OF TADZHIK, S. S. R.

President, A. Khodzhibayev; commissar for finance, Islamov; plenipotentiary for agriculture in central Asia, S. K. Shaduntz; plenipotentiary for workers' and peasants' inspection and of party central control commission in central Asia, D. I. Manzhara; plenipotentiary for labor in central Asia, Dmitriev; plenipotentiary for foreign trade, Kasym Kariev; president of central Asia economic soviet (EKOSO), M. F. Boldyrev; president of the state plan commission (Gosplan) of central Asia, D. P. Rozit.

CHIEFS OF IMPORTANT STATE AND OTHER ORGANS

mission (Gosplan) of central Asia, D. P. Rozit.

CHIEFS OF IMPORTANT STATE AND OTHER ORGANS

Presidents of All-Union Central Executive Committee: M. I. Kalinin, G. I. Petrovsky, A. G. Cherviakov, G. Mussabekov, N. Aitakov, F. Khodzhayev, M. Nusratulla; president of All-Russian Central Executive Committee, M. I. Kalinin; president of Ukrainian central executive committee, G. I. Petrovsky; president of White Russian central executive committee, A. G. Chervyakov; president of trans-Caucasus central executive committee: F. Makharadze, A. Ananyan, M. Takhakaya; president of Turkmen central executive committee, N. Aitakov; president of Uzbek central executive committee, N. Aitakov; president of Tadzhik central executive committee, N. Nusratulla; president of the United State Political Administration (OGPU), V. R. Menzhinsky; vice president (first) of the United State Political Administration (OGPU); I. A. Akulov; vice president (second) of the United State Political Administration (OGPU); J. A. Balitsky; president of Supreme concession committee, L. B. Kamenev; president of supreme concession committee, L. B. Kamenev; president of the supreme court of the U. S. S. R., A. N. Vinokurov; president of the supreme court of the U. S. S. R., P. I. Stuchka; prosecutor of the U. S. S. R., P. A. Krasikov; president of the Moscow Soviet, N. A. Bulganin; president of the Leningrad Soviet, I. F. Kadatzky; inspector of military and naval forces of red army, R. A. Muklevich; president of Society for Air and Chemical Defense (OSOAVIAKHIM), I. S. Unshlikht; secretary general of peasant international (KRESTINTERN), I. A. Teodorovich; secretary general of All-Union Young Communists Union (VLKSM), A. V. Kosarev; political secretary of Young Communists International (KIM), V. T. Chemodanov; president of the central committee of the MOPR of U. S. S. R., E. D. Stasova.

SOURCES

- (1) Izvestia, No. 192, July 14, 1930.
  (2) Izvestia, No. 351, December 22, 1930.
  (3) Izvestia, No. 76, March 18, 1931.
  (4) Izvestia, No. 77, March 19, 1931.
  (5) Izvestia, No. 343, December 14, 1931.
  (6) Izvestia, No. 273, October 3, 1931.
  (7) Izvestia, No. 89, March 31, 1931.
  (8) Izvestia, No. 89, March 31, 1931.
  (9) Izvestia, No. 98, April 9, 1931.
  (10) Izvestia, No. 115, April 26, 1931.
  (11) Izvestia, No. 152, June 4, 1930.
  (12) Izvestia, No. 303, November 2, 1930.
  (13) Izvestia, No. 342, December 13, 1930.
  (14) Vsia Moskva for 1931.
  (15) Izvestia, No. 311, November 12, 1931.
  (16) Izvestia, No. 309, November 10, 1931.
  (17) Izvestia, No. 354, December 25, 1930.
  (18) Trud, No. 299, December 25, 1928.
- 18
- Trud, No. 299, December 25, 1928. Trud, No. 318, November 24, 1931.

- (19) 1rud, No. 318, November 24, 1931.
  (20) Izvestia, No. 137, May 20, 1930.
  (21) Izvestia, No. 207, September 6, 1928.
  (22) Izvestia, No. 170, July 24, 1928.
  (23) Pravda, No. 113, April 24, 1931.
  (24) Stenographic reports of Sixth Congress of Communist International, 1929, and of Fifth Congress of Communist International, 1925. tional, 1925.
- (25) Pravda, No. 80, April 4, 1928, and No. 301, December 21,
- (26) Trud, No. 240, September 1, 1930, and No. 224, August 16,
- (27) Stenographic reports of Sixteenth Party Congress, 1930, and Fifteenth Congress, 1927.

  (28) Krasnaya Zvezda, August 17, 1930, No. 191.

  (29) Izvestia, No. 65, March 7, 1931.

- (31) (32)
- (33)
- (34
- Ves Leningrad, 1931.
  Izvestia, No. 154, June 25, 1930.
  Izvestia, No. 297, October 27, 1931.
  Izvestia, No. 280, October 10, 1931.
  Izvestia, No. 64, March 6, 1931.
  Red International of Labor Unions, No. 23-24, December, (35) 1931

- (36) Trud, No. 237, December 17, 1931.
  (37) Izvestia, No. 353, December 29, 1931; and Laws of U. S. R., Part II, No. 15, October 19, 1931.
  (38) Izvestia, No. 210, August 1, 1931.
  (39) Trud, No. 54, March 3, 1928.
  (40) Izvestia, No. 43, February 13, 1931.
  (41) Komsomolskaya Pravda, No. 42, February 12, 1931.
  (42) Izvestia, No. 60, March 2, 1931.
  (43) Izvestia, No. 30, March 22, 1931.
  (44) Pravda, No. 309, December 29, 1929; and Trud, No. 240, eptember 1, 1930. September 1, 1930.

- September 1, 1930.

  (45) Pravda, No. 152, June 4, 1930.

  (46) Laws, U. S. S. R., Part II, No. 46, September 1, 1930.

  (47) Socialisticheskoe Zemledelie, No. 233, October 5, 1930.

  (48) Large Soviet Encyclopedia, 1930.

  (49) Laws of U. S. S. R., Part II, No. 10, June 6, 1931.

  (50) Komsomolskaya Pravda, No. 47, February 17, 1931.

  (51) Annual of Commissariat for Foreign Affairs for 1929.

  (52) Izvestia, No. 6, January 6, 1932.

  (53) Zaria Vostoka, No. 310, November 15, 1931.

  (54) Pravda Vostoka, No. 342, December 18, 1931.

  (55) Izvestia, No. 303, November 2, 1931.

  (56) Izvestia, No. 303, November 17, 1931.

  (57) Izvestia, No. 346, December 17, 1931.

  (58) Izvestia, No. 140, May 23, 1931; and No. 72, March 14, 1931.

  (59) Soviet Justice, No. 17, June 20, 1931.

  (60) Imprecor, English edition, No. 13, March 7, 1928.

  (61) Pravda, No. 195, July 17, 1931.

  (62) Laws of U. S. S. R., Part II, No. 3, March 14; and No. 6, April 5, 1931.
  - (63) Izvestia, No. 185, July 7, 1931.

In this connection, we quote from the report of the special committee appointed by the House of Representatives to investigate the activities of the communists in the United States (H. Rept.

No. 2290, 71st Cong., pp. 7 and 8):
"The main principles of the Communist International are as follows: Overthrow and annihilation of so-called capitalist governmental power and its replacement by proletarian power; dictatorship of the working class; confiscation of property; arming of the proletarist; armed conflict by the proletarist against capitalism; no compromise with socialists remaining in the Second International its configuration of the Community International is tional. The main objectivity of the Communist International is to promote world revolution, in order to bring about a world-wide union of soviets, or dictatorship of the proletarist, with the capital to promote world revolution, in order to bring about a world-wide union of soviets, or dictatorship of the proletarist, with the capital at Moscow.

"The Communist International is dominated by the Russian Communist Party and Soviet officials and could not exist without the whole-hearted support of the leaders of the Russian Communist Party and the financial backing of the Soviet Government.

"The two most important and powerful men in Russia, Joseph Stalin, the communist dictator who now holds two Soviet posts, and Viacheslaf M. Molotov, chairman of the Council of People's Commissars, are on the presidium or select committee that plans and controls all the policies of the Communist International, for spreading revolutionary propaganda in foreign countries in order to intensify class hatred and cause strikes, riots, sabotage, and revolutionary activities, leading to civil war and revolution.

"The Communist International is actually part and parcel of the Russian Communist Party and the Soviet Government. For diplomatic reasons, the Soviet Government denies that it is responsible for the propaganda that emanates from the Communist International, but this pretense has long been apparent and has again been unmasked by the recent appointment of its two outstanding leaders, Stalin and Molotov, to important positions in the Soviet Government.

"The Government of Russia, which is known as the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics (U. S. S. R.) is an autocratic self-constituted dictatorship by a small group of self-perpetuating revolutionists. Joseph Stalin, the secretary-general of the Communist Party, is the actual dictator. The Communist Party consists of 1,500,000 members, out of 150,000,000 people in Russia, but it controls the Soviet Government and the Communist International.

"The Political Bureau of the Central Committee of the Communist Party, or the Politbureau, is composed of 10 of the outstanding communist leaders, including Stalin and Molotov, and is the real power in Russia, effectively controlling and di munist Party, or the Politbureau, is composed of 10 of the outstanding communist leaders, including Stalin and Molotov, and is the real power in Russia, effectively controlling and directing (1) the Soviet Government, which carries out the policies laid down by the politbureau and administers the affairs of Soviet Russia, and (2) the Comintern, or Communist International, which is the vehicle for the dissemination of revolutionary propaganda and directs and stimulates revolutionary activities throughout the world."

However, we believe that it is important to set forth the direct effect of the employment of forced labor in Russia is having in the world markets, where our own products of free labor are being sold, and how the plan of the soviets has materialized toward the ultimate aim of the destruction of our own economic system. In this connection, therefore, we again quote from House Report No. 2290:

"The question of trade relations with the Soviet Government is one of great importance and of interest to the American people. The wheat farmers of America, due to our large exportable surplus of wheat, which largely determines the price of all wheat produced in the United States, have much at stake. * * "The export of wheat from Russia from 1918 until 1930 has averaged less than 10,000,000 bushels. The reason that Russian wheat has not flooded the European markets for the last eight years, or ever since the Soviet Government became stabilized after the civil wars between the red and white armies were ended, is that the Soviet Government for many years badly bungled the agricultural situation by antagonizing the peasants, who constitute 80 per cent of the Russian people.

stitute 80 per cent of the Russian people.

"The Communist Party in Russia consists very largely of members from the industrial centers, and is directed by city workers for their own benefit. The peasants were looked down on as inferior beings and were regarded as little better than animals to plant and harvest the food supply for the city workers. Consequently there was no cooperation between the communist city workers and the peasants, and the bulk of the peasants hated and feared the communists, who sent out expeditions into the farming country and confiscated most of the grain from the farmers on various pretexts, such as nonpayment of taxes or counterrevolution, or paid for it in worthless currency or receipts for Government bonds. The poor peasant became more and more exasperated and often found the more he harvested the less he had, so he began to plant only a sufficient amount for the needs of his asperated and often found the more he harvested the less he had, so he began to plant only a sufficient amount for the needs of his own family. The result was in effect-a gigantic, though undirected, strike by the peasants of Russia, which forced the Soviet Government to change its tactics. First, it permitted a modified free trade, and agriculture revived. Lately it has begun to create huge state farms and organize the peasants into enormous producing accordance. ducing cooperatives,

"The first step was a campaign to eliminate or liquidate the kulaks, or so-called rich farmers, who were bitterly opposed to communism. These kulaks were the more thirfty farmers who were able, through individual effort, to acquire a few cows and horses and live in a better house than the other peasants. These kulaks were not rich in the sense of American farmers, as they kulaks were not rich in the sense of American farmers, as they probably did not make over a couple of hundred dollars a year, yet the word went out from Moscow that they must be suppressed. A reign of terror ensued. Peasants were told that they could take away the property of any kulak who had as much as two cowsor two horses and the red army and police were used to wipe out the kulaks. In turn these farmers, the best in Russia, began in desperation to kill off their cattle, so that in 1928-29 it is estimated that 15,000,000 head of cattle were slaughtered, seriously impairing the milk butter and cheese supply of Russia, and also impairing the milk, butter, and cheese supply of Russia, and also production of beef.

"The ruthlessness of the Soviet Government in liquidating the kulaks aroused the sympathy of the peasants and caused wide-spread resistance and antagonism, so that Stalin issued an edict from Moscow that the kulak liquidation had gone far enough and that from now on only counter-revolutionists among the peasants would be suppressed. The warfare against the kulaks had brought about chaos in Russian agriculture, as the best farmers and those who gave employment had been deported or ruined.

"With the kulaks largely eliminated, the communists had no "With the kulaks largely eliminated, the communists had no effective opposition to socializing the peasants. Huge state farms were organized in a hundred different parts of Russia. Some of these farms contained a half million acres of good wheat land. The peasants were likewise organized into enormous Government cooperatives. They entered voluntarily, as there was nothing else to do, as the Government was the only employer left and practically the only buyer. The success in the development of the state farms and collectives during 1930 was beyond the wildest expectations of the communists. In one year approximately 50 per cent of all the farmers of Russia were virtually socialized and formed into Government cooperatives, controlling 100,000,000 acres of arable lands. On the giant state farms the peasants are paid direct by the Government, approximately 15 cents gold per day, and in the cooperatives the Government buys the crop with depreciated paper currency and exports it to foreign countries for sale on a gold basis at seven times the currency it paid to the peasants.

"There is an almost inexhaustible supply of good wheat land in Russia, estimated at over 200,000,000 acres, all seized by the Government without compensation to the private owners, and a huge reserve of poorly paid peasant labor wihch, backed by American tractors, engineers, mechanics, farm specialists, brains, and credit, guarantee low production and wheat supremacy and moreously to the contract of the contr nopoly to the soviets.

"If it were not for the 42-cent duty a bushel on wheat, Russian wheat might, within a few years, be underselling the wheat produced by American farmers in our own markets in Chicago and Kansas City.

What applies to wheat with equal force applies to other grains, "What applies to wheat with equal force applies to other grains, such as barley, rye, and oats. In a lesser degree only, and progressing at a rapid rate, is the growth and development of enormous state farms and cooperatives for cotton, fruit, cattle, sheep, tobacco, and beet sugar. The production of cotton is under special Government concentration, and is making rapid headway in Turkestan, and may take care of all of the Soviet requirements and be a competitor in the world markets before very long.

"American lumber exports have averaged $110,000,000 annually for a number of years, and rank just below our large agricultural exports of cotton, wheat, and tobacco. Every day steamers are plying the Atlantic carrying pulpwood and lumber to New York and other eastern ports from the Russian forests for American manufacturers. It is something new to import Soviet pulpwood and lumber into the United States. In 1929 only 6,000 cords of pulpwood were imported from Russia, and in 1930 it is estimated that 200,000 cords were landed in the United States.

"The forest area of the Soviet Union covers about a billion and a half acres, much more than the forest area of the United States and Capada combined.

and Canada combined.

"Soviet lumber, like Soviet wheat, can undersell lumber produced by free American labor in the world markets.

"The testimony offered to the committee discloses that hundreds of thousands of aristocrats, former professional and business men, army officers, kulaks, and social democrats and other counterrevolutionists have disappeared into the forests without leaving any trace. The mystery and the horror of the convict-labor camps is yet to be told in its lurid details.

"Oil resources of the Soviet Union are greater than those of any other country, according to the Commercial Handbook of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics. There are three main fields, Baku, Grozny, and Emba. The production and export of oil from Russia is more than four times that of 1913. * * * The depression in the American oil industry is very marked, and competition from Soviet sources is becoming serious on the world market. The Soviet Government pays nothing for the leases on the "Witnesses testified before the committee that the Soviet Government has practically ruined the manganese industry in the United States by dumping its product into this country at a price far below our cost of production, which they claim is unfair competition, because manganese is an essential ingredient in the manufacture of steel, and the destruction of the manganese in-manufacture of steel, and the destruction of the manganese industry in the United States places us at the mercy of Soviet Russia in time of war. The Assistant Secretary of War, Frederick H. Payne, stated in a speech recently:

"'Of the raw materials necessary to us in war none is more important than manganese. We take a deep interest in the efforts of the domestic manganese producers to develop processes that will enable the United States to utilize its large deposits of low-grade ore and be at least self-sustaining in this respect.'

"Convict labor should not be confused with forced or conscripted labor. It is claimed by Matthew Woll vice president of convict labor. It is claimed by Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor, that practically all labor in Soviet Russia to-day comes under the category of forced labor, as compared to free labor in the United States or Europe. He testified before the committee that existing Soviet decrees provide that workers become deserters when they quit their jobs, that the unemployed must accept any position offered, and that skilled workers may be transferred to any part of the country without their consent. These restrictions on the freedom of the workingman, Mr. Woll claims, places him in practically the same position as a conscripted soldier.

"The United States, as a large exporter, is vitally concerned by any dumping of Soviet products in the United States or on the world markets. * * *

world markets.

world markets.

"The United States has more to lose from the economic system in Russia, if it succeeds, than any other nation, as we are the largest exporters of agricultural products, such as cotton, wheat, tobacco, and other grain, and will have difficulty in holding our export markets against this kind of competition than can be anticipated from the Soviet system.

" " "

export markets against this kind of competition than can be anticipated from the Soviet system. * * * "Boiled down to a reasonable conclusion, if the 5-year plan (of the Soviet Union) succeeds, the Soviet Union is to become a great money-making machine that it may finance communism and world revolution. To undersell the rest of the world in agricultural and industrial products is a part of the scheme to create unrest, ripening into revolution. "This activity would effect us ultimately in the destruction of

"This activity would affect us ultimately in the destruction of "This activity would affect us ultimately in the destruction of our grain and cotton markets; especially is this true of wheat and cotton produced by peasant labor on Government-owned and controlled land, practically without cost, and with which American labor can not compete. The same would be true in the industrial world. Russian products have already practically destroyed the manganese industry with us. It seemingly threatens our lumber and wood-pulp industries, as well as the anthractic coal and oil markets and the wrong strength indicates that convicte and immarkets, and the proof strongly indicates that convict and impressed labor are used especially in producing lumber and pulpwood.

Taken in connection with the acts and avowed purposes of the Soviet Union, the 5-year plan is not intended alone to benefit the home union and government and to improve the condition of the Russian people—it goes farther—its purpose is not to build up but to tear down and destroy.

to tear down and destroy. * * * "

In stating that the "purpose of the 5-year plan is not to build up but to tear down and destroy," the committee referred to the statement of G. T. Grinko, vice chairman of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics state planning commission, who is credited to a large part with being the author of this 5-year plan, contained in his book entitled "The 5-Year Plan of the Soviet Union," in the first chapter, under Planned Economy and Perspective:

"The 5-year plan is a program for the further extension and consolidation of the great October revolution. Nor should the great international significance of the plan be underestimated. For the first time in history a vast country, with inexhaustible

For the first time in history a vast country, with inexhaustible natural resources and a population of 150,000,000 free people, faces the world with an elaborate plan for upbuilding a socialist economy and culture—a socialist party. We fully share the view expressed in the editorial of the Pravda of August 29, 1929: 'The 5-year plan is an important part of the offensive of the proletariat of the world against capitalism; it is a plan tending to undermine capitalist stabilization; it is a great plan of world revolution."

For more complete details relating to laws, decrees, and labor policies in force in Soviet Russia, we refer you to the following documents now on file in the Treasury Department:

A Selection of Documents Relative to the Labor Legislation in Force in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, a document sented by the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs to the British Parliament by command of His Majesty, in 1931, known as the British Blue Book.

Memorandum on the Control of the Distribution of Labor in Memorandum on the Control of the Distribution of Labor in Russia, Based on Soviet Sources Available on October 22, 1930, compiled by the Department of State, United States Government. Part 2 (confidential) of Hearings Held by Committee of the House of Representatives to Investigate Communist Activities in the United States, and the report of that committee, House Report No. 2290, Seventy-first Congress.

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATIONS

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives disagreeing to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 7912) making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1933, and for other purposes, and requesting a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. McNARY. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments, agree to the conference asked by the House, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to, and the President pro tempore appointed the senior Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNary], the senior Senator from Washington [Mr. Jones], the junior Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. Keyes], the senior Senator from Georgia [Mr. HARRIS], and the senior Senator from Wyoming [Mr. KENDRICK] conferees on the part of the Senate.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGE REFERRED

The PRESIDENT pro tempore, as in executive session, laid before the Senate a message from the President of the United States submitting the nomination of Lawrence A Merrigan, of New Orleans, La., to be collector of internal revenue for the District of Louisiana, to fill an existing vacancy, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

RECESS

Mr. McNARY. I move that the Senate take a recess until 12 o'clock noon to-morrow.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate (at 5 o'clock and 12 minutes p. m.) took a recess until Wednesday, March 16, 1932, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATION

Executive nomination received by the Senate March 15 (legislative day of March 14), 1932

COLLECTOR OF INTERNAL REVENUE

Lawrence A. Merrigan, of New Orleans, La., to be collector of internal revenue for the District of Louisiana, to fill an existing vacancy.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

TUESDAY, MARCH 15, 1932

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

As the tides of each day break on the shore lines of our lives, give us strength, O God, to bear the load, to withstand the evil and the spirit of willingness to accept the good. O Master and Teacher of men, be Thou the inspiration and the standard of our daily conduct. Brighten the skies of our country and of all peoples. May they determine their services by the common fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. We pray that what we shall do this day shall meet Thy approval and contribute to the welfare of our fellow men. Keep alive that sacred flame in our breasts that generates the moral and the spiritual power of our beings. With counsels of wisdom, prudence, and discretion direct us, and unto Thy excellent name be praises forever. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Mr. Craven, its principal clerk, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bills and a joint resolution of the House of the following titles:

H. R. 361. An act to provide for the extension of improvements on the west side of Georgia Avenue, north of Princeton Place, in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes:

H. R. 5866. An act to authorize the construction of a dam across Des Lacs Lake, N. Dak.;

H.R. 6485. An act to revise the boundary of the Mount McKinley National Park, in the Territory of Alaska, and for other purposes:

H. R. 8235. An act to clarify the application of the contract labor provisions of the immigration laws to instrumental musicians; and

H. J. Res. 182. Joint resolution authorizing an appropriation to defray the expenses of participation by the United States Government in the Second Polar Year Program, August 1, 1932, to August 31, 1933.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed bills, a joint resolution, and a concurrent resolution of the following titles, in which the concurrence of the House is

S. 95. An act to amend the second paragraph of section 6 of the civil service retirement act of May 29, 1930 (relating to persons retired for disability):

S. 266. An act to provide for an investigation and report of losses resulting from the campaign for the eradication of the Mediterranean fruit fly;

S. 326. An act for the relief of Abram G. O'Bleness;

S. 1003. An act for the relief of Capt. Jacob M. Pearce, United States Marine Corps:

S. 1307. An act authorizing an appropriation for the alteration and repair of the buildings of Eastern Dispensary and . Casualty Hospital:

S. 1317. An act for the relief of the State of California;

S. 1406. An act to provide for the improvement of the approach to the Confederate Cemetery, Fayetteville, Ark.;

S. 2059. An act for the relief of Albert Ross:

S. 2062. An act for the relief of Adam Augustus Shafer;

S. 2148. An act for the relief of Clarence R. Killion;

S. 2290. An act for the conservation of rainfall in the United States;

S. 2335. An act for the relief of O. R. York;

S. 2355. An act to define, regulate, and license real-estate brokers and real-estate salesmen; to create a real-estate commission in the District of Columbia; to protect the public against fraud in real-estate transactions, and for other purposes:

S. 2364. An act to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to extend or renew the contracts of employment of the attorneys employed to represent the Chippewa Indians of Minnesota in litigation arising in the Court of Claims under the act of May 14, 1926 (44 Stat. 555);

S. 2682. An act to amend section 5 of the Criminal Code; S. 2775. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to incorporate the Masonic Mutual Relief Association of the District of Columbia," approved March 3, 1869, as amended;

S. 3362. An act to prevent fraud in the promotion or sale of stock, bonds, or other securities sold or offered for sale within the District of Columbia; to control the sale of the same; to register persons selling stocks, bonds, or other securities; to provide punishment for the fraudulent or unauthorized sale of the same; to make uniform the law in relation thereto, and for other purposes;

S. 3508. An act to amend section 1 of the act entitled "An act to provide for determining the heirs of deceased Indians, for the disposition and sale of allotments of deceased Indians, for the leasing of allotments, and for other purposes," approved June 25, 1910, as amended;

S. 3536. An act for the relief of Jerry O'Shea;

S. 3570. An act to amend the act entitled "An act confirming in States and Territories title to land granted by the United States in the aid of common or public schools, approved January 25, 1927;

S. 3584. An act to require all insurance corporations formed under the provisions of Chapter XVIII of the Code of Law of the District of Columbia to maintain their principal offices and places of business within the District of Columbia, and for other purposes;

S. 3744. An act for the construction of a reservoir in the Little Truckee River, Calif., and for such dams and other improvements as may be necessary to impound the waters of Webber, Independence, and Donner Lakes, and for the further development of the water resources of the Truckee River:

S. J. Res. 116. Joint resolution relating to the allocation of funds to the Secretary of Agriculture under the Reconstruction Finance Corporation act; and

S. Con. Res. 6. Concurrent resolution favoring the designation and appropriate observance of American conservation week.

DIRECT LOANS TO FARMERS

Mr. JONES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 334) be rereferred from the Committee on Banking and Currency to the Committee on Agriculture, and that a similar resolution (S. J. Res. 116), which yesterday passed the Senate, be referred to the Committee on Agriculture when it is messaged over. I will state in this connection that I took the matter up with the chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency and he agrees that the joint resolution should be referred to the Committee on Agriculture.

The SPEAKER. May the Chair suggest that the second request be deferred because the resolution has not come over from the Senate.

Is there objection to the rereference of the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 334) from the Committee on Banking and Currency to the Committee on Agriculture?

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, and I do not know anything about this specific resolution, I do not see any of the Republican members of the Banking and Currency Committee on the floor at the present time I would like to ask the gentleman from Texas if he has conferred with them.

Mr. JONES. I will state that I consulted with the only one I could communicate with, and also consulted the chairman and the ranking member of the Banking and Currency Committee.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman let this request go until later in the day?

Mr. JONES. I withdraw the request, Mr. Speaker.

THE REVENUE BILL OF 1932

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 10236) to provide revenue, equalize taxation, and for other purposes; and pending that I would like to make this state-

At the conclusion of the deliberations of the House to-day we will have had five days of general debate on the revenue bill. To-morrow I am going to take up the question and see if we can reach an agreement as to when general debate shall close, because it is my purpose to have liberal debate under the 5-minute rule. When the House adjourns today we will have had more liberal general debate on this bill than has ever been had, I think, on any bill, and I simply make this statement to give notice that to-morrow I am going to see if we can not reach an agreement as to when general debate shall close.

Mr. HARE. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. CRISP. I will.

Mr. HARE. The gentleman means to-morrow when the House convenes at noon?

Mr. CRISP. Yes.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, may I ask the gentleman a question? In case the committee should not adopt the sales tax as provided in the bill, the gentleman from Georgia would then want the bill to go back to the committee and let the committee consider and put in new provisions, would he not?

Mr. CRISP. My answer to that is that I do not admit the premise; I think the sales tax will be adopted. [Applause.1

Mr. LAGUARDIA. The gentleman is an optimist.

Mr. BLANTON. I am firmly convinced that the sales-taxprovisions now in the bill will never be adopted.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly, the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 10236, with Mr. BANKHEAD in the chair.

The clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself five minutes.

This morning the Committee on Ways and Means considered the question of proposing several committee amendments to the bill. The committee decided that we would offer as a committee amendment an amendment eliminating from the manufacturers' tax canned fruits, canned vegetables, canned and smoked fish and canned meats. [Ap-

If these amendments are adopted it will practically mean that all food articles, except foods of luxury, are removed from the bill. You will recall there are broad basic exemptions of food products in the bill including meat, flour, butter, milk, and so forth, and if the amendment proposed by the committee is adopted, I repeat that practically all foods used by the ordinary man, rich and poor, except foods of luxury, would be removed from the imposition of the tax.

Mr. CULLEN. Mr. Chairman, I do not want to interrupt the gentleman, but that includes smoked fish?

Mr. CRISP. Yes; I stated that.

Mr. COLTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. CRISP. Yes.

Mr. COLTON. What about canned milk?

Mr. CRISP. Canned milk is already exempt. Milk, under the original text of the bill, in any form is exempt.

Mr. BEAM. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CRISP. Yes.

Mr. BEAM. Has the committee given any consideration to lard and sausage and frankfurters? These are the poor man's food.

Mr. CRISP. The committee has given consideration to it, but has reached no conclusion in the matter.

The committee also took up the question of exempting from the tax admissions to State and agricultural fairs. We find that under the bill, admissions to State and agricultural fairs, where no profit inures to the stockholders, are already exempt, so there is no need to offer any amendment as to

The committee also further decided to offer an amendment exempting from the provisions of the tax telegraph messages, and press messages from bona fide correspondents of newspapers conveying news, when sent collect.

Mr. SABATH. I have not had a chance to examine the bill thoroughly. I would like to ask the gentleman if perfumes are taxed or untaxed?

Mr. CRISP. Perfumes will have to pay the general manufacturers' tax of 21/4 per cent.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Flour and meat are exempt. Has the committee considered the advisability of taxing provisions made of flour?

Mr. CRISP. Flour and seminola are exempt.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. How about the products of seminola, like macaroni?

Mr. CRISP. My recollection is that things made from that, unless a manufactured product, are exempt. Shredded wheat biscuits, fine crackers, pay the manufacturers' tax.

Mr. McCLINTIC of Oklahoma. What attitude has the committee taken on agricultural implements?

Mr. CRISP. The committee regrets levying a tax on those things, but if we are going to have any basis for revenue, we can not broaden the exemption. The committee thinks that the bill shows great equity to the agricultural interests.

Mr. GLOVER. Has the committee considered the question of exempting electric power when used for pumping for rice and general farm use?

Mr. CRISP. That matter was brought up, but the committee reached no decision. The committee at its morning session did not have time to pass on everything. It will have other meetings.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. I want to call the gentleman's attention to the fact that power for the operation of cotton gins is very important, and that a tax would be a grievous burden on cotton production.

Mr. CRISP. That is like the other proposition I referred to.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. I can think of no greater article of necessity than lard, and I should like to see that exempt. Mr. CRISP. The committee has that question before it. [Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Chairman, for the purpose of answering inquiries I yield myself five minutes more.

Mr. NELSON of Missouri. I would like to inquire whether there is a tax on processed eggs, like frozen eggs and powdered eggs, and so forth?

Mr. CRISP. I can not answer the gentleman's question, and I do not like to give information about things I do not know.

Mr. BLANTON. Has the committee considered the advisability of placing a tax on sales on the stock exchange, and especially a tax of at least 10 per cent on short selling?

Mr. CRISP. The committee did put a 4 per cent tax on stock loans for short selling.

Mr. BLANTON. I believe that there should be a tax of at least 1 per cent on all sales on all stock exchanges and at least 10 per cent on short selling. Did the committee consider the ill advisability of putting a tax on theater tickets, something that affords the only amusement that the poor family has? I am not in favor of that tax. Poor people have the right to see a good picture show just the same as the rich who can and will afford to pay any tax.

Mr. CRISP. The committee decided that when we put a tax on clothing, farm implements, and so forth, there was no reason why theater tickets should not be taxed.

Mr. FINLEY. The committee has shown a praiseworthy desire to take care of the home. Has it considered the idea of exempting fuel for the home?

Mr. CRISP. We have, and the committee has put a tax

Mr. SABATH. I have read in the press that people who purchase perfume and cosmetics seem to have had plenty of money, and why not put a tax on the little things of that sort, and reduce the tax on the necessaries of life?

Mr. CRISP. If we should pick out a few luxuries only, it would be impossible to raise the money, and the committee thought it was equitable to broaden the base, and not single out a few industries to bear the burden.

Mr. SABATH. That would not be true.

Mr. LANKFORD of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CRISP. Yes.

Mr. LANKFORD of Georgia. At present the committee puts no tax on a cold drink when served at the soda fountain, but does put a tax on that same drink, if it is purchased in a bottle.

Mr. CRISP. My understanding is that where a soda fountain buys sirup, it pays a tax. The bottlers and the manufacturers will have to pay about a cent and a half on 24 bottles of coca-cola or other soft drinks if sold by the case.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, has the committee had under consideration the matter of the exemption of chicory, when used as a substitute or an adulterant of coffee, from the tax?

Mr. CRISP. The committee has not. If I am not mistaken, the gentleman wrote me a letter about that, but we have not passed upon it.

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 15 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Martin].

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, my good friend the distinguished gentleman from Maine [Mr. Nelson] yesterday gave a most logical and convincing résumé of the opposition to the excise tax on oil. I regret his voluminous facts were refuted, not by other facts but by an unjustifiable appeal to sectionalism and prejudice. It has been my experience when a cause is lacking in facts it generally relies on personalities. In all fairness it must be admitted the opposition to this excise tax on oil is not a New England fight. Every State along the Atlantic seaboard has just as much interest in this oil tax as have we of New England, and eventually I believe every consumer of gasoline and fuel oil and oil products throughout the country will be just as keenly interested, and I do not exclude the people of the States of Texas, Kansas, and Oklahoma.

The complaint of unfairness raised by the Representatives from the oil-producing States might stand on a more substantial basis if there own record were better. My mind goes back to June of 1930, when the shoe workers were appealing for a duty on shoes. I can remember, as if it were but yesterday, when the distinguished Speaker of this House moved an amendment which would have placed shoes on the free list and deprived the shoe workers of their protection. Where then were the voices of protection from the oil States?

Yesterday when I looked over the roll call I almost went blind as I tried to find a vote favorable to the shoe workers from the great State of Oklahoma. There was but one vote cast for the shoe workers from Texas, the empire State of the South, and that was cast by a splendid Republican Representative who has gone to his eternal resting place, one whom we all loved and admired for his sterling character and the fine service he rendered to the Nation. When I came to the State of Kansas, I found but one man who voted for a duty on shoes, and, strange to say, it was not the gentleman whose voice rang out here so eloquently yesterday. I am not criticizing the Representatives of the oil They voted as they believed they ought to vote; they voted as they believed their districts wanted them to vote. I can not find fault with that. But having done so, they can not with good grace criticize the gentleman from Maine [Mr. NELSON] when he comes up here and talks about a tariff on an item that has no place in the bill now pending. This item is distinctly a tariff item, and that is being included as a rider on a tax bill.

Mr. Nelson has a right to debate, even if he does come from New England, the inclusion of the subject matter of tariff in a tax bill, particularly when it is a commodity which is outside of the past tariff policy of the country. He has a right to debate a tariff item which has been disapproved by the platforms of the two great major parties of this country, and he has a right to do that without being subject to personal attack. We of New England have been taunted with boycott, retaliation, and reprisals. My answer to that is this: It is not new for New England.

We have been through that many times, as far back even as the days when the American colonies were subject to Great Britain. We could not be bullied in those days, and we can not be bullied to-day. It would be much easier and pleasanter in my personal relations here if I could sacrifice the interests of the people of my State and accept this bill as it stands with all its tremendous burdens. But the people of my State expect, and they have a right to expect, I will represent them faithfully and with the same loyalty as the able men from the oil-producing States represent the views of their people. This I propose to do even if it does bring criticism.

I can not fail to consider this measure means an increase in the cost of gasoline to every farmer and automobile owner; I can not fail to recognize it means an average cost of increase of $27 in the fuel bill of more than 100,000 homes in Massachusetts which burn oil in their heaters; I can not fail to consider this tremendous boost in the cost of fuel oil to the big industries in the eastern part of my State may well means the closing of some establishments with its consequent misery to thousands of workmen.

With this picture in mind, I can not sacrifice my people to make my own personal relations here a little pleasanter.

This feature of the bill is neither equitable nor just, does not rightfully belong in a tax bill, and will bring disaster to thousands of people. This heavy burden of a duty on oil falls not on New England alone, although it is particularly oppressive to my section of the country. Every State along the Atlantic seaboard feels it just as keenly as New England; and eventually, once a monopoly has been created for the oil producers, it will be felt by every consumer of gas and fuel oil in the country.

If this tariff is effective, it must do one thing, and that is to establish an embargo and "jack up" the prices of fuel oil and gasoline. If it does not do this, then the proponents of this legislation will be sorely disappointed. Let no Member who votes for this clause deceive himself upon this point. If he supports the committee proposal, he is voting to increase the cost of fuel oil and gasoline to the millions of consumers.

If this legislation is an embargo, then it has no place in a bill which is designed specifically to increase the revenue of the Government. If this legislation is not an embargo, then it will be no aid to the oil-producing States, and all that it will accomplish will be to place a heavy burden upon users of oil and gasoline in a period when it should be the purpose of the Government to assist rather than destroy enterprises which are struggling under adverse conditions; all gallantly trying to give employment to thousands of people, notwithstanding the fact that at the end of every month a deficit is written into the books. Either way you look at the question you are forced to the conclusion it is unwise legislation.

Who will benefit from this tariff? The small, independent oil company with whom we have sympathy and who has led the fight for this legislation? Unfortunately that will not be the case. Write this tariff into law and you make every person in this country pay tribute to a rich and powerful industry. In the words of George M. Cohan, the famous playwright, "Let us pass the hat for the Rockefeller family, poor devils." I noticed down in Florida the other day John D. ran out of the dimes he recklessly distributes. Pass this bill and his supply will be well replenished.

The immediate effect of the passage of this legislation will be to increase the price by 1 cent a gallon on the 665,870,000 barrels of oil in stocks in this country or, translated into money, an assessment of $279,665,400. Of this vast storage of oil, the 20 big oil companies of the United States gather in 95.6 of the melon. Heading the list of beneficiaries is that infant industry, the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, with a rake-off of $66,604,800; and then in the line comes the big brother, the Standard Oil of New York, the Texas Co., Standard Oil of Indiana, and numerous other Standard Oil subsidiaries.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Not now. Unfortunately this is the beginning and not the end. Everybody knows the big oil companies of this country work in close harmony, and if an embargo is placed on imports the consumers of this country will be forced to pay a tremendous price before the adventure is ended.

This tariff is not in order in this particular bill, and even if it was it would not be justified in the spirit of American tariffs. An industry which exports more of its products than it imports is not in any particular need of governmental assistance. It has been able to go into the foreign markets and win a substantial trade in competition with foreign companies. The exports of oil products in every year have been larger than imports. The industry has actually exported in 1931 more crude oil than in the previous year, while imports have substantially declined.

There is also to be considered the policy of conservation. Is it wise to deplete all our oil reserves in our period and leave the country entirely at the mercy of foreign countries in the next or succeeding generations?

It was because of this policy of conservation the Government was prompted to urge American capital to go into Mexico, Venezuela, and Colombia to develop these fields. Having urged the opening of these fields, whose operations are directed chiefly by American nationals, are we treating them fairly now to say their products can not enter the markets of the United States? That is worth thinking about.

It is a new departure in a tariff policy that we are asked to make. No flat tariff has ever been laid on any fuel. Fuels of all sorts are articles of prime necessity in all production, agricultural and industrial; and protective tariffs aimed to protect and encourage American industry have always heretofore logically admitted all fuels free. Such a radical change should come, if it is to come, in a tariff bill.

The industries and people who consume this fuel and gas are patriotic American citizens. They are willing to bear their full share of any tax which is imposed to balance the Budget and pay the tremendous cost of Government. All they ask is that in a tax bill the burdens be evenly distributed and disguised tariff items be eliminated.

As it is, in the so-called sales tax, they will be called upon to bear a tremendous burden. Is it wise to make that burden heavier with this fuel tax?

The next phase is to consider the contribution to the balancing of the Budget. The Ways and Means Committee, in its report, estimates the revenue at $5,000,000. The Treasury Department, when queried as to the revenue which would be derived from a 1-cent tax on crude and fuel oil, answered "Nothing."

Summing up, we find little, if any, revenue is anticipated from the item, and consequently, we must believe it is in the bill solely for the purpose of getting support for the bill from several Southwestern States. For this support, millions of American consumers of gas and crude oil are to have extracted from their pockets many millions of dollars.

Let me point out a few of the items gathered at random, which tell what it means to the struggling industries of my section of the country. The municipal light plant of Taunton will pay $40,000 a year more, and that cost will be sent along either in the tax rate or higher lighting rates. The Whittenton Manufacturing Co. of Taunton will pay $30,000 more for its fuel; the Mount Hope Finishing Co. of Dighton will pay $80,000 a year more; the American Printing Co. of Fall River, $157,000 more; the Sayles Finishing Co. of Pawtucket, R. I., $125,000; and one of the Lawrence mills, $200,000. The Plymouth Cordage Co. will also feel it heavily. These are only instances. Put this tax on these industries this year and you will deprive thousands of working people of employment.

We have been trying to build up a merchant marine in this country. No industry will be more severely hit than American shipping. Probably the only American coastwise shipping firm which is doing business at a profit is the Eastern Steamship Co. of Boston. This duty will cost that concern $286,500.

This duty will deprive the great Atlantic seaports of the opportunity of selling "bunker oil." None of the big steamships will load here when they can do so abroad and avoid the tariff. A New York newspaper estimates this loss to New York City above 20,000,000 barrels a year. It is easy to visualize the jobs which will be lost in the area of New York City.

If there is one industry which has been prosperous in the past year, it is that industry which installs oil equipment in the homes. Over 100,000 homes in Massachusetts have been equipped and probably a million homes in the country as a whole. One man well informed told me he estimated it would cost him $27 a year if this duty goes into effect. Every person burning oil in the East will pay a similar tribute.

When we contemplate the cost to automobile owners, it is impossible to estimate. I repeat the only purpose of this legislation is to keep out all foreign oil and gasoline. Accomplish this end and the big companies which dominate the domestic market will be in absolute control. Is there anyone guileless enough to believe they will be more solicitous of the consumers than in the past when they accumulated fabulous profits?

To-day we find all the big companies in the East, and I presume it is the same in the West and the South, all working in complete harmony. Increases in gas prices are announced simultaneously and every company exacts the same price. The same conditions, quite often unfair conditions, are forced upon the dealers. The gas-station owner is forced to bow to these regulations or else he is out of business. Give these companies an absolute monopoly and the American consumer will pay a bill which will in the end demand Government regulation.

In conclusion, may I repeat what I said in the beginning. This is not a New England fight; it is a fight in the interest of consumers of gas and fuel oil in every part of the country.

If this battle is won by the powerful oil industries, the American consumer in every State can become reconciled to paying the heavy costs of this unwise departure from a traditional American policy. [Applause.]

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CHINDBLOM].

Mr. CHINDBLOM. Mr. Chairman, I shall not at this time discuss any details of the provisions of the pending bill. I may do that at some other time during the debate.

I desire now rather to show some of the fundamental reasons which impel me at this time to support this bill for an increase of Federal taxation. I am satisfied that the bill, as written, is as fair and as well balanced for the purpose of distributing the new and increased taxes as could be expected. Let me say, also, that the work of the Ways and Means Committee during the last two months has been the most distressing within my experience in this House. Perhaps I should feel compensated to some extent by the fact that I previously had the pleasure of assisting my colleagues upon the committee on three occasions in reducing the taxes of the people of the United States. However, at this time a very serious problem and a very dangerous situation confronted the committee. It seemed to me, at least, that a national emergency has arisen to which we must give immediate attention. The rising deficits in the Federal Treasury must be eliminated as soon as possible. The pending bill is estimated to produce the $1,241,000,000 that will be necessary to balance the Budget for the fiscal year 1933. In one way or another our Budget must be balanced.

Mr. Chairman, the pending revenue bill, H. R. 10236, is essentially a temporary measure for the increase of the revenues of the United States to meet the deficit in the income of the Government caused by the reduction of tax payments under the existing law, the revenue act of 1928. The necessity for this legislation will appear from a brief résumé of the state of our national finances during and since the World War, which revolutionized our entire fiscal system by reason of the extraordinary drains on the Federal Treasury resulting from it.

At the close of the fiscal year 1915—that is, on June 30, 1915—the total gross debt of the United States was $1,191,-362,078.53, against which there existed in the general fund a balance of $158,141,780.79, making the total net cash indebtedness of the United States $1,033,220,297.74. In the fiscal year 1916 our national debt began to increase, until at the close of the fiscal year 1919, on June 30, 1919, it reached the total sum of $25,484,506,160.05, against which there was a cash balance in the general fund of $1,251,664,827.54, making a net cash indebtedness of $24,232,841,332.51. Debt reduction began during the fiscal year 1920 and ended with the fiscal year 1930, during which 11 fiscal years the national debt was reduced by the total sum of $9,299,196,328.62. Even during the last of these years, which closed on June 30, 1930, our national debt was reduced by the large sum of $745,778,652.67, and at the close of that year there was a cash balance in the general fund of $318,607,168.11.

As a matter of fact, the debt reduction in the fiscal year 1930 compared very favorably with the debt reduction in the preceding year 1929, when it was $673,204,717.33, and in the fiscal year 1928, when it was $907,613,730.42. It is, therefore, plain that the deficit, which appeared in the fiscal year 1931, and which for that year amounted to $902,716,-845.07, came upon the Government suddenly by reason of the enormous losses in the income of our people during the calendar year 1930. This is shown by the fact that the income-tax collections during the fiscal year 1931 amounted to $1,860,040,497.39, as against $2,410,259,230.28 during the fiscal year 1930, showing a decrease of $550,218,732.89, or 23 per cent. During the second six months of the fiscal year 1931 income-tax collections diminished 39 per cent as compared with like collections for the second six months of the fiscal year 1930. The larger decrease was in the income-tax returns for individuals, which was $313,196,965.31, as compared with $237,021,767.58 for corporations.

It is notable that during the fiscal year 1931 the miscellaneous internal revenue collections amounted to $568,-188,256.83, as compared with $629,886,502.89 for the fiscal year 1930, a decrease of $61,698,246.06, or only 10 per cent. Also, the customs receipts during the fiscal year 1931 amounted to only $378,300,000 as compared with $587,000,000 during the fiscal year 1930, a decline of $208,700,000, or about 36 per cent. It appears plain that the loss in customs receipts followed along with the loss in income or purchasing power of our people, while the receipts from excise taxes were more stable, because they were levied upon articles, principally tobacco, the consumption of which was not exceedingly reduced, though transferred to different forms, as, for instance, from cigars to cigarettes.

The total loss in revenue for the fiscal year 1931, as compared with the fiscal year 1930, was $861,000,000. However, the actual expenditures of the Government during the fiscal year 1931, were only $225,000,000 in excess of those for 1930, so that the change from a surplus of $183,789,214.90 in 1930 to a deficit of $902,716,845.07 in 1931 can not be laid to an increased expenditure in 1931.

While the total deficit between receipts and expenditures for the fiscal year 1931 was approximately $903,000,000, the net increase of the national debt was actually $615,971,660.28, by reason of payments made on account of principal through the sinking fund, amounting to $440,000,000, and the increase of the cash balance in the Treasury during the year by $153,000,000. However, it became necessary during the fiscal year 1931, to sell securities in the amount of $507,000,000 to finance loans to veterans on their adjusted-service certificates, and therefore the total of new money taken out of the market by the Federal Government during the fiscal year 1931 was $1,123,000,000.

Much has been said about the retirement or reduction of the national debt during the fiscal years 1920 to 1930, inclusive. It has been argued that these reductions were so large and so far in advance of sinking fund requirements that we may now safely increase the national debt by at least a corresponding amount and thereby avoid increased taxation at the present time. Of course, it is a novel argument that because indebtedness has been reduced in good times, it should be increased in bad times. The truth is, however, that with the application of the actual sinking fund requirements we have practically made no advance upon the reduction of the national debt beyond that intended or anticipated by the legislation passed by Congress in the authorizations for the Liberty and Victory loans for the prosecution of the war. In other words, the Government has little more than kept its actual pledge to the people when the enormous bonded indebtedness for the war was incurred. Of the $9,299,196,328.62 actually applied on debt reduction since July 1, 1920, the following amounts have been received and applied upon the debt in strict accord- | occur? There are certain fixed charges and assumed obliance with provisions of law, viz:

146, 620, 599. 09

2, 409, 863.31

Out of ordinary receipts for the cumulative _ $3, 187, 468, 300.00 sinking fund_ Repayments of principal by foreign governments:

376, 904, 500, 00 In cash 205, 446, 800, 00 In United States bonds and securities___ Payments of interest by foreign govern-ments in United States securities not re-issuable under the law and therefore au-906, 369, 150.00 tomatically applied to debt reduction ___. Other miscellaneous receipts, specifically allotted to debt retirement, as follows:

Franchise tax receipts-Federal reserve banks_ Federal intermediate credit banks_ Federal estate taxes paid in bonds and se-

66, 182, 600. 00 15, 224, 281. 75 curities not reissuable. Gifts, bail-bond forfeitures, etc_____

These various items make a total of $4,906,626,094.15, which has been applied upon the retirement or reduction of our national debt pursuant to and in accordance with requirements of law, without reference to surpluses from time to time existing in the Federal Treasury.

In addition thereto the total sum of $4,432,570,234.47 has been applied during these 11 years in reduction of the national debt from surplus receipts ($3,459,512,575.04) and through reduction in the general-fund balance ($933,057,-659.43). This sum of approximately $4,432,000,000 may be said to have been applied upon the national debt in acceleration of legal requirements, with the reservation, however. that this amount may well be claimed to have been applied on the debt in lieu of the much larger amounts which were due our Government from our foreign-government debtors under the original terms of the advances to them. But even this amount of $4,432,000,000 will be largely swallowed up in the deficits for the fiscal years 1931 and 1932, particularly when it is recalled that neither during the fiscal year 1932 nor the fiscal year 1933 is it contemplated to reduce the national debt even to the extent required by the sinkingfund provisions. The deficit for the fiscal year 1931 is over the dam. It amounted to $903,000,000. The deficit for the fiscal year of 1932 is conservatively estimated at $2,240,-000,000, not including the $500,000,000 already appropriated for the capital stock of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the $125,000,000 already set aside for additional capital for the farm loan banks. These amounts aggregate $3,768,000,000 and the end for this session is not yet.

At the close of the fiscal year on June 30, 1931, the gross national debt was $8,683,000,000 smaller than on June 30, 1919; but of this amount $4,906,000,000 had been applied upon the debt automatically in accordance with existing legislation. Are we now to cast aside the small balance of probably $600,000,000, which will represent our good works in tax reduction during an unprecedented era of national prosperity, largely due to unhealthy inflation, and which will probably be reduced by further expenditures ordered by this Congress? By July 1 next our national debt will again reach the figure of $19,600,000,000, where it stood on July 1, 1926, before our late "boom" period, and any new appropriation made hereafter will increase that amount. Can we afford to permit our public debt to increase without attempting to balance the Budget? New bonds, new loans, will mean so much additional public debt, with increased annual payments for interest and amortization. It is a vicious circle, with a dangerous adder coiled in its center ready to spring at the throat of our national credit.

The Budget submitted by the President for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1933, contained total estimated expenditures of $4.112.009.950. This was a reduction of $369,243,450 below the expenditures for the fiscal year 1932. The pending bill, in order to secure the balancing of the Budget, assumes reductions in appropriations below the Budget estimate of $125,000,000 and increased revenue through legislation affecting the Post Office Department of $25,000,000. The alternative to increased taxes would be a further reduction of the expenses of the Government. Where might such reductions gations which in all probability could not be materially reduced. These aggregate $2,814,769,200 and are distributed as follows:

For payment of principal and interest on the public debt falling due during the fiscal year 1933___ $1, 136, 803, 400 For national defense (military and naval expenditures) ____ 694, 805, 800 For compensation, disability allowance, and hospitalization for veterans of former wars_____ 933, 160, 000

The administration of the absolutely essential governmental departments is estimated at a total cost of $386,-819,400. Expenses out of trust funds for refunds of taxes and for the government of the District of Columbia are estimated at $189,161,100. There remains a group of activities of the Federal Government estimated to cost during the fiscal year 1933 the total sum of $722,160,250, which are not in the ordinary sense governmental but which relate to the welfare of the people in many relations and represent services and interests which have widespread sympathy and support throughout the country. Broadly speaking, these services and interests are public health; education; conservation of national resources; aids to agriculture, labor, aviation, industry, and trade, and the merchant marine; and public buildings and public parks. It would be possible to curtail the activities of many of these departments and bureaus and to permanently eliminate some of them from the National Budget, but it is as certain as night follows day that vehement and voluminous protests would descend upon the Congress from millions of people who are interested in the maintenance of these activities.

Personally I have opposed some of these expenditures in the past and will do so in the future. I believe not only the people of the States and of the Territories and of the District of Columbia have grown to rely too much upon the assistance of Uncle Sam but I am also convinced that the States and their Representatives have deliberately placed upon the Federal Government burdens which the States and local communities should themselves bear. In fact, the relationship between the Federal Government and the States should be one of the great issues in our country to-day. If the Federal Government is to continue giving aids and subventions to the States in the performance of the functions which under our system of government properly belong to the States alone, there should be an entire reorganization of our system of National and State administration. The National Government has practically no domain of its own which is served by these expenditures. They benefit and promote local interests and local institutions and in no sense pertain to the obligations of a central government to the populations of sovereign States. I shall list some of these bureaus and services, with the expenditures actually made for each of them during the fiscal year 1931, the last such figures which are available:

Independent establishments: ederal Board for Vocational Education_____ $10, 285, 405 1,880,000 Federal Farm Board .... Federal Oil Conservation Board 17,500 362,010 Federal Power Commission_____Federal Radio Commission_____ 431, 360 Federal Trade Commission

National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics 1, 266, 500 Department of Agriculture: Office of Experiment Stations_____ 10, 428, 060 15, 319, 127 5, 404, 358 Bureau of Entomology_. 2, 656, 395 Bureau of Biological Survey______ Bureau of Public Roads_____ 1, 794, 710 109,000,000 Bureau of Agricultural Engineering

Bureau of Agricultural Economics

Bureau of Home Economics

Bureau of Plant Quarantine 525 200 6, 735, 953 234, 365 3, 293, 005 219,833 1,730,267 41,325 Building forest roads and trails_____ 9, 500, 000

Department of Commerce:
Aeronautics Branch	$8,929,660
Radio Division	598, 500
Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce	4, 986, 531
Bureau of Fisheries	2, 337, 640
Bureau of Mines	2,064,530
Department of the Interior:
Bureau of Reclamation	14, 368, 360
Geological Survey	2,904,000
Bureau of Education	3, 034, 600
Department of Labor:
Children's Bureau	$395, 500
Women's Bureau	179, 900
Employment service	820,000
Treasury Department:
Federal Farm Loan Bureau	1, 011, 500
Public Health Service	11, 607, 498

These expenditures total the sum of $242,984,491. The list is not submitted for the purpose of suggesting or approving action in any particular case, but it shows the nature of the establishments which might be subjected to radical cuts in expenditures without affecting the real governmental functions of the Federal administration.

Among the foregoing activities are many for which the Federal appropriations are expended by direct payments to the States and for cooperative work with the States, these being in fact activities of the States to which the Federal Government makes contributions. Such appropriations for the fiscal year 1932 included the following:

(a) For direct payments to the States:

)	For direct payments to the States.
	Federal Board for Vocational Education Federal water power act	$9, 694, 000.00 58, 275.00
	Agricultural experiment stations	4, 357, 000, 00
	Agricultural extension work	8, 672, 936, 00
	National forest funds	1, 640, 000.00
	Forest fire cooperation	1, 775, 000. 00
	Cooperative distribution of forest planting stock	95, 000. 00
	Cooperative construction of rural post roads	159, 000, 000. 00
	Federal-aid highway system (total in Depart-	total and calculations
	ment of Agriculture, $234,611,869.76)	59, 071, 933. 76
	Colleges for agriculture and mechanic arts	2, 550, 000.00
	Payment from receipts under mineral leasing act	1, 500, 000. 00
	Various special funds (total in Department of the Interior, $4,707,000)	657, 000.00
	In the Navy Department, for State marine schools	100, 000.00
	In the Treasury Department, to promote the education of the blind	75, 000, 00
1	For cooperative work with the States:	TENED TO SECTION
	In the Department of Agriculture—
	For forest roads and trails	12, 500, 000, 00
	For cooperative farm forestry	74, 000, 00
	In the Treasury Department, for the Public Health Service—
	Preventing the spread of epidemic diseases	400, 000. 00
	Interstate quarantine service	68, 040, 00
	Studies of fural sanitation	2, 338, 000. 00
	- I I - I - I - I - I - I - I - I - I -	2,000,000.00

The total of these aids to the States aggregate the following:

그는 경우 아이를 가는 것이 없는 것이 없는 것이 없는 것이 없었다. 그런 그렇게 살아보다 하셨습니다.
For direct payments	$249, 246, 144, 76
You direct payments.
For cooperative work	15, 380, 040, 00

Grand total of Federal aid to the States during the fiscal year 1932______ 264, 626, 184. 76

Among the items for direct payments to the States I have omitted two which are sometimes listed among the foregoing, but which, in my opinion, relate to the national defense, clearly one of the necessary functions of the Federal Government. These items are:

With the exception of these two items relating to the national defense, all of the foregoing services are, strictly speaking, not governmental in character. They are activities and services in the Federal administration which are not essentially necessary for the maintenance of the Government and of our institutions as planned by the fathers of the Republic. Under the welfare clause in the Constitution we have, during the course of the years, generously built up a multitude of organizations and departments which serve very beneficial purposes, which are very convenient and very desirable for the people but which, in time of serious distress, in time of a great emergency, and in a time of actual depression and loss of governmental revenues, might well be curtailed or postponed for a while.

I know I will be branded as a reactionary by many for making these suggestions and even for mentioning these services. I can see the spirit of Theodore Roosevelt stalking in these halls when anybody says something which might mean the curtailment of our policy of national conservation of natural resources. I can see many powerful organizations arise in their might when it is suggested that some of these activities might be reduced. But I submit seriously that many of these services might await a happier day in our financial situation for further Federal appropriations.

But we have another school of thought in this emergency. We have a new generation of greenback and freesilver economists. Even in this House there are those who would substitute printing presses and minting machines for the only force, aside from nature itself, which ever produced wealth, viz, human labor. We are told that government, forsooth, can produce values by dictum or fiat. These gentlemen would say: "Let there be wealth and, behold. there is wealth!" They would usurp the omnipotence of the Almighty, the omniscience of the All-Wise, the creative power of the Infinite. Thank God, our Nation is strong and efficient; we believe it represents the best of mankind; we are probably the best-favored people on earth; but we can not create values by mere word of mouth or stroke of pen. Nor will the beneficence or even the necessity of our purposes help us in overriding the laws of economics any more than the laws of nature.

Yet another, somewhat similar expedient is being proposed. It is thought and argued that we can continue borrowing indefinitely. During the war we succeeded in selling enormous amounts of national obligations by appealing to the patriotism of the people. Five million of our sons were in the military and naval service of their country. Many of those who remained at home had large incomes, which were paid out of the very money that was subscribed and invested in bonds. Patriotism was at the highest pitch in our history.

I personally headed an organization which canvassed a large population from house to house and from family to family and which permitted no one to escape from the purchase of Liberty and Victory bonds. Gentleman would apply those high-pressure methods now in selling peace-time securities. In my humble opinion it can not be done. Our bonds now will have to sell on their merits. Purchasers must be assured not only of adequate but absolutely certain returns. Low-interest securities can not be sold on a falling market except for very short terms which appeal to holders of large funds as a desperate means of getting some return for unprofitable holdings. Low interest on shortterm Federal securities is proof of an unhealthy economic condition. So also is high interest on long-term bonds. Both such transactions show an unwillingness and timidity in investing money for agricultural, industrial, and commercial purposes, which, after all, are the blood streams of our economic being.

Government securities find buyers, because the private pursuits of the people are not considered safe for investment. Such a situation does not promise well for the return of prosperity. Hoarding can be done in banks and unproductive securities as well as in vaults and mattresses. Funds, so hidden, do not benefit production and trade or give employment to the jobless. Besides, increased outputs of securities will increase the interest rates, not only on Government obligations, but on private investments as well. We get into another vicious circle where high money rates freeze assets, that should and would be available for reasonable returns from private enterprise, if the Government were not a competitive salesman of securities at every turn.

To my mind there are only two alternatives for the Congress, for wise and patriotic statesmanship, in the present unfortunate condition of the national finances. A combination of both would doubtless be the most satisfactory solution all around. The Budget must be balanced. Our income will not pay our outlay. What would a prudent man do in his own business, in like circumstances? Seek to reduce his expenditures and increase his receipts. The House Appropriations Committee has done commendable work in cutting the supply bills even below the Budget estimates. But it is their duty, after all, to propose allowances—as economical as possible, it is true, but reasonably adequate-for the agencies lawfully created to perform the functions of the Government. The present situation requires more than that. It requires, as I have said, the elimination, temporarily or permanently, of services and establishments, not absolutely necessary for the maintenance of the Federal Government in its constitutional operations. The Select Economy Committee, appointed by the House and given plenary powers, will be able to give consideration to the large aspects of this question. I urge them to act.

Our foreign relations, the national defense, the regula-tion of interstate and foreign commerce, the post-office service, and other matters specifically mentioned in the Constitution, including the preservation of the sovereign rights of the States-those are the chief concerns of the Federal Government, to whose exclusive attention we should address ourselves, particularly at a time when Federal revenues are inadequate and the States and local authorities are encroaching upon the taxing resources of the Republic. In spite of all of the expenditures by the Federal Government, outside of its own specific jurisdiction in and for the States, proposals for Federal taxation are constantly confronted with objections that the States have preempted some revenue field or that some special local condition created by the State itself renders the proposed Federal tax imposition inconvenient or unfair. I sometimes wonder whom we represent here, after all. Shall we legislate for this, that, or the other State, or for the United States of America? And if we do not protect the interests of the Federal Government, who is there to do it? Are we here to get all we can out of the Federal Government or should we give something to it? Are not these pertinent questions in the present inquiry? Should we not, must we not, subordinate local and even personal considerations in this national emergency which may involve the very permanency of the Republic? The national credit is at stake; the perpetuity of our institutions is involved in the balancing of this Budget, so necessary to restore confidence and stability. France recovered through economies from the greatest devastation wrought by the World War; Great Britain imposed tremendous tax burdens to regain financial stability: the German Republic has given new proof of commendable stamina in the face of enormous difficulties; shall we falter or stumble in the path of national honor on the road to prosperity, happiness, and peace? I am sure we shall not. [Applause.]

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. BOILEAU].

Mr. BOILEAU. Mr. Chairman, I was particularly pleased this noon to hear the chairman of the committee state that the committee would offer amendments to the bill taking off the tax on canned foods.

I think this will be of particular benefit to the farmers of the country, and I know it will be of particular interest and benefit to the farmers of my district. During the past few days I have received upward of 200 communications from the farmers of my district protesting against this tax, and I know now that in view of the fact the committee has recommended this amendment that this tax, of course, will not be imposed. I think it might be interesting, however, to refer to one of the communications I received from a prominent farmer of my district, a man who is representing his community in the American Society of Equity, a man who is a member of the Wisconsin State Legislature.

Last year he planted 10 acres of peas on his farm. Those of you who are familiar with the procedure of the canneries know that the cannery furnishes the seed to the farmer and charges him up with the value of the seed to be paid at the time the crop is harvested. Last year, after this particular farmer had settled up with the company, he owed the company $9.75; in other words, he got $9.75 less for his crop than it cost him for the seed, and he was obliged to perform all the work, provide the land, prepare the land for the seed, and harvest the crop. It was a total loss to him, and still, at the present time, we are considering a bill that will put a further burden on the farmers of this country. Although practically everything the farmer produces is exempt from this tax, nevertheless practically everything he buys is subject to a tax.

The farmer must pay 21/4 per cent as a tax on practically everything he buys, including all of his machinery and everything he buys to provide his family with the necessities of life.

I am glad that there is to be no tax on foodstuffs, because such a tax would be a heavy burden on the laboring man living in the city. We all know that he should not be required to pay additional taxes. I want to call your attention to the fact that a large part of all the money earned by the laborer is spent for rent and food. This is the bulk of his expenditure, and I am glad these items are not to be taxed. None of the necessities of life should be subject to a sales tax. The farmer, however, who is already suffering from too great a tax burden, must pay a tax on practically everything he buys, and therefore he is not getting a fair deal in this proposal. The farmer is paying too much of a tax and would carry even a greater burden under this bill than he is under existing law.

Mr. RANKIN. Will the gentleman yield?
Mr. BOILEAU. Yes.
Mr. RANKIN. The gentleman is mistaken about the food of the man in the city not being taxed, because, for instance, lard and lard substitutes, and things of that kind, are taxed under this bill.

Mr. BOILEAU. I thank the gentleman for the correction. I meant to say that a large percentage of the food of the man in the city would be exempt from taxation; but there are some commodities that are still taxed that ought not to be taxed, especially when there are so many of our people who are unable, under present conditions, to get enough money to buy the necessaries of life for themselves and their families.

I am absolutely opposed to a sales tax of any kind, because it is contrary to my idea of what a proper tax should be.

I believe we are going a long way from sound principles of taxation when, instead of placing the burden of taxation where it can best be carried, we place it upon the shoulders of those who are already overtaxed and who are already so overburdened that they find it impossible at this time to provide their families with a decent living.

We have also included in the bill a tax on amusements. It seems that every possible avenue has been thoroughly explored to see where there could be found some way of placing a tax on those who are least able to pay it. I maintain that a tax on the poor man's entertainment, the moving-picture show, is unfair and unjust, and I believe it is absolutely contrary to American principles to say that when a man provides his family with the luxury of a moving-picture show he must pay a penalty or must pay a tax before his family can enjoy that privilege. I am absolutely opposed to this amusement tax, and I hope the committee will strike this provision out of the bill when it is up for consideration under the 5-minute rule.

You may ask, and fairly, I believe, how we can raise a sufficient amount of money with which to carry on our Government. I believe this can be done easily and be done in such a way that the American people will not resent the tax but, in fact, will be pleased with having the opportunity of paying it.

I maintain that the American people are anxious that this Congress give them the right to engage in an industry that will not only satisfy the wishes of the vast majority of our citizens, but will also provide a great amount of needed revenue. I refer to the opening of our breweries and providing for a tax on beer.

Mr. GUYER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BOILEAU. Yes.

Mr. GUYER. Who is going to drink the beer?

Mr. BOILEAU. The people will drink the beer in those States that want to legalize beer.

Mr. GUYER. It is a poor man's drink, is it not?

Mr. BOILEAU. Yes.

Mr. GUYER. And he is the man who is going to pay that $1,000,000,000 tax. Why do you want to saddle this tax upon the back of labor?

Mr. BOILEAU. I want to tell the gentleman that the people of the State of Wisconsin will gladly pay their share of the tax on beer.

Mr. GUYER. It is the poor man, however, who will pay the tax.

Mr. BOILEAU. The poor man will pay it if he wants to drink the beer. At the present time he can not drink the beer without violating the law, and I submit that the people in the States that want the beer will pay the tax gladly, and there is no State of the Union that will be obliged to legalize beer even if Congress does modify the Volstead Act. This matter should be left to the various States.

Mr. OLIVER of New York. They are paying the tax now to the bootlegger.

Mr. BOILEAU. They are paying now a very heavy tax to the bootlegger.

Mr. CHIPERFIELD. If the poor man can afford to pay the tax the gentleman mentions, why can not the poor man better afford to pay the sales tax? [Applause.]

Mr. BOILEAU. I will submit to the gentleman that the people of my home city of 25,000 population had three small breweries going before this prohibition law; and I want to say to the gentleman that if they were permitted to go ahead and make beer, these breweries would give steady employment all the year around to at least 100 men, and there would be 100 additional wage earners in my city. In addition to that, these three breweries are now in a state of collapse, so that at least 100 men would be given temporary employment to put the breweries back in proper condition. I submit that if these breweries were put back into operation they would give employment to quite a large percentage of the men who are unemployed, and these men would again be consumers, and they would again be in position to buy the manufactured products of other men engaged in other industries. I submit to you that the people of the State of Wisconsin and the people of practically every other State except Kansas, according to the Literary Digest poll, would be very pleased to have an opportunity to pay this tax. I may say to those of you who live in dry States, or States that are presumably dry, that I can not see why you should object to the people of my State paying this tax if they want to.

Mr. GUYER. I will tell the gentleman why. We do not want to put the burden that the gentleman is talking about on the poor man who is going to drink this beer.

Mr. BOILEAU. I have heard all kinds of arguments in favor of prohibition, but I have never before heard anybody holding out for prohibition in one breath and in the next breath saying that he is doing it to prevent the poor man from paying the tax. The American Federation of Labor represents the poor man. What is their sentiment? They have gone on record favoring a return of beer. Practically every organization or association in this country that has had a poll on this subject in recent years has unequivocally gone on record in favor of the restoration of this industry, not only as a means of raising revenue but also to give to the people something they want and to restore in this country a proper respect for law and order and give real relief to a vast number of people who are now unemployed, who would find employment if the Volstead Act were modified to legalize the manufacture and sale of beer.

Mr. McGUGIN. If we were to set aside the manufacturers' tax and the admissions tax, this would mean we would have to raise about $700,000,000; is not that right?

Mr. BOILEAU. Approximately.

Mr. McGUGIN. What percentage of tax on beer would the gentleman think proper?

Mr. BOILEAU. Three cents on a pint of beer. Mr. McGUGIN. What percentage would that be?

Mr. BOILEAU. It would be much higher than 21/4 per cent, but the people would gladly pay it.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. McGUGIN. Then the gentleman thinks the country could stand to pay $15,000,000,000 for beer.

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. NoLAN].

Mr. NOLAN. Mr. Chairman, I have sat here during the past few days listening to the discussion of the bill now before us, and from that discussion I am led to believe it is absolutely essential that we find some way to balance the Budget. I have been told also that the only way we can successfully do it is to pass this revenue measure.

I have listened to an appeal to patriotism on the floor of the House, insisting that it was the duty of every Member to support this measure as the only method whereby we can meet the present emergency.

I listened to the acting chairman of the committee deliver very clear, informative, and impressive discussion of the merits of the bill and the conclusions to which the committee had arrived. I want to compliment the committee on the work which they have done; but I do not feel as a Member of the House, in spite of the fact that we must pass a revenue measure, that I should accept everything in the measure.

There are some portions of the bill I want to support, and some I can not support. I am opposed to the sales tax. I am opposed to it because I do not believe that it is a defensible system of taxation.

We have found by experience that there is one tax that is equitable and fair, one which reaches those that should bear the burden of taxation, and that is the income tax.

We are told that it is impossible to secure sufficient revenue from the income tax to balance the Budget. I want to observe that there is not a cent paid in taxes but must come out of the income of the people, whether you take it by direct assessment on the income or by the indirect method.

One of the difficulties of the farmers at the present time is that they have not enough money to pay the direct taxes imposed upon their property. Their income is not sufficient to meet the taxes, and that is why a great many farmers find themselves in the unfortunate financial position that they are in. You may say that they are to blame for thisthat they are responsible in part—as we all are for the condition we are in at the present time.

For years there has been an effort in this country to induce Congress to pass a sales tax. It is un-American, and Congress would not consider it, if it were not brought up in this time of emergency. But they say it is a temporary measure. I feel that if this sales tax is adopted we never will get rid of it.

The strong argument in favor of a sales tax is that it is easy to collect and is a painless system of taxation. That is true. People get accustomed to paying it and they forget all about it, but that does not prove that it is a fair tax.

A great deal of the support for the sales tax comes from those who have been paying a large income tax. It is the old proposition of shifting the burden of taxation from the shoulders of those who can afford to pay the tax to the shoulders of those who can least afford the burdens of taxation.

The chairman analyzed the tax in so far as it applies to the man of small income. He took the family with an income of a thousand dollars, and said that half of that money was expended for necessities, and that half of that would be exempt, leaving a tax on one-quarter of the income, which would amount to $6 when collected as a sales tax. Why, then, not assess him $6 as an income tax and let him make that contribution direct to the Government?

I realize that many people are not aware of the taxes they pay; and if the taxpayers of the United States to-day had a statement of every cent of money they pay to maintain the Government in direct and indirect taxes, there would be a revolution. The people are carrying the burden largely through taxes they know nothing about, but still they are paying them.

We are told that if we eliminate the sales tax there is only one other alternative, and that is to accept proposals in many ways far more objectionable than the sales tax itself. It seems to me that this situation is not so serious that we have at this time to inaugurate a sales tax in this country. Balancing the Budget does not necessarily mean that we must raise by taxation all of the money that is necessary to maintain our Government. The Budget can be balanced in part by a reduction of expenditures, and, if necessary, the Budget can be balanced by utilizing the credit of the country, and we have not by any means exhausted our credit at this time. We are going through a period of depression, and we will carry ourselves through this period, and business will come back, and the sources of income that we have been depending upon in the past will be available for sources of revenue to maintain the operation of the Government.

Mr. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. NOLAN. Yes.

Mr. ANDRESEN. My colleague has suggested that we cut down the governmental expenditures. Can he suggest to the committee any governmental departments or bureaus that might be eliminated, or any program for curtailment of Government expenditures?

Mr. NOLAN. At this time I have no suggestions to make. We have a committee of this House that is making an investigation along that line. I do not know how far you can go.

Mr. KNUTSON. Both gentlemen, the gentleman who is speaking and the gentleman who asked the question, are proponents of a proposition to expend $500,000,000 for the development of the upper Mississippi. We might cut that out for the time being, and that would help some.

Mr. NOLAN. That money has not been authorized, so

Mr. KNUTSON. The gentleman is proposing it.

Mr. NOLAN. We are not proposing any appropriation for that purpose.

Mr. LaGUARDIA. And I suppose there are some people who would want to stop all national activities, all improvements, all progress, in order to relieve the few bankers who have bankrupted and ruined this country.

Mr. NOLAN. We know it is doubtful whether any very great savings are going to be made by the Congress through reorganization or consolidation of governmental activities. That is a fine thing to talk about, but we have been talking about it for years, and nothing has ever been done about it. It is doubtful if anything will be done at this session of Congress which will amount to a great deal in the way of reduction of expenditures. But this Congress has been spending money. We appropriated $500,000,000 for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and $125,000,000 for the Farm Loan Banks, which makes $625,000,000 that we have appropriated without knowing where the money will come from. We are told that the sales tax will produce in revenue $675,000,000; just a little more than enough to cover these appropriations. Before this Congress adjourns we will be called upon to make, and we will make, other expenditures in addition to what we have already made. Where are we going to find this additional money? I am opposed to a sales tax because I believe it is not a proper system of taxation, that it is not based on any fundamental theory of taxation which is sound, and because I believe if it is once adopted and goes into force in this country, it will be a mighty difficult tax for us to get rid of. [Applause.]

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. LAMBERTSON].

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, I am not satisfied in my own mind that we can not balance the Budget without this sales tax. I hold in my hand a copy of the individual income-tax return, with which gentlemen are familiar. This is the last day upon which this income tax can be made and paid. There are 55 items in it, and the first item is the question:

Are you a citizen or resident of the United States?

The fifty-fifth item is:

Balance of tax.

However, the fifty-fourth item is:

Income tax paid to a foreign country or United States possession.

That was interesting to me, and I asked the Treasury how much was paid by branch factories of the United States in foreign lands last year. They reported to me that for 1929 $35,000,000 was paid in foreign countries. The point is that that money which is paid in foreign countries is deducted from the tax of the major corporation in the United States. If that corporation has a branch in Missouri, where they have a State income tax, and, say, in New Jersey, the home company had $100,000 of income and the Missouri branch had $5,000 income, they would deduct from the Federal income $5,000 out of Missouri, and then would pay the taxes here on the $95,000; but if a branch factory is in France and they pay $1,000 tax over there and the total tax here is $1,500, the $1,000 is deducted from the $1,500 of the tax itself. The last item of deduction is what you pay a foreign country, and that is taken out of the total tax paid in this country. We lost just $35,000,000 that we ought to have had in the Treasury over here. If that is true, there may be many more similar places where we could pick up money. It looks unjustifiable to let them deduct $35,000,000 paid by branch factories in foreign lands from the total tax due in America.

The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. RAMSEYER] proposed to lower the estate-tax exemption to $50,000. That would make up probably $200,000,000. That is nearly one-third of the proposed sales tax. I think there should be a general reduction which may come from this Economy Committee on all appropriation bills before this Congress adjourns, say, 5 per cent.

If we were to reduce these appropriation bills 5 per cent, we would be working at the thing in the proper manner to balance the Budget. There have not been any real reductions effected yet. Let us get at this thing and really reduce 5 or 10 per cent of all of our major appropriation bills and let them adjust that matter themselves, and then let us bring down this estate-tax limit. Let us go into the medium brackets of the income tax, $30,000 or $40,000, and raise them a little. I am not convinced in my own mind that the vanishing point on incomes of $100,000 is just exactly 40 per cent. They tell us that is just exactly the place to stop. In war times it was 65 per cent. At this time we might make it 45 with safety.

Mr. RANKIN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LAMBERTSON. I yield.

Mr. RANKIN. They told us that same thing in 1921, yet those with incomes of a million dollars multiplied twentyfive times in seven years.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. I think we can go up on those incomes. We can go back in the middle brackets; we can pull down this estate tax, and we can pick up things like this $35,000,000 that we lose in foreign lands and a few other items and make up this sales tax.

There has been a great deal said about nonpartisanship, and it does have some influence in making us think it is all right, because it is equally supported on both sides. I am not so sure but that it is unholy bipartisan as well as wholly nonpartisan on both sides. I am not so sure about it. Whenever this thing starts and we get this tax we will always have it. The Seventy-third Congress will have 40 more Members from the industrial sections. As the gentleman from Michigan said the other day, when the camel gets his nose under the tent he is going to stay there.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HILL of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I yield 20 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Bulwinkle].

Mr. BULWINKLE. Mr. Chairman, the Government of the United States is at the present time confronted by a serious economic dilemma. The operating expenses of the Federal Government exceed its income, and this economic dilemma not only affects the Government but to all intents and purposes it likewise economically affects each individual citizen.

The Ways and Means Committee of the House, after weeks, nay, months of consideration, a consideration which has been nonpartisan, have reported to the House a revenue bill, H. R. 10236. Now, in Committee of the Whole, the Members of the House, after considering that measure with a view to ultimately raise sufficient revenue to pay the expenses of the Government in the future, and in short, as it is commonly termed, to balance the Budget, and by doing so to relieve the Government from this economic dilemma which is facing it. Questions have been asked by various Members of the House, as well as by private citizens, such as, Why has not the Budget been balanced and who is responsible for not balancing it and what is proposed by the Congress to remedy the present situation so that the credit of the Government might be stabilized? Before attempting, therefore, to discuss the provisions of the present bill now under consideration, I shall in a brief manner attempt in a way to answer these questions as to who is responsible for not having a balanced Budget and why it was not balanced. Without, therefore, engaging in any partisan debate, it is not amiss for me to remind the committee that until the 4th day of December last the Republican Party has continuously and without interruption had everywhere from a clearly working majority to a very large majority in the Sixty-sixth, Sixty-seventh, Sixty-eighth, Sixty-ninth, and Seventieth and Seventy-first Congresses, in both the Senate and the House. And from the 4th day of March, 1921, until the present time, with the exception of the organization and control of the present House by the Democratic Party, with Mr. GARNER as Speaker, the Republican Party has been in full and complete control of the United States Government in all of its branches. The raising of revenue, the expenditure of public money, and all other functions of Government rested in the hands of the Republican Party and the Republican administration, and no one can gainsay or deny this statement.

But upon several occasions I have heard Republicans say that the present condition is due entirely to the war and its aftermath. It, I say, is not amiss for me to remind you that the Republican Party, in its platform of 1928, under the title of finance and taxation, claimed that all these problems arising had been solved:

The record of the United States Treasury under Secretary Mellon stands unrivaled and unsurpassed. The finances of the Nation have been managed with sound judgment. The financial policies have yielded immediate and substantial results.

In 1921 the credit of our Government was at a low ebb. We were burdened with a high public debt, a load of war taxes, which in variety and weight exceeded anything in our national life, while vast unfunded intergovernmental debts disorganized the economic life of the debtor nations and seriously affected our own by reason of the serious obstacles which they presented to commercial intercourse. This critical situation was evidenced by a serious disturbance in our own life which made for unemployment. Today all these major financial problems have been solved.

And in addition to this, their candidate for the present President of the United States, in his speech of acceptance, also claimed that the Republican Party had solved all the financial problems which affected this Government arising from the war:

The Republican Party came into authority nearly eight years ago. It is necessary to remind ourselves of the critical conditions of that time * * *. No party ever accepted a more difficult task of reconstruction than did the Republican Party in 1921. The record of these seven and one-half years constitutes a period of rare courage in leadership and constructive action. Never has a political party been able to look back upon a similar period with more satisfaction. Never could it look forward with more confidence that its record would be approved by the electorate.

It might be well also to quote from the keynote speech of we should fail to balance the Budget for the future, we would the chairman of the Republican National Convention, delivered at Kansas City, Mo., on June 12, 1928, which entered to a great extent into the success of the Republican Party in solving the financial questions arising from the war, and which stated:

This achievement was made possible only on the sound economic policy of the Government under the present leadership and was not at the expense of efficiency in administration nor at the loss of any needed appropriation.

He likewise stated that-

This achievement was not the result of accident but rather of management.

Even during the last three years, with the deficit of $900,-000,000 facing us in 1931, nothing was done by the administration; and even though we have a deficit which it is estimated will be from two and a quarter to two and a half billion dollars for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1932, for nine months the administration did nothing, although it could have called Congress into session.

It is needless therefore for me to say anything further along this line, but it is necessary for me to remind you that during all these years that the Republican Party was in control of the Government the appropriations were not decreased; additional employees were placed upon the Government pay roll; and this party is justly chargeable for this and can not relieve itself of the responsibility for the present governmental deficit while it has been in control of the Federal Government. They even went so far in their platform as to pledge to the people of the United States a continuation of these policies which they had carried through in the seven and a half years preceding.

There is therefore no question but that a deficit exists. There is no question whatever but that the operating and running expenses of this Government far exceed its income; and there is no question but that the Budget is not balanced and that this is a Republican deficit that we are confronted with to-day. But, be that as it may, this does not in any way relieve any Member of the Congress from the responsibility that he owes to his constituents and the Government of the United States. We can in no wise shirk that responsibility which rests upon us as Members of the House of Representatives.

Nor can we who are Democrats, who are in the majority party in the House of Representatives, at present shirk the responsibility that goes with the majority party; and, as has been so well said, the House of Representatives itself can not shirk its responsibility in inaugurating and proposing this revenue bill. This responsibility is placed upon us by the Constitution. But there may be those who say-and I heard it among the Members of the House on both sides of the Chamber-that it is not necessary to balance the Budget. Balancing a Budget means nothing more nor less than that the Government shall collect sufficient revenue to pay its operating expenses and that the credit of the Government will not be imperiled by borrowing to meet these annual expenses. No individual can continue to maintain his credit if his annual expenses exceed his annual income. Nor can a partnership or corporation continue to do business when its annual expenses of doing business exceed its annual income. Bankruptcy will immediately overtake the individual, the firm, the partnership, or the corporation; and so it is with a government, whether that government be Federal, State, county, or municipal. Destroy the credit structure of a government and you immediately bring disaster. Already we note that the expenses of operating the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1931, created a deficit of $900,000,000, and the deficit for the present fiscal year ending June 30, 1932, will be $2,500,000,000; and that if no new law were enacted but the Government collected the revenue under the existing law there would be an estimated deficit of $1,700,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1933.

The deficit of $900,000,000 for the past year and the estimated deficit for the present year of $2,500,000,000 has been or will be taken care of by the issuance of Treasury notes, thereby increasing the national debt. If, therefore, we should fail to balance the Budget for the future, we would seriously affect the credit and stability of this Government of ours. We would destroy all that we hoped to accomplish when we passed the Reconstruction Finance Corporation act, the Steagall banking bill, and other remedial legislation. We would destroy confidence in the very Government itself. There is no way that can be devised to pay the expenses of the Government except by money secured through taxation. Not only is it our responsibility, our service to this Government, to raise revenue but it is also our duty to courageously see that the expenses of the Government are reduced. There are certain items of expense that can not be reduced, it is true, for it is costing practically $1,100,000,000 a year for hospitalization, compensation, and allowances for the veterans of all wars. The interest on the public debt and the sinking-fund account will approach another $1,100,000,000. But you will notice from the report of the Ways and Means Committee on this bill that it is contemplated that Congress will save $150,-000,000 in addition to the reduction in governmental expenses which was contemplated in the Budget for 1933 and which amounts to $370,000,000.

We will then have to increase or raise additional taxes of $1,100,000,000. How shall it be raised? That is the question. The Ways and Means Committee, by its nonpartisan patriotic work, has presented to the House this bill. Many of the provisions of the bill are noncontroversial. I have heard no objections from anyone as to lowering the exemptions on personal incomes. And the increase in personal income taxes do not seem to incite a controversy at all, with the exception that there are some who would increase the amount over 46 per cent. And the same view applies to the estate tax and the corporation tax. The controversial part of this bill seems to be the manufacturers' tax, the admission tax, and a few other items, but mainly these two. No one has opposed any kind of a sales tax more than I have opposed it during the time that I have been in and out of Congress, but an emergency exists to-day, an emergency nearly as great as that which existed in time of war, and it is my duty as well as yours to courageously meet the situation that does exist, regardless of what the future may hold in store for each of us.

If this manufacturers' tax were to be placed as a permanent means of obtaining revenue, I doubt very much if I would vote for it; but as an emergency measure I make this pledge to the House and my constituents that if I remain in Congress I shall use my full power and my vote against a continuation of this tax. I have heard it said that we should not attempt to balance the Budget by a bill in the House; that we should pass a bill increasing the taxes some and then let the Senate do the rest. To my mind this is absolute cowardice. I have heard it likewise said that we could put a tax on all articles-for instance, on men's hats that retail for over $3 each, with an exemption to those below. There would probably not be one hat out of a hundred that would be sold for less than $3. And while, as I said, I have never approved of a sales tax and that I would not support this bill at the present time if it were not on account of the great emergency that exists, an emergency which extends not only to the Government but to every financial institution and every individual in America, yet I realize that new sources of revenue had to be found, and, as so well said in the report of the Ways and Means Committee on the manufacturers' tax, this bill meets the requirements in that-

First. The rate must be low, so that undue burdens will not be imposed.

Second. Certainty, both as to liability and amount, must be attainable in advance of the sale.

Third. Pyramiding must be prevented.

Fourth. The tax must be imposed uniformly and without discrimination.

Fifth. The law must present the least possible number of difficult administrative problems—such as the questions of classification arising in connection with exemptions.

Sixth. Adequate authority must be granted to assure a sound, smoothly functioning, and flexible administration.

I am extremely gratified to support the amendment which will further relieve manufactured foodstuffs from the provisions of this bill, and I shall support such amendments. I hope and trust that if it is possible to do so that there will be no tax at all on any article of food that is a necessity. And only a tax on that food which may be termed luxury.

I realize as well as anyone that this tax will not be a popular tax, but I also realize that if the Budget is not balanced the effect upon the individuals in the United States will far exceed the amount of tax that they will have to pay under this provision.

There is more or less controversy upon the admission tax and, in my opinion, all agricultural fairs or exhibitions should be exempt and, if possible, if it is absolutely necessary, as it seems to be for an admission tax be placed, I would like to see that no tax be charged on any other admission where the admission did not exceed 50 cents. By all means I am firmly convinced that any tax on admission to agricultural fairs or exhibitions should be removed. The oil-importation tax is another tax which I do not approve of and which I believe on account of the small amount of revenue that it produces could be well left out.

But, as stated before, taking everything into consideration. including the emergency that exists in the country to-day, the necessity of maintaining the credit and stability of the Nation, the ultimate good that will come to the individual citizens of the Nation, I firmly and conscientiously believe that it is my duty as a Representative in this Congress to support this bill, and I shall therefore support it. [Applause.1

Increases in taxes proposed

(Estimated additional revenue for fiscal year 1933)

Manufacturers' excise tax at 24 per cent	$595, 000, 000
Income tax: Individual	112, 000, 000
Corporation
Estate and gift taxes	35, 000, 000
Admissions tax at 10 per cent on admissions of 25 cents and over	90, 000, 000
Stock transfers and sales, increase from present rate of 2 cents to 4 cents, and application of tax of
4 cents to loans of stocks	28, 000, 000
Lubricating oil, 4 cents per gallon	25, 000, 000
Malt sirup, 35 cents per gallon; grape concentrates, 40 per cent ad valorem; wort, 5 cents per gallon Telegraph, telephone, and radio messages, 5 cents on messages costing 31-49 cents, and 10 cents on messages costing 50 cents or moreGasoline, gas oil, fuel oil, and crude oil imports,	35, 000, 000
1 cent per gallon
Reduction in postal deficit	25, 000, 000
Administrative changes	100, 000, 000
Administrative changes————————————————————————————————————	100, 000, 000
Total additional revenue	1, 121, 000, 000
Reduction in expenditures Total additional revenue and reduction in expenditures	1, 246, 000, 000
Amount required to balance the Budget 1	1, 241, 000, 000

Excess over requirements ____

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. RANKIN].

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Chairman, the passage of this bill with the sales-tax provision in it would, in my opinion, be one of the greatest betrayals of the American people that was ever committed by the American Congress and one that would be everlasting.

It is an attempt to unload onto the masses of the American people the great burden of taxation of the Republic. That attempt has been going on by the possessors of large fortunes for many years. They have been attempting to get a sales tax levied in order that they might place on the shoulders of the toiling masses of the country the burden of maintaining this Government in order that they may pyramid their own fortunes and pass them on down from generation to generation.

This bill levies a tax even on the man in the bread line. It taxes the very clothes in which he is shivering, the shoes in which he tramps the streets looking for work, and the and scrape. Let me show you what it meant, and I want meager rations with which he feeds his hungry children.

&lt;sup>1</sup> Exclusive of statutory debt retirements.

Behind it is the impulse of the predatory interests that have been striving for years to pass this load on to the masses of the people in order that they might escape.

I was very much amused to see high-tariff advocates from New England and from Kansas spit fire at each other about the tariff on oil and lobsters. They reminded me of a bunch of horse thieves who horsewhipped one of their number for stealing on Sunday. [Laughter.]

The Wall Street Journal said this morning that we who are opposing this sales tax would be defeated because we are not organized. Well, we are going to organize, and we are going to do it this afternoon. [Applause.] The American people are going to be heard from on this proposition, and don't you forget it. [Applause.]

This sales-tax provision violates every principle of Democracy. Some one asked why it wasn't brought in here when we were in control of the House years ago. I will tell you why. In those days there were giants in this House. There was that old Roman, Champ Clark, whose heart beat in sympathy for the American people. Before they could get such a measure before this House, they would have to bring it in, politically speaking, over his dead body. [Applause.]

There was that giant from North Carolina, Claude Kitchin, who was not only the Democratic leader, but was chairman of the Ways and Means Committee. If he were even alive to-day, you could not get this thing on to Capitol Hill, much less into the House. [Applause.]

Then there was Finis J. Garrett, that young Demosthenes, who led us for years in our fights against the predatory interests, and also that distinguished Democrat, who now towers at the other end of the Capitol, Cordell Hull of Tennessee. If they were Members of the House now we would not be confronted with this measure because it would never have come out of the committee. [Applause.]

Those men who come with vulnerable records, such as the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Chindblom], who has just spoken, tell us that above all things we must balance the Budget. I agree with the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Ramseyer] that that is not the most important issue before us. The most important issue is that of bringing back commodity prices, putting our people to work and taking them out of the bread line, in order that we may enjoy prosperity for the people rather than that we may pass a bill that will enable the profits of favored interests to escape taxes in the future. [Applause.] Besides, I shall show you before I close how we can balance the Budget without imposing this injustice.

In the last 10 years, during the time that the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CHINDBLOM] has been on the Committee on Ways and Means, there has been the greatest concentration of wealth in this country that has ever been known in all the history of mankind. During the war those who made their profits out of that conflict, those who grew rich out of that unfortunate affair, who coined their money out of the blood and tears and suffering of men, women, and children of the world, began to place their wealth beyond the pale of taxation by investing in those tax-exempt securities which the Government was compelled to issue, and which your States, counties, and municipalities and mine were compelled to issue, to meet the expenditures incident to the high prices which then prevailed. In 1921-22, not satisfied with the enormous profits they had made during the war, they had passed the Fordney-McCumber tariff law, the highest protective tariff act, the most unconscionable protective tariff that was ever levied in a civilized country in time of peace up to that time—a tariff that levied a tax on everything that the American people buy from the swaddling clothes of infancy, to the lining of the coffin in which old age is laid away.

It even went beyond that and placed a tariff upon the tombstones that mark their last resting places. It soon bled the agricultural States white. It took from those people who produced wheat and corn and cotton and other agricultural commodities all of the money that they could rake and scrape. Let me show you what it meant, and I want you to take this home, you sales-tax advocates, and read this, and then I am going to show you what else you are putting on them.

For years after that law was passed it cost the American people $4,000,000,000 a year. Of that $4,000,000,000, $600,000,000 went into the Treasury, and $3,400,000,000 went into the pockets of the beneficiaries of that law. Those beneficiaries have invariably placed their gains beyond the pale of taxation. There is only one way to reach them, and that is through the inheritance tax, to which I shall refer again in a moment.

In order that your constituents may understand, if you have a county in your district of 30,000 people, it costs them thirty times $40 or $1,200,000 a year. Every single county in the United States with 30,000 people during those times paid this tribute to Rome of $1,200,000 a year.

Your people in the wheat and corn and cotton growing States got nothing in return. No wonder you are bled white, no wonder your States to-day are struggling and your counties and municipalities are struggling under the burden of taxation.

During that time some of the so-called leaders of organized capital took some of the so-called leaders of organized labor and organized agriculture up onto the mountain top and showed them the cattle of a thousand hills and said, "All this will be ours if you will join in passing the Esch-Cummins law and in passing the Fordney-McCumber tariff law, for we will boost your wages and your prices and incidentally double our incomes." Some of them fell, and as a result of that distortion of the power of government a few of those alleged leaders of labor found their way into the Cabinet, while organized capital placed their wealth in tax-exempt securities, and the great mass of the laboring people to-day find themselves in the bread line, and the farmers find themselves in bankruptcy. It is time to wake up. Not only has it concentrated the wealth of this country and broken every agricultural State, not only has it strung bread lines down the streets of every city in America, but it has provoked retaliation on the part of foreign countries until to-day the map of the world is a barbed-wire entanglement of tariff barriers, behind which world trade has become stagnant and world commerce has become paralyzed.

Let us see what all this amounted to. There finally came the greatest economic crash ever known in all the history of the world, a crash from which we may not soon recover. Let us take some concrete results, and I hope the gentleman from Illinois, and the other members of the Ways and Means Committee supporting this bill, will not leave the Chamber.

In 1921 there were 21 individuals in the United States with incomes of $1,000,000 a year and more. In 1928 there were 511 individuals with incomes of $1,000,000 a year. They multiplied twenty-four times.

In 1921 there were 63 individuals in the United States with incomes of from $500,000 to $1,000,000 a year. In 1928, seven years later, there were 983. While our people were growing poorer, while they were having their farms sold from under them in your State and mine, their homes being swept away, those men with enormous incomes multiplied from ten to twenty-five times. They placed their wealth in that ark of the covenant, known as tax-free securities, and now warn us not to touch them. One object behind this bill is to keep us from raising the inheritance taxes and making them pay their pro rata share of the expenses of this Government [Applause.]

During that time the same members of the Ways and Means Committee who are supporting this bill brought in a bill to fund the foreign debts. England had proposed to pay us in 25 years, and to pay the same interest rate we were paying, but instead of accepting that a debt-funding commission was appointed. They extended all those loans over 62 years and reduced the interest so much lower than we are paying that it cost the American people $8,000,000,000. Why? What was behind it? Those international bankers who had their money invested in foreign countries and wanted to weaken our security in order to strengthen theirs. That is what was behind it.

Another thing. This same committee brought in bills that reduced the income taxes of those with large incomes, $750,000,000 a year. If that had not been, we would now have several billion dollars with which to meet this deficit; but instead of that they reduced the income taxes on the large income-tax payers and the inheritance on large estates more than $750,000,000 a year.

In 1924, I believe it was, they returned or remitted $232,-000,000 as a bonus, or a dole, to the big income-tax payers. Not only that, but two years ago they voted to give back $160,000,000 to income-tax payers before we ever passed a single appropriation bill. A dole, if you please! They said, "Why, we have a surplus." The Treasury Department can show a surplus or they can show a deficit. It is just owing to whether they want to defeat appropriations or whether they want income taxes returned.

In the last nine years the Treasury Department has paid back to these big income-tax payers more than $3,394,508,218. For what? They said they had made mistakes in making out their income-tax returns. Does any man with ordinary intelligence believe that they made mistakes amounting to $3,000,000,000? They did that without even consulting Congress. They did not even consult the Committee on Ways and Means.

Not only that, but when we met this time you were asked to give $260,000,000 in moratoria to foreign countries, and Wall Street was so badly scared for fear they would pay that money that they even sent a member of the House of Morgan before the Ways and Means Committee, who did not appear to know anything about the transaction. The facts are those European countries had the money to pay, and would have paid it if the Treasury Department and the State Department had not stopped them. That would have taken up $260,000,000 of this deficit that you are now asking us to make up by imposing this unconscionable burden upon the backs of the great masses of the American people.

In 1929, just after Mr. Hoover's election, as soon as you met you were going to give us farm relief. What did you do? Instead of giving us relief from a tariff that we were then struggling under you raised it and helped provoke this retaliation to which I have just referred.

Some men have called my attention to the fact that we have a State sales tax in some States and say they can not understand the difference. The legislature of my State is now struggling with a sales tax. They are doing it because they are unable to pay the interest and the sinking funds on the bonds held by people who are escaping the income taxes. They are doing it because they must do something to save our farms and our homes. They are struggling with a question much more stupendous from their viewpoint than we have to deal with here, but if they had these enormous fortunes and had the power of taxing them that we have to-day there would be no doubt about what they would do. They would never impose a sales tax.

Let me show you what this bill does. It is the easiest thing in the world to figure out. You are raising in the first year $600,000,000 by this sales tax. That means $5 per capita. In my State we have 2,000,000 people. It means a burden of $10,000,000 a year on them. That is, if they just collect the amount of the tax alone, but when it is doubled, as it will be, two or three times, it will mean on the people of my State fifteen or twenty million dollars a year—people who are already bled white and ground into the dust by these indirect taxes you have imposed in the last 10 years.

Not satisfied with having added to the iniquity under which we are now suffering, you increased the tariff in this bill. Of all things on earth, to increase a tariff that has produced the very calamities we are suffering from to-day is the most inexcusable thing I have ever known.

I do not mean just putting this burden on top of the tariff, but they increased the tariff 2½ per cent. It makes a double additional burden on the American people.

In addition to that, they gave a bonus, if you please, to manufacturers of articles to be shipped into foreign countries of 21/4 per cent. If a firm manufactures two tractors and sends one to Maine to plow potatoes with or down to Kansas to cut wheat with or down to Mississippi to run a cotton gin, we pay 21/4 per cent tax on it under this bill. But if they send it to Russia to be used in raising wheat or cotton in competition with the American farmers, that tax is left off. In other words, they are giving our competitors a bonus of 21/4 per cent.

This sales-tax provision is unconstitutional, and it would, in my opinion, be set aside by the Supreme Court. Direct taxes are forbidden by the Constitution. The manufacturers' sales tax, as provided in this bill, is a direct tax. It has been held that you may levy a sales tax on certain specified articles and escape the penalties of that provision, but when you make a sales tax general and then attempt to specify exceptions you come clearly under that provision of the Constitution which forbids and prohibits this kind of legis-

Not only that, but this bill is unnecessary. As I said, it is unnecessary at this time, because we have the power to raise taxes otherwise.

The distinguished gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CHIND-BLOM] seems to fear we are going to inflate the currency. Of course we are going to inflate the currency, if we ever get out of this panic. We are going to have to inflate it in some way. We can raise this $600,000,000 by setting aside sufficient gold to make a 40 per cent reserve and then issue United States Treasury notes against it, just as Lincoln did during the Civil War. That can be done without imposing this burden on the masses of the people. In my opinion we have a sufficient gold reserve to issue two billion or two and a half billion dollars worth of Treasury notes without in any way impairing our gold reserve.

There are other things which we might tax. Those of you gentlemen who are willing to crucify the rest of mankind on a cross of gold, as Mr. Bryan said, and those of you who are afraid of inflation, might take the other horn of the dilemma. I will show you the means by which you can get all this money out of taxes and yet not impose a burden on the people who are unable to pay. Suppose we should tax all deals on the stock exchanges of the country? That might help to prevent another catastrophe such as the one through which we are now passing; it might prevent the pyramiding of prices and deluding innocent purchasers into investing their money in worthless securities, and would bring in a great deal of revenue.

We can raise the income taxes in the higher brackets. We can put them where they were during the war, when the maximum was 65 per cent. We are in a war now. Do not deceive yourselves, and you are just now in the skirmish line. Wait until you go back home. Then you will see the main battle, and some of you are going to need some stretcher bearers if this bill passes. [Applause.]

I am in favor of raising the inheritance tax, beginning with 1 per cent on the first $10,000 above $50,000, exemptions allowed, and going up to 70 per cent when you get as high as $15,000,000 or more. Some men are going to say that is too much. Let me ask any of you gentlemen whether the people of your State, your county, and your communities are not paying more taxes because these men escape taxation? Your people are paying all their incomes and then seeing their homes sold from under them. Your people are under a great burden of taxation in order to meet the payments on those bonds which are now held by those people who have large estates and who, as a rule, are escaping their part of the burden of taxation and some of them paying no taxes at all.

Mr. TARVER. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. RANKIN. For a question; yes.

Mr. TARVER. Is the gentleman aware that under section 810 of this bill it is actually proposed to refund a considerable amount of inheritance taxes already collected?

Mr. RANKIN. I am not at all surprised.

Mr. TARVER. Is the gentleman advised as to the amount | to do here at the moment to take care of the issue that is of money in this revenue-raising bill which will actually be taken out of the Treasury by that section of the bill?

Mr. RANKIN. No; not fully. But I can not yield further. If we should raise inheritance taxes to 70 per cent, it would not bother these rich men as long as they live. As a rule, they have escaped all income taxes. If those men had paid taxes in proportion to their wealth all down through the years, they would have paid a much larger proportion than the 70 per cent proposed on their estates. But to-day we have concentrated wealth in this country until about 5 per cent of the people of the United States own more than 90 per cent of the wealth. The only way to reach it is through this inheritance tax, and, as I say, I am in favor of raising it to 70 per cent when you get to $15,000,000.

This will help to break up those large estates and turn them back through the channels of our economic life, and thereby give the coming generations of young Americans a chance in this life.

In this way we will raise $560,000,000, practically enough to wipe out this deficit. When we have done this, and when we have raised the income-tax rates to where they should be, then if we have not enough money to pay the deficit I am in favor of floating short-term bonds for the balance. Then when we have reinflated the currency and stimulated commodity values these large incomes will come back, just as they did in 1924, 1926, and 1928; and then if we have not sufficient money, if we are not getting sufficient revenue, it will be our duty to reduce expenses to bring our expenditures within our revenue.

Mr. SIROVICH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANKIN. I yield.

Mr. SIROVICH. Can the gentleman tell us by what means the gentleman can justify imposing a tax of 10 per cent on theaters and motion pictures and 21/2 per cent as a general sales tax when in Europe they subsidize the theater while here we tax culture?

Mr. RANKIN. No. This theater sales tax is another thing. Our States are already taxing them. The small picture show that sells tickets for 10 or 15 or 20 cents is already paying a tax in my State. This bill invades and usurps the field of taxation that our States must have. [Applause.]

I want to appeal to every Democrat on the floor of this House; I want to appeal to every Republican on the floor of this House who has at heart the interests of the great masses of the American people, whose welfare we must look after and protect, to help us to strike this sales tax provision from this bill, so that we may not impose an extra burden on the man who is already burdened to death.

Raise the inheritance taxes, raise the income taxes, tax luxuries and tax transfers on the stock exchange, but let us go back to the American people and say, "We are not going to burden you to death; we are not going to place a tax on you that is unjust and one that will finish the destruction of your economic existence." [Applause.]

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 25 minutes to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. HADLEY].

Mr. HADLEY. Mr. Chairman, I question whether further debate at this time will be very fruitful of good results, and yet it is an open forum and the debate has thus far, I am sure, been informing and profitable. Necessarily there is now much repetition. I have no desire to discuss the bill except to say something that will help and further it, as I have helped to draft it in committee.

My only purpose in taking the floor is to make reference to a few of the fundamental things which I think must be controlling on the minds of the committee here in determining its action upon the bill.

The gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. RANKIN] is always entertaining and forceful. He has made a splendid argument from his viewpoint, but much of it, if you will pause to consider it, is collateral to the issues that are presented here. I shall not undertake to review the gentleman's argument on matters that are collateral, because we have enough presented by the pending bill.

What is the issue? The fact is before us that we will have an estimated deficit for 1933, which fact is well understood. of $1,241,000,000, and the question is, What are we going to do about it? Shall we provide for it? This is the first question. The second question is, How shall we provide for it? The first question, in my view, is not debatable, but the second one may well be debated.

The committee has produced a plan. It may not be the best plan, but it is the best plan the committee could agree upon, and in the judgment of the committee it is the best plan under the existing circumstances which can be adopted to meet this emergency.

When we faced this fact and determined we would undertake to balance the Budget for 1933, of course, the committee naturally turned at once to the ordinary sources of revenue, including income taxes. Naturally, it went to the income schedules first. We gave them quite thorough consideration. The gentleman from Mississippi who has just taken his seat has advocated a return to the abnormal taxes of the war period and the period subsequent thereto. The committee has been all over that subject. The gentleman from Mississippi ignores the principle of the law of diminishing returns altogether in his argument. This question was fought out not only on the floor of this House but throughout the country. It was an issue for years after the war as to how far you could go in these schedules of income and corporation taxes and produce revenue.

It was the deliberate judgment of the Congress and of the country that there is a line beyond which you can not go and produce revenue.

Many of the members of the committee who have brought this bill to you were members of the committee through all that epoch when that contest raged throughout the country. They had the benefit of the experiences of that period, of the hearings repeatedly held upon the subject, and they had the benefit of the best advice that experts in the country could give them on tax and fiscal questions; and we have further considered that subject again this year. We have analyzed the matter in the light of the experience of the country and the experience of the Treasury Department itself, and we have determined that when we have gone to 40 per cent in the upper brackets plus the normal tax of 6 per cent we have gone at least to the line of diminishing returns. I myself am of the opinion that it is very doubtful whether 46 per cent will produce as much revenue to the Government as a lower rate. To raise the surtax rates above those recommended in the bill will defeat revenue rather than produce it. What we are now concerned with is the vital task of raising additional revenue in excess of that available under existing law.

I am convinced that to go farther will destroy revenue rather than increase it. The gentleman from Mississippi has raised this question here, and I ask you to pause and hesitate, and read the hearings in years that have gone by, having regard for the judgment of the people as reflected by the representation they have had heretofore on the question that faces us now.

What we want here is a program that will produce revenue. We must have it, we can not deal with fanciful figures based on irresponsible speculation on what the result may be.

We have brought you a program, which, although not the original recommendation of the Treasury, is approved by the Treasury now in respect to the administration features of the manufacturers' tax, its feasibility, and the revenue it will produce. No one has questioned the fact that it will balance the Budget. The only question is whether it is the best method to adopt. When you consider some other method it is vital to consider whether it is a method that has demonstrated its capacity to produce the required revenue.

When we began this work in committee we raised the income taxes to the limit of capacity to produce revenue. We raised the corporation tax to the point of diminishing revenue. We raised the estate tax, we doubled it.

The gentleman from Mississippi stressed the point that he would produce the balance required from the estate taxes. Why, my fellow Members, how much money do you think we could realize from that source during the next two years? These returns from estate taxes will not come immediately nor in largely increased amounts. In the years to come, as a matter of policy, it may produce the amount estimated, but we are concerned in getting revenue during the emergency.

What is the situation? I will call your attention to a statement of the Secretary of the Treasury. You probably heard it over the radio last Saturday, but the press the next morning carried it, and I want to quote one paragraph from it:

But when the United States Government closed the fiscal year 1931 with a deficit of over $900,000,000, when it will close the fiscal year 1932 with a deficit of as much as two billion and a half dollars, and when the prospective deficit of the fiscal year 1933 amounts to more than $1,700,000,000, the time has come beyond all question to put our financial house in order.

Do you realize that in these three years the deficit, in the judgment of the Secretary of the Treasury, will amount to the huge sum of $5,000,000,000? The question is, What will we do about it? Of course, the House is not going to pass a bill that will not balance the Budget.

I am satisfied of that, but what I fear is that in the desire to modify and rearrange the burden the House may make the mistake of adopting a system here which will be inconsistent with the emergency program and will not be productive of the necessary revenue, in which event the result will be financial chaos for the Government. Of course, the committee had the benefit of the Treasury's views during the preparation of this bill, in the executive sessions as in the open hearings. The bill is now before the country, and I want to read another extract from the address of the Secretary of the Treasury. It is argued here that it is not necessary to balance the Budget, though I think that is argued upon the part of a small minority. I shall not dwell upon it at any length. If it were serious, the subject certainly ought to be deliberately analyzed.

I think the Members of the House and the atmosphere of the debate have fully evidenced their intention to balance this Budget for the fiscal year 1933, that they recognize that the faith and credit of this Government must not be impaired; and that if the integrity of its obligations are impaired, so will the integrity and obligations of private citizens be impaired, as will all values throughout the country. That matter is in a nutshell briefly and comprehensively stated in this paragraph of the Secretary's statement:

Our private credit structure is inextricably bound to the credit of the United States Government. Our currency rests predominantly upon the credit of the United States. Impair that credit and every dollar you handle will be tainted with suspicious and every dollar you handle will be tainted with suspicion.

The foundation of our commercial credit system, the Federal reserve banks and all other banks which depend upon them, is tied into and dependent upon the credit of the United States Government.

Impair that credit to-day and the day after thousands of development projects—they are still going on—will stop; thousands of business men dependent upon credit renewals will get refusals from their bankers, thousands of mortgages that would otherwise be renewed or extended will be foreclosed. Merchants who would buy on credit will cancel orders, factories that would manufacture on part capacity at least will close down.

would buy on credit win cancer orders, factors to the utacture on part capacity at least will close down.

Impair the credit of the United States Government, and all that we have sought to accomplish in the course of the last few months is, to a large extent, nullified. The renewed courage and confidence that have replaced the fear and uncertainty which prevailed almost universally will once more grow weak and hesitant.

After going to the limit on the income, corporation, and estate taxes, how much did we derive in increased revenue over and above that of the present law? Under the estimates of the Treasury, only $168,000,000. We did not want to go into extraordinary avenues for taxes unless we had to. We then consulted the current situation. Through our chairman we consulted the chairman of the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads and found we might possibly through legislative channels be able to derive $25,000,000 of saving from that source; and we consulted the situation with respect to the general supply bills which have been passed and are passing through Congress for the fiscal year. It was the judgment there that we could perhaps realize $125,000,000 of savings.

Then, through our subcommittee on administrative provisions, by blocking up holes and leaks in existing law which we felt could be corrected, it was the judgment that we would save there $100,000,000. That makes $250,000,000, which, added to the $168,000,000 derived from income taxes and estate taxes, makes in all $418,000,000. That is approximately one-third of the total increased revenue required to balance the budget for 1933, leaving $823,000,000 required to do the job. After exhausting the resources of the increased rate in the income-tax schedule, the estate tax, and an added gift tax, as well as all other sources of saving, we found that we could raise only one-third and would have to raise $823,000,000 additional. It was at that point that the committee, staggering under that presentation of facts, resorted to the question of policy, and what was it? Shall we proceed on a narrow base to a few industries and load them with the burden, or shall we expand it to a broad base and spread the burden wide and thin? We decided upon the latter policy and that is all that is involved here. The question is, Will you in the Committee of the Whole center this burden upon a few industries, upon a few people, or will you broaden the base to the extent that the burden will be so light when generally dispersed that it will not be destructive of the business interests of the country? If you center it upon the few, you will not only load them beyond their capacity to bear the burden, but it will be destructive of the revenue we expect to derive; and furthermore all the backwash from that disaster to these industries will be felt by all the industries of the land, and instead of doing something that will be effective to restore prosperity, you will be contributing to the continuance of the present depression. What the committee has sought to do is not only to bring something here that will work administratively, something that will produce the necessary revenue for the Government, but something that also will further operate as an immediate aid to prosperity in this country. The fact is, and gentlemen must know that it is true, that the great financial centers of the country have held their assets liquid, not only to protect those whom they represent, stockholders or otherwise, but to absorb the Government requirements. They are not going to permit this Government's credit to be impaired if it can be helped. They must retain a liquid status to meet the situation, and while that condition obtains there is nothing adequate to back up the great credit facilities which we have set up in this country during the last few months.

But if you balance this budget, if you set up something in this bill that it is known will do the job, rather than something that is chimerical, speculative, and uncertain, then the flow of money from the money centers will again be directed and deflected through normal channels, in support and furtherance of these credit facilities which we have provided through legislation at this session of Congress. When that happens, then the people, through those channels, will have the benefit of the money that is now locked up, to protect credit and the impaired securities of this Government.

Now, it will not be long until we reach the amendment stage in the consideration of this bill, and that will be the time to discuss the details more in particular, but when we do reach that stage I hope this committee will keep in mind the outstanding purpose of the bill—that it is to raise revenue, and the certainty of the revenue; the certainty that it is adequate and the certainty that we are not overburdening those who can not stand the burden, and that you will distribute it so that all will be able to live under it.

I have noticed several forms of proposed amendments that have been suggested. I have one here that was furnished by courtesy of the gentleman from New York [Mr. LaGuardia]. The gentleman is always helpful and constructive; at least he means to be and usually is in his activities here, but in this case I feel he has failed to rise to the level of his usual conception of constructive effort.

This schedule which the gentleman proposes is arranged in 14 groups. It places the entire burden, which the gentleman estimates would raise $518,500,000, upon 14 groups of interests; and the first one is a stamp tax on checks and drafts, which the gentleman estimates will raise $95,000,000.

Now, irrespective of the merits of that subject, bearing in mind what I have said about the necessity of raising revenue and making it certain that we will get it, we have to have something that will pass this House. Is it believed that this House will support a tax so distinctly a nuisance tax as a tax on checks and drafts? If not, then there is $95,000,000 of revenue that can not be raised without other substitution. Can you substitute it intelligently on this floor? Obviously not.

Then there is a tax suggested on contracts, covenants, conveyances, and things of that sort. I was a member of the committee which drafted the bill of 1921, 1924, 1926, and 1928, and I remember, as the gentleman from Illinois suggested a while ago, that those were easy days, when we were taking taxes off. I remember the appeals that came to us from all over the country. You gentlemen who were here then will remember the appeals that you received for relief from the burdens of war and nuisance taxes. We were then wafted on a wave of general prosperity, a rising tide of income, easy-to-pay taxes, and the people were just as restive and complaining about them then as you have ever known them under any situation.

Now, what a different situation! We are in the trough of a financial sea, attempting to rise out of it; and yet it is proposed to go back, by this schedule and by others suggested here, to those nuisance taxes of the war and the subsequent period, under which we suffered so long.

I shall not discuss all of these suggestions. There is one of a corporation tax estimated to raise $50,000,000. You do not need to be told by anybody that the corporations of the country are largely in the red. The gentleman's schedule avoids the suggestion of a capital-stock tax, because of its well-known unpopularity during the war and after the war, that it is a tax of a capital nature; but the gentleman suggests a different name for it, and that is about all. The gentleman suggests a graduated system of corporate registration, which he estimates would realize $50,000,000 out of corporations, out of impecunious stockholders, most of them who are struggling, like all individuals are struggling in an individual capacity to-day, to get out of this depression. Not only would this not raise the revenue but in my opinion it would not pass this House under any circumstances. The gentleman proposes a tax on automobiles and accessories.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Washington five additional minutes.

Mr. HADLEY. I wonder if it is the thought of the gentleman who offers this substitute for the manufacturers' sales tax that a tax on automobiles would pass this House?

The committee was well advised of the sentiment of the country upon this. The committee was well advised of the sentiment of the House upon it, and it was certainly its judgment that such a tax would not pass this House, even under the circumstances of an emergency; and it did not adopt it. It rejected it. It is now brought forward in this substitute suggested by the gentleman from New York, and is supposed to raise $68,500,000.

I will mention one more of the 14 groups. There is suggested an increase of 1 cent on first-class mail, which is estimated to raise $135,000,000. I will not discuss that on its merits at all, but if you gentlemen who are so much concerned about passing on some of these consumption taxes, so called, upon the people at the bottom of the financial ladder, if you are so disturbed about that, what do you think they will say when they find their postage increased 50 per cent?

That is a tax that they will see and feel. If you are so jealous of their interest in one particular, why not in others? This schedule will not bear analysis from the standpoint of practicability. I am not attempting to discuss it on its merits but only upon the advisability of substituting it for the well-conceived, well-worked-out program which the committee has submitted to you, known to be administratively feasible and known to be adequate to produce the necessary revenue.

You may take any schedule that is brought here by way of substitute for this bill, and you will find when analyzed it will result in uncertainty and inadequacy.

I have worked on the bill with the committee for two months and more. I know there never was a harder job submitted to a committee; and while it is not a perfect job, I believe it is a good one and merits unqualified support. We are not jealous of it at all. Personally I am only jealous of it to the extent of doing the thing which will accomplish the result which the country so much needs at the present moment.

I have no interest in the controversy suggested by the gentleman from Mississippi among the Members of his own party. I served here with the distinguished and lamented gentlemen who have gone to whom he referred. We can not speak for them, of course; but I have no doubt if they were here and faced this situation to-day they would not permit a bill of this kind to be wrecked nor the credit of this Government to be impaired by ill-conceived and illadvised amendments.

Mr. PEAVEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HADLEY. Yes. Mr. PEAVEY. The gentleman has spoken of the intense demand that comes from the country for balancing the Budget. Will the gentleman tell from what sections of the country that demand comes and from what class of people of the country such a demand comes?

Mr. HADLEY. Will the gentleman state his question again?

Mr. PEAVEY. The gentleman has spoken of the intense demand that comes from the country at this time for the balancing of the Budget. Will the gentleman tell us just where that demand emanates?

Mr. HADLEY. It emanates from the whole country. Mr. PEAVEY. From the farmers?

Mr. HADLEY. From the whole country. I deliberately believe that. I do not believe that any of the protests which have been filed against this bill have been filed because the petitioners are in favor of impairing the credit of the United States, farmers or anybody else. The farmers are just as much interested as you or I in balancing the Budget. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. GARBER].

Mr. GARBER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks and to include certain quotations.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. GARBER. Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I am sure I express the hope of this committee for the early restoration to health of the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means. He has rendered invaluable service to the committee and the country. He has been a Member of the House for a quarter of a century and has devoted his life to the public service. I am sure I express the appreciation of this House in saying that we are deeply indebted to the temporary chairman of this committee, the distinguished gentleman from Georgia, who, in n:y judgment, gave one of the most fearless and able expositions of this bill that this discussion has disclosed. I like CRISP. The House likes CRISP for his democracy, because he is one of us. Let me say to you that the name of CRISP is typical and representative of the American family at almost every fireside in this country.

We are deeply indebted to the excellent services rendered by the senior ranking member of this committee. His presentations of public questions are always filled with concrete information, facts, and figures, however much you may differ with him in regard to his conclusions.

I feel the House appreciates the services rendered by every member of that committee in its work of weeks and months with the most difficult problem that perhaps has ever been presented to any committee of this House in recent years. I believe the membership of this House has respect for the deliberate judgment of this committee composed as it is of a seasoned personnel, with the public interest of the country as its paramount consideration.

I have not been privileged to hear all of the arguments presented. I was not privileged to hear what I am sure was an able presentation by the distinguished gentleman who sits before me, Doctor Crowther, of New York; neither have I read his presentation in support of this bill.

It is not my purpose to consider the various provisions which have been so ably presented, but I am informed that a direct attack was centered upon the provision which provides for an excise tax of only 1 cent per gallon on crude, fuel oil, and gasoline.

It is my purpose, so far as I am able, to give you some direct information regarding the relationship of this tax to the third largest industry in the United States.

Whenever we think of oil we think of monopoly, we think of the Standard, we think of the Dutch Shell, we think of the crooked dealings, we think of the policy that has been inimical to the public interest of this country by the great major companies in oil. But in this instance the facts are reversed.

I want to talk to you Democrats for a moment. In this instance the facts are reversed. It is not big capital investment seeking a special privilege; it is not monopoly that is asking for protection; it is the independent producers that are asking for protection in order to preserve the competition which protects you and the public interest in reasonable prices for oil products at filling stations.

The facts are reversed. Now, which side are you on in this contest for this little insignificant tax in this bill, which is for revenue only? Which side are you going to ally yourselves with, you Democrats who have always claimed that your party stood for the championship of the underdog, the common masses as against the intrenched influences of the country?

Mr. HOWARD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GARBER. For a question.

Mr. HOWARD. I would like to answer the gentleman's question.

Mr. GARBER. Well, the gentleman has my permission, if it is not too long.

Mr. HOWARD. Speaking for one individual Democrat it is easy for me to say now that I intend to follow the long line of Democratic precedents and vote against anything in the name or nature of an infamous sales tax. Is that plain?

Mr. GARBER. That is very plain, but this is not a sales tax, it is an excise tax upon the importation of the products of the subsidiary companies, of the major companies of this country. It is regrettable to listen to the distinguished gentleman from Nebraska in his desertion of the principles and policies of his party in refusing to come to the assistance of the struggling independents in this country.

The oil industry, perhaps, contacts more people daily, outside of food products, than any other industry in this country.

Mr. ARNOLD. Will the gentleman yield for a question? Mr. GARBER. I yield.

Mr. ARNOLD. I am fully in accord with the gentleman's idea with respect to this tax on importation of crude oil. Can the gentleman give us any idea of the extent to which the importation of crude oil will be stopped by the tax of 1 cent per gallon?

Mr. GARBER. I will be very glad indeed to cover that point.

Mr. ARNOLD. That is a very vital issue in the matter.

Mr. GARBER. I will be pleased to answer the gentleman in so far as I am able to do so.

The tax of 1 cent on crude may, possibly, minimize or lessen the importations of crude oil and fuel oil and gas oil. It will not lessen, in fact, it will encourage, it will increase the importations of gasoline. Why? Because it takes three and one-third barrels of crude to make one barrel of gasoline. Mind you, the tax is 42 cents a barrel on each of the commodities. Therefore there will be concentrated in one barrel of gasoline three and one-third barrels of crude. So that instead of paying three and one-third times 42 cents on crude, they will be permitted to ship in that quantity of crude in the form of gasoline for 42 cents a barrel.

There is no compensatory duty whatever. We suggest that an amendment should be adopted to cure this inequality; that it ought to be commensurate with the duty on crude, which would be about 3 cents per gallon on the gasoline.

Mr. ARNOLD. I shall be very glad, indeed, to join with the gentleman in getting a tax of 3 cents a gallon on the importation of gasoline.

Mr. GARBER. I certainly appreciate that cooperation from the distinguished gentleman whose influence and whose judgment is so respected by the membership of this committee.

I know the two thoughts that are lurking in your minds—exhaustion of the product and increase in price—and I regret that my time is so limited I shall be unable to present to you authorities which will show that the quantity of crude petroleum in sight is sufficient to supply this country for 70 years, and with coal and shale for the next 500 years, and that the matter of its exhaustion is simply propaganda put out by the major companies for their own sinister purposes, and has now been abandoned except by the distinguished gentleman from Dayton, Ohio, who reechoed the stale propaganda that has been relegated to the junk or wastebasket long since.

Think of the gentleman from Ohio restating an exploded proposition that has been purely manufactured for monopolistic purposes! The gentleman from Dayton, Ohio, from the very heart of protected industries, is president of the Federated Humane Society of Ohio. Let me suggest to the gentleman that he put a little of the humanity of his organization into his political economy and support a proposition that will give employment to 350,000 American citizens who are out of employment in the oil fields of this country. [Applause.]

Then the question is: Will it increase the price at the filling station? What are you paying now? You have your cheap imports. You have your imports that are products of peon labor, that are dumped into the Atlantic seaboard by the major oil companies. You are paying the same price for your lubricating oil, for your gasoline, that the consuming public is paying in the mid-continent fields. There is no difference in the price, although you are securing these cheap oils.

Who then gets the difference? Answer this question. Who is reaping the profits if the public is not receiving the benefits of cheap importations?

Why, the dividends declared by the Standard group in 1930, the year of our lowest depression, were the highest in all the history of those companies, exceeding a total of $286,000,000.

Seventy per cent of the imports of crude oil and 90 per cent of the imports of refined products originate in the Maracaibo Basin in Venezuela.

The 1930 report of the Tariff Commission made a year ago showed a difference in production costs of crude delivered on the Atlantic seaboard of $1.19 per barrel. Its latest report shows a difference of $1.03 per barrel, the difference being occasioned by the recent discoveries of oil reservations in Texas. In all fairness, it must be stated that such did not take into consideration the difference in the quality of the several products. While such differences is a matter of controversy, the report, however, did specifically find that the mid-continent and Gulf coast oil was being delivered at the Atlantic ports at a cost of $1.90 per barrel, that the refining costs by refiners on the Atlantic coast was 73 cents per barrel, making a total cost of $2.63 per barrel of refined products.

The commission further found that the value of such product was $2.74, leaving a profit of 11 cents per barrel or 5.78 per cent upon the amount of cost investment for mid-continent and Gulf coast oil.

The report also found that the cost of a barrel of Maracaibo Basin crude delivered at the Atlantic ports was 87 cents per barrel, but the cost of refining was 30 cents per barrel, making a total cost per barrel of $1.17. The commission found the value of such product to be $1.71, leaving a profit on the Maracaibo Basin import of 54 cents per barrel, or 62 per cent of the cost investment.

This specific finding of fact discloses enormous profits being made on the free imports of oils, profits made from the consuming public in our market. It discloses the reason for the determined opposition of the importing companies to any tariff or tax on oil imports, from which the consuming public receives no benefit. They pay the same price for the untaxed imported products of peon labor in foreign countries that they pay for the home-taxed products of American labor.

Of all industries the industries of oil should have been the least affected by this period of depression because the consumption of their products was even greater than before; but because of their inability to stabilize production to domestic consumption because of the flood of cheap importations this was not so, and the price of crude oil was depressed from $1.45 to as low as 10 and 15 cents per barrel. It is now 77 cents per barrel, much below the cost of production.

The consuming public has never received the benefits of the oversupply of oils or the importations of cheap oils from foreign countries. The prices of lubricating oils and gasoline have varied but little, if any. They sold for the same price at the filling station when oil was selling at 10 cents per barrel or $1.45. All the benefits have gone to the monopolistic importing companies.

If you Democrats are diplomatic, if you are disposed to go into the coming campaign with the advantages which are at your disposal, why do you not demonstrate to the public, here and now, that you are for the independent producers, the under dogs, in this great fight with the major oil companies of the country?

The major oil companies—and there are four of them, the Standard group, the Dutch Shell, the Gulf, and the Pan-American—have their thousands and thousands of subsidiary companies. Here is your opportunity; and let me say that you have a leader as the Speaker of this House, one of the great Democrats of the country, who has cooperated in developing this issue and supporting the under dog in this great fight which is now precipitated upon this floor by this little, insignificant tax.

Let me give you a brief glimpse of the background of this fight. The major industries of oil represent a capital investment of $12,000,000,000 by 2,250,000 investors, and furnish employment to approximately 2,000,000 employees.

Surrounded by surpluses, our industries are in the midst of depression. The initial step to recovery is to adjust production to consumption and this results in unemployment which in turn becomes a vicious circle affecting all.

In the production of oil we have two classes, the one confining its operations to exploration, development, and production, while the other class is engaged not only in production but in transportation, with its own pipe lines, tank cars, and trucks, with its own refineries and marketing facilities and filling stations. This class is also engaged in production abroad in Mexico, Venezuela, and other countries, where it also has its pipe lines, refineries, and tankers. In these countries it produces oil and its refined products for export into this market. This class is composed of what is known as the "Big Four" and their subsidiary companies.

Such companies are exploiting the oil fields of Mexico and Venezuela for the export of crude and its refined products to their parent companies in this country so that conservation by curtailment of production here gives them a better market in this country. They are the foremost champions of conservation and curtailment in this country while exploiting the fields in foreign countries to supply this market.

They are, therefore, opposed to any tariff or tax upon such imports. Here, with funereal, ministerial attitude, they sanctimoniously chant the hymns of conservation and curtailment by proration and mournfully act as the pallbearers of the independents, while their subsidiaries exploit foreign fields with cheap labor for cheap oils for enormous profits from an unsuspecting public in this market.

The big four, importing 82 per cent, are commonly known as the Standard Oil group, the Royal Dutch Shell, and the Gulf. It must be remembered that they are also domestic producers of crude. They are in control of the pipe lines, of the refineries, and of the wholesale and retail distribution of oil and its refined products. They produce 50 per cent of the crude oil, control 90 per cent of the pipe lines and 85 per cent of the refined products, including fuel oil and gasoline, sold in this country.

These companies, which control 90 per cent of the transportation and 85 per cent of the refined products, can dump enough imported cheap oils into the market at any time to break it for crude and destroy the independent producer or the independent refiner who is forced to carry a stock of such raw material.

The uncertainty created by free imports with unlimited resources of oil stocks and capital creates anarchy in the market for the independent producers and refiners. Thousands have been forced out of the business, their properties appropriated by the major companies, and, if the policy of free imports continues another year, the competition of the independents will be destroyed and the monopoly in this market will be complete. The oil reserves of this country will be in control of the major companies, the companies that control the transportation, the refining, and the marketing industries of oil. When that condition is brought about the consuming public will be completely at the mercy of monopoly, which the Supreme Court in 1911 declared to be against the public interest.

Ninety-five per cent of the oil lands in Mexico are owned by capital foreign to that country. Practically 100 per cent of the oil lands in Venezuela are owned by capital foreign to that country. The oil lands in those countries are owned by the major companies in this country. They secured large concessions from the government upon a 10 per cent royalty basis.

To illustrate: The Pan-American Transport Co., having 27 subsidiary companies of its own and itself being a subsidiary of the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, has a concession in Mexico of 2,500,000 acres. It also has a concession of 3,000,000 acres in Venezuela. Upon this land they pay no rentals; they simply pay a royalty of 10 per cent of the production when it is produced. The same monopolistic conditions exist in Colombia, Peru, and Trinidad. The major companies have an absolute monopoly of the oil lands in foreign countries with the exception of Russia, a complete monopoly of oil production in foreign countries, a complete monopoly of the refining industry in foreign countries, a complete monopoly of all the revenues derived from oil and its products in foreign countries.

The citizens of those countries have no investments in oils. The major companies, which includes the Dutch Shell, do not import oil products produced by the citizens of those countries. They do not import oil products produced by the capital of those countries. They import the products produced by their subsidiaries in those countries; so it is not a matter of trade between countries or between the citizens of countries but strictly a matter of free imports by the major companies in this country from their subsidiaries in foreign countries.

Contrast this production investment of these companies in foreign countries with the production investment of the producers of this country. Those engaged in the production industry here have no concessions from the Government. They must lease the land from the individual owners for which they must pay a bonus for the lease, $1 per acre rental annually, and give a royalty interest therein all the way from 12½ per cent to as high as 50 per cent. The royalty interests are reserved to each of the landowners. Under normal conditions they are of market value. The royalty interests are capitalized and sold in distributive shares to thousands of investors and the annual rentals total millions of dollars to the landowners of whom the greater number are the farmers.

The point is, there is no distribution of benefits in monopolistic foreign production. The royalty interest to the Government is the only consideration. There are no rentals, no bonuses, and no royalty interests to individual land owners. All these interests are retained by the producing

Here, in such industry, there is wide distribution of benefits, perhaps a wider distribution of direct benefits than in any other industry.

In monopolistic foreign production there is employed only 1 white person to every 100 peons. In domestic production, the employees are all American citizens and paid American

Such is the difference between the distribution of foreign development by monopolistic companies and the development by producers in this country.

There are more oil States than there are wheat States, more oil States than there are corn States, more than there are cotton States, more than there are steel States or iron States. The oil States represent a population of 22,000,000 people. That is the difference between the distribution; one is monopolistic and the other is distributed more widely than the interests of any other industry in this country.

There is another phase for you to consider: Foreign monopolistic development pays no taxes. It does not contribute a single dollar to the maintenance of the subdivisions of the Government of this country.

Mr. GLOVER. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. GARBER. I yield for a question.

Mr. GLOVER. The gentleman has spoken of the Democratic Party. I happened to be in Congress at the time you had the oil question up, and you had oil people here asking for a tariff on oil. You had something like a hundred majority on the Republican side. Can the gentleman tell us why you did not get your majority to give you a duty on oil?

Mr. GARBER. In reply to the gentleman I will say that our failure then is no excuse for inaction of the Democratic Party now. There may have been different reasons operating during the latter part of the session, when that matter was presented.

Regarding the question of taxation, oil and oil products are the most highly taxed of the products of any industry in this country. From the very inception when oil is produced it begins to pay a tax. It pays a production tax of 3 cents ad valorem, a tax regardless of whether there is any profit made on the production or not. It pays a corporation tax and a capital stock tax. Those taxes are paid whether it makes anything or not.

In other words, oil in 1931 paid a total tax of $754,000,000, or about 87 cents per barrel.

Mr. FIESINGER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GARBER. Yes.

Mr. FIESINGER. I want to say to the gentleman I am for the oil tax, but I am receiving considerable propaganda from farm organizations. They seem to be writing letters to Members of Congress.

Mr. GARBER. For or against the tax?

Mr. FIESINGER. Against the tax. Now, the oil people have a great many farmers. Why is it that the farm organizations are writing letters against this tax?

Mr. GARBER. I am satisfied that the farmers in the oil States are not sending in this propaganda.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. GARBER. May I have 15 minutes additional? Mr. WATSON. I will yield to the gentleman five minutes. Mr. FIESINGER. The gentleman thinks that the big oil companies get back of the farmers' organizations?

Mr. GARBER. No doubt that is the result of the sinister influence of the major oil companies in developing propaganda in opposition to this tax.

Mr. FIESINGER. They are telling the farm organizations that the price of gasoline and other products will be increased?

Mr. GARBER. That is it exactly. This is a fight against the greatest monopolistic influence that there is in the United States or in the world.

Mr. HART. If the gentleman will yield, I will tell you where you are getting the propaganda from. They had the same thing during the consideration of the Muscle Shoals bill, where the International Cyanamid Co. got up the propaganda, yet the farm organizations asked the Congress to accept their bid; and these oil companies are getting the propaganda through the American Farm Bureau.

Mr. GARBER. Yes; they often resort to respectable agencies to accomplish their purpose. What would this tax do if it was what it ought to be, if it prohibited the cheap products of foreign countries-and why should it not, when we have an oversupply in this country, when we have more oil than we know what to do with, when we have 350,000 of our citizens out of employment? What would it do? It would simply give a job to our unemployed to supply our home market. That is what it would do, and nothing more. The price would regulate itself and conditions would improve.

The competition in this country in this industry, especially the producing competition, is absolutely sufficient to protect the consuming public from any unjust exaction. It would simply give our own producers the right to raise the curtailment of production; to uncap their wells and produce a little more than they are permitted to do now.

During the years 1929, 1930, and 1931 oil imports, free of duty, were admitted into this country in the value of $377,321,374. And this, too, during a period of severe depression, when our citizens were out of employment and begging for work. And this, too, at a time when we had an oversupply of oil and refined products in this country, when we had such an enormous potential supply that we were compelled to curtail our production in the flush production States down to only 9 per cent of our potential production. These imports of millions of dollars of cheap oil products were admitted free of duty during this period when our own producers were curtailing their production, discharging their employees, and sacrificing their investments and their properties.

During the year 1930 we shut in, by proration, 109,000,000 barrels of oil and let in, by free imports, 105,000,000 barrels. As rapidly as we emptied our tanks they were filled up to overflowing with a flood of cheap oils by the importing com-

This drastic curtailment was at a tremendous sacrifice of the independent producers. Not so with the importers. They had their free imports of cheap oils, their pipe lines, their refineries, their marketing facilities, and filling stations to make up their losses in curtailment here.

What industry in the United States has had the selfrestraint and control to voluntarily, and by statute, curtail its production to as low as 9 per cent of its potential production? It was only accomplished and brought about by the cancellation of leases, totaling millions of dollars, to the farmers-$46,000,000, to be exact.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Oklahoma has expired.

Mr. ARNOLD. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 10 minutes more.

Mr. GARBER. During this time that we curtailed our production this period of three years-1929, 1930, and 1931to as low as 9 per cent, the independents discharged their labor and canceled their leases. The major oil companies gobbled up the properties of the independents at forced sales, in bankruptcy, put thousands of independent producers and crude refiners out of business, and secured the benefits. This is a deliberate, premeditated plan of the big companies to crush out the little, independent producers and the competition which they afford. It is simply a step, and the last step, in securing a complete monopoly of oil products in this country. I see the distinguished gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Doughton], who seems to be interested in this statement. In 1911, after five years of litigation and investigation, the Supreme Court of the United States approved the finding of fact by the circuit court that the major oil companies were exercising such a monopolistic control in this country that it was inimical to the public interest and decreed their dissolution and disintegration. Gradually, after years, in a sinister way, silently, stealthily, these companies have been coming back together, gradually absorbing the control of which the Supreme Court divested them in that famous decree of 1911; and the big value of your support of this little insignificant tax will not be the little revenue that it will bring into the Government, but it will be the preservation of competition furnished by these independent producers and refiners for the benefit of the consuming public.

Which would you rather do, pay an additional cent in tax to preserve this competition or pay the additional tax to the monopoly when they secure complete and absolute control? That is the question for you to determine in regard to your attitude and support of this provision.

This provision is viciously opposed by the major companies through respectable agencies. Who appeared before the Ways and Means Committee? The independent producers and the American Federation of Labor, who understood the issue. They understood it and they demanded from that committee the degree of protection to this industry that has been accorded to every other American industry; and of all the places whence opposition should come, the Atlantic seaboard, and especially New England, is the last place where one would expect to find it-the home of protection, which has built up factories and manufacturing establishments. The gentleman from Maine [Mr. Nelson], who has been working 24 hours every day to secure an embargo on lobsters not exceeding 31/4 inches in length. viciously opposes this little insignificant tax to protect a great industry with thousands of men out of employment. Think of it! Think of the sordid, selfish, picayunish, narrow policy of such opposition by the gentleman from Maine to protect a baker's dozen of fishermen scattered along his rock-bound coast and his denial of the principle and policy of protection to an industry whose employees are 90 per cent American citizens, and are represented in 20 different States in the Union. [Applause.]

I distinctly recall the occasion when the three gentlemen from Maine stood upon this floor proclaiming their regularity, their fealty to the Republican Party and protection, demanding an increased duty on potatoes. On former occasions it had been the products of the factories of Maine, then it was the potatoes of Maine, and now it is lobsters, not exceeding 3¼ inches in length, "measured from the eye socket to the rear end," mind you. [Laughter.]

Oh, yes; Maine demands protection for the products of her factories, for the products of her manufacturing establishments, for her potatoes, and last but not least, for her lobsters! It is millions for protection for the products of Maine but not one cent for oil! Protection on the products of Maine does not raise the price to the consumer. Oh, no! It employs labor and creates prosperity, but protection on oil is a "robber tariff" and the consumer pays it all. Oh, yes! Protection is O. K. for Maine, but all wrong for the producers in the 20 different oil States in the United States. Is it—can it be that there is a Standard of Maine? Perish the thought!

The Atlantic seaboard buys 36 per cent of its crude, 16 per cent of its gasoline, and 49 per cent of its fuel oil from the free imports of the major companies, while we have an oversupply of oil with 350,000 oil workers out of employment in our own country. Such companies have led the opposition to any restriction on free imports. They have opposed a tax, a tariff, or an embargo on such imports, even when they are dumped in from Rumania or by the Russian Soviet for the express purpose of destroying the competition of the independent American producers who are but asking the privilege of supplying the American market with American products. And yet the seaboard States with their factories and manufacturing establishments is the home of protection, a protection that has built up and maintained their factories and their plants in flourishing prosperity since such conditions prevailed anywhere in the United States!

Now, when these oil States ask, with greater merit than they ever presented in support of their claims, for a small degree of the protection they enjoy in cooperation with the major companies they repudiate protection and demand a continuation of free trade in oil products.

Gentlemen, New England, especially, can not afford such a selfish, narrow, sordid policy. The market for your products is outside of your tariff wall. It is in the oil-producing States with their 22,000,000 of consumers and the adjoining agricultural States with 20,000,000 more. Here is the greatest market in the world for your products of iron and steel, of textiles, and the various other products of your thriving industrialism. It always has been. Do you want it to continue?

From out of New England comes the confession of one of your great leaders, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Treadway], as to the unwisdom of your course. In the discussion of this subject, he said:

Let me remind my New England friends that our section has, ever since the first tariff bill was written, asked for protection to our industries. Let me remind them, too, that many sections of the country feel that our neck of the woods has received more favorable consideration than it merited. Even in the last tariff act New England made certain appeals to Congress for her industries, which were heeded. I do not need to enumerate them at this time. My colleagues should bear these facts in mind before they seek to deny to other sections of the country what we of the East have asked of Congress from time immemorial.

For several years past a wide area of this country in the States of Kansas, Oklahoma, and Texas has been clamoring at the doors of Congress for the protection of its local industry, namely, the production of oil. Its appeal has gone unheeded. To-day, through the instrumentality of a tax, the people of that section think

For several years past a wide area of this country in the States of Kansas, Oklahoma, and Texas has been clamoring at the doors of Congress for the protection of its local industry, namely, the production of oil. Its appeal has gone unheeded. To-day, through the instrumentality of a tax, the people of that section think that to a certain extent they are accomplishing their purpose. I for one propose to help them with my vote. I do this for at least two reasons. First, protection to their industry, call it tariff or tax. They consider this measure as a means of protecting their industry exactly as we in the East have asked and received protection for our industries. Second, it is a contributing item in the big measure before us, one factor in the effort which is being made to balance the Budget and maintain the credit of the United States Treasury.

Most fantastic statements have been made relative to the cost of this item upon the taxpayers of the Atlantic coast. It has also been stated that it would not produce revenue. The lowest estimate we have had of the revenue it would produce is $5,000,000, which of itself is well worth while when every possible effort is being made to secure the aggregate amount needed for Budget balancing.

The exaggerated statements of additional cost to the eastern coast, running as high as $100,000,000, are ridiculous and can not be borne out by any authoritative evidence that can be submitted to this House. Assuming, however, that the entire additional tax of 42 cents per barrel is added to our fuel bill, this is not out of proportion to the additional possibilities of sale of our industrial products to the section of the country which is asking for this help. If that section of the country can come into our market with its fuel oil, payment can be made in our products and we ourselves would be the direct beneficiaries in the employment of labor for our home industries.

Contrast this broad, statesmanlike utterance of the trade policy for New England with the selfish, short-sighted policy of the opposition. The gentleman's recognition and assurance of cooperation created a friendly feeling and appeal that will return her tenfold in trade for the increased cost, if any, for her fuel.

New England must reciprocate with protection for the products of the oil States or they will reciprocate with free trade for New England. They will level the protective wall to a revenue or competitive basis to the same level as their own. We have offered reciprocity; we prefer it to retaliation. We are one family, citizens of a common country. If we are Americans, then why not act like Americans, vote American, buy American products, and give our employment to our fellow Americans at home. [Applause.]

The following editorials from the Washington Herald, the Enid (Okla.) Morning News, and the Blackwell (Okla.) Tribune portray conditions in the oil industry and the imperative need for remedial legislation:

[From the Washington Herald, January 25, 1932]

TARIFF ON OIL NEEDED

The problem of prosperity for numerous States in the Union would be solved overnight by a prohibitive duty on imported petroleum.

No State would be injured.
On the contrary, the Nation in general would profit both directly and indirectly by the stimulus to this particular national industry.

Money now sent abroad would be spent at home.

American money now furnishing employment to labor in other lands would perform a more legitimate function in furnishing employment to American labor.

Fair prices would be assured by the very vigorous competition of American producers against other American producers which universally exists, while there would be an end to the present cutthroat competition forced upon them by excessive importations of forcing oil of foreign oil.

Such cut-throat competition prevents a fair return to capital and labor and general employment. Thus the country as a whole suffers from the foreign competition which is disrupting the domestic industry.

It is one of the many paradoxes of our present national problems that the United States is at once the world's greatest producer and greatest importer of oil.

Domestic production is decreasing, owing largely to the ruinous effect of foreign competition; but importations continue to represent a large amount of money sent out of the country to give employment to foreign labor.

Last summer there was a movement to induce the President to order an embargo on imported oil, but there was no authority for him to do so, and, even if there had been, there was no evidence of his inclination.

Fortunately, a presidential embargo is not necessary. Adequate protection for American oil can be afforded by a constitutionally imposed high tariff on imported oil.

Congress and the President can do what the President alone could not do to restore prosperity to this important national Prosperity must begin somewhere, and it would begin at once in the oil-producing States of the Union if Congress imposed a high duty on imported oil.

[From the Enid (Okla.) Morning News] " BUY AMERICA"

President Hoover has added the weight of his influence to the "buy American goods" movement, by writing a letter to John Garner, Speaker of the House of Representatives, suggesting regulation, which will provide for the numbers of control of the provide for the numbers of control of the provider of the numbers of the Garner, Speaker of the House of Representatives, suggesting regulation which will provide for the purchase of supplies made in the United States by our Government Departments. Under the law which has been in effect for some time, Government departments must purchase from the lowest bidder. As foreign goods, made in countries with cheap labor and low living conditions, can be sold generally at a less price than American goods, this often results in the forced purchase by the United States Government of supplies made abroad. In his letter to Speaker Garner the President said in part: ident said in part:
"It would be of substantial advantage to American manufac-

"It would be of substantial advantage to American manufacturers and producers if Congress should authorize all departments and executive establishments uniformly to give this preference, and I suggest the enactment of legislation providing that in advertising for proposals for supplies heads of departments shall require bidders to certify whether the articles proposed to be furnished are of domestic or foreign growth, production, or manufacture, and shall, if in their judgment the excess of cost is not unreasonable, purchase or contract for the delivery of articles of the growth, production, or manufacture of the United States, not-witherending that articles of foreign origin may be offered at a withstanding that articles of foreign origin may be offered at a lower price.

Two bills for the purpose outlined have been introduced, one by

Two bills for the purpose outlined have been introduced, one by Representative Florence Kahn, of California, and the other by Representative White, of Ohio. Mrs. Kahn's bill provides that all materials and supplies purchased by any department, and all materials and supplies furnished by contractors doing work for the Government, shall be produced within the limits of the United States, unless there is express authorization to the contrary by law or unless the material is used for experimental purpose or can not be manufactured in this country. Mr. White's bill would leave a limited discretionary power with departmental heads.

There can be no question of the value of legislation of the kind at this time. Surely Uncle Sam, above all purchasers, should buy and use American-made goods wherever possible. What we need in the United States is a speeding up of the campaign to buy American goods. In Great Britain a "buy British goods" campaign has been in progress for several months and the British magazines are full of advertisements pushing this campaign. It is just as necessary for our well-being that the Americans buy American-made goods as it is that the British buy British-made goods. On the Continent the nations are pushing and encouraging goods. On the Continent the nations are pushing and encouraging the sale of home products, too, and Uncle Sam can not afford to lag behind in this movement.

The consumption of American-made goods keeps the money at home and affords additional employment for American workers.

[From the Blackwell (Okla.) Tribune, July 18, 1931] MORE FOREIGN OIL

Importations of crude oil are increasing. There is nothing in that fact to cause surprise. The surprising thing would be for there to be no increase in imports. The history of the move for curtailment of oil production in the United States has been that as domestic production in the United States has been that as domestic production decreased, importations of foreign oil increased. Why should there be reason to expect anything but increased importations as the shut-down plan goes into effect? The Pan-American Petroleum Co., a subsidiary of the Standard Oil of Indiana, has increased its importation approximately 140,000 barrels a week. Of course, in response to a request by Hoover, the big oil-importing companies agreed to limit importations for the sand less than a property of the sand less than a property of the sand less than a property of the sand less than a sand less than the sand less than the Hoover, the big oil-importing companies agreed to limit importations for a time, and less than a month ago the Pan-American Co. agreed to a 25 per cent curb on imports, but what of that?

The agreement to cut importations entered into by the Pan-American, the Dutch Shell, the Standard of New Jersey, and the Gulf Coast Co., Secretary Mellon's company, was limited to 90 days, and that term expired recently. Also, it was recently that the series of drastic cuts began which forced the price of oil down to 10 cents a barrel. A shut-down of domestic production having been thus forced, what was there to expect but an increase in oil imports. imports.

For the week ending July 11, 1,202,000 barrels of crude and refined foreign oil were received at "the principal United States ports," which means New York and Baltimore. That imports will be increased to meet the shortage caused by the shut-down of producing wells in this country is to be expected as a matter of course. It is all working out according to plans carefully made and ruthlessly executed by the big corporations.

[From the Blackwell (Okla.) Tribune, November 12, 1931] THE OIL SITUATION

During the past 10 years there has been imported into the United States over a billion dollars worth of crude oil and refined products. About three-fourths of this total was crude oil and the other one-fourth "tops" or gasoline, a little kerosene, and practically no lubricating oil. In fact, until Venezuela came into the oil picture almost all of our imports were low-grade crude oil and fuel oil.

fuel oil.

Recently Russell Brown, attorney for the Independent Petroleum Association, called our attention to the fact that in the past five years foreign oil valued at over half a billion dollars had been dumped into our already overloaded market. This, indeed, had a very depressing effect on the domestic market and the oil industry in the United States. And during the past five years the larger percentage of this oil, which has been dumped on our market, has been refined products. This change has been due to the building of two huge refineries on islands just off the Venezuelan coast. The combined capacity of these two refineries is about 375,000 barrels per day, or more than one-seventh of the present capacity of all the refineries in the United States. of all the refineries in the United States.

These two huge refineries ship a substantial part of their refined products into the United States in competition with our domestic industry, and at prices with which our American oil men can not compete.

On account of this importation of foreign crude oil, over 2,000,000 men in the oil industry in the United States are out of work, due to the present price of oil. Most of the oil produced at the present time in the United States is produced at a loss to the operator.

operator.

Governor Murray has helped the oil industry in the United States by the forced shutdown of the Oklahoma fields during the past summer, which shutdown was joined in by Texas and other States. Governor Murray's program forced the price of crude oil from 10 to 20 cents per barrel, in the mid-continent fields up to 85 cents per barrel. The program of Governor Murray has helped the oil industry, but President Hoover should have handled the situation himself by declaring an embargo on foreign oil.

[From the Blackwell (Okla.) Tribune, April 29, 1931] OIL AND THE FARMER

Are the farmers of Oklahoma financially interested in measures to put the oil industry back on its feet? In other words, are the farmers financially interested in the effort to secure a tariff on oil? Grant County records for April 18, 19, and 20 show agreements

67 landowners of that county to reduce rentals to oil companies, by 67 landowners of that county to reduce rentals to oil companies, which means that the 67 landowners will receive less for their oil leases. There is nothing in the legal notices to show how much the 67 reductions total, so it can not be stated here how much less money the landowners will receive for their leases and we don't know how many more such reductions have been made or will be made. Grant County is not one of the big oil counties of the State, but 67 agreements to lessen lease prices in three days shows something of what is happening all over the oil section of Oklahoma. We are afraid to venture a guess as to the total loss to farmers of revenues from that source; our guess probably would be much too low, but the loss amounts to hundreds of thousands of dollars annually, and to that loss must be added that caused by the failure of oil companies to renew expired leases.

Why are oil lease prices decreasing? It is hardly necessary to ask that question or to answer it. To-day's prices for crude oil tell the story. For 65 years after the completion of the first oil well at Titusville, Pa., the average price in the United States for crude oil at the well was $1.33 per barrel; to-day the average price is about 60 cents a barrel. With oil at 60 cents a barrel, oil leases are worth less than 50 per cent as much as with oil at $1.33 a barrel, just as a farm lease is worth less when wheat is 60 cents a bushel than it would be with wheat worth $1.33 a bushel. What has forced oil prices down to the present point? Enormous importations of foreign oil. What would check those importations and restore oil and oil leases to their former values? A tariff on oil. Oh, yes; the Oklahoma farmer is financially interested in the effort to secure a tariff on oil.

Perhaps no other argument is needed, but here is the same proposition stated in another form. For the 4-year period ending December 31, 1930, production of crude oil in the United States was 725,000,000 barrels more than for the preceding four years. The price received at the well was $159,000,000 less than for the 720,000,000 barrels less oil produced in the preceding four years. It is not hard to understand why the farmers of the State are forced to take less for leases on the oil lands they own, and it is just as easy to understand how they would be benefited by a tariff on oil.

Mr. ARNOLD. Mr. Chairman, I am directed to yield 20 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Cannon].

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Chairman, I desire to concur in the tribute paid by the gentleman from Oklahoma to the chairman of the committee which reported the pending bill. His career in the House is another corroboration of the belief which I have always entertained on the influence of heredity. In all the long line of Speakers who have presided over this body, there is none who was abler; none who occupies a higher place in the parliamentary history of the House than his distinguished father. It is eminently appropriate that his son should be carrying on his great work.

But, Mr. Chairman, it is a peculiar psychological quirk that no two men can at all times agree on all questions, and I consider it a real misfortune that I am not, in this particular instance, able to concur in the recommendation which the chairman of the committee has felt constrained to make in presenting this bill. In fact, the bill is one of those controversial measures on which comparatively few have been able to fully agree in all respects.

But out of all the differences of opinion that have been expressed on the subject in the last several days, there is one spot of common ground. There is one thing on which every Member who has yet spoken has agreed, and that is that the sales tax, sometimes called the "manufacturers' tax," has many objectionable features. Even the warmest advocates of the sales tax, while insisting that it is the only practicable method of balancing the Budget, concede that it is highly objectionable, and submit that it is offered here only as a last resort. They justify it solely on the ground that it is proposed as a temporary expedient, and they assure us that it is offered purely as an emergency measure, and they wish us to understand that as soon as normal conditions return and the emergency has passed they expect to dispense with it. But it is agreed, both by those who advocate it and those who oppose it, that sales taxes in any form are highly objectionable, even for the laudable purpose of balancing the Budget.

Its proponents imply, if they do not state in so many words, that if there were any other legitimate means of raising the revenue required to balance the Budget they would not propose a sales tax. And they would have us believe that it is recommended only because no other feasible method of raising revenue is available.

In view of this protestation I venture to relieve their embarrassment by suggesting other methods of securing funds to make up the deficit, methods which are free from the objectionable features of the sales tax. I do so with some diffidence, but inasmuch as the committee and the Treasury Department are unsophisticated in tax matters and are circumscribed in facilities for securing information on the subject, I beg to point out various sources of potential revenue which they have inadvertently overlooked. Up to this time the Treasury Department in its determined search for some form of taxation which would balance the Budget without invoking the evils of the sales tax have been able to find only such nuisance taxes as the increase in postage, the tax on checks, the various stamp taxes, and kindred forms of taxation which harassed us during the war. And so I desire respectfully to call to their attention certain other methods of raising revenue which can be utilized in this emergency without invoking the sales tax or other nuisance taxes which they have suggested as alternatives.

For example, why not repeal section 141 of the revenue act authorizing corporations to consolidate their tax returns? Under the provisions of this section of the revenue act every great trust in America to-day is avoiding taxes which their small competitors must pay. There are twenty and odd thousand corporations in America, with branches in every State, which do not make individual tax returns. The mother corporation makes one return for all subsidiaries and thereby escapes millions of taxes; and the statement has been made in the Congressional Record that one man. Mr. Andrew Mellon, profiting by this section of the revenue act, saved $1,000,000, and that one corporation has saved as high as $5,000,000. It is estimated that if this section of the revenue act was repealed, such giant corporations as the Standard Oil Co., the United States Steel Trust, the Pittsburgh Coal Co., General Motors, and numerous public utilities would pay into the United States Treasury every year more than $100,000,000 in additional revenue.

Why not let these profitable industries, one of them paying its president a bonus of $1,500,000 a year, another granting its president a bonus of $2,383,000 a year, and all of them receiving immeasurable benefits from the Government, be allowed to contribute to its support instead of taking it from the food and clothing of the poor? A day laborer stepping into a grocery for his lunch of a piece of bologna and crackers or a can of sardines and spaghetti would pay a tax on every article he ate. While the president of the United States Steel Trust, receiving $40,000 a week, could go into the Waldorf-Astoria and order a sirloin steak and French rolls with Florida strawberries without paying a penny's tax on any of it. Why not repeal this little section of the revenue act and let these twenty-odd thousand corporations pay what other corporations pay instead of taking it out of the meager lunch of the laboring man?

Now, Mr. Chairman, this is not an impracticable suggestion. It is backed by the highest authority in this House. It is the identical proposal made by John N. Garner, of Texas, now Speaker of the House. In 1929, speaking on this subject, Mr. Speaker Garner recommended the repeal of this provision of the revenue act. And had it been repealed at the time he urged it a very large part of the deficit which is now reported would have been avoided and it would not have been necessary for the Treasury Department and the Committee on Ways and Means to come in here to-day proposing the levy of a sales tax on the necessities of life.

If, in the opinion of the Speaker of the House, it was a good thing in 1929 when the need was not so great as to-day, why is it not a good thing in this crisis when they are claiming that there is no other feasible method of balancing the Budget but the imposition of a sales tax on every man, woman, and child in America. It would raise $100,-000,000 at a minimum, and yet the Treasury Department has entirely overlooked it in their frantic search for means of reducing the deficit.

Strike out section 141. Consolidated returns of corporations. On pages 108, 109, 110, 111, and 112 strike out line 19 of page 108 to line 3 of page 112, inclusive.

That is proposition No. 1. That is the first alternative. Second. Repeal sections 31 and 131 of the revenue act.

Sections 31 and 131 of the revenue act provide that taxes paid by an American corporation to any foreign government may be deducted from its domestic tax. And I want to call your attention to an important phase of the deduction. Whenever an individual or corporation pays a local tax in any State or in the District of Columbia such local tax is deductible from the net income on which tax is computed. But under section 131 of the current revenue act when an American corporation with branches in foreign countries pays a tax on such assets abroad it makes the deduction—not from its taxable income but from the tax after it has been computed.

Under the benign influence of our tariff laws a great number of American corporations have established branches abroad, and many of them have heavy investments in practically every foreign country.

Just across the international line in Canada there are duplicates of numerous manufacturing plants of the United States. When I was at Niagara Falls some time ago I saw there in close proximity, plants belonging to the same corporation that were practically identical, producing the same commodity, one in Canada and one in the United States, the Canadian plant being established there in order to avoid the tariff.

What is the effect of the establishment of these foreign branch factories? We are not only deprived of the revenue from the taxes formerly paid when their products were manufactured in the United States, but we are also deprived of markets for American products which are consumed in these factories as raw materials.

The raw materials consumed in these factories are now purchased in foreign markets and from foreign producers, while American cotton, American oil, American ore, American coal, American grain, and other American products are left to congest our own markets and pile up a surplus that drags down the price of every American commodity.

In addition to the loss of a market for our raw materials American labor suffers. According to latest estimates, branch factories of American corporations now in operation abroad are employing half a million foreign workmen instead of the half million American workmen who would be employed in these industries if they operated within the United States as formerly.

With the lack of employment in the United States to-day, with armies of unemployed walking our streets, what a boon it would be to American labor if these plants were operated at home and these pay envelopes were being delivered every Saturday to our own workmen.

However, if our tariff laws are to continue to drive American industries abroad, and our other producers are to be deprived permanently of this market for their products; if they must take the jobs of half a million American citizens and give them to half a million foreign workmen, let us at least eliminate this exemption and secure full payment of taxes on the income from these foreign investments. If this section of the revenue act had been repealed by the last Congress it would have brought into the Treasury of the United States in the last year over $35,000,000. Why did not the Treasury Department, in its anxious search for revenue, recommend the payment of this $35,000,000 by corporations with branches all over the world instead of taking it out of the farmer's tractor, the laborer's overalls, the housewife's market basket, and the children's toys?

Strike out section 31 and section 131. Credits of taxes of

On pages 103, 104, 105, 106, 107, and 108, strike out line 3 of page 103 to line 7 of page 108, inclusive.

That is proposition No. 2. That is the second alternative. Third. And let me ask you here how would you like to have a method of taxation which would bring into the Treasury of the United States not the paltry amount which they propose to raise by a sales tax but an annual revenue of $6,000,000,000? What would you think of a method of taxation which alone would produce every year three times the amount of the total deficit in the United States Treasury-a method to which nobody would object-a method which would shear the pig and get the most wool with the least squeal?

I do not suggest this happy solution on my own responsibility. It is a tax proposed by one of the most eminent legislative authorities on the subject, not only in the United States but in the world to-day.

Here is the proposition as he formulated it. This is the form in which he offered it as an amendment to the revenue act in the United States Senate in 1929:

There shall be levied, collected, and paid on all sales or agreements or contracts or options for sales of shares of stock of any corporation at, or under the rules and usages of, any stock exchange, or other similar places, $5 for each $100 of the selling or buying value, whichever may be the greater, or fraction thereof, of the stock covered by such sale agreement, contract, or option—if the seller has not had the legal title to or the beneficial interest in the stock for at least 60 days prior to the sale agreement, contract, or option.

This amendment, if adopted in 1929, would have produced a revenue, according to the computation of a former Secretary of the Treasury, of $6,000,000,000 annually. If I were drafting it originally I would not put the rate so high, but I am offering it as originally proposed. Its adoption would not only have provided an adequate revenue, but it would have been attended by many other beneficial results. One of the evils accentuated by the present financial depression is the practice of short selling. So deleterious has been its influence and so seriously has it retarded business recovery that the President recently addressed a message to Congress on the subject, and it is everywhere the subject of widespread condemnation. The proposed tax on the sale of stocks would go far toward remedying the evil. It would discourage short selling; it would discourage gambling in stocks; it would stabilize the market and curb both bulls and bears, and so benefit both the producer and the consumer.

It taxes the market rigger and the stock gambler, while the sales tax penalizes the farmer, the workman, and the tradesman. Which class do you think can better afford to contribute to the support of the Government?

The fourth applies the same principle to the commodity exchange. It is a tax on options; a tax on futures. Every year there are millions of bushels of imaginary wheat and millions of bales of cotton that never grew thrown on the market. On the Chicago exchange alone last year every bushel of corn raised in the United States was sold eighteen times. These unlimited quantities of make-believe products passing through the exchanges suspend the law of supply and demand. They depress the price to the producer and boost the cost to the consumer. Compensation for toil on the farm and the cost of daily bread in the city are governed not by harvests and consumption but by curb deals in margins and options and eddying whirlpools of phantom grain in the wheat pit. Here is the remedy:

There shall be levied, collected, and paid a tax of one-fourth of 1 per cent of the selling or buying value of all sales or agreements or contracts or options for the purchase or sale for future delivery of cotton, grain, and all other farm products without intending that such products shall be actually delivered or received, or offer ing to make or enter into a contract whereby any party for whom or in whose behalf such contract is made, acquires the right or privilege to demand in the future the acceptance or delivery of cotton, grain, or other farm products without specifying the grade to be delivered, and being thereby obligated to accept or deliver such cotton, grain, or other farm product of the grades and quantities specified in said contract.

Such a tax would produce a rich revenue. There would be no protest from those who paid it, for the gambler never quibbles over the commission retained by the "house." And simultaneously it would reduce gambling in agricultural products and meet with the approval of every farm organization and every labor union in the United States.

That is proposition No. 4—the fourth alternative to a sales

The fifth alternative provides for an increase in the estate tax. The estate tax, or as it is usually termed, the inheritance tax, is among the most meritorious of all forms of taxation. It conforms to every rule of scientific taxation. It is adequate; it is certain; it is the least obnoxious; and it taxes in proportion to ability to pay. The inadequacy of the present rate of inheritance taxes is indicated by the following tabulation, showing the rate levied by Great Britain as compared with the tax proposed in the pending bill:

Estate tax

Net estate (before specific exemption)	Tax under existing law (be- fore credit for State taxes)	Total tax under bill (before credit for State taxes)	British tax
$100,000	0	0	$8,000
	$1,500	$3,000	26,000
	12,500	25,000	100,000
	41,500	83,000	260,000
	489,500	979,000	2,000,000
	1,334,500	2,669,000	5,000,000
	9,333,500	18,667,000	25,000,000
	19,333,500	38,667,000	50,000,000

Note the low tax on inheritances proposed by the bill as compared with the tax imposed by England—a tax that is being levied, collected, and paid to-day. The pending bill reported on the advice of the Treasury Department taxes a $200,000 estate only $3,000. The English revenue law taxes the same estate $26,000, and in like proportion through all the upper brackets. The rates provided in this bill should be increased to yield at least $500,000,000 additional revenue, instead of taxing the school boy's lunch basket and the widow's bowl of soup.

That is proposal No. 5. It provides for millions of dollars in revenues which seem to have been overlooked by the Treasury in its efforts to find substitutes for the sales tax.

The seventh is an old friend. It served us well in our last emergency. It is the excess-profits tax:

Reenact title 3 of the revenue act of 1918.

An excess-profits tax is one of the most admirable taxes that can be levied. It does not tax a corporation until it begins to profiteer. It brings in revenue from those most able to pay and it protects the consumer from exorbitant prices. It first permits an exemption of $3,000. Then it allows a profit of 8 per cent. After all expenses are paid and $3,000 allowed and a dividend of 8 per cent on the capital stock—water and all—is declared, then on the remaining profit above the $3,000 and the 8 per cent the corporation pays a reasonable tax. If the corporation is satisfied with a fair profit there is no tax. Only the profiteers pay the tax. The last year it was in force it brought into the Treasury $486,000,000, and it protected the consumer from the profiteer. But the bill by providing a sales tax prefers to tax the man who pays excess profits instead of the man who charges excess profits.

That is proposal No. 6. It is the sixth alternative over-looked by the Treasury Department.

Eighth—and most imperative of all, Mr. Chairman—there should be an increase of income taxes in the higher brackets. The degree to which the larger incomes are favored in the pending bill is little short of a scandal. Although we are told that an emergency has been precipitated by the Treasury deficit and that a crisis impends unless the Budget is promptly balanced, the income taxes of the wealthiest class in America are below the schedules of the act of 1918 and far below the schedule now in force in England and other European countries. Here is a table showing comparative rates under the three schedules:

Comparison of income tax on individuals under revenue act of 1928, proposed revenue bill of 1932, revenue act of 1918, and present English schedule

MARRIED PERSON WITH NO DEPENDENTS, $5,000 EARNED INCOME; DEPENDENTS, $5,000 EARNED INCOME

[British tax figures on investment income. United States figures on total income. In 1918 law there was no differentiation between earned income and investment income. British pounds are expressed in dollars at $5 per pound.]

Net income	Tax under 1928 act	Tax pro- posed	Tax under 1918 act, United States	Present tax in Great Britain
$550	W Larg		0
$800 $800			0	$6, 25
$1.000			. 0	$6. 25 31. 25
$2,000			0	203, 12
	0	$2,50	$60,00	453, 12
14 000	$5, 63	20, 00	120.00	703. 12
55,000	16.88	37.50	180.00	953, 12
86,000	31. 88	57. 50	250.00	1, 110, 62
7.000	46, 88	77, 50	630.00	1, 473, 12
8.000	69. 38	115, 00	770, 00	1, 683, 12
9,000	99, 38	155, 00	920, 00	1, 983, 12
10,000	129, 38	195, 00	1, 070, 00	2, 203, 12
12,000	219, 38	312, 50	1, 390, 00	2, 830, 62
14,000	339, 38	472, 50	1, 730, 00	3, 512, 50
316,000	479.38	652, 50	2,090,00	4, 012, 50
318,000	639.38	852, 50	2, 470, 00	5, 007, 50
20,000	819.38	1, 072. 50	2, 870.00	5, 562, 50
22,000	1, 019. 38	1, 312, 50	3, 290. 00	6, 117, 50
24,000	1, 239, 38	1, 572, 50	3, 730. 00	7, 327, 50
26,000	1, 479. 38	1, 852, 50	4, 190, 00	7, 947, 50
28,000	1, 719, 38	2, 152, 50	4, 670, 00	9, 190, 00
30,000	1, 979. 38	2, 472, 50	5, 147. 00	9, 850. 00
35,000	2, 659, 38	3, 362, 50	6, 510. 00	12, 200. 00
40,000	3, 399. 38	4, 372. 50	7, 970. 00	14, 550. 00
45,000	4, 209. 38	5, 512. 50	9, 560. 00	17, 175. 00
50,000	5, 079, 38	6, 772. 50	11, 270. 00	19, 800. 00
60,000	6, 999. 38	9, 672. 50	15, 070. 00	23, 760. 00
70,000	9, 159. 38	13, 072. 50	19, 370. 00	31, 370. 00

Note the low tax on inheritances proposed by the bill as | Comparison of income tax on individuals under revenue act of ompared with the tax imposed by England—a tax that is present English schedule—Continued

MARRIED PERSON WITH NO DEPENDENTS, $5,000 EARNED INCOME; DEPENDENTS, $5,000 EARNED INCOME—continued

Net income	Tax under 1928 act	Tax pro- posed	Tax under 1918 act, United States	Present tax in Great Britain
$80,000	$11, 459, 38	$16, 972. 50	$24, 170. 00	$35, 850. 00
$90,000	13, 859, 38	21, 222. 50	29, 470. 00	43, 300. 00
$100,000	16, 259, 38	25, 672. 50	35, 270. 00	48, 110. 00
$150,000	28, 759, 38	48, 672. 50	67, 270. 00	78, 485. 00
$200,000	41, 259, 38	71, 672. 50	101, 270. 00	110, 235. 00
$300,000	66, 259, 38	117, 672. 50	173, 270. 00	156, 185. 00
$500,000	116, 259, 38	209, 672. 50	323, 270. 00	307, 610. 00
$1,000,000	241, 250, 38	439, 672. 50	703, 270. 00	615, 220. 00

SINGLE PERSON WITH $5,000 EARNED INCOME

$550			0	$6, 25
$800			0	37.50
$1,000			0	62, 50
$2,000	0	$15,00	$60.00	265, 62
$3,000	$16, 28	32.50	120.00	515, 62
$4,000	28, 13	50.00	180.00	765, 62
$5,000	39, 38	67.50	240 00	1, 015, 62
$6,000	61, 88	95, 00	610.00	1, 273, 12
$7,000	91, 88	135.00	750.00	1, 530, 62
$8,000	121.88	175.00	890.00	1, 750, 62
$9,000	151.88	215.00	1,040,00	2, 040, 62
$10,000	191.88	262, 50	1, 190, 00	2, 265, 62
$12,000	311.88	402, 50	1, 510, 00	2, 908, 12
$14,000	431, 88	562, 50	1, 850, 00	3, 570, 00
$16,000	571, 88	742, 50	2, 210, 00	4, 080, 00
$18,000	731. 88	942, 50	2, 590, 00	5, 060, 00
$20,000	911.88	1, 162, 50	2, 990, 00	5, 625, 00
$22,000	1, 111, 88	1, 402, 50	3, 410, 00	6, 190, 00
$24,000	1, 331. 88	1, 662, 50	3, 850, 00	7, 390, 00
$26,000	1, 571, 88	1, 942, 60	4, 310, 00	8, 010, 00
$28,000	1, 811, 88	2, 242, 50	4, 790, 00	9, 245, 00
$30,000	2,071,88	2, 562, 50	5, 290, 00	9, 912, 50
$35,000	2, 751, 88	3, 452, 50	6, 630, 00	12, 262, 50
$40,000	3, 491, 88	4, 462, 50	8, 090, 00	14, 612, 50
$45,000	4, 301, 88	5, 602, 50	9, 680, 00	17, 237, 50
$50,000	5, 171, 88	6, 862, 50	11, 390, 00	19, 862, 50
$60,000	7, 091, 88	9, 762, 50	15, 190, 00	26, 940, 00
$70,000	9, 251. 88	13, 162, 50	19, 490, 00	31, 430, 00
$80,000	11, 551, 88	17, 062, 50	24, 290, 00	35, 920, 00
$90,000	13, 951, 88	21, 312, 50	29, 590. 00	43, 355, 00
$100,000	16, 351, 88	25, 762, 50	35, 390, 00	48, 175, 00
$150,000	28, 851, 88	48, 762, 50	67, 390, 00	78, 550, 00
$200,000	41, 351, 88	71, 762, 50	101, 390, 00	110, 300, 00
$300,000	66, 351, 88	117, 762, 50	173, 390, 00	170, 460, 00
$500,000		209, 762, 50	323, 390, 00	307, 675. 00
$1,000,000		439, 762, 50	703, 390, 00	615, 350. 00

MARRIED PERSON WITH NO DEPENDENTS AND MAXIMUM EARNED INCOME $30,000 UNDER 1928 ACT; $12,000 PROPOSED

$550			0	0
$800			0	$6. 25
$1,000			0	31. 25
$2,000			0	203. 12
$3,000	0	$2.50	$60.00	453. 12
$4,000		20.00	120.00	703. 12
$5,000	16.88	37. 50	180.00	953, 12
$6,000	28. 13	55, 00	250.00	1, 110, 62
$7,000	39. 38	72.50	630.00	1, 473, 12
$8,000	56. 25	100.00	770.00	1, 683, 12
$9,000	78.75	135, 00	920.00	1, 983, 12
$10,000	101, 25	170, 00	1, 070, 00	2, 203, 12
$12,000	168, 75	260, 00	1, 390, 00	2, 830, 62
$14,000	258, 75	420, 00	1, 730, 00	3, 512, 50
$16,000	363, 75	600, 00	2, 090, 00	4, 012, 50
$18,000	483, 75	800.00	2, 470, 00	5, 007, 50
$20,000	618.75	1, 020, 00	2, 870, 00	5, 562, 50
$22,000	768, 75	1, 260, 00	3, 290, 00	6, 117, 50
$24,000	933, 75	1, 520, 00	3, 730, 00	7, 327, 50
400 000	1, 113. 75	1, 800.00	4, 190, 00	.7, 947, 50
	1, 293. 75	2, 100, 00	4, 670.00	9, 190, 00
Ann 1000	1, 488. 75	2, 420, 00	5, 147, 00	9, 850, 00
				12, 200, 00
$35,000	2, 168. 75	3, 310. 00	6, 510. 00
$40,000	2, 908. 75	4, 320. 00	7, 970. 00	14, 550. 00
$45,000	3, 718. 75	5, 460. 00	9, 560. 00	17, 175. 00
$50,000	4, 588. 75	6, 720. 00	11, 270. 00	19, 800, 00
$60,000	6, 508. 75	9, 620. 00	15, 070. 00	23, 760. 00
$70,000	8, 668. 75	13, 020. 00	19, 370. 00	31, 370. 00
$80,000	10, 968. 75	16, 920. 00	24, 170. 00	35, 850. 00
$90,000	13, 368. 75	21, 170. 00	29, 470. 00	43, 300. 00
$100,000	15, 768. 75	25, 620. 00	35, 270, 00	48, 110. 00
$150,000	28, 268. 75	48, 620. 00	67, 270. 00	78, 485. 00
$200,000	40, 768, 75	71, 620. 00	101, 270. 00	110, 235, 00
$300,000	65, 768. 75	117, 620. 00	173, 270. 00	156, 185. 00
$500,000	115, 768, 75	209, 620, 00	323, 270. 00	307, 610, 00
$1,000,000	240, 768, 75	439, 620, 00	703, 270, 00	615, 220, 00

SINGLE PERSON AND MAXIMUM EARNED INCOME, $30,000 UNDER 1928 ACT; $12,000 PROPOSED

$550				$6, 20
$800				37.50
$1,000			0	62, 50
$2,000	0	$15.00	$60.00	265. 62
$3,000	$16.88	32, 50	120, 00	515. 63

Comparison of income tax on individuals under revenue act of 1928, proposed revenue act of 1932, revenue act of 1918, and present English schedule—Continued

SINGLE PERSON AND MAXIMUM EARNED INCOME, $30,000 UNDER 1928 ACT; $12,000 PROPOSED—continued

Net income	Tax under 1928 act	Tax proposed	Tax under 1918 act, United States	Present tax in Great Britain
$4,000	$28, 13	$50.00	$180,00	$765, 62
$5,000	39, 38	67.50	240.00	1, 015, 62
	56, 25	90.00	610.00	1, 273, 12
$6,000 $7,000	78, 75	125, 00	750.00	1, 530, 62
$8,000	101. 25	160.00	890.00	1, 750, 62
	123, 75	195, 00	1, 040, 00	2, 040, 62
$9,000	153, 75	230.00	1, 190, 00	2, 265, 62
$10,000 $12,000	243.75	350.00	1, 510, 00	2, 908, 12
	333, 75	510.00	1, 850, 00	3, 570, 00
$14,000		690.00	2, 210, 00	4, 080, 00
$16,000	558, 75	890.00	2, 590, 90	5, 060, 00
$18,000
$20,000	693.75	1, 110.00	2, 990. 00	5, 625. 00
$22,000	843.75	1, 350, 00	3, 410. 00	6, 190. 00
$24,000	1,008.75	1,610.00	3, 850, 00	7, 390. 00
$26,000	1, 188. 75	1,890.00	4, 310, 00	8, 010, 00
$28,000	1, 368. 75	2, 190, 00	4, 790.00	9, 245. 00
$30,000	1, 563, 75	2, 510.00	5, 290, 00	9, 912, 50
$35,000	2, 243, 75	3, 400. 00	6, 630. 00	12, 262, 50
$40,000	2, 983. 75	4, 410. 00	8, 090, 00	14, 612, 50
$45,000	3, 783. 75	5, 550. 00	9, 680.00	17, 237. 50
$50,000	4, 663. 75	6, 810.00	11, 390, 00	19, 862, 50
$60,000	6, 583, 75	9, 710.00	15, 190, 00	26, 940. 00
$70,000	8, 743, 75	13, 110, 00	19, 490, 00	31, 430, 00
$80,000	11, 043, 75	17, 010, 00	24, 290, 00	35, 920, 00
$90,000	13, 443, 75	21, 260, 00	29, 590, 00	43, 355. 00
$100,000	15, 843, 75	25, 710.00	35, 390, 00	48, 175. 00
$150,000	28, 343, 75	48, 710, 00	67, 390, 00	78, 550, 00
$200,000	40, 843, 75	71, 710, 00	101, 390, 00	110, 300, 00
$300,000	65, 843, 75	117, 710, 00	173, 390, 00	170, 460, 00
$500,000	115, 843, 75	209, 710, 00	323, 390, 00	307, 675, 00
$1,000,000	240, 843, 75	439, 710, 00	703, 390, 00	615, 350, 00

The advocates of the sales tax have charged that proposed income-tax schedules are confiscatory. If they are confiscatory, what of the schedules now being paid in England, from whose legislative system we adopted the fundamental principles of American jurisprudence, and where traditional estates entailed for a thousand years are being broken up to meet current taxes? When ancestral acres handed down from contemporaries of William the Conqueror are being sacrificed to balance the English budget, why not permit our own multimillionaires to sacrifice a portion of their income, without touching the principal, to balance ours?

But the most inexplicable feature of the pending bill is that it provides no graduation of schedules for incomes above $100,000. In every other country and in all previous revenue acts of our own country, the rate has been graduated through both the lower and the upper brackets. But in the bill here proposed the rate is stationary after passing incomes of $100,000. Note the graduated increase in the act of 1918 and the stationary rate of 40 per cent in the pending bill, as indicated in the comparative table of schedules below:

Net income	Rate under 1918 act	Rate under bill
$100,000. $150,000	Per cent 48 52	Per cent
$200,000 . $300,000 . $500,000 . $1,000,000	56 60 63 64	40 40 40
All over $1,000,000	65	40

This is proposal No. 7. This is the seventh alternative for the sales tax overlooked by the Treasury in its survey of possible methods of raising revenue to balance the Budget. Great incomes should be as patriotic during this crisis as during the war. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman from Missouri five additional minutes.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Chairman, the sales tax is the most indefensible tax known to history. It is the last resort of despotism, and our Republic has never had recourse to it even in the stress of war. It burdens the poor and favors the rich. It penalizes the wages of labor and patronizes the unearned increments of wealth. A man with an income of from $400 to $1,500 a year and who necessarily spends his entire income in support of his family must pay a tax on his entire income. But a man with an income of $25,000 a year and who supports his family on $5,000, pays tax on only one-fifth of his income. The smaller the income the heavier the burden; the larger the income the lighter the burden. It is not a tax in proportion to ability to pay or in proportion to henefits derived from the Government.

or in proportion to benefits derived from the Government.

The very name of "manufacturers' tax" is a misnomer.

The idea that the manufacturer will pay it is absurd. He will take it out of the price he pays for raw material. He will take it out of the wages of labor. And he will add it to the price he charges the consumer.

To study its effect on the price of raw material let us consider the packing industry. It is a matter of common knowledge that the profit of the packing house has averaged one-half cent on every dollar for the last several years. As a matter of fact, the packing industry last year operated at a loss. It can not possibly absorb a tax of even one-half of 1 per cent, much less  $2\frac{1}{4}$  per cent.

This is the testimony not of the packers but of the farm organizations and agricultural journals. A 21/4 per cent tax on lard, sausage, processed meats, and cooked and canned meats must be passed back to the farmer in the reduced price paid for his livestock and would cost the livestock producers of the country approximately $10,000,000 a year, when prices are already below cost of production. There is no alternative except to add the tax to the price paid by the consumer. The wages of labor have already been reduced to a minimum and can not be further deflated. If the tax is added to the retail price, it will reduce the amount of sales and further restrict the market for raw material and the demand for labor. The consequent reduction in the consumption of agricultural products and the corresponding increase in unemployment would have a most disastrous effect on the country at this time. Industry would slow down, business recovery would be retarded, and all progress gained through remedial legislation would be lost. Employment is now at a critical stage.

The total wages paid factory workers dropped from $1,009,000,000 in September, 1929, to $472,000,000 in January, 1932, a decrease of 53.2 per cent. The number employed fell from 9,182,000 to 5,776,000. The average earnings declined from $109.85 per month to $81.77 per month. The total number of unemployed men in the country at this minute is estimated at 7,000,000, with 3,000,000 employed part time. Labor can not sustain a further increase in unemployment. And the manufacturer's tax means further loss of employment. Increased cost of commodities invariably decreases demand. And decreased demand necessarily involves idle factories and idle labor. Adoption of a sales tax would be the greatest blow to labor in the history of American industry. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman five additional minutes.

Mr. CANNON. Advocates of this tax suggest that it is an emergency measure, a stop-gap, a temporary expedient, to be abandoned as soon as the special occasion for it has passed. But there is no reason to believe that once adopted it will ever be abandoned. The Canadian people were told by the Borden government when the Canadian sales tax was enacted that it would be retained only a year or two, but they have never been able to shake it off.

In fact, the influences back of this bill frankly avow their intention permanently to substitute the sales tax for the income tax.

A great chain of newspapers which has campaigned since the close of the war for a sales tax and which recently claimed through its editorial columns credit for the introduction of this bill in the House carries continuously on its editorial pages this slogan: Federal sales tax and excise taxes to replace the income tax, which has degenerated into a racket.

That is the explanation of this determined drive to impose a sales tax on the American people. This great chain of papers, decrying labor retrenchments while it dismisses employees and lowers the wages of its own staff, filling its pages with "sob stories" of the kidnaped child while it attempts to reduce the living standard of every child in America, seeks to tax the ice-cream cone, the stick of wholesome candy, the educational motion picture ticket in the hands of American children in order that vast incomes may go untaxed to accumulate more money to buy more newspapers to dominate American politics for self-seeking interests

The income tax they seek to abolish is the fairest tax in the world. If a man has no income he pays no tax. He ought not to pay a tax. If he has an income he pays a tax. He ought to be glad to pay it.

No written authority on the subject of taxation, either ancient or modern, can be cited in support of a sales tax. Not a single economist in any college or university in the land indorses such a system of taxation. Both Theodore Roosevelt and William Howard Taft earnestly supported the income tax and it is one of the proudest boasts of the Democratic Party that the law became effective under the administration of Woodrow Wilson. Thomas Jefferson, the founder of the Democratic Party, denounced indirect taxes as "infernal" and "odious." And opposition to such forms of taxation has been a tenet of the Democratic Party from that day to this. The Democratic National Convention of 1924 adopted a platform specifically condemning the sales tax, and the convention at Chicago next June will reaffirm that declaration.

Enactment of such a tax would effect an abandonment of the principle of taxing in proportion to ability to pay and would amount to renunciation of everything for which the Democratic Party has stood for a hundred years.

Nor can the bill be modified or amended to admit the tax in any form. It can not be disguised or camouflaged or minimized. When the King of England was asserting his right to tax the Colonies the English made the price of tea so low that even with the tax it was cheaper per pound at Boston than in any other port in the world. But it was not the tax itself our forefathers objected to. It was the principle of the tax. And that is the basis of our objection to the sales tax—it is the principle involved.

This law if passed becomes effective within 30 days. There will be ample time before election for the people to realize by sad experience just how the burden of government has been shifted to their shoulders. And judging by the signs of the times, if this tax is enacted there will be a Boston tea party at every voting precinct in the country next November. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HILL of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. Martin].

Mr. MARTIN of Oregon. Mr. Chairman, the debate which has been going on on the floor for the last week reminds me of a debate which occurred over in the other body at the end of the Spanish-American War. There was a bill up then to reorganize the Army and discharge the volunteers. The volunteers were anxious to get out of the service, and their retention was costing the Government a million dollars a day. In spite of all this an old distinguished Senator, who was representing the downtrodden, spoke against the bill day after day. It was costing the Government a million dollars a day for that speech. At last the Secretary of War became a little bit anxious, and he asked another how the old Senator was going to vote, because nobody could tell. The Secretary of War said, "How is Senator So-and-So going to vote on this bill?" His colleague said, "I do not know; but he is like the razorback hogs down in my State. When they crawl under the rail fence they squeal like hell, whether they are coming or going." [Laughter.]

That is the way with some Members who have spoken on this bill—they squeal like hell. [Laughter.]

I wish I could put into the hands of every voter that remarkable speech by our colleague from Alabama [Mr. Huddleston] delivered last Wednesday. I would like our countrymen to know what heavy expenses we have to pay for many Members of this House. I, like him, paid my own election expenses in the last election, and I propose to pay my election expenses next year, and not have them paid out of the Public Treasury.

Probably all of our town, county, and State treasuries are bankrupt, and they are appealing to Congress for help. We have Members here who wish to accede to the demands, because there are votes behind them. They will vote anything out of the Treasury, but they will not vote anything into the Treasury. I am not going to join that crowd. [Applause.] I am not going to vote money out of the Treasury until I see it placed in the Treasury.

Now, on that premise, realizing as we do, knowing as we do, that the Government is running behind about $4,000,-000 a day, how are you going to relieve the situation, how are you going to put the money into the Treasury that you propose to take out?

There are two ways, and one is by the issue of bonds. I think the bond-issue business has about reached the end of its rope. In my home paper the other day they advertised for a sale of State bonds at  $4\frac{1}{2}$  per cent interest, and they did not get a bid. The cities and counties in my district to-day are borrowing money from the banks against the first tax payment, which comes in May. I believe that the Government can not float its bonds much longer at a reasonable rate. I think the day is coming when the United States bonds, if we keep this up, of spending without producing revenue, will end, and that means collapse.

If we can not float bonds to satisfy the spenders, the only thing left is to balance the Budget. If we put money into the Treasury as we pass it out, we will balance the Budget. That is what we are up against, the balancing of the Budget. For one, I am going to vote to balance our Budget.

Now, the opposition seems to gather around the sales tax. The old Members of the House, the old leaders, the old experienced leaders, the ones who get on the Ways and Means Committee, have gone into this matter thoroughly, they have examined it thoroughly, they are experts, and after all, our Democratic friends will be held responsible for action on this bill, and therefore we must follow the leaders. To follow the leaders is the only way that battles are won.

Despite some gentlemen attempting to show me that this committee has betrayed its trust and has been unwise, I am going to follow the leaders of my party and the leaders on the Ways and Means Committee, because they are the experts and have examined all of these things that have been rehashed here. The great cry, of course, is to soak the rich a little bit more. I have no brief to speak for the rich, though I wish to God I belonged to their class, but when you are taxing the great rich men, when you are taking from them 46 per cent of their income, when you take 40 per cent of their wealth when they die, I think that is soaking them like hell, because if you go out in the market and sell a man's property and exact 40 per cent, anybody with common sense knows that finally means confiscation. But while you are so anxious about these multimillionaires, think about your poor little devils with only $100,000 or $150,000 or $200,000. What is going to happen to them when they die? I shall not go a step further in soaking the rich than the able men of this committee have gone, and I think they have gone the limit. If you are going to put more money into the Treasury, I think we have to examine these taxes that were recommended by the Treasury Department, these excise and nuisance taxes, which the committee discarded. One was the increase of postage from 2 to 3 cents. I know that you all received scores of letters protesting against that, those of you who have people who write letters and who would buy 3-cent stamps. The other day a gentleman on the floor, whose constituents do not use many 3-cent stamps, suggested that that was a fine thing, but the rest of the country is opposed to that. Then it was proposed to increase the automobile tax. We all know that automobiles now are taxed the limit.

The automobile manufacturers are willing to pay the manufacturers' tax, but are not willing to be singled out and taxed when other manufacturers are not taxed. Then complaint is made about the poor people who will have to pay this 21/4 per cent. To-day there passed through this town one of the biggest clothing jobbers in my city. He just came from New York where he had been buying the spring stock. I asked him about this clothing tax. I thought of all people he would be the shoat who would vell like hell. He said, "Why, it does not amount to anything, the wholesaler will absorb that. The wholesalers have been giving 2, 3. and 5 per cent discount anyway for payment in cash, and they will readily absorb this." As the distinguished acting chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means pointed out in his preliminary speech, a man on an income of $1,500 will probably pay only about $8. Is that correct?

Mr. CRISP. That is correct.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Oregon has expired.

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes more to the gentleman.

Mr. MARTIN of Oregon. Mr. Chairman, I have some figures here that I wish to call to your attention about the effect already of not balancing this Budget and not paying as we go. Any sensible man will pay as he goes, he will not keep running into debt and hoping to God that something will happen to take him out of it. Ten months ago the Government sold bonds carrying an interest rate of 11/2 per cent. A few days ago the Government sold $300,000,000 of similar bonds, with interest at 31/8 per cent. Ten months ago the Government sold bonds carrying 11/2 per cent, and the other day to refund them it had to pay 3% per cent. That shows how it is going. Even so, the lenders demanded an assurance that the Government would balance the Budget; that is, would avoid further deficit. For only so may the Government avoid further borrowings, each increase of which must make security less and interest rates higher. Not only do Government issues impose a growing burden upon the taxpayer, but so long as the Government may be expected to borrow, lenders will hold funds to loan to it rather than to borrowers with less credit. That is common

The Budget must be balanced, therefore, first, to maintain the Federal credit; second, to keep down the tax rate and the tax burden; and, third, to prevent interference with the normal flow of business credit, upon which in the end correction of the unemployment situation must depend. They are the people that we have to look out for. It is not well for the Government to absorb all the money there is in the country, but we should keep it free and liquid for the use of manufacturers and the correction of unemployment.

There is no difference of opinion among informed men that the Budget must be balanced, and still there are those who, for selfish or private advantage or through ignorance, propose printing all the money that may be needed to pay Government expenses. And outside Congress there are similar ideas advanced, as, for instance, by John A. Simpson, president of the Farmers' Union, whom the press reports to favor the issue of prosperity bonds. Did you ever hear of that before—bearing no interest and made legal tender? What a magnificent scheme that is. Start the printing presses and fill us full of money.

Any man of common sense would on theoretical grounds condemn such schemes as unsound in practice. Any man of integrity would reject them as dishonest. But it is unnecessary to theorize. History is full of examples of their failure. For these we may pass by the ruin of Germany by its unlimited issue of paper money and review only a few cases in our own national life.

Mr. GARBER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARTIN of Oregon. I yield.

Mr. GARBER. I agree with the gentleman in regard to the importance of balancing the Budget, but what would the gentleman say to an increase on the transfer of stocks for purposes of short selling—an increase from 4 per cent to at least 10 per cent—to put a brake on the gambling on stock exchanges of the country?

Mr. MARTIN of Oregon. I think the committee has taken care of that. They raised it from 2 to 4. They were surrounded, in writing this bill, by the greatest experts in this country. They devoted nearly four long, weary months to it, and I am going to take their judgment. I am not going to give a saddle-bad opinion about it. I am a new Member. I respect and I revere them.

Now, after the Civil War in 1867 we had outstanding $1,600,000,000 six per cent bonds that would soon be callable. Their face was in dollars but interest was payable in gold. There was a panic. In the year following was a presidential campaign. Pendleton, of Ohio, was a Democratic candidate. I must painfully confess that the lovers of rag money are very prevalent in my party. Pendleton advocated redemption of the bonds with legal tender additional to that already issued and greatly depreciated. More rag money. More rag money. To this effect a plank was adopted in the Democratic platform. The debtor class in Ohio and States west were so pleased with the idea that Republicans did not dare openly to oppose it, but Pendleton was not nominated, and the Democratic candidate was not elected.

As a step toward resumption of specie payments Congress in 1866 had authorized a slow retirement of greenbacks outstanding, but this was soon stopped by the law of February, 1868. The outstanding greenbacks were reduced from four hundred and thirty-three to three hundred and fifty-six millions.

During the panic of 1873 the amount was increased to $382,000,000—as much as was deemed to be authorized. Business demands for currency had made a greenback dollar worth 90 gold cents. But the West again demanded inflation, and Congress authorized eighteen millions more in February, 1874. Grant vetoed the bill. At the fall elections his party was beaten, but before its Congress went out it passed the resumption act. The demand for inflation of prices, which is a demand for deflation of money, subsided, and in the autumn of 1875 Hayes was chosen Republican Governor of Ohio on a sound-money platform.

On December 17, 1878, greenbacks were at par for the first time since their first issue in 1861. On January 1, 1879, gold payments were resumed.

Under the plea of "absolute necessity" and against administration opposition, the United States issued unsecured notes made legal tender except for import duties. There were fifty millions in July, 1861, one hundred millions in February, 1862, one hundred more early in 1863, and two hundred more were authorized in 1864. The amount never exceeded $433,000,000. From the beginning these greenbacks, as they were called, never sold at par with gold. The dollar was worth about 40 cents through 1864, but fell as low as 35 cents.

In the South, bonds and notes were issued by both central government and the States. Rapidly sinking in value, they were finally so depreciated that towns, counties, insurance companies, and mining companies issued promises to pay. Before the end more than $1,000,000,000 of Confederate notes were worthless. So valueless were confederation promises to pay that its bonds were not exchangeable for supplies, and a tithing system had to be applied to agricultural products to support its armies.

IN REVOLUTIONARY TIMES

Continental paper money was issued at first in small amount and for a year passed at par of specie. In two years $3 in bills would buy $1 in coin. A year more and the ratio was 38 to 1. In March, 1780, when the circulation was nearly $200,000,000, it was 50 to 1. Soon after it declined to 100 to 1. Then Congress accepted payment of taxes at 40 to 1 and on the same basis exchanged some 5 per cent securities for bills. Currency thus withdrawn was destroyed. After 1790, another $6,000,000 was withdrawn at 100 to 1. About $75,000,000 was never redeemed and was a total loss to its holders. Continental money was in such contempt that in 1780 a joker led his dog, plastered with bills, through the Philadelphia streets, amid the laughter of the spectators.

The States also issued bills to nearly $200,000,000 in amount. The depreciation was enormous and the great part was never redeemed.

The issues of these currencies constituted a forced contribution upon the people and involved great sacrifice, [Applause.]

Mr. HILL of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I yield 20 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. DICKSTEIN].

Mr. DICKSTEIN. Mr. Chairman, I have heard so far a number of our colleagues who are opposed to the sales tax, who so far have not yet, in my opinion, given this committee or this House a substitute for the sales tax. Everybody seems to agree that we have to balance our Budget, yet we have had debate after debate upon this floor in which we seem to find all sorts of objections to the sales tax as proposed by a committee of this House.

On last Thursday while on this floor I was fortunate enough to hear a speech made by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Mouser]. It seemed to me at first the gentleman was going to support the tax, but after his talk developed and after the gentleman from New York [Mr. Crowther] asked him a question, I came to the conclusion that the gentleman was opposed to the sales tax. On page 5704 of the Record I asked a question of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Mouser], and I suggested to him light wines and beer. The gentleman said in answer to my question:

I think the gentleman's argument is simply injected here at this time to create an issue foreign to the matter under discussion.

I submit, Mr. Chairman, that what I asked the gentleman from Ohio was not foreign to the question under consideration. I wonder how many Members of this House have given any thought—I mean serious thought—to the minority statement in the back of the majority report on the revenue bill of 1932, and how many Members have read on page 54 the supplementary statement made by Messrs. Cullen and Sullivan of New York and McCormack of Massachusetts?

I know that my statement to you may not be in full accord with your opinion. I say to you that if we had followed the able report of those three distinguished men on this committee which deals with the subject of beer not only would we balance the Budget but we would have a surplus, and yet the very men who are opposing a sales tax do not want beer in this country.

Now, Mr. Chairman, who is behind the objection? Why should not the people have the opportunity? Why not try that plan out? Here we are with a deficit running into the billions, and here is a plan submitted by the minority group of the committee that will bring in the revenue that is sought to balance the Budget. Not only that but it will create new industries in the United States and it will employ over 2,000,000 people.

Let me give some figures that I have here from Great Britain on beverages alone. As a matter of fact, every household, to a great extent, is a brewery. The Government does not get the benefit of that revenue. Some gentlemen have said that the reason we do not want legalized beer is because they have it in their homes. That is true, but the Government is getting no benefit from the brewers in the brewing houses.

Mr. GARBER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DICKSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. GARBER. Would not the imposition of a tax on beer be tacit legal recognition of a traffic that is prohibited by the Constitution and the Volstead Act?

Mr. DICKSTEIN. That may be true; but the Volstead Act is not the Constitution. The Volstead Act is simply the enforcing act of the eighteenth amendment. We, as Members of this Congress, can define without any difficulty what constitutes intoxicating beverages, and if we are serious enough to-morrow or the next day, we can have a bill on this floor which will give you all the revenue you want. I am very thankful to the gentleman for asking me that question. We can amend the Volstead Act and we can define what constitutes intoxicating beverages. As a matter of fact, when you did pass the Volstead Act we fixed one-half per cent; if I am correct, that was simply guesswork, because there are numerous authorities who claim that 2.75 per cent or even 3 per cent is not intoxicating. To some people almost anything is intoxicating while to others it is not.

Mr. GARBER. Would not the imposition of a tax require substantive law to recognize such a traffic as legal, and would not that require a majority vote in Congress?

Mr. DICKSTEIN. Surely a majority vote is required to pass any bill, unless it is a constitutional amendment, which would require two-thirds of the House.

Mr. GARBER. Would not that require a majority vote? Mr. DICKSTEIN. We could amend the Volstead Act and we can define very clearly what constitutes intoxicating beverages.

Mr. GARBER. It would require a majority vote to amend the Volstead Act, would it not?

Mr. DICKSTEIN. Let us define the difference between the Volstead Act and the eighteenth amendment. To amend the eighteenth amendment we would have to get a twothirds vote of the Congress; while, as to the Volstead Act, we would only have to have a majority vote to legalize and define what shall constitute intoxicating beverages.

I will now give you some figures as to beverages, such as beer, in Great Britain. Persons employed in breweries—and I am confining myself only to the subject in question—and dealing with malt and bottling, 115,000; wholesale dealers, 6,000; retailing on premises, 400,000; retailers off of premises, 54,000; in registered clubs, 12,000; barley growers, 35,000; in hop industry, 14,000; and other allied trades, 35,000, making a total of 671,000 employed in that particular line of endeavor.

Persons directly and wholly dependent on the above as shareholders and stockholders, 440,000; persons indirectly dependent on taxation, and so forth, 500,000, making a grand total of 1,611,000 people usefully employed. If we had the same number engaged we could solve our troubles without much difficulty.

Personally I am not a drinking man, but it seems to me that with all the arguments against a sales tax and with all the arguments that were presented on this floor against every tax in the world, there has not been one man, who has spoken in opposition to the sales tax, who was willing to take into consideration in the slightest degree the question of taxing beer.

I want to point out to you, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, that you can legalize beer and yet have some power of regulation by the Government. There is no one quarreling with anybody pertaining to regulation. I would be willing to support any bill that will give you all the protection you want so far as traffic in illegal liquor is concerned.

If you would take this action on beer, you would put this country at rest; you would bring happiness to every home, and you would put millions of people to work. The legalization of beer would make a new industry in the United States; it would bring to this industry new capital—capital that is being hidden in almost every corner of this country. We talk about hoarding. Sometimes I do not blame people for hoarding, because there is not a bank which seems to be safe. In the last few years many have taken out their money, and they have done so because it seems you are not safe anywhere in dealing with the banks the way conditions are to-day.

Now, the population in Great Britain is approximately one-third of that of the United States. So you can well see that if you base it upon the figures I have indicated—1,611,000 people usefully employed and with the population of Great Britain approximately one-third of that of the United States—we can supply our own statistics as to how the same situation would affect the people of this country. In Great Britain approximately one person out of every six finds employment in connection with the brewing of beer in that country. In France and Germany, by reason of the numerous sidewalk restaurants, gardens, cabarets, and music halls, the ratio is substantially greater.

We must not forget that in addition to the persons directly employed in the brewing of beer there are others who are vitally affected, such as coal miners, railroads, farmers, contractors, truck drivers, glass workers, bottle manufacturers, people engaged in the cork industry, and many other industries too numerous to mention, particularly those engaged in the real-estate business.

Mr. McCORMACK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DICKSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. McCORMACK. May I also suggest that the intensive use of machinery has resulted in the displacement of at least 2,000,000 of our workers; and in order to assure them of employment, even in normal times, we have got to have some new industry to reabsorb them, and the creation of this new industry would be of great importance in that respect.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. The gentleman is correct, and he has made a very clear statement in his minority views. As a matter of fact, in order to bring the situation clearly to the attention of the committee I have procured some official figures which show as follows:

Home brew, which literally floods this country, has a surprisingly low alcoholic content-2.12 to 3 per cent by volume. It is generally believed that by reason of its sudden "kick" it has a strong percentage of alcohol, but this is not the case—it is the ether and glycerin, unable to escape from the bottle, which hits the brain and provides the mistaken idea of strong alcoholic reaction. Just how good is it for this Nation to have millions of "etherized brains"?

Home brew shows 95 bacteria to the 1,000, while brewery beer shows about 3 to the 1,000. The kidneys can throw off this excess of bacteria just so long and then the health of millions of people becomes impaired. This alone is a very serious matter.

Gentlemen, consider the tremendous quantity of foodstuffs in the form of sandwiches and other edibles which would be consumed incident to the use of this beverage. The brewing of beer entails, as a natural consequence, the raising of hops, barley, and other cereals which the farmer will be able to raise in large quantities at a profit to himself and with great benefit to the community and to the country at large. It is an oversupply of farm products which has compelled this House from time to time to pass legislation for the relief of the farmer, and which has made it necessary for the Government to incur tremendous debts to take the surplus production off the hands of the farmer.

The benefits which our Government will derive by the elimination of appropriations to the farmers for their relief will certainly be beneficial to the Treasury and beneficial to the country.

I know the farmer does not want that kind of relief. I voted, so did many of my colleagues from New York, to support you on the farm proposition. We are still willing to vote to support you on any proposition that will help the farmer, but, gentlemen, the farmer does not want that kind of charity. He wants to go on his own. He wants to produce the crops that he toils for every day. He wants to have a market, he wants to be independent, he wants to sell his crop and get his money.

I say that this is enough argument and sufficient ground for the Members of this House to give the matter serious consideration. Let us not appropriate money for relief, but let us enable our people to stand on their own feet.

As I pointed out a moment ago, I believe that the example given by this House in exhibiting a spirit of nonpartisanship in passing legislation which will benefit such a large part of our country should be encouraged in every way. From time to time there have been voices raised criticizing some features of our proposed tax legislation, and there is quite a difference of opinion as to which part of our population should be compelled to bear the larger burden of this new revenue legislation which is so necessary in order to balance our Budget. We all agree, however, that the sanest way of approaching this problem would be by way of spreading the tax burden in such a way as not to lay an undue burden upon any particular portion of the people of this country, and spread it as evenly as possible. I say that if you will give us beer back, with a tax of $12 a barrel, the burden will be spread as evenly as possible; and, furthermore, the revenue can be easily checked up, because we collect it at the source, and the Government could have in its Treasury within 30 days after the bill is passed the revenue from this industry for the purpose of the functions of Government.

As I stated at the outset of my remarks, at the present time I am concerned merely with the revenue features of the proposed legislation, but I can not lose sight of the fact that in addition to its productiveness as a revenue measure the legislation itself will certainly be beneficial to the country from the standpoint of preventing bootlegging.

It was never the intention of the framers of the eighteenth amendment, which is now a part of our Constitution, that people should be prevented from obtaining for their use nonintoxicating beverages, and it requires a great deal of imagination and a lot of perversion of fact to reach the conclusion that beer is an intoxicating beverage.

It is regrettable that just because the saloon was for many years a standing reproach to our American civilization, particularly in great cities, that Congress saw fit to combat the evil of the saloon with the greater evil of total prohibition.

I hold no brief for the person who is a habitual drunkard or for one who would spend his life's earnings in drinking hard liquor. I believe the record of this country prior to the eighteenth amendment did not show as much flouting of the law and disrespect for its enforcement as has been engendered by that unhappy experiment to control our personal habits by legislation.

But aside from the eighteenth amendment, I do not believe that any law can control this body if it sees fit to amend its own statute, known as the Volstead Act, as heretofore pointed out, which placed restrictions upon the sale of beverages far beyond and above those which were intended by the eighteenth amendment.

The Volstead Act declared every beverage containing more than one-half of 1 per cent of alcohol as intoxicating and paid no attention to the known facts which showed that beverages like beer were not, in fact, intoxicating. I do not believe anyone can point to any statistics which will sustain the theory that beer is intoxicating. Hard liquors, of course, cause intoxication, and their use is expressly prohibited by the Constitution. Beer, on the other hand, has only a mild alcoholic content and under proper safeguards can be safely manufactured, sold, and distributed without harm to anyone who wishes to use it.

I have been unable to obtain statistics on the sale and consumption of beer in other countries except Great Britain, but I have sufficient information as to the consumption of beer in this country prior to its prohibition.

The production of beer in the United States in 1914, which is the last year prior to the war-time restrictions in the production of beer, was 66,189,473 barrels. On the basis of the population of to-day, the production would amount to approximately 85,000,000 barrels; so that if a tax were placed on the basis of $12 per barrel, the Government would derive a revenue of over $1,000,000,000 per year.

Now, let us stop for a moment and consider how easily we can obtain this additional revenue by the simple expedient of legalizing nonintoxicating beer for sale and consumption in the United States.

From the standpoint of the consumer, near bear can be purchased to-day for $8 per barrel. With $12 taxes added, the cost would then be $20 per barrel. A barrel contains 256 pints, and even if retailed at 15 cents per pint the retail price per barrel would be $38.40, so that the spread between the price charged to the retailer and that charged to the consumer would be approximately $18 per barrel. allowing for a substantial profit to the retailer and yet not burdening the consumer too much.

We all understand, of course, and we have definitely committed ourselves to the elimination of the saloon, that the saloon can not come back under any circumstances. The sale of the beer as contemplated is not to be a sale over the counter in saloons. We propose to distribute our beer directly in containers to the public and will not permit its sale and consumption on the premises except in bona fide restaurants.

Authority to sell nonintoxicating beer would result very speedily in a great increase of transportation in connection with the manufacturing and retailing of the beer; and our railroads, which are at present groaning under a heavy load of moving freight at low rates because of the business depression, would immediately find great stimulation in the transportation of beer. A million men thrown out of employment will be immediately reemployed in this new industry, as I have pointed out. A general revival of business will speedily result in an increase in security values and will lift this country out of its present depressed situation almost magically.

In times like the present it needs a stimulant to bring about confidence in success of business ventures, and the step taken by Congress in legalizing the sale of nonintoxicating beer will be interpreted by the business community as a sign of optimism, and it is just such optimism which is sorely needed as a stimulant to business revival.

Much might be said against a good many provisions of our proposed revenue act, but I do not believe that a word of censure can be uttered against this legislative proposal. Remember, this tax is payable only by those who derive satisfaction from the consumption of nonintoxicating beer. It is not a general burden to be assumed by every inhabitant of this country, as is, for instance, the income tax or the estate tax. It is not even to be compared to the amusement tax, which is imposed again in this proposed revenue act. This is a tax solely payable by the consumer of beer and will only result in a diminution in the drinking of hard liquor.

This legislation will promote temperance, because it will substitute for illicit hard liquor nonintoxicating beer which will be legalized by this act. Many people who now habitually drink hard liquor and pay profits reaching in tremendous sums of money to bootleggers and other violators of law, will turn their attention to the harmless drinking of nonintoxicating light beer, which will result in pleasure to themselves and a revenue to the Government. It is hard liquor which causes drunkenness and which is perhaps responsible for the eighteenth amendment in its sweeping prohibition of all alcoholic beverages whether intoxicating or not.

It was never the intention of the framers of the eighteenth amendment to forbid all beverages which were not in fact intoxicating.

Mr. Chairman, ladies, and gentlemen of the committee, let us wake up on one of the greatest burning questions of time; let us sit at the round table and reason this thing out as statesmen and as Americans. If we do that, we will lift the burden of our present overtaxed people who have been loaded with taxes both by communities, cities, States, and the Government, and who no longer can bear the burdens and keep up with the present times. The proposal that I make before this honorable body is in my opinion-and I think should be in the opinion of every legislator of this great National Government—that we must once for all face the facts and amend our laws in such a way that we may not only relieve the burdens of our people on taxation, but also, I am sure, rid this country of bootleggers, violators of the law, and restore peace, prosperity, and law enforcement.

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. Bachmann].

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. BRIGGS). The gentleman from West Virginia is recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. BACHMANN. Mr. Chairman, I am opposed to the sales-tax provision in this bill. If that provision is retained, as much as I regret to do so, I must vote against the passage of this bill.

We have had a gross sales tax in the State of West Virginia for the last 15 years. It has proven very unsatisfactory. We have not been able to repeal it. We have manufacturing concerns in the State of West Virginia to-day that are and have been losing money; and yet when the end of the year comes around, these concerns must pay the sales tax on their gross business.

If this provision is retained in the bill, and the Federal Government imposes an additional sales tax of 21/4 per cent on the manufacturing concerns of West Virginia, it is believed that it will be necessary to close some of the manufacturing industries in that State.

It is all right to pay a tax to the State and the Government out of the profits made by manufacturers and industries, but they can not pay a tax on their gross business unless they have sufficient money to enable them to carry on. This proposition is a serious one to all manufacturing industries in the State of West Virginia.

It is believed by many that even though the sales tax be just and reasonable in principle, there is still some question whether or not the Federal Government should take that tax away from the individual States, because just as sure as I am standing here to-day, if we adopt the principle of the sales tax as contained in this bill, the Federal Government will never relinquish that tax in your day or mine.

I am familiar with the provisions of the bill providing for the collection of the tax for only two years, but I say to you now, that if we adopt this provision, the Federal Government will always maintain that form of taxation.

Let me read to you a telegram which I received from a prominent manufacturing concern in West Virginia:

West Virginia manufacturers unable to pay additional sales tax. Suggest Congress devote more thought to reducing salaries, commissions, and expenses as all other business and industry has been obliged to do. Further sales-tax burdens will result in stifling initiative and industries in West Virginia.

I have a letter from a prominent citizen in the northern part of my State, in which he says:

If there ever was a damnable, discriminatory class proposal to be inflicted upon a line of industry already grossly overburdened and struggling for very existence, it is this. * * * It is just another scheme to saddle national burdens upon one class, allowing all the rest to escape, and to transfer what the entire Nation should contribute onto the shoulders of producers of certain States. A recently proposition tain States. A rascally proposition.

I have before me an editorial which appeared under date of March 14 in one of the leading newspapers in the State of West Virginia, the Wheeling Intelligencer. It sets forth the condition confronting the people of our country, and I ask unanimous consent that I may insert the editorial in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. BRIGGS). Is there objection? There was no objection. The editorial is as follows:

THE SALES TAX CONFISCATORY

Secretary of the Treasury Mills is certainly an official of a buoyant and airy disposition. Burdens which rest heavily on the ordinary man are disposed of by Mr. Mills as mere bagatelles.

Referring to the proposed 2½ per cent manufacturers' sales tax, Mr. Mills expressed the belief that it is so low that practically no one will feel it.

Either Mr. Mills never conducted a manufacturing operation and employed labor, or his path has been an unusually rosy one. Instead of a 2½ per cent sales tax being negligible it is more accurate to say that it approaches confiscation. If Mr. Mills will take a day off and study the income-tax returns that will be piling into the internal-revenue offices during this week, he will find that the large majority of the manufacturers of the United States did not earn in 1931 a profit of 5 per cent on their sales. He will find that a very large percentage of them earned no

He will find that the average profit of a highly successful manufacturer is barely 10 per cent of the volume of sales.

A proposal under these conditions to exact a 2½ per cent tax means in short a special revenue tax of the most prosperous of 22½ per cent of their profits, and on many of them the complete confiscation of their profits, and on many more the loading of an extra burden on heavy losses already incurred.

Manufacturers in the United States to-day pay an 11 per cent income tax. Add to that in the case of the most prosperous 22 to 25 per cent more, and we have approximately a 35 per cent income tax imposed on manufacturing industries. The manufacturing of the country is the basis of the country's prosperity. The men who work in the mills and factories and produce create the market for the American farmer. The factories employ more than half of our working population. To put a tax burden upon these industries ranging from 35 per cent of the income to 100 per cent of the income would be to create the greatest hindrance to the return of national prosperity.

Why should any man in his senses seek to build a factory and employ labor, take all the chances of accidents and loss, for the purpose of paying 35 per cent of his profits in taxes if he has profits, and the further purpose of pocketing all of his own losses

if he has losses?

In the judgment of this newspaper there are many less objec tionable ways of raising necessary revenues than the saddling of such a burden upon business. An income tax is much more equitable. A luxury tax is far to be preferred. Finally, a reasonable bond issue, repaying to the American people part of the five or six billion dollars they have advanced toward retirement of the public debt in excess of legal requirements, might well be undertaken.

This is a time to assist business by encouraging employment, not to lay upon it a confiscatory tax.

Mr. BACHMANN. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the fact that the Secretary of the Treasury and the members of the Ways and Means Committee have agreed upon a measure which, in their judgment, would balance the Budget. All of those gentlemen have given deep study and consideration to a means of providing revenue. I agree that the Budget ought to be balanced; but if we have to drive manufacturers out of business, if we have to add to the unemployment that already exists, if we have to pay that price for balancing the Budget, then this Government is big enough and rich enough to continue a year longer with an unbalanced Budget. Let us not add to the already distressed conditions of the country. I do not know how many States have a sales tax like that of West Virginia. I tried to find out from the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. HAWLEY], and he said he thought there were five or six. Certainly it can not be doubted that those States that have a sales tax must bear an additional burden if this provision of the bill is maintained.

I have heard comparisons made here on the floor of the House of Representatives as to how satisfactory the tax works in other countries. We are told the sales tax works fine in Canada and in other countries, but they forget that in Canada and in other countries the great bulk of the revenue raised from the sales tax comes from a tax on intoxicating liquors. We have no intoxicating liquors legalized in this country that we can tax. Therefore, to compare the operation of the tax in another country is not a fair comparison as to how a sales tax will work in this country.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. And Australia is broke.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. Will the gentleman yield?
Mr. BACHMANN. Yes.
Mr. DICKSTEIN. What is the amount of money derived from the sales tax in the State of West Virginia?

Mr. BACHMANN. I do not have the figures. I am aware that any Member who is opposed to any of the provisions of this bill ought to have something to offer instead. I do not believe the Federal Government should adopt this form of taxation when the manufacturers and the people of the country have not had an opportunity to study the result of a tax of this kind. If we pass this bill without the sales tax, it provides revenue amounting to $700,000,000. I think we can get along for another year with a deficit of $600,-000,000 without harming anybody.

The people of West Virginia do not favor a sales tax. In my opinion, the situation throughout the country is the same. We will hear from the manufacturing industries of this country just as sure as you gentlemen are sitting here on the floor of this House to-day if we pass this sales tax, because it can not be satisfactory. It is an unjust tax.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from West Virginia has expired.

Mr. ARNOLD. Mr. Chairman, I am directed to yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. Hastings.]

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. Chairman, the bill known as the revenue bill was only reported to the House on Monday last, March 7, 1932. Copies of the report on the bill could not be secured until March 9. There was a night session of the House for the consideration of private bills that night. The bill was taken up for consideration on Thursday, March 10. Some impatience was exhibited by the members of the Ways and Means Committee because those who do not share their views with reference to the bill were not prepared to go on with the debate when the bill was called up for consideration. The bill contains 278 printed pages. The hearings on the bill contain 1,237 pages, and the report has 57 pages.

This revenue bill rewrites the entire Federal statutes covering taxation. No man who is not an expert on tax legislation could possibly familiarize himself with the details of this bill if he were to give his entire time to it for several weeks. Not only is the revenue bill rewritten, but here and there throughout the pending bill are amendments which can not be understood by the average citizen of the country without closely studying the context and without knowing the decisions of the departments and the Board of Tax Appeals where the laws have been construed.

I find no fault with any Member with whom I find myself in disagreement. I accord to everyone the same high purpose, the same patriotic motives, and the same right to express himself upon the questions involved in this bill that I ask for myself.

This bill runs counter to every thought I have had on the subject of taxation. Finding myself in disagreement, I feel constrained in my own behalf, and on behalf of the splendid citizens whom I have the honor to represent, to give voice to the reasons that impel me to vote against the bill.

The report indicates that it is estimated this bill will raise $1,246,000,000 additional revenue. It is urged that chaos will reign if the Budget is not balanced. It is insisted that the best way to balance the Budget lies along the lines of the recommendations carried in this bill.

I can not support the bill for a number of reasons. shall not detain the House as to all the details. I am unalterably opposed to the 21/4 per cent manufacturers' excise or

It is estimated that $595,000,000 will be raised through the sales-tax provision. It was urged in the debate that all of this would not be passed on by the manufacturers to the consumers. It was admitted, however, that most of it would be. In my judgment a very large percentage of the $595,-000,000, or as much as possible, will be pyramided and passed on to the consumers. I do not see how this can be successfully controverted. No one denies that part of it will be passed on to the consumers; and, of course, in time all of it will be, and, in addition, added costs and expenses will increase the amount. It will be passed on to the consumer just as the gasoline tax in every State is paid by him.

You are raising $1,246,000,000, and in this one item alone you are making the great mass of the people of the country bear a disproportionate part of this burden. They are already overtaxed, and they are unable to pay them. The homes of many are being foreclosed from over their Their livestock is being taken away from them, yet in the face of these facts we are asked to place half of the burden of all of these additional taxes upon these people.

Now, everyone knows that the wealthy eat but little more and wear but little more clothes than the average citizen who earns $2,500 per annum or less. If this be true, each citizen as a consumer, regardless of ability to pay, would be taxed practically the same on account of the sales tax.

The second item contained in the report of the committee has reference to the amount to be collected from income taxes. It is estimated that from the individual income taxes $112,000,000 additional will be collected and from corporation taxes $21,000,000, or $133,000,000 in all. Yet you take $595,000,000 from the consuming masses of the plain people of the country and only $133,000,000 additional from the wealthy of the country.

I do not have the exact figures for 1931 before me; but the Treasury advises that in 1930, 6,000 individuals paid taxes on incomes of more than $100,000, and that 149 paid on incomes of $1,000,000 or more. In 1929, 15,000 paid on incomes of $100,000 or more, and 513 paid on incomes of $1,000,000 and over.

This bill lowers the exemption on single persons from $1,500 to $1,000 and on the heads of families from $3,500 to $2,500, and graduates the tax on incomes up to only $100,000. I have never known why we should stop at $100,000. If a graduated income tax is right in principle, why should we not graduate the rate to a figure greater than $100,000. No one has ever discussed it or satisfactorily explained it. No one can explain it.

In 1929, of the 513 persons who reported incomes of $1,000,000 or more, some had incomes of $10,000,000, yet the individual who had an income of this amount paid no higher rate than the person who had an income of only $100,000.

I oppose this bill for the reason that the rate is not graduated in the higher brackets so as to exact a greater share from those best able to pay. I have no prejudice against wealth provided it is honestly acquired and legitimately used, but I have always maintained that wealth should bear its fair proportion of the burden of Government, local, State, and Federal.

It is now estimated that 4 per cent of the population of our country own 80 per cent of the wealth of the Nation. They are not willing to share their proportionate part of the tax burden of the Government.

If one person were to own all of the land in a single township or a county, he would be required to pay the ad valorem taxes on all of his holdings. The same should be true of wealth. The more the individual makes and the greater his returns, the more he should contribute to the expenses of government. I do not think there is any answer to this argument.

If an opportunity is afforded, I am going to vote for an increase on income taxes in the higher brackets over $100,000.

This bill protects those in the millionaire class in the higher brackets from paying a higher graduated rate and passes on the amount estimated to be collected through a sales tax of $595,000,000, with costs and expenses added, to the consuming public. To the agricultural class this means to relieve wealth of its fair proportionate share of Government and places it upon the farmers who received around 25 cents per bushel for wheat at harvest time, 12 to 15 cents for oats, 18 cents for corn, 1½ cents per pound for cotton, and for all other farm products, including livestock, less than the cost of production.

The bill under consideration provides for the collection of a tax of 10 per cent on admissions to theaters of 25 cents and over, and it is expected to collect $90,000,000 under this provision. I do not object so much to the collection of an admission tax from the larger theaters where higher admissions are charged; but I believe that the movies, which are the amusement places of the great middle class of the people, should be exempt from taxation, and for that reason will oppose this provision and vote to strike it out of the bill, or amend it in accordance with this suggestion.

I do not favor the provision taxing telegraph, telephone, and radio messages, although this provision is not so objectionable as other provisions of the bill.

A tax of $5,000,000 is to be collected by a tax of 1 cent per gallon on crude-oil imports, and on imported gasoline, oil, and fuel oil.

The oil industry is greatly depressed. The price of oil has fluctuated from $1.45 per barrel to 15 cents per barrel in August of 1931. Thousands of the oil workers are out of employment.

I have urged a tariff of $1 per barrel on imported oil and 50 per cent of the value of refined products imported for the protection of the domestic-oil producers of this country. This I was unable to get during the last session of Congress. I joined with others in urging that an excise tax of 2 cents per gallon on imported crude petroleum and 4 cents per gallon on imported gasoline and other derivatives be levied, but instead an excise tax of only 1 cent per gallon is imposed. This is not sufficient. I fear it will have but little appreciable effect upon the domestic price of crude petroleum.

Such a slight concession to the oil industry, reported by the Treasury Department to raise no revenue, and by the Ways and Means Committee of the House to protect the oil fraternity to the amount of only $5,000,000, is not sufficient to justify a vote to change the fiscal policy of our country and impose a tax burden of $595,000,000, pyramided with costs and other expenses, upon the consuming masses of the country.

The Tariff Commission found that the difference in the cost of production of oil in this country and in Venezuela was $1.03 per barrel. An excise tax of 1 cent per gallon will shut out but little imported oil from that country. The four large companies can afford to import oil and can do it cheaper, after paying the excise tax of 1 cent per gallon, than oil can be delivered from the mid-continent field through pipe lines to the eastern seaboard. Let no one be deceived. While we welcome the provision it is a disappointment in that it does not go far enough to afford adequate relief to the oil industry. This is only half a loaf but it is better than no bread.

Now, everybody knows that by incorporating a manufacturers' tax in this bill it means we are embarking upon a policy different from any method of taxation we have ever had before in this country. Many are advocating a general sales tax. This, in my judgment, is the first step in that direction. It is urged that this tax is only temporary. My reply is that once made a part of our fiscal policy it is much easier to get it retained and extended and made permanent law than to get it enacted originally. Such was the boast of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Watson]. I am opposed to it because, as I have already pointed out, it passes the burden on to the ultimate consumer.

Those who advocate the sales tax hope to substitute it for the income tax, and thereby shift the entire tax burden from the wealthy and those best able to pay to the consuming masses of the country.

It is urged that there are liberal exemptions from the imposition of the manufacturers' sales tax as to farm products. This will not materially help the great agricultural class because the farmer raises his own food and feed for his work stock. Hence he will not be affected to any considerable extent by the exemption. Of course I favor the exemption of farm products in the interest of the consuming masses who must purchase them.

The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. Huddleston] makes an adroit speech but one that will not bear analysis. He insists there are two questions to be met:

First, that we should raise sufficient revenue to balance the Budget; then ho places the anticipated deficit far in excess of the revenue estimated to be raised by the pending bill.

The second question he urges is as to the best way to go about raising the money. On the second question his speech is a distinct disappointment.

Discussing the sales-tax provision, which is estimated to raise $595,000,000 of revenue to balance the Budget, he says:

Taxes are bad, and a sales tax is particularly bad. It is levied upon poverty and not upon wealth. It is levied upon a man's needs and not upon his ability to pay. It is levied upon what men may consume and not according to the benefits which are derived from government. They violate every fundamental of taxation.

Yet he offers no substitute for this provision that taxes poverty, that is levied upon a man's needs and not upon his ability to pay, upon what men consume and not upon the benefits derived from government, and that "violates every fundamental of taxation."

How one can vote for a provision after such a severe condemnation is not made clear by the remainder of the speech.

He resorts to the strategy of many clever lawyers in making their pleas to the jury. When they find themselves unable to discuss the merits of their case they do one of two things: Either they attempt to lead the minds of the jury away from the condemning facts or heap a tirade of abuse or ridicule upon the opposing witnesses in an attempt to discredit them.

The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. Huddleston] did both. He first attempted to lead the minds of the Members of the House away from the sales-tax provision through reference to other legislation previously enacted and which he criticized as not being meritorious, including the amount appropriated for the revolving fund for the use of the Farm Board.

Assuming his criticism is just, how could that justify a vote in support of a sales-tax provision that taxes poverty, levies upon what men consume and not upon benefits of government, and, finally, that "violates every fundamental of taxation"?

He then refers to Members who favor legislation for the benefit of the ex-service men. How does that justify voting to tax poverty through a provision fundamentally unsound?

He resorts to ridicule, to the delight of the Members of the House, to take the minds of the Members away from the odious, indefensible sales-tax provision, that is a tax upon poverty, and upon the consuming masses, not levied in accordance with the benefits received, and that "violates every fundamental of taxation."

I can not vote for a provision that violates every fundamental of taxation. I must search for some other source of taxation more equitable, more defensible, and not a tax upon poverty, where the entire burden does not fall upon the consuming masses but is distributed among those better able to pay and in proportion to the benefits received.

I am always delighted with oratory. I enjoy ridicule, but before I lay the heavy hand of the taxgatherer upon the consuming masses whom I am privileged to represent, before I agree to violate every fundamental of taxation, I am not content with criticism of the legislation as not justified nor in ridiculing the lack of courage of Members with whom I have served for years, but I must carefully search for other sources of taxation. I must try to find some method that does not "violate every principle of taxation" before I open the door to the taxgatherer and permit him to place his heavy hand upon the poor and oppressed people of my district and State.

Those who oppose the bill are challenged to offer a substitute to balance the Budget in lieu of the methods proposed in the pending bill.

In reply, permit me to say in the first place that a revenue bill of such magnitude can not be safely framed by amendment on the floor of the House; and if the vital provision, the sales tax, that raises a very large part of the revenue, is eliminated by amendment, then the bill should be recommitted to the Committee on Ways and Means, with directions to the committee, with the assistance of its experts, to frame and report another bill in accordance with the general instructions of the House. The committee has the advantage of the hearings, has the assistance of experts, and of course the members of the committee are better able to estimate how much revenue alternative methods of taxation would raise.

If an amount approximately sufficient to balance the Budget can be secured from an income tax in the higher brackets, and from estate taxes, then the recommitting of the bill might not be necessary.

As suggestions to the House and to the committee, permit me to say I would sharply reduce all the expenditures of our Government. Our expenditures for the fiscal year 1931 aggregated $5,071,711,693.56. Our appropriations and estimated expenditures for the current year are $5,178,-524,967.95. The Committee on Appropriations has sharply reduced the appropriation bills so far as reported for 1933. In my judgment, aside from the interest on the public debt, the requirements of the sinking fund, and the appropriations for the Postal Service and Veterans' Administration, which is to cover pensions, disability compensation for exservice men, hospitals, and other like expenditures, a careful study by a courageous subcommittee would find a way of reducing the balance of our expenditures by at least 25 per cent without in any way impairing the efficiency of any department or necessary bureau or commission.

I have before me the appropriations for the fiscal year 1887 under Cleveland. They amounted to $383,245,913.54. During the fiscal year 1891, under President Harrison, our Federal expenditures were $463,383,480.46. The expenditures for the fiscal year 1895, under Cleveland's second administration, were $492,477,759.97. Advancing four years more to the fiscal year 1899, under McKinley, our expenditures increased to $892,656,775.65. Whenever a commission is authorized or bureau created it immediately begins to expand and year after year additional appropriations are required.

The best way to economize is to reduce expenditures. This can and should be done. Every individual and every family pursues this policy. Whenever it is found that the individual or family does not have sufficient money to meet current expenses they are reduced and every effort is made to live within the income. We should apply a surgeon's knife to these appropriations. I would reduce all salaries in the higher brackets, including heads of bureaus, Cabinet officers, and Members of Congress.

Another suggestion as to where additional revenue may be raised is the estate tax. The present bill only doubles the old rates. Up to $50,000 the rate is 2 per cent. Up to $100,000 it is only 4 per cent, and the rate does not go to 40 per cent except as to incomes of $10,000,000 and over.

It is estimated that a sufficient amount could be secured through an estate tax if the same rates were used as are provided for income taxes.

In my judgment nothing is fairer than an estate tax, and nothing will do more to redistribute the wealth now held by a few persons than a higher estate tax. If higher rates were levied there would be no necessity for a sales tax and the Budget could be balanced without the sales tax.

In December we extended over a period of 10 years the payment of $252,000,000 interest on our foreign obligations. We are asked now to transfer this amount in the form of a manufacturers' sales tax upon the great masses of the overburdened people of our country. I can not do it. In all of our foreign-debt adjustments we have remitted $10,705,618,006.90. The total amount remitted or canceled must be borne by the taxpayers of our country. We are now reaping the whirlwind of our own folly. I voted against all of these settlements.

It is urged that chaos will reign if we do not balance our Budget. This is simply a statement. We are passing through a most serious economic depression. Under similar circumstances every individual and every head of a family finds it necessary to borrow money to tide them over temporarily. First, we should reduce our expenditures. We should cut down our appropriations; and if it be found that our revenues do not meet all the reduced requirements of our Government, I do not agree that chaos would reign if we borrowed money to tide us over temporarily.

In the first place, I shall support an amendment to eliminate the manufacturers' tax provision. I shall vote to cut out the admission tax of 10 per cent on admissions to movies where the charge is 40 cents or less. I do not favor the tax on telephone and telegraph and radio messages and will vote to cut that out; and, as I have already indicated, I favor increasing the income tax in the higher brackets so as to exact a greater share from those who are immensely wealthy. I believe that with the consolidation of Government activities, the abolishment of bureaus not needed, and with the reduction of governmental expenditures, our Budget can be balanced without a sales tax; and if we find that we can not balance the Budget, I favor continuing the temporary issuance of bonds to carry us over the period of depression. I would much prefer that plan than to have our fiscal policy changed and this additional burden of taxation placed upon the great mass of people of the country who are now paying more than their fair share by reason of the tariff. During the calendar year of 1931 the total amount collected through tariff duties was reduced to $353,-970,000, but in ordinary years it approaches $600,000,000.

Everyone knows that the added cost of tariff duties is passed on and paid by the consuming public. Through the tariff the average citizen pays more than his proportionate part of the burden of government. This bill adds $595,000,-000 as an additional burden. Action upon this measure should have been withheld for at least a month so as to afford time to study and analyze every detail of its complicated provisions. If the reaction of the people throughout the country could be secured. I have no doubt that the salestax provision would be overwhelmingly defeated.

I have only called attention to a few of the more apparent objections. I can not vote for this bill because it relieves wealth of its fair share of the burden of government and places it upon the consuming masses.

No one, in my judgment, can justify a vote to spread over and pass on to the consuming masses, already overburdened and depressed, the tax burden that should rightfully be borne by those who have accumulated vast fortunes by reason of governmental protection and benefits received, both legislative and administrative. [Applause.]

The following is a list of Federal expenditures since 1887:

Congress	Total appropriation	President
First session Forty-ninth Congress, fiscal year	$383, 245, 913. 54	Cleveland
1887. Second session Forty-ninth Congress, fiscal year	365, 430, 333. 41	Da
1888. First session Fiftieth Congress, fiscal year 1839 Second session Fiftieth Congress, fiscal year 1830 First session Fifty-first Congress, fiscal year 1891. Second session Fifty-first Congress, fiscal year	422, 867, 168. 11 395, 430, 284. 26 463, 383, 480. 46 524, 381, 815. 60	Do. Do. Harrison, Do.
1892. First session Fifty-second Congress, fiscal year	507, 376, 397, 53	Do.
1893. Second session Fifty-second Congress, fiscal year	519, 535, 293, 31	Da
1894. First and second sessions Fifty-third Congress,	492, 477, 759. 97	Cleveland fiscal year 1895. Third session Fifty-third Congress, fiscal year	496, 982, 585. 01	Da
1896. First session Fifty-fourth Congress, fiscal year	515, 852, 380. 27	Do.
1897. Second session Fifty-fourth Congress and first session Fifty-fifth Congress, fiscal year 1898. Second session Fifty-fifth Congress, fiscal year	528, 735, 878. 33 892, 656, 775. 65	McKinley Do.
1899. Third session Fifty-fifth Congress, fiscal year	698, 912, 982. 83	Do.
1900. First session Fifty-sixth Congress, fiscal year	705, 653, 298. 01	Do.
1901. Second session Fifty-sixth Congress, fiscal year	730, 241, 862. 51	Do.
1902. First session Fifty-seventh Congress, fiscal year	801, 682, 773. 42	Roosevelt
1903. Second session Fifty-seventh Congress, fiscal year	752, 741, 659. 25	Do
1904. First and second sessions Fifty-eighth Congress,	781, 288, 214. 95	Do fiscal year 1905. Third session Fifty-eighth Congress, fiscal year	818, 191, 283. 26	Do.
1906. First session Fifty-ninth Congress, fiscal year 1907. Second session Fifty ninth Congress, fiscal year	881, 953, 644. 09 919, 163, 823. 18	Do. Do.
1908. First session Sixtieth Congress, fiscal year 1909 Second session Sixtieth Congress, fiscal year 1910. First and second sessions Sixty-first Congress,	1, 006, 431, 726, 96 1, 044, 433, 622, 64 1, 039, 550, 617, 01	Do. Do. Taft.
fiscal year 1911. Third session Sixty-first Congress, fiscal year	1, 022, 759, 948. 52	Do.
1912. First and second sessions Sixty-second Congress,	1, 021, 349, 990. 63	Do.
fiscal year 1913. Third session Sixty-second Congress, fiscal year	1, 098, 602, 065. 65	Da 1914. First and second sessions Sixty-third Congress,	1, 122, 471, 919. 12	Wilson.
fiscal year 1915. Third session Sixty-third Congress, fiscal year	1, 114, 490, 704. 09	Do.
1916. First session Sixty-fourth Congress, fiscal year	1, 628, 411, 644. 81	Do.
1917. Second session Sixty-fourth Congress and first session Sixty-fifth Congress, fiscal year 1918.	18, 881, 940, 243. 79	Do.
Second session Sixty-fifth Congress, fiscal year	27, 065, 148, 933. 02	Do.
1919. Third session Sixty-fifth Congress and first session Sixty-sixth Congress, fiscal year 1920.	6, 454, 596, 649. 56	Do.
Second session Sixty-sixth Congress, fiscal year 1921	4, 780, 829, 510. 35	Do.
Third session Sixty-sixth Congress and first session Sixty-seventh Congress to July 12, 1921, fiscal year 1922.	3, 909, 282, 209. 46	Do. Harding.
First session Sixty-seventh Congress, from July 13, 1921, and second session Sixty-seventh Con- gress to July 1, 1922, fiscal year 1923.	4, 248, 140, 569. 99	Do.
Second session Sixty-seventh Congress from July 2, 1922, and third and fourth sessions of the Sixty-seventh Congress, fiscal year 1924.	4, 092, 544, 312, 04	Do.
First session Sixty-eighth Congress, fiscal year 1925.	3, 748, 651, 750. 35	Coolidge.
Second session Sixty-eighth Congress, fiscal year 1926.	4, 151, 682, 049. 91	Do.
First session Sixty-ninth Congress, fiscal year 1927. Second session Sixty-ninth Congress, fiscal year 1928.	4, 211, 011, 352. 58	Do. Do.
First session Seventieth Congress, fiscal year 1929 Second session Seventieth Congress, fiscal year 1930.		Do. Do.

Congress	Total appropriati	President
First and second sessions Seventy-first Congress,	5, 071, 711, 693. 56	Hoover.
fiscal year 1931. Third session Seventy-first Congress, fiscal year 1932.	5, 178, 524, 967. 95	Do.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield one minute to the gentleman from New York [Mr. LAGUARDIA].

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, the question of the position of organized labor toward the sales-tax provision has been raised several times in the course of this discussion. I would like to announce to the House that Mr. William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, has issued a statement, which will be published to-morrow morning, informing the American people that organized labor is unalterably opposed to a sales tax as an oppressive and unfair additional burden to the wage earners of this country, and he calls upon the friends of labor to do everything within their power to defeat the sales-tax provision of this bill. [Applause.]

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. BANKHEAD, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill (H. R. 10236) to provide revenue, equalize taxation, and for other purposes, and had come to no resolution thereon.

PROHIBITION

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, yesterday 187 votes were cast in this House in favor of discharging the Committee on the Judiciary from further consideration of H. J. Res. 208, to submit to the people the question of modifying the eighteenth amendment.

An analysis of that vote shows that those 187 Members represent over 52,000,000 people of the United States. In this stupendous total there is not included the representation of the Member at large from Illinois [Mr. DIETERICH], nor, of course, there is not included the representation of three admittedly wet Members who were unavoidably absent, one in Virginia, one in Kentucky, and one in New Hampshire.

The following analysis is worth studying:

States	Districts	Population
Alabama	1 out of 10	247, 753
Arizona	1	435, 573
California	7 out of 11	1, 849, 226
Connecticut.	5	1, 606, 903
Illinois	16 out of 25	4, 521, 384
Indiana	5 out of 13	1, 398, 981
Iowa	1 out of 11	211, 359
Kentucky	1 out of 11	197, 604
Louisiana	4 out of 8	882, 715
	5 out of 6	1, 437, 868
	13 out of 16	3, 085, 947
	9 out of 13	2, 772, 076
Michigan
Minnesota	5 out of 10	1, 190, 321
Missouri	5 out of 16	1, 402, 172
Montana	1 out of 2	211, 918
Nebraska.	1 out of 6	226, 074
Nevada	1	91, 059
New Jersey	12	4, 041, 334
New Mexico	1	423, 317
New York	32 out of 43	10, 020, 093
North Carolina	1 out of 10	408, 139
Ohio.	13 out of 22	3, 319, 168
Oregon	1 out of 3	338, 241
Pennsylvania	18 out of 36	4, 721, 873
Rhode Island	3	687, 497
South Carolina	1 out of 7	198, 03
South Dakota	1 out of 3	251, 40
Tennessee	1 out of 10	223, 218
Texas	3 out of 18	820, 314
	3 out of 10	641, 80
Virginia
Washington	3 out of 5 2 out of 6	919, 430 549, 538
West Virginia.
Wisconsin	9 out of 11	2, 481, 98
Wyoming	1	225, 56
Total	1 186 2435	52, 039, 943

&lt;sup>1</sup> 1 district in Illinois at large not counted. <sup>2</sup>Total House Membership.

Another interesting analysis of this vote by the New York Times divides these 187 votes as follows:

	Republican	Democrat
East South. Middle West Far West	47 0 39 11	33 22 29 3
Total	97	90

Against the proposition the dry vote is analyzed as follows:

product the man of the stiffer of the season	Republican	Democrat
East South Middle West Far West	35 6 57 14	1 89 23 1
Total	112	114

Wet votes were cast by a majority of the Representatives of 18 States.

The drys were in the majority in 26 states.

In four States the vote was evenly divided.

In only 14 States were no wet votes cast, and wet Members from 2 of these States were unavoidably absent.

Such a result surely portends the future—the certain repeal or modification of the eighteenth amendment.

ABOLISHMENT OF USELESS OFFICES

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks in the Record and to include a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Mills.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Speaker, in furtherance of the spirit of cooperation between the House and the administration, looking toward effecting major economies, Ogden L. Mills, Secretary of the Treasury, has given his consent to the abolishment of 22 presidential offices under the department of which he is the head. These offices include 15 appraisers of customs and 7 surveyors of customs, and the salaries that are to be cut off range from $3,200 to $9,000 per annum. The total saving to be accomplished by the abolishment of these particular offices is $111,000 per annum.

Secretary Mills's willingness that these offices shall be abolished should greatly improve the chances of this economy program being carried through to a successful eventuality. In former Congresses moves have been made in that direction and legislation has been brought in, but the friends of the incumbent officeholders have always combined and prevented favorable action. This year the Appropriations Committee has brought in legislation to separate these unnecessary officeholders from the service, and it has passed the House. The stamp of approval given to the legislation by Secretary Mills should go a long way toward overcoming opposition in the Senate.

OFFICES DECLARED USELESS

These 22 presidential offices have been regarded as among the most luscious plums in the public service. As the offices are absolutely useless, there are no duties attached except of the most nominal character. In the entire Government service there are no more desirable sinecures than these, and none that are more sought after as political rewards. Every one of them should have been abolished long ago, but political pull has always prevented, and the taxpayers have had to keep on supporting these officials who have nothing to do but draw their salaries.

Secretary Mills's consent that the offices shall be wiped out is given in a letter in reply to a communication I sent to him. This correspondence, which will be of interest to those watching the economy program, is as follows:

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS, February 20, 1932.

Hon. OGDEN L. MILLS,

Secretary of the Treasury, Washington.

Dear Mr. Secretary: No one appreciates more than I do your sincere and patriotic interest in holding appropriations to the minimum, to the end that unnecessary taxes shall not be imposed and the Budget may be balanced. In a spirit of cooperation I am coming to you for information.

I will be obliged if you will send to me a list of surveyors of customs, showing their stations and the amount of duties collected at their respective ports. Also, I would like to have the same information in regard to comptrollers and appraisers of customs

I need not remind you of the urgent demands that are made upon us for economies in the Federal service, and I would appreciate it very much if you would give me your candid opinion as to whether these positions (surveyors, comptrollers, and appraisers of customs) could be abolished. I know that various administrations of both political parties have made efforts in the past to abolish these positions, and it seems to me that if there is no need for them they should be abolished now when it is so necessary to conserve national finances.

sary to conserve national finances.

I assure you that I am interested in economies and would like to have your opinion as to the necessity of maintaining surveyors at various ports in the United States while no such offices exist at other ports where the collections are much larger. For instance, at Portland, Me., where, I understand, the customs collections amount to approximately $160,000 a year, there is a surveyor of customs; while at Galveston, where customs receipts amount to $5,000,000 or $6,000,000 a year, no surveyor's office exists. I might multiply illustrations of this nature, but do not believe it is necessary to prove the point I am seeking to make.

If you will kindly send to me soon your opinion on the matters above referred to, I will be grateful.

Very sincerely yours,

Very sincerely yours,

Louis Ludlow.

Secretary Mills's reply is as follows:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT. Washington, March 5, 1932.

Hon. Louis Luplow.

Hon. Louis Ludlow,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

My Dear Mr. Ludlow: I have your letter of February 20, 1932, relative to the proposal to abolish the offices of surveyors, comptrollers, and appraisers of merchandise in the Customs Service.

There are practically 300 ports of entry, and surveyors and comptrollers are appointed by the President at only 7 of these ports. While there are appraisers at practically all of the 300 ports only 16 of them are presidential appointees. The others are designated and appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury, but have all of the authority of an appraiser appointed by the President.

In the interest of economy and in cooperation with the Congress, I see no objection to the elimination of the presidential offices of surveyors and appraisers, except the appraiser at the port of New York.

off New York.

The situation with respect to comptrollers is quite different. The office of comptroller of customs, formerly known as naval officer, has existed since the foundation of the Government. He is a presidential appointee the same as the collector of customs, and presidential appointee the same as the collector of customs, and acts entirely separate and independent of the collector. The law requires that he shall verify all assessments of duties and allowances of drawbacks made by collectors, and in case of disagreement between him and the collector he shall report the facts to the Secretary of the Treasury for his decision. He is also required by law to examine the collector's accounts of receipts and disbursements of money and receipts and disposition of merchandise, and certify the same to the Secretary of the Treasury for transmission to the General Accounting Office.

There is a complete examination of every transaction by the collector and the comptroller, each independent of the other. It collector and the comptroller, each independent of the other. It seems proper that the officer whose duty it is to review and revise the collector's account should not be of less rank than the collector himself. Differences necessarily arise and both officials should have equal standing. I think, therefore, that there are sound, practical reasons for retaining comptrollers of customs as presidential appointees.

I assure you of my desire to account the content of the

I assure you of my desire to cooperate in every way in reducing the expenditures wherever it may be done without injury to the service.

Very truly yours,

OGDEN L. MILLS, Secretary of the Treasury.

The presidential offices which it is believed will be wiped out at one stroke with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury are as follows:

Appraisers of merchandise-Philadelphia, Pa., Boston, Mass., $6,000; San Francisco, Calif., $5,600; New Orleans, La., $5,200; Baltimore, $5,000; Chicago, $6,000; Buffalo, N. Y., $4,600; Detroit, Mich., $4,600; Tampa, Fla., $3,800; Cleveland, Ohio, $4,600; Cincinnati, Ohio, $3,800; St. Louis, Mo., $4,600; Portland, Me., $3,800; Pittsburgh, Pa., $4,600; Portland, Oreg., $4,400 ;total saving, $72,200 per Surveyors of customs-New York, N. Y., $9,000; Philadelphia, Pa., $5,600; Boston, Mass., $5,800; San Francisco, Calif., $5,600; New Orleans, La., $4,600; Baltimore, $5,000; Portland, Me., $3,200; total saving, $38,800 per annum. Grand total saving, $111,000 per annum.

In other words, it looks as if the taxpayers will score a victory. Undoubtedly there are many other offices under the Government that may be abolished by the exercise of careful scrutiny and appropriate action. This is a good

TEMPORARY RELIEF OF WATER USERS ON IRRIGATION PROJECTS

Mr. HALL of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I call up Senate bill 3706, for the temporary relief of water users on irrigation projects constructed and operated under the reclamation law, and I ask unanimous consent that the bill be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Mississippi calls up a bill, which the Clerk will report by title.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Mississippi asks unanimous consent that the bill be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole. Is there objection?

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, is this the bill that was under consideration in the House a few days ago?

The SPEAKER. It is.

Mr. MAPES. What is the purpose of bringing it up at this hour of the day?

The SPEAKER. The Chair understood, after talking with some of the gentlemen who are for and against this bill, that if it could be taken up at this time it could be passed in 15 or 20 minutes, since the opponents of the bill had come to some agreement with the gentlemen who favor it. Unless that can be carried out the Chair thinks that in good faith the House should adjourn.

Mr. BANKHEAD. In connection with what the Speaker has stated, it has been represented to the Committee on Rules that this legislation is somewhat emergent and is in the interest of the farmers in these irrigation districts. That is the real reason for expediting the passage of the

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object, I have not been able to be in the Chamber all the afternoon. May I ask whether there has been any statement made on the floor that this bill was to be brought up at this time of the day?

The SPEAKER. No statement was made in the Chamber, but the Chair will say that the minority leader [Mr. SNELL] and others who are interested in the bill, were asked about the advisability of calling it up, and they agreed to it.

Mr. SNELL. If the gentleman will permit, there was no statement made in the House, but I had a message sent to every Republican Member from the telephone office that this bill would be called up at 5 o'clock. I was one of the gentlemen who objected to this bill being taken up the other day; but, as I understand the situation, the gentlemen proposing the legislation are willing to accept amendments that overcome the objections that were made the other day, and the Members who did object have agreed to these amendments.

Mr. MAPES. I would like to say that it seems to me a rather undesirable practice-when we are having general debate on a tax bill and a great many Members of the House have assumed there would be nothing else taken up during the day-to bring up a bill of this importance late in the afternoon, without any notice.

Mr. SIMMONS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MAPES. Yes.

Mr. SIMMONS. Between 2 and 3 o'clock this afternoon I personally told the gentleman's colleague, Mr. MICHENER, that this bill was coming up, he having been very much interested in it.

Mr. MAPES. That is good; but what about the rest of the membership of the House? There are 435 Members of the House, and each one of them has a right to assume that important legislation of this kind will not be brought up so late in the afternoon following general debate all the afternoon on the tax bill.

Mr. SNELL. I took the trouble to send a message to every Republican Member of the House, advising him that this bill would be brought up at this time.

Mr. MAPES. Can the gentleman vouch for the Demo-

Mr. SNELL. I do not know. They can take care of their side themselves.

Mr. LaGUARDIA. It will not take 10 minutes to pass this bill, and it ought to be passed.

The SPEAKER. Let the Chair say to the gentleman from Michigan that if there is any objection to this bill coming up at this time or any suggestion that the Chair is taking advantage of the membership of the House in permitting it to be called up at this time, the Chair will ask the gentleman from Alabama or some other Member to move to adjourn. The Chair, after consulting the minority leader and others, is not going to be put in the attitude of taking advantage of the House in permitting this bill to be called up without

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, in order to bring the matter to a head, I demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama demands the regular order. Is there objection?

Mr. GILCHRIST. Mr. Speaker, I object. The SPEAKER. The Chair lays before the House the following report from the Committee on Enrolled Bills.

Mr. GILCHRIST. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. I would like to know about this bill. I might possibly withdraw my objection.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman is out of order. The regular order was demanded. The gentleman has the right to object, and the gentleman has objected.

ENROLLED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION SIGNED

Mr. PARSONS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills. reported that that committee had examined and found truly enrolled bills and a joint resolution of the House of the following titles, which were thereupon signed by the Speaker:

H. R. 361. An act to provide for the extension of improvements on the west side of Georgia Avenue, north of Princeton Place, in the District of Columbia, and for other pur-

H. R. 5866. An act to authorize the construction of a dam across Des Lacs Lake, N. Dak.;

H.R. 6485. An act to revise the boundary of the Mount McKinley National Park, in the Territory of Alaska, and for other purposes;

H. R. 8235. An act to clarify the application of the contract labor provisions of the immigration laws to instrumental musicians: and

H. J. Res. 182. Joint resolution authorizing an appropriation to defray the expenses of participation by the United States Government in the Second Polar Year Program, August 1, 1932, to August 31, 1933.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to Mr. Larrabee, indefinitely, on account of important business.

SENATE BILL REFERRED

A bill of the Senate of the following title was taken from the Speaker's table and, under the rule, referred as follows: S. 1317. An act for the relief of the State of California; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 10 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until to-morrow, Wednesday, March 16, 1932, at 12 o'clock noon.

COMMITTEE HEARINGS

Mr. RAINEY submitted the following tentative list of committee hearings scheduled for Wednesday, March 16, 1932, as reported to the floor leader by clerks of the several committees:

COMMITTEE ON PENSIONS

(10 a. m.)

Indian War legislation.

COMMITTEE ON INTERSTATE AND FOREIGN COMMERCE

(10 a. m.)

Railroad holding companies (H. R. 9059).

COMMITTEE ON IMMIGRATION AND NATURALIZATION

(10.30 a. m.)

Repeal of certain laws providing that certain aliens who have filed declarations of intention to become citizens of the United States shall be considered citizens for the purpose of service and protection on American ships (H. R. 6710).

Provision for review of the action of consular officers in refusing immigration visas (H. R. 8878).

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS. ETC.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

484. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a report dated March 12, 1932, from the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, on preliminary examination of Shark River, N. J.; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

485. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a report dated March 12, 1932, from the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, on preliminary examination of Tittabawassee River and Chippewa River, Mich, with a view to the control of their floods (H. Doc. No. 273); to the Committee on Flood Control and ordered to be printed, with illustrations.

486. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a ruling of the Comptroller General that in pursuance of section 2 of the Brookhart Act of July 3, 1930, it will be necessary for the War Department, not later than July 1, 1932, to adjust the salaries of employees in the field service to the rates paid for comparable duties in the department at Washington under the reclassification act of 1923; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

487. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting for the consideration of Congress, and without revision, a supplemental estimate of appropriation pertaining to the legislative establishment, Office of Architect of the Capitol, for the fiscal year 1933, in the sum of $16,100 (H. Doc. No. 274); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

488. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting for the consideration of Congress, and without revision, a supplemental estimate of appropriation pertaining to the legislative establishment, Office of Architect of the Capitol, for the fiscal year 1933, in the sum of $2,660 (H. Doc. No. 275); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII.

Mr. LINTHICUM: Committee on Foreign Affairs. H. J. Res. 181. A joint resolution authorizing an appropriation for the expenses of the Sixteenth Session of the International Geological Congress to be held in the United States in 1933; without amendment (Rept. No. 801). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. LEAVITT: Committee on the Public Lands. H. R. 8923. A bill authorizing transfer of an unused portion of the United States Range Livestock Experiment Station, Mont., to the State of Montana for use as a fish cultural station, game reserve, and public recreation ground, and for other purposes; with amendment (Rept. No. 802). Re- 1929; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

ferred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. SWING: Committee on the Public Lands. H. R. 10495. A bill amending an act of Congress approved February 28, 1919 (40 Stat. L. 1206), granting the city of San Diego certain lands in the Cleveland National Forest and the Capitan Grande Indian Reservation for dam and reservoir purposes for the conservation of water, and for other purposes, so as to include additional lands; with amendment (Rept. No. 805). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. HARE: Committee on Insular Affairs. H. R. 7233. A bill to provide for the withdrawal of the sovereignty of the United States over the Philippine Islands and for the recognition of their independence; to provide for notification thereof to foreign governments; to provide for the assumption by the Philippine government of obligations under the treaty with Spain; to define trade and other relations between the United States and the Philippine Islands on the basis of a progressive scale of tariff duties preparatory to complete independence; to provide for the calling of a convention to frame a constitution for the government of the Philippine Islands; to provide for certain mandatory provisions of the proposed constitution; to provide for the submission of the constitution to the Filipino people and its submission to the Congress of the United States for approval; to provide for the adjustment of property rights between the United States and the Philippine Islands; to provide for the acquisition of land by the United States for coaling and naval stations in the Philippine Islands: to continue in force certain statutes until independence has been granted, and for other purposes; with amendment (Rept. No. 806). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII,

Mr. PETTENGILL: Committee on Military Affairs. H. R. 2922. A bill for the relief of Max M. Meyers; with amendment (Rept. No. 803). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. BACON: Committee on Claims. H. R. 5211. A bill for the relief of the heirs of Samuel B. Inman; without amendment (Rept. No. 804). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. BLACK: Committee on Claims. H. R. 6982. A bill for the relief of C. H. Hoogendorn; without amendment (Rept. No. 807). Referred to the Committee of the Whole

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH: A bill (H. R. 10517) for increasing and stabilizing the price level of commodities, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. McCLINTIC of Oklahoma: A bill (H. R. 10518) authorizing repayment of fees erroneously collected from certain homesteaders; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. MAGRADY: A bill (H. R. 10519) providing import duties on coal and coke imported into the United States from foreign countries; to the Committee on Ways and

By Mr. SWING: A bill (H. R. 10520) to authorize retirement promotion of officers of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard in recognition of service in the World War, Spanish-American War, Philippine insurrection, and Boxer rebellion; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. DICKSTEIN: A bill (H. R. 10521) to amend an act entitled "An act making it a felony with penalty for certain aliens to enter the United States of America under certain conditions in violation of law," approved March 4,

By Mr. JONES: A bill (H. R. 10522) authorizing repayment of fees erroneously collected from certain homesteaders; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. DISNEY: A bill (H. R. 10523) to facilitate poor plaintiffs having meritorious causes to sue in the courts of the United States without depositing moneys or security for cost, and relieving their attorneys of any liability for costs; to the Committe on the Judiciary.

By Mr. CELLER: A bill (H. R. 10524) relating to the prescribing of medicinal liquors; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. DISNEY: A bill (H. R. 10525) to aid farmers in obtaining loans from the Federal Farm Loan Board or other governmental agencies; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10526) to amend section 502 of the World War adjusted compensation act, as amended, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10527) to provide payment of adjustedservice credit to sisters, brothers, and estates; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. CAMPBELL of Pennsylvania: A bill (H. R. 10528) for the relief of A. W. Bean and J. A. Killinger; to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10529) for the relief of Samuel Motter; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10530) making Richard F. Mackey eligible to receive the benefits of the civil service retirement act; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

By Mr. CELLER: A bill (H. R. 10531) for the relief of the Isbrandtsen-Moller Co. (Inc.); to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. COLE of Maryland: A bill (H. R. 10532) for the relief of John A. Pearce; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. CRAIL: A bill (H. R.*10533) for the relief of Samuel B. Lewis; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. DISNEY: A bill (H. R. 10534) for the relief of James C. Bearskin; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. FIESINGER: A bill (H. R. 10535) granting an increase of pension to Thelera Robenalt; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10536) extending the benefits of the emergency officers' retirement act to Fred P. Morgan; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10537) granting a pension to Hannah M. Witzler; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HESS: A bill (H. R. 10538) granting an increase of pension to Mary Diker; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HOPKINS: A bill (H. R. 10539) granting a pension to Virginia L. Davis; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HORNOR: A bill (H. R. 10540) for the relief of Marvin Bishop Atkins; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. JOHNSON of Texas: A bill (H. R. 10541) granting a pension to Mary E. Norwood; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. McLEOD: A bill (H. R. 10542) for the relief of John Newman; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. MAY: A bill (H. R. 10543) granting a pension to Samuel S. Miller; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. MOORE of Kentucky: A bill (H. R. 10544) granting a pension to Elzira Lykins; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MOORE of Ohio: A bill (H. R. 10545) granting a pension to Lina A. Langstaff; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. PARKER of New York: A bill (H. R. 10546) granting a pension to Louise Stockwell; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions,

By Mr. PATTERSON: A bill (H. R. 10547) for the relief of Robert B. Ingram; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. PERKINS: A bill (H. R. 10548) granting a pension to Sadie Smith; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. POLK: A bill (H. R. 10549) granting an increase of pension to Charlotte Livengood; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. RAINEY: A bill (H. R. 10550) granting an increase of pension to Olinsker Bradbury; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SELVIG: A bill (H. R. 10551) for the relief of Lyn Lundquist; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. SHOTT: A bill (H. R. 10552) for the relief of P. C. Ballard; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. SWICK: A bill (H. R. 10553) granting an increase of pension to Georgie Y. Powell; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. TREADWAY: A bill (H. R. 10554) granting an increase of pension to Lizzie L. Spicer; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. VESTAL: A bill (H. R. 10555) granting a pension to Roy L. Garr; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. WELCH of California: A bill (H. R. 10556) for the relief of Erney S. Blazer; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. WILLIAMS of Texas: A bill (H. R. 10557) for the relief of Rosa Wortham; to the Committee on Claims.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

4373. By Mr. ANDREWS of New York: Resolution adopted by Group No. 1591 of the Polish National Alliance of the United States of America, urging Congress to provide legislation for the carrying out of the celebration of October 11 as General Pulaski's Memorial Day; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

4374. By Mr. BACON: Petition of 15 residents of Center Moriches and East Moriches, N. Y., opposing the resubmission of the eighteenth amendment; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

4375. By Mr. BLANTON: Petition of the First Methodist Church of Brady, Tex., opposing the repeal of the eighteenth amendment to the Constitution and against resubmission, and asking Texas Congressmen and Senators to vote against resubmission; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

4376. Also, petition of the First Christian Church of Brady, Tex., presented by M. L. Howard, Mrs. W. A. Pinkham, Mrs. A. B. Carrithers, and numerous other members, opposing the repeal of the eighteenth amendment and against resubmitting same, and asking Texas Congressmen and Senators to vote against resubmission; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

4377. Also, petition of the First Baptist Church of Brady, Tex., presented by Rev. Thorwald C. Jensen, of box 807, Brady, Tex., opposing the proposed resubmission of the eighteenth amendment and asking Texas Congressmen and Senators to vote against same; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

4378. Also, petition of the First Presbyterian Church of Brady, Tex., presented by Rev. P. D. Tucker, opposing the proposed resubmission of the eighteenth amendment to the Constitution and asking Texas Congressmen and Senators to vote against same; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

4379. By Mr. BOHN: Petition of citizens of Mancelona, Mich., supporting the prohibition law; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

4380. By Mr. BOYLAN: Letter from the National Alliance of the Theater, New York, N. Y., protesting against the 10 per cent admission tax on theater tickets; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

4381. Also, letter from the Malt-Diastase Co., Brooklyn, N. Y., protesting against the proposed tax on malt sirup and malt extract; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

4382. Also, letter from the National Association of Book Publishers, New York, N. Y., protesting against the proposed excise tax on books; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

4383. Also, letter from Bricklayers Union, Local No. 9, of Brooklyn, N. Y., stating that the above-named organization at its last regular meeting, held Tuesday evening, March 8, 1932, went on record in favor of the 2.75 per cent labor beer bill; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

4384. Also, letter from the Allied Printing Trades Council of Greater New York, New York City, N. Y., favoring House bill 8576; to the Committee on Printing.

5385. Also, letter from Pie Bakeries (Inc.), Brooklyn, N. Y., opposing sales tax on manufactured products; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

5386. Also, letter from Alexander McKaig (Inc.), New York City, N. Y., opposing tax of theater tickets; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

4387. By Mr. HADLEY: Petitions of a number of residents of the second congressional district of the State of Washington, protesting against the proposed compulsory Sunday observance bill; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

4388. By Mr. HAINES: Petition of 102 citizens of Gettysburg, Pa., protesting against any measures looking toward modification of prohibition laws; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

4389. Also, resolution of Col. Richard McAlister Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, Hanover, Pa., favoring the following bills and joint resolutions:

H. R. 8549 to make it a crime to advocate or promote the overthrow or the destruction of the Government of the United States, etc., and enforcement of the provisions of tariff act, 1930, section 307, effective January 1, 1932, prohibiting the importation of goods produced or manufactured in whole or in part by forced labor; S. 37 to prohibit importation of any article or merchandise from Union of Soviet Socialist Republics: House Joint Resolutions 216 and 277, and Senate Joint Resolution 83 further restricting immigration into the United States; and S. 51 to authorize the building up of the United States Navy to the strength permitted by the Washington and London naval treaties; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

4390. By Mr. JOHNSON of Texas: Petition of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Carmichael and 15 other citizens of Blum, Tex., favoring House bill 1 and opposing reduction of benefits to disabled veterans, and favoring repeal of the misconduct clause in the present veterans' legislation; to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

4391. Also, petition of Silas Woodard, route 1, Oakwood, Tex., favoring immediate cash payment of the adjusted-service certificates; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

4392. Also, petition of H. H. Turner, postmaster, Rockdale, Tex., favoring House bill 7718; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

4393. By Mr. JOHNSON of Washington: Petition of sundry citizens of Lewis County, Wash., protesting against compulsory Sunday observance as provided for in Senate bill 1202 and House bill 8092; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

4394. By Mr. KELLY of Pennsylvania: Petition of Associated Societies of McKeesport, Pa., asking for direct vote of the people on the eighteenth amendment; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

4395. By Mr. KLEBERG: Petition of 13 farmers of Bexar County, Tex., protesting any change or modification of the agricultural marketing act; to the Committee on Agriculture.

4396. Also, petition of 88 farmers of Bishop, Nucces County, Tex., protesting any change or modification of the agricultural marketing act; to the Committee on Agriculture.

4397. Also, petition of nine farmers of San Patricio County, Tex., protesting any change or modification of the agricultural marketing act; to the Committee on Agriculture.

4398. Also, petition of 47 farmers of Comal County, Tex., protesting any change or modification of the agricultural marketing act; to the Committee on Agriculture.

4399. Also, petition of 113 farmers of Guadalupe County, Tex., protesting any change or modification of the agricultural marketing act; to the Committee on Agriculture.

4400. By Mr. KENNEDY: Petition of trustees of the American Hospital Association, recommending the facilities offered for the care of injuries offered civilian general hospitals; to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

4401. Also, petition of the Jesuit Educational Association, commending the efforts of the national committee on education by radio; to the Committee on Merchant Marine, Radio, and Fisheries.

4402. By Mr. LINDSAY: Petition of 28 citizens of Brooklyn, N. Y., protesting against the passage of House bill 8092 and Senate bill 1202; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

4403. By Mr. MAGRADY: Resolution adopted by Local Union No. 160, United Mine Workers of America, Shamokin, Pa., favoring the Kelly bill, H. R. 7536; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

4404. Also, resolution adopted by Local Union No. 1781, United Mine Workers of America, Mount Carmel, Pa., favoring the Kelly bill, H. R. 7536; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

4405. Also, resolution submitted by John Zvoncheck, secretary, Local Union No. 2577, United Mine Workers of America, Natalie, Pa., favoring the Kelly bill, H.R. 7536; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

4406. Also, resolution submitted by John C. Lauer, president, and J. C. Rumberger, secretary, Local Union No. 1669, United Mine Workers of America, Bear Valley, Pa., favoring the Kelly bill, H. R. 7536; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

4407. Also, resolution submitted by W. E. Hollister, secretary, Local Union No. 1796, United Mine Workers of America, Mount Carmel, Pa., favoring the Kelly bill, H. R. 7536; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

4408. Also, resolution submitted by C. W. Evans, secretary, Local Union No. 2596, United Mine Workers of America, Shamokin, Pa., favoring the Kelly bill, H. R. 7536; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

4409. Also, resolution adopted by Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Benton, Pa., protesting against resubmission of the eighteenth amendment, and urging support of adequate appropriations for law enforcement and for education in law observance; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

4410. By Mr. MEAD: Petition of Iowa Cooperative Live Stock Shippers Association and other associations, regarding tax on meat and lard; to the Committee on Ways and Means 4411. By Mr. PARKER of Georgia: Petition of citizens of the State of Georgia, protesting against certain phases of proposed tax legislation; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

4412. Also, petition of the Chatham County, Ga., grand jury, Leopold Adler, and Bishop Frederick F. Reese, of Savannah, Ga., and J. E. Purcell, of Atlanta, Ga., urging the enactment of regulatory legislation for busses and trucks engaged in transporting passengers and freight; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

4413. By Mr. PEAVEY: Petition of Group No. 2659 of the Polish National Alliance of Lublin, Wis., seeking the observance of October 11 of each year as General Pulaski's Memorial Day; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

4414. By Mr. RAINEY: Resolution of ways and means committee of the Crawford Business Men's League of Chicago, Ill., petitioning the United States Government to stay out of the Orient; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

4415. By Mr. ROBINSON: Petition of H. Soballe, proprietor, the Eldora Creamery, and signed by many prominent citizens of Eldora, Iowa, opposing the proposed manufacturers' tax on ice cream, based on the statement that it is a dairy product and should be exempt as are other dairy food products; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

4416. By Mr. RUDD: Petition of Romanoff Caviar Co., New York City, favoring the stabilization of prices and the elimination of profiteering; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

4417. Also, petition of Pie Bakeries (Inc.), Newark, N. J., protesting against the proposed sales tax; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

4418. Also, petition of Hotel and Restaurant Employees Alliance, Local 781, Washington, D. C., favoring organizing the House of Representatives restaurant; to the Committee on Accounts.

4419. Also, petition of Bricklayers Union, Local No. 9, of Brooklyn, N. Y., favoring the passage of the 2.75 per cent labor beer bill; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

4420. By Mr. SELVIG: Petition of Keewatin American Legion Post, Keewatin, Minn., favoring immediate cash payment of adjusted-service certificates; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

4421. Also, petition of Alvarado Post, No. 35, Alvarado, Minn., urging payment of bonus bill in full; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

4422. By Mr. SPENCE: Petition of citizens of Pendleton County, Ky.; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

4423. By Mr. SUMMERS of Washington: Petition signed by Emma Chubb and 23 other citizens of the State of Washington, protesting against the enactment of compulsory Sunday observance legislation; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

4424. Also, petition signed by L. T. Hansen and nine other citizens of the State of Washington, protesting against the enactment of compulsory Sunday observance legislation; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

4425. By Mr. SWICK: Petition of Frank Graham and five residents of Kiesters, Butler County, Pa., asking for immediate legislation to pay in full the adjusted-service certificates issued to the veterans of the World War; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

4426. Also, petition of Evelyn Fischer, 332 Hazel Avenue, Butler, and five other residents of Butler and Beaver Counties, Pa., asking for the enactment of immediate legislation for the payment in full of the adjusted-service certificates issued to World War veterans; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

4427. Also, petition of Howard Miller and five other residents of Prospect, Butler County, Pa., asking immediate legislation for the payment in full of the adjusted-service certificates issued to World War veterans; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

4428. Also, petition of John Wade and four residents of Cabot and Sarver, Butler County, Pa., urging the immediate enactment of legislation to pay in full the adjusted-service certificates of World War veterans; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

4429. Also, petition of W. Vane Ireland and six other residents of Butler, Butler County, Pa., urging immediate enactment of legislation to provide for payment in full of the adjusted-service certificates of World War veterans; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

4430. By Mr. SWING: Petition signed by 54 citizens of Gloria Gardens, Calif., protesting against compulsory Sunday observance; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

4431. Also, petition signed by 416 residents of Orange County, Calif., supporting the prohibition law and its enforcement, and against any measure looking toward its modification, resubmission to the States, or repeal; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

4432. By Mr. WEST: Resolution of Coshocton County Pomona Grange, opposing a general sales tax, especially a tax on oil and gasoline; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

SENATE

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 16, 1932

(Legislative day of Monday, March 14, 1932)

The Senate met at 12 o'clock meridian, on the expiration of the recess.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senate will receive a message from the House of Representatives.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE—ENROLLED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLU-TION SIGNED

A message from the House of Representatives by Mr. Haltigan, one of its clerks, announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the following enrolled bills and joint resolution, and they were signed by the Vice President:

H. R. 361. An act to provide for the extension of improvements on the west side of Georgia Avenue, north of Princeton Place, in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes:

H. R. 5866. An act to authorize the construction of a dam across Des Lacs Lake, N. Dak.;

H. R. 6485. An act to revise the boundary of the Mount McKinley National Park, in the Territory of Alaska, and for other purposes:

H. R. 8235. An act to clarify the application of the contract labor provisions of the immigration laws to instrumental musicians; and

H. J. Res. 182. Joint resolution authorizing an appropriation to defray the expenses of participation by the United States Government in the Second Polar Year Program, August 1, 1932, to August 31, 1933.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. BINGHAM obtained the floor.

Mr. FESS. Mr. President, will the Senator from Connecticut yield to enable me to suggest the absence of a quorum?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Connecticut yield for that purpose?

Mr. BINGHAM. I yield.

Mr. FESS. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Couzens	Johnson	Reed
Austin	Dale	Jones	Robinson, Ark.
Bailey	Davis	Kean	Robinson, Ind.
Bankhead	Dickinson	Kendrick	Schall
Barbour	Dill	Keyes	Sheppard
Bingham	Fess	King	Shipstead
Black	Fletcher	Lewis	Smith
Blaine	Frazier	Logan	Smoot
Borah :	George	Long	Stelwer
Bratton	Glass	McGill	Thomas, Idaho
Brookhart	Glenn	McKellar	Thomas, Okla.
Broussard	Goldsborough	McNary	Townsend
Bulkley	Gore	Metcalf	Trammell
Bulow	Hale	Moses	Tydings
Capper	Harrison	Neely	Vandenberg
Caraway	Hatfield	Norbeck	Wagner
Carey	Hawes	Norris	Walcott
Connally	Hayden	Nye	Walsh, Mass.
Coolidge	Hebert	Oddle	Walsh, Mont.
Copeland	Howell	Patterson	Waterman
			WWW. 14

Mr. SHEPPARD. I desire to announce that the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Barkley] and the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. Byrnes] are necessarily detained in their home States on important business.

Mr. BLAINE. I wish to announce that my colleague the senior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. La Follette] is necessarily absent.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I desire to announce that my colleague the senior Senator from Delaware [Mr. Hastings] is unavoidably detained on account of illness. I ask that this announcement may stand for the day.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. I wish to announce the continued illness of my colleague the senior Senator from Indiana [Mr. Watson]. I ask that this announcement may stand for the day.

Mr. GEORGE. My colleague the senior Senator from Georgia [Mr. HARRIS] is still detained from the Senate because of illness. I will let this announcement stand for the day.

Mr. GLASS. I wish to announce that my colleague the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. Swanson] is absent in attendance upon the disarmament conference at Geneva.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty-four Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a resolution adopted by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and indorsed by the Presbyterian Church, the pastor of the Baptist Church, and the pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, all of Blue Springs, Mo., protesting against the proposed resubmission of the eighteenth amendment of the Constitution to the States, and favoring the making of adequate appropriations for law enforcement and education in law observance, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. GEORGE presented the petition of Mrs. Leila B. Lyle and 76 other citizens of Crawfordville, Ga., praying for the maintenance of the prohibition law and its enforcement, and protesting against any measure looking toward its modification or repeal, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. REED presented a resolution adopted by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Mechanicsburg, Pa., protesting against the proposed resubmission of the eighteenth amendment of the Constitution to the States, and favoring the making of adequate appropriations for law enforcement and education in law observance, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. TYDINGS presented a resolution adopted by Group No. 692 of the Polish National Alliance of Baltimore, Md., favoring the passage of legislation providing for proclaiming October 11 in each year General Pulaski's Memorial Day, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented resolutions adopted by Fort Cumberland Post, No. 13, of the American Legion, in the State of Maryland, protesting against reducing the appropriations for the national defense, which were referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

He also presented 22 telegrams and 7 letters in the nature of memorials from sundry citizens, organizations, and institutions in the State of Maryland, remonstrating against the imposition of an import tax on gasoline and oils, which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON PENSIONS

Mr. McGILL, from the Committee on Pensions, to which was referred the bill (S. 1328) to confer to certain persons who served in the Quartermaster Corps or under the jurisdiction of the Quartermaster General during the war with Spain, the Philippine insurrection, or the China relief expedition the benefits of hospitalization and the privileges of the soldiers' homes, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 429) thereon.

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

As in executive session,

Mr. ODDIE, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, reported favorably sundry nominations of post-masters.

Mr. BORAH, from the Committee on Foreign Relations, reported favorably the nomination of Charles H. Sherrill, of New York, to be ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary of the United States of America to Turkey.

Mr. HALE, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, reported favorably sundry nominations of officers in the Navy and Marine Corps.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The reports will be placed on the Executive Calendar.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION INTRODUCED

Bills and a joint resolution were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. JONES:

A bill (S. 4098) authorizing a survey of Green River, in the State of Washington; and

A bill (S. 4099) authorizing a preliminary examination of Green River, in the State of Washington, for the purpose of flood control; to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. KEAN:

A bill (S. 4100) for the relief of Harry Harsin; and

A bill (S. 4101) for the relief of Lauritis Sorensen; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. McNARY:

A bill (S. 4102) to facilitate the acquisition of migratorybird refuges, and for other purposes;

A bill (S. 4103) to amend sections 392, 393, and 394 of title 18, United States Code, relating to interstate and foreign commerce in wild animals and birds, and for other purposes;

A bill (S. 4104) to amend sections 1 and 2 of the act of Congress of June 30, 1906 (34 Stat. L. 768; U. S. C. title 21), as amended: and

A bill (S. 4105) to amend the act entitled "An act to regulate foreign commerce by prohibiting the admission into the United States of certain adulterated grain and seeds unfit for seeding purposes," approved August 24, 1912, as amended, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

By Mr. CAPPER:

A bill (S. 4106) to provide for the closing of certain streets and alleys in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes; and

A bill (S. 4107) to amend section 3 of an act, as amended, entitled "An act making it a misdemeanor in the District of Columbia to abandon or willfully neglect to provide for the support and maintenance by any person of his wife or his or her minor children in destitute or necessitous circumstances," approved June 10, 1926; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. BLAINE:

A bill (S. 4108) providing for pensions for Indians in old age; and

A bill (S. 4109) providing aid for Indians who are blind or blind and deaf; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. HULL:

A bill (S. 4110) granting a pension to David W. Jennings; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. HAWES:

A bill (S. 4111) for the relief of A. H. Marshall; and

A bill (S. 4112) for the relief of Royce Wells; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. BINGHAM:

A bill (S. 4113) for the relief of Mary Murnane; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. REED:

A bill (S. 4114) transferring to the Public Health Service the Division of Vital Statistics of the Bureau of the Census; to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. JONES:

A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 123) to promote the conservation of health and the education of minor children residing on tax-free Indian lands of the Yakima Reservation, Wash.; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

PROPOSED ANTI-INJUNCTION LEGISLATION

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, a day or two ago, for the information of the Senate, I filed a copy of the conference report on House bill 5315, the so-called anti-injunction bill. The conferees on the part of the House have withdrawn the conference report, and I now notify the Senate that I am also withdrawing the conference report here. We shall have a further conference.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the conference report is withdrawn.

" MEN OR MONEY "

Mr. JONES. Mr. President, I have an article entitled "Men or Money," by Mr. Mowbray French Pearson, of Spokane, Wash., which I ask to have printed in the RECORD. There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

MEN OR MONEY

By Mowbray French Pearson

There is one question this country is facing which will have to be settled. It is manifesting itself in various ways: Unemployment, the low price of wheat, the low price of cotton, the present crime epidemic, how to enforce the liquor law, the strike in the coal industry, and difficulties in other directions. This question is one of an adequate national plan of production and distribution. At the time of the Revolution, when most of this country was

At the time of the Revolution, when most of this country was wild land, all Congress needed to do was to pass the homestead law and every man had a chance to take up land and make his living. He could raise all he needed to eat, build his log house, cut his fuel from his own timber, and make his clothes from wild animal skins or wool. If he was willing to work—and there was unlimited work to do—he was absolutely independent. Production, distribution, and consumption were almost confined to his own family, at least as far as the frontiersman was concerned.

That is no longer true. Good land that used to be available for own family, at least as far as the frontiersman was concerned.

That is no longer true. Good land that used to be available for homesteads can not be obtained by a young man. The result is the youth has to start working for some one else. If business is good, he can get a job; if there is a depression, he can not. He is compelled to do something and faces one of three dilemmas—unemployment, going into a field already overcrowded, or crime.

The Director of the Census reports to me that there were about 4,000,000 unemployed in 1920 and 1921. Other reports have made that much higher but we know there are from 1,000,000 to that much higher, but we know there are from 1,000,000 to 5,000,000 out of work continually.

The urgency of this question is being talked of all over the world and particularly since the World War. The nations of Europe, and especially England, have had a tremendous number of unemployed. This has been perhaps their most serious prob-Europe, and especially England, have had a tremendous number of unemployed. This has been perhaps their most serious problem. For at least the last year, conditions have been getting worse in this country, until recent reports indicate there are 4,000,000 out of employment. In addition to the enormous number who are termed "unemployed," there are a far greater number who are considered employed but who have much spare time on their hands. I refer to the farmers, who constitute nearly half of our population. I believe Mr. Henry Ford estimates the farm produce of this country could be raised in 20 days. Whether that is true or not, the farmers have many days, and even months, when they have little to do. Mechanics, miners, and housewives have much idle time on their hands. These people have millions of wants—radios, automobiles, clothes, furniture. But they do not know how to turn their idle time into cash. At the same time the manufacturers of these articles are very anxious to sell their the manufacturers of these articles are very anxious to sell their wares. Our machinery of exchange is incomplete. To insure continuous good times it is absolutely necessary to provide a method whereby everyone can turn his idle time into cash with which to make the purchases he desires.

"Through machinery and better methods of work during the first 10 months of 1927, the index of factory output rose to 107, but the index of factory employment fell to 95. In other words, with 5 per cent fewer employees 7 per cent more goods were created." We are finding methods of increasing our output faster than we increase our distribution. There is no good reason for not distributing as fast as we produce, until every human desire is satisfied. is satisfied.

This question is particularly important just now. The Haugen-McNary bill is up before Congress. That bill does not provide any method of regulating production; but, on the contrary, encourages production, thereby making a bad matter worse. If a bill should provide for limited production so as to help the wheat farmers, or all farmers, it would simply mean that those who were not allowed to farm would have to go into other overcrowded lines.

The coal strike is exactly the same question for another industry. There are too many mines and too many miners. If some of

There are too many mines and too many miners. If some of them quit to relieve the overcrowded condition, they are obliged to increase the overcrowded condition in another line.

Almost all lines are overdone, as far as the apparent purchasing power of the people is concerned, but there are millions of people power of the people is concerned, but there are millions of people who want things, who have idle time on their hands, but are unable to see how to turn their time into cash.

There is only one answer to this stagnation in the midst of prosperity; menace of overproduction, 1,000,000 to 5,000,000 unemployed, and at the same time tremendous public improvements that need to be done. The country so full of money that there is a "tale of thirteen billions" going abroad, and yet no money for public improvements at home. Millions of people wanting to buy things they have not and thousands of manufacturers wanting to things they have not, and thousands of manufacturers wanting to sell things, but a stoppage in the machinery of exchange so they can not trade. The way out of this maze of contradictions is a national plan of production and distribution.

Such a plan follows, divided into three parts. The first part would be carried out by the newspapers and magazines, with the help of a national commission. It would be a method of increasing the machinery of exchange. The newspapers now carry large want-ad columns, but they charge for their space, and people do not advertise unless they are reasonably sure of results. The method is cumbersome and inefficient. They could supplement their want-ad page with a space printed like the following, for which no charge would be made:

Name: Mrs. Mary Smith. Address: R. R. 9. Town: Spokane. Phone: Lake 5389-R5. Want: I want an RCA radio I have seen advertised at $95.17.

Give: In order to get that radio I can make some rag colonial rugs that are just in style with the present furniture at $3 apiece. I can make one a day, so as to pay for the radio in about four months.

Mrs. Smith is not a salesman, so she would go without her radio before she would find a buyer for her rugs. The newspapers would send a salesman to her house, take a sample rug, and sell the rugs to the department stores. It would notify Mrs. Smith where to deliver her goods, and when she had delivered enough for a down payment, the radio would be sent to her home the same as in the case of any installment purchase. The newspaper would, of course, get a fee for this service. In fact it would get a double fee, one on Mrs. Smith's rugs and one on the radio. It might mean that the newspapers would make more money from the one ad space, for which no charge would be made, than on all the ad space, for which no charge would be made, than on all the other pages of its advertising.

other pages of its advertising.

It would get hundreds of replies in each day's mail, and, when tabulated, many would be found to match up; that is, one person would have to sell what another wanted to buy. If it could find no buyer for some articles offered, it would be in a position to advertise such articles or sell them to the stores. It would also be in a position, with the information in its possession, to advertise what people wanted and suggest ways for those with spare time to make the articles desired.

People will sign their names to an ad telling what they want or time to make the articles desired.

People will sign their names to an ad, telling what they want or what they have to sell, ten times if it costs nothing to once if they have to go and pay hard cash. It would be one ad where the buyer could tell what he wanted. Every other ad that is printed is put in by some one who has something to sell. It would be stupid to let people with no money say they want million-dollar yachts, but if they are kept within bounds by requiring that they must put down how they want to pay for the article they want, either with some article they have or can make, or with time, stating the kind of work they can do, then we have some very definite information of real value, which is nowhere now available. We would have a record of the wants of the people and a record of idle time. Think of the stupendous possibilities if every farmer with no winter occupation could sign his name to an ad saying he wanted a radio or automobile and had four hours a day for five months that he can work to pay for it. How many million farmers would have some time? What could they accomplish? Add to these the mechanics, the housewives, and millions of people who do not have steady full-time jobs every day in the year. We could probably double our output and millions of people have could probably double our output and millions of people have things they now can not pay for. While the newspapers, department stores, and factories could

While the newspapers, department stores, and factories could handle this situation in large part, it would take a Government commission to fill in the weak spots. Maybe there would be no available work in certain localities. It would be the function of the Government commission to either make some public work there, or direct or transport the individual to a place where work was available. It should also tabulate the total of wants and the total of unemployment as a matter of public record. It could do this so as to avoid duplication and have an accurate basis on which to base production instead of a guess basis as at present.

at present.

Although it would enormously increase the sale of manufac-

Although it would enormously increase the sale of manufactured products, which, in turn, would put more people to work in regular channels, this new advertising method would not solve our economic problems completely. There would be some people out of work and nothing for them to do.

The second step in a national plan of production and distribution would be a national free employment department that not only found jobs for people when it could but actually put to work everyone who applied.

We have an enormous list of public work that should be done: Better roads in every section of the country. Good roads lessen the cost of getting farm produce to market and manufactured products to the farm; they materially lessen the cost of operating automobiles, which give a great deal of pleasure to innumerable people.

We are just commencing a new method of travel by air, and

We are just commencing a new method of travel by air, and to hasten its universal use we need landing fields everywhere, shops for repair work at most of them, and beacons to guide flyers both day and night.

A ship channel is needed from the Great Lakes to the sea via the St. Lawrence to lessen the transportation costs of all farm and manufactured products from the Mississippi Valley to the Forests and dams are needed at the headwaters of the Mississippi and other rivers which flood their lower sections. Levees too may be required.

The West is interested in two immense projects for reclaiming The West is interested in two immense projects for rectaining arid lands, developing their power, and using their water supply to the best advantage. They are the Columbia Basin and Colorado River projects. It will take many years to develop these, and they will be needed by the time they can be completed.

There is an enormous amount of work that can be done by power which is now done by more laborious methods, and we have numerous power sites undeveloped.

Our merchant marine must be kept up to date and adequate for our needs.

The Nicaragua Canal will soon be needed to supplement our present Panama Canal. There is no need to have idle men now and wait until ships have long delays at the canal before commencg a new waterway. We want public buildings of all kinds, not only post offices and We want public buildings of all kinds, not only post offices and customhouses but auditoriums, art galleries, museums, and beautiful monuments commemorating men or events. All these things are outside the line of private endeavor. It is acknowledged we need most or all of these things—that they would be enormously beneficial—that they will have to be built sometime—and we know that there are seldom less than a million, and often as many as 5,000,000 men out of work. Why have work that needs doing and men wanting to work, and still have men remain idle? I think the answer is we think in terms of money instead of men. We say answer is, we think in terms of money instead of men. We say these improvements cost too much, and so we can not carry them out. There is the fallacy.

Men or money? That is the question. In the past everything has been money. What is the cost; can we raise the money? We must have economy in government, and by that is meant little money passing through the Public Treasury. If there is a busi-ness depression, we call it a financial stringency and arrange to money passing through the Public Treasury. If there is a business depression, we call it a financial stringency and arrange to throw some cheap money on the market to stimulate business. We assume that money is the cause of our troubles and that money will cure our ills. Money is of value as a medium of exchange, as a token of work performed. We must return it to its proper place as a token to be given a man for his work.

The man is the important thing. Instead of Congress asking, "Have we money enough to put in a certain piece of work?" it should ask, "Have we men available to do that work who can be spared from their regular industries?" If there are men who can not find employment in regular industries, then they are certainly available for public work. With a proper system that adjusts itself automatically. It is the duty of Congress, then, to decide what public work shall be done when the men are available, or if it shall be done in preference to industrial work. Congress would levy enough taxes so there would be a surplus in the Treasury all the time, which can be drawn against for any work approved. When there is a surplus of food, fuel, clothing, and shelter there is a surplus of wealth which can be taxed for public work. The men out of employment, who need these necessaries, would be given work to do, and in that way the wealth of the Nation would be distributed. If there is not a proper division of the wealth of the Nation, if some men are wealthy and others jobless, and the wealthy refuse to divide their wealth through the medium of giving jobs, the inevitable result will be a revolution like that in France or Russia, with all the horrors a revolution entails.

We are not likely to have extremes immediately, but with 5,000,000 out of employment, with the enormous army of farmers discontented, with the coal miners on strike, and with many other industries feeling there is room for improvement, only a spark is needed to set the whole country afire. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. It i to stand pat and take the consequences?

Providing public work for men out of employment benefits both the laborer and the capitalist and not only the laborer. It is the duty of Congress to promote the general welfare which includes the opportunity for men to work when they desire. It must think in terms of men instead of in terms of money.

Overproduction is the cause of the low price of wheat, cotton, and other products. It is the cause of the coal strike which has been in progress for many months. There are too many men in those industries. Most industries are on the verge of the same condition, so it is impossible to send surplus men from one industry to another. If new business is stimulated as suggested earlier in this article, men would work where they were needed, but the McNary-Haugen bill will only make a bad matter worse by stimulated as suggested earlier. lating production. In the end it would have the same effect as the British export rubber bill and hurt those it was aimed to help. We have too much wheat. That is the reason for the low price. We must grow less wheat, but it is impossible to do that without providing something for the farmers to do who are obliged to stop farming.

As a nation, we are pretty well convinced that all work possible As a nation, we are pretty well convinced that all work possible should be done by private enterprise. There are certain kinds of work that have always been considered Government work; the line is fairly clearly drawn, and I will continue to make that distinction. There are some things too big for any individual or group of individuals to do. Those things have to be undertaken by the Government for the benefit of all the people.

The preamble to the Constitution of the United States says: "The object of government is to establish justice, insure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our

It is just as important a function to see that all our people have an opportunity to make a living as to see that the Nation is safe from invasion and domestic disorder. Of the two, death by the sword would be preferable to death by starvation. The Government is organized to promote the general welfare. The Government should do everything for the general welfare that individuals can not do for themselves, or that the Government can do better than individuals can do it. There is no question but that, working individually we have failed to keep everybody busy all the time, we have failed in maximum distribution of what we produce. We must therefore look to the Government to supplement the work of individuals and corporations in order to insure maximum production and distribution. The Government does not owe any able-bodied person a living, but it certainly does owe everyone a chance to earn a living.

chance to earn a living.

It will therefore unquestionably be the function of the Government in the future to provide employment on public work to people it is unable to supply with jobs with private employers; not maybe, not perhaps, not sometimes—but always.

(Note—I recognize there is a vast quantity of public work in contemplation, which will help to do just what I am suggesting. It has several times been suggested that State and National Governments do their work, as far as possible, during periods of depression. Such a plan is a help, but not a remedy. It still leaves the fundamental situation the same.)

As this is a new idea, I will give a skeleton plan of operations. A national commission would be established to supervise production and distribution in the United States. This might be composed of the Secretaries of the Treasury, Agriculture, Commerce, and Labor, one man representing the farmers, one transportation, one communication, one the mines, one the banks, one the manuchants, one physician, one teacher, one labor, and one the manuchants, one physician, one teacher, one labor, and one the manufacturers. The four Secretaries to hold place ex officio, the 10 permanent members to be appointed by the President for 10 years, the term of one to expire each year. Not more than five permanent members to belong to one political party. The 10 permanent members to receive the same salaries as Cabinet officers. By selecting one person to represent the same salaries as Cabinet officers. permanent members to receive the same salaries as Cabinet officers. By selecting one person to represent each industry the commission would have an expert on its own body to speak for each industry. This commission would appoint a manager of production and distribution of the United States with a maximum salary of $1,000,000 a year. The salaries of our big executives are now getting into big figures and in order to get a man big enough to fill this position we should choose one who has proved his ability in private enterprise. In order to keep it from being a political plum, the salary could be only 10 per cent above the applicant's earned income the previous year, with a minimum the same as for Cabinet members. This 10 per cent advance would be an inducement for a man to change positions. The salary thereafter could be increased 10 per cent each year, in the discretion of the commission. In order that the manager's job shall be permanent and nonpolitical during efficiency, he shall be removed only for cause and on the vote of 10 members out of 14.

It shall be the duty of this commission to first assist the news-and on the vote of 10 members out of 14.

It shall be the duty of this commission to first assist the newspapers in writing the copy of ads which would enable the public to say what it wants to buy, and tabulating the results so as to know how to plan production; second, these ads would tell who was out of employment altogether and who had unoccupied time every day or periodically. This information would be tabulated. Lastly, these ads would tell what people could do, so the commission would have a record of the kind of people it had to provide with employment. with employment.

This information should show the trend of the desires of the people, so the factories could plan production ahead of time. It would show if there was a shortage of help along some line; and the man representing the teachers could see that the proper numof persons learned the required information or trade.

If the newspapers refused or neglected to do as the commission suggested, it could insert these ads at its own expense and absorb the expense or keep the fee that would be charged by the suggested, it could insert these ads at its own expense and absorb the expense or keep the fee that would be charged by the newspapers.

Second, it would be the duty of the commission to maintain employment offices in every city of the United States with a population of 100,000 or more, and as many other places as they think advisable; these offices to keep records of the needs of all classes of employers and a record of all those who apply for employment, with the line of work wanted and qualifications. This information would dovetail in with the newspaper ads in such a way as to avoid duplication of work.

It shall be the duty of this commission to put to work, within 24 hours, every person who applies for work and whom it is unable to send to a position. This work may be common labor, or otherwise. The commission may furnish transportation or not, at its discretion, and pay such wages as it shall set. This would enable it to move men from congested centers to places that needed inhabitants, to move harvest laborers from Texas to Montana as the season progressed. The rising generation is always anxious to see the world and without ties; they can work and satisfy their curiosity at the same time. Later they can settle down and be willing to stay put.

Third, the commission, with the information it gathered and other data from the Department of Agriculture, and the Department of Commerce could go one step farther in its plan of production. For instance, the consumption of wheat is pretty well.

other data from the Department of Agriculture, and the Department of Commerce could go one step farther in its plan of production. For instance, the consumption of wheat is pretty well known, and data are gathered every year about the crop. If the crop is low one year, there is apt to be a big crop the next. The commission could quota the amount to be planted in each county and require that each farmer report the amount planted in acres and the amount paragraphs of the preceding five years. and the amount per acre received during the preceding five years. When the quota had been reached a warning would be issued and all those planting wheat after that time would be known and subject to the condemnation of their fellows for overplanting. Public opinion would probably take care of the result, but if not, and the quota were persistently exceeded, the farms producing the best results could be continued and the farmers just making wages told to quit. If no other work were furnished, this would be a hardship, but with the commission required to furnish other work there would be little injustice or hardship about it. The same methods could be used with factories or other producers. Quota the output of each plant according to the requirements of the industry; and if possible, let the industry work out the results itself. If possible, shut down the inefficient plants and operate the others.

What would be the result if this plan were put into effect? First, we will consider the advantage to the employers. An employer can not sell his goods to a man out of work. The most important result is, then, it completes and puts into operation the machinery of exchange, which it was shown earlier in this article is now insufficient. It would increase the business of everyone. The ads, giving the people a chance to ask for what they want, would create an enormous amount of new business, and, giving the additional employment to everyone, would mean money giving the additional employment to everyone, would mean money to buy with. Everyone would be busy and prosperous.

Second, it would give a reasonably accurate basis on which to plan production so that a plant could be kept running continually. For this reason a small plant could do the work of a much larger one which was operated at full capacity one time and shut down another. There would be less capital investment. Steady employment would mean less labor turnover, and it is expensive to break in new men to break in new men.

to break in new men.

We have enormous credit losses every year, and if these were traced back to the source, most of them are due to unemployment, which prevents the worker from paying the merchant; the merchant then can not pay the wholesaler, and so the evil grows. Insurance against business depression is one of the most important things to consider, especially since installment selling has come into vogue. We have not had a real depression since this new system started, but if we do, and millions of men are thrown out of work and unable to pay their installments, the goods will be thrown back on the sellers. If such a thing should happen, we would have a tremendous catastrophe. A little more in taxes for public work which would come back to another pocket in increased business, would be mighty good insurance for the business of this country. of this country.

As the farmer's problem is strongly considered right now, I will briefly point out how it will help him. Everyone has to eat, and as the people who actually die of starvation in this country are negligible in number, it might be thought that the farmer would not be affected. When men are out of work, however, they live on bread and beans; whereas if they have good wages, they buy beefsteak and oranges. Besides increasing the consumption of his higher-profit goods, it gives an opportunity for the farmers on the poor farms to get into another occupation. Now the farmers feel poor farms to get into another occupation. Now the farmers feel every other line is crowded, too, and so they continue to raise cotton or wheat because they do not know what else to do. Economic conditions compel them to find a niche to fit into, although it may not be the right one. This plan would take the place of the Haugen-McNary bill with much more satisfactory and permanent results for the farmers, as well as for the rest of the country. Now, we will look at this plan from the standpoint of the worker. First, there would be the knowledge and feeling that he could always get a job that he need never so hungry even for a could always get a job, that he need never go hungry even for a day, that his family need never be in want. A few years ago the day, that his family need never be in want. A few years ago the Alexander Hamilton Institute published a picture at the top of one of their advertisements, entitled "The Three Fears." It showed a comfortable living room, with a wife, husband, and two children by an open fire. The husband was gazing abstractly at the fire. In the background were three apparitions, with long grasping fingers reaching toward the family. One was called "The Fear of the Loss of the Job," another the "Fear of the Loss of Health," and the third, the "Fear of Dependent Old Age." These three fears haunt the rich and poor alike.

Statistics show that only 3 or 4 out of 100 go through life.

fears haunt the rich and poor alike. Statistics show that only 3 or 4 out of 100 go through life and are well off at the end. Take the recent case of J. Ogden Armour, who is reported to have lost $1,000,000 a day for 100 days; $100,000,000 in 4 months. He said, "I would not have believed it possible to lose money so fast." What rich man dare say it may not be his turn next? There is good cause for fear. Isn't it worth something to eliminate "the fear of the loss of the job" from every man and woman in America for all time? The loss of a job means that if the family has saved something, those savings for home, furniture, insurance, or luxury go for something to eat, and maybe the home is lost, the insurance allowed to lapse, and the luxuries that make life worth while have to be dispensed with. Isn't that feeling of security worth some addi-dispensed with. Isn't that feeling of security worth some additional taxes to achieve?

It would be interesting to know how many men and women are unmarried to-day because of economic conditions. How many of these people would be happier married than single? A newspaper vote to determine that question might be very interesting. Is it worth while for the Government to help make people happy or should it just let them scramble for something to eat?

Great Britain, Germany, and other countries give unemploy-ment insurance. In other words, they pay people to loaf. Isn't it better to put the unemployed at some of this work we need the better to put the unemployed at some of this work we need done, and pay for the work?

The general public is interested in the effect of this plan. Crime has been on the increase, and we have just had a report from a crime commission. The report deals mostly with moron policemen who are unable to catch the criminals and inefficient courts that do not convict. Little is said about lessening the cause for crime. The desire for money is not the only reason people commit crimes, but it certainly is one of the principal reasons. If people can always get money honestly, there is no question but that there will be less crime than now, when some people are virtually forced to steal because they can not get work. Money spent in worth-while public work is better than if spent for police, lawyers, judges, and jails. The liquor question seems to be a paramount issue in the coming campaign. It is my opinion that the liquor question would vanish into thin air if every bootlegger could get a job. Now courts and juries have a feeling of sympathy for the criminal, thinking the poor devil had to do something to make a living. Conviction would be much easier if there were not the slightest doubt that the criminal chose to steal rather than to work.

if there were not the slightest doubt that the criminal chose to steal rather than to work.

The cost. It may be a good idea to give work to everybody, but look at the billions it would cost. A million to five million men on the Government pay roll all the time. It would certainly bankrupt the country. Nonsense. I have shown the saving to the business interests in various ways; how the workers would benefit and how the public expense could be lessened for courts and jails, but even if we ignore all these results, the cost would be absolutely nothing.

absolutely nothing.

I do not mean that the people who build roads for the Government will not ask for pay, nor do I mean that pay will be provided by magic. I do not even say taxes will not be increased. They may be increased or they may be lessened per person if there should be an increased number of people working for private employers subject to tax, due to stimulated business and the lessened cost of Government, or because of less crime. I am the lessened cost of Government, or because of less crime. I am inclined to think the taxes would be less per capita than at present. What I really mean when I say the cost would be absolutely nothing is that now we produce all we need to eat, wear, our fuel, houses, and a host of other things, and still have a million men idle. If put to work, these idle men would build public improvements; roads, for instance, that would save the users more than their cost. Suppose a farmer has to pay $5 a ton to get his produce to market because of poor roads, and by building a good road he can save $1.50 per ton. He can afford to pay that $1.50 in a road tax until the road is paid for, when he saves money. The road therefore costs him nothing.

pay that $1.50 in a road tax until the road is paid for, when he saves money. The road therefore costs him nothing.

Coal mining is occupying public attention just now. In the Utah field, I believe, the miners are paid $1.12½ a ton. They mine 10 and 12 tons a day under reasonable conditions, but work only about 200 days a year. Their wages run from $1,800 to $3,000, according to how good they are, and how much business the mine gets. Some expert miners who mine 15 to 18 tons a day in a mine which offers continuous employment make more than most bosses and ride around in Packard cars. If miners got the mine gets. Some expert miners who mine 15 to 18 tons a day in a mine which offers continuous employment make more than most bosses and ride around in Packard cars. If miners got 90 cents a ton for the 200 mining days and $4 a day working on the Colorado River project, they would make just about the same amount at the end of the year, the public would pay less for its coal and more in taxes. In the end the public would pay the same, the miners would get the same, but we would have a big public work accomplished by men who would otherwise be idle. The public has to pay the miners enough for the 200 days they work to provide a living wage for the whole year. That is the cause of the coal controversy.

If we put a million more men to work at worth-while public improvements, we have created that much additional wealth for the Nation, and it is made by people who would otherwise be idle. Now we have to pay those people enough money for the time they work to live during the time they do not work. The public improvements would therefore cost us nothing. If we should continue to give these people the same wages they are now receiving, and they earned additional money from this public work, they could spend this extra money for luxuries such as radios, and it would go back into circulation, and part of it find its way to the Government in taxes. Either way, the Nation is ahead.

The two parts of the plan so far given—the buyer's ad and the ahead.

The two parts of the plan so far given—the buyer's ad and the national employment system—show no interference on the part of the Government with private business. Idle men would just be put to work, and taxes enough raised to cover the additional expense. It must be seen to that the work they do is worth while, and taxes enough are raised to cover the additional exwhile, and taxes enough are raised to cover the additional expense, if any. The man who helps build the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway, and saves the Illinois farmer freight on his wheat to Liverpool, is worthy of his hire. He was given a job when he wanted work, he could take it or leave it, the farmer was not interfered with, and neither was the manufacturer. Every thing is the same except that the machinery of exchange has increased and we are getting much-needed public work done as fast as there are men available. Now we may admit that a new improvement is good, but Congress discusses forever whether we have the money to spend. If there are idle men, of course we have the money, because that shows we have a surplus of wealth, or there would be no idleness. Therefore, take some away from the fellow with the surplus to use in public work, and give it to the man out of a job. In exchange, see that the taxpayer and the public get good value for their money.

the man out of a job. In exchange, see that the taxpayer and the public get good value for their money.

It is now understood how the buyer's ads, with the help of the national commission, would make it possible for millions of people to express their desires and have those desires gratified within their earning capacity. We would also have a record of the wants of the people and their idle time, both complete idleness and partial idleness.

This buyer's ad method of stimulating exchange might create so much new business there would be no idleness, but if every-one could not find work the national employment system would come into operation, and by applying for a job one would be provided. There is enough useful work between Panama and Alaska to keep everyone busy. It may not be in the particular line the applicant is used to, but it might be a good thing if a banker and a professor had to rub elbows with a ditch digger. It would give many a man a different point of view and get us back to real democracy. There is no question that both parts of the plan so far suggested would materially increase the machinery of exchange. They probably would not bring perfection but a very great improvement. There might still be too much wheat grown or too many coal mines, with a resulting overproduction of those commodities. If farmers are allowed to sow and reap without knowing what the total need is or the total planting, it is out knowing what the total need is or the total planting, it is really surprising that the law of supply and demand makes the crop as close to the requirements as it is. But this old rule-of-thumb method is both financially painful and out of date in this age of accurate facts. There is no reason for not carefully estimating the needs of the Nation and then arranging to plant enough to amply supply those needs with just enough surplus for a proper carry-over. The Department of Agriculture has the machinery for getting those facts after the crop is in for the benefit of the board of trade. Why not do their tabulating beforehand for the benefit of the farmer? With a few years' practice we could budget the entire requirements of the Nation and get maximum results from our efforts. results from our efforts.

results from our enorts.

Get this clearly. As long as there is an individual in this country who wants something and he is willing to work to get it and there is another individual who is idle and wants to supply that article, the machinery of exchange is not complete until those two individuals can exchange commodities, even if one is in Maine and the other in Oregon.

Congress has assumed that this country is a vast arena where men fight for a living. Congress makes the laws which are the rules to go by. We do not all start from scratch. Some have big tracts of land handed to them, some big factories, some exceptional ability, and some just their hands. The judges are the umpires to see they observe the rules of the fight. Each one grabs what he can. In the days of barons it was physical strength and military prowess—now it is mental ability and financial shrewdness which make one wealthy. There is no systematic method of orderly production and distribution.

We are not ready for socialism, "from everyone according to his ability, to everyone according to his need," but we are ready to give everyone all that he is able to earn. To insure him all he is able to earn, we must change this country from a fighting arena to an orderly factory with a list of earning powers of each family, Congress has assumed that this country is a vast arena where to an orderly factory with a list of earning powers of each family, and the various vocations possible with preferences shown both by the worker and a vocational member of the Federal employment department. To counterbalance this would be the number, ages, sex of the members of the family, their requirements in food, ages, sex of the members of the family, their requirements in 100d, clothing, fuel, shelter, and other necessities. If there was a surplus the family could signify its desire for a radio, automobile, or anything it wanted to buy with the surplus money. There would then be a reasonably accurate basis on which to plan production. When the various budgets had been matched up it would be seen whether there would be a surplus of labor which it would be seen whether there would be a surplus of labor which would have to be employed on public work or a shifting of labor from one industry to another to make production equal demand. What a blessing to the manufacturer if he could be told on January 1 that the budgets called for a million sedans and a half million coupes of his make and he could plan accordingly. I do not mean that we would ever reach 100 per cent perfection in these budgets, but I do mean they would be a vast improvement over just guessing, and experience would eventually make them pretty accurate.

This is not so visionary as would at first appear. We did almost exactly that thing at the time of the World War, but hurriedly and poorly. If we have another war, we will have to do it again. We had better have the benefit of an orderly procedure in again. We had better have the benent of an orderly procedure in peace times, and then in case of necessity we can get onto a war basis quickly and efficiently. I doubt if it would be necessary to use compulsion to put this plan into effect. If those who filled out the budget sheets were supplied first with both jobs and eats, as well as radios and automobiles, and those who did not fill out a budget got only what was left, there would be very few budgets not filled out. The total of the budgets might prove we were getting national indigestion from overeating. Maybe the health of the Nation would be materially improved if rations were provided for us. Who knows?

provided for us. Who knows?

If this plan were carried out, not with the idea of interfering with personal liberty but in order to increase personal efficiency, so that every person could have every want satisfied up to the maximum of his earning capacity, so that his energy could be used in doing work instead of looking for work, we should certainly have a happier country.

The buyer's ad part of the plan would enable the newspapers to get a large additional revenue; it would enormously increase the volume and profit of the stores and also the factories. More business with less intense competition would certainly help them immensely. The only part the national commission would have would be to assist the newspapers in making their totals and in making exchanges in different parts of the country. It would act for merchandise stores as the Federal reserve bank does for the banks now banks now.

The national employment department would begin where the ad failed to produce 100 per cent results, but still only presenting an opportunity which is now lacking. There would be no com-pulsion. In addition to furnishing work the public improvements would make for quicker transportation, and the possibility of adding charm as well as utility to our highways in the form of shade, fruit, nut trees, or other ornamentation. Instead of the usual two drainage ditches, which are both unsightly and dangerous, this beauty would be much appreciated. Think of the labor that might be saved if all the power sites were developed and what a big increase there would be in production. That would not mean unemployment as now but would mean that more people could get things they want. Everybody busy all the time. Do we get things they want. Everybody busy all the time.

want it?

And last the national commission could really begin to function by budgeting the entire requirements of the Nation, obtaining their ends by planning and publicity, rather than compulsion, to the end that the entire strength of the Nation would go to producing exactly what we want, no more, no less. This would solve the problem of the wheat farmer, the cotton grower, the coal miner, the textile trades, and all industries. It would provide a minimum wage for the workers of this country. It would truly mean mass production and mass distribution.

provide a minimum wage for the workers of this country. It would truly mean mass production and mass distribution.

It is difficult to visualize the tremendous possibilities of this plan, but by referring to Henry Ford we can perhaps get a faint idea of its possibilities. With a little over 100,000 men in his Detroit plants, his output in production is about 8,000 cars a day, or 2,400,000 a year. The average life of a car is at least five years, which makes it possible for him, with his present capacity, to have 12,000,000 cars on the road. That is about half the cars in the United States at the present time. We know that is just about his record. Twelve million people driving cars made by only 100,000 men. Even admitting that Ford gets more output per man than is usually the case, think of the tremendous possibilities if 1,000,000 men were continually employed that are now idle. But it is estimated that right now there are 4,000,000 idle, or enough to make forty times Ford's output. But that is not idle. But it is estimated that right now there are 4,000,000 idle, or enough to make forty times Ford's output. But that is not all. That only takes into consideration the men who are completely idle. There are 11,000,000 farmers in this country, and they are clamoring for more prosperity. Most of them can do little more than a few chores during the winter. It is safe to say that 25 per cent of their time is lost, or the equivalent of 2,780,000 men idle every year. These men are counted as working. Add this number to the 4,000,000 who are called unemployed, then add the housewives, newlyweds, and many who live in apartments and can do their work in three or four hours a day, and we would probably have a total of at least 10,000,000. a day, and we would probably have a total of at least 10,000,000 out of the 40,000,000 employed according to our 1920 census, who would like to work if they knew how to turn their idle time into

One hundred times as many people willing to work and unable to turn their time into cash as made half the automobiles in the United States. What could we accomplish if we directed these people's energies? How many roads that are now rough or mudholes could be made good, how many power plants could we put up and increase the use of labor-saving devices? How many audi-toriums could we build for the best drama, music, and public assemblies?

With the buyers saying what they want and a powerful Government agency trying to help them get it—how much would this increase the business of all the factories in this country? The business-conditions map shown in the Nation's Business for June, 1928, shows a little section in Montana, North and South Dakota, and another little patch in Arizona and Texas as good. About as much more is shown as bad. The rest of the country shows business fair. There is no reason for not having it all good all the

It would mean that every individual could have everything that he desired up to his earning capacity without considering lost time. With greatly increased power facilities the earning power per person would be increased, but that would not mean more idleness, as is at present the case. It would mean that people could buy more things. More home owners, better furniture, better clothes, warmer and more comfortable houses, more children going to the universities, more travel, more of the good things going to the universities, more travel, more of the good things of life, instead of just something to eat and a roof.

Competition would be the same as now. Each radio factory would advertise its set, but it might know months in advance when the buyer's ads were sent in whether its set was preferred, or its competitor had gotten the business. Styles would still change, but there would be advance warning, so there would not be the heavy losses there are at present. We could have maximum production, but only of things that are salable.

We now grow enough food, make enough clothes, build enough houses, and mine enough fuel for our necessities. What these additional people would produce would be extras, more permanent wealth; they would get the things they now feel they can not afford. There would be such a stimulus given business as has never been known, but it would not be a boom. It would be a steady, permanent increase of production until every want was filled. But who can imagine the time coming when we would not want more? People's wants have increased tremendously in the last 25 years. The next 25 will see everyone wanting an airplane, a better radio, with a television attachment; better homes, built of steel and stone, architecturally beautiful and structurally plane, a better radio, with a television attachment; better homes, built of steel and stone, architecturally beautiful and structurally permanent instead of cheap wooden houses built by contractors without good taste and put together with materials that are a fire menace and in 25 years are old and shabby. Homes are loved that can be handed down through the generations and that mellow and become more beautiful with age. These better homes would call for furniture that would likewise be better, and workmen who make good things get more satisfaction and happiness from their work than those who turn out the poorer grades of goods.

The benefit of this plan would go to all the people—the farmers, the factories, and the wage workers.

It is said a nation is great according to what it does for its children, to relieve suffering, and for its dependents.

Unemployment robs children of much their parents would otherwise give them; it creates untold suffering and makes dependents. Let's have everybody busy. The answer is up to America.

Note.—This article is compiled from data collected over a period of 15 years and manuscript completed in 1928.

PHILIPPINE INDEPENDENCE

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, in the New York Herald Tribune for the 10th of March there is a very interesting editorial on the subject of Philippine independence. This editorial makes reference to an impartial survey which has been made on the present state of American public opinion on the subject of Philippine independence. I ask unanimous consent that the editorial and the survey be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the matter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the New York Herald Tribune, March 10, 1932] IN NO UNCERTAIN VOICE

The Philippine-American Chamber of Commerce has done the people of this country a rare service in having an impartial agency make and publish a nation-wide survey of recent newspaper commake and publish a nation-wide survey of recent newspaper comment upon the Philippine-independence controversy. This compilation, the result of a close check upon the editorial columns of 412 papers of good repute, reveals, at a moment when the Senate and the House are both solemnly considering bills to alienate unconstitutionally 63,000,000 acres of the public domain, that 275 journals, or 67 per cent, are vigorously opposed to independence in the present or the near future. It shows that 107, or 26 per cent, are noncommittal; and that 30, or 7 per cent only, would indorse immediate and unconditional independence. This means that of those committed to a policy, just over nine-tenths—and the division seems to bear no relation to local or party prejudice—are decidedly against any scheme for denouncing our obligations to a people economically, politically, and strategically unprepared to decidedly against any scheme for denouncing our obligations to a people economically, politically, and strategically unprepared to survive if cut adrift.

While the Cuban sugar lobby, which is now superlatively active in Washington, has contrived to form big blocs in both Houses of Congress and to have clauses inserted in the disgraceful bill, now before the Senate, catering to their interests and to the pretended interests of certain agricultural sections, these powerful dictators of legislative opinion have enlisted just one Minneapolis paper in their support.

paper in their support.

Throughout the southern and middle western cottonseed, beet-sugar, and dairy farming States scores of influential organs have sugar, and dairy farming States scores of influential organs have indignantly protested against the campaign of misrepresentation on Capitol Hill, under cover of which the Cuban sugar lobby's congressional agents have had the effrontery to pretend that Philippine independence would be in the American farmer's interests. A great body of the opinion expressed, especially in the South and West, to which the sugar interests have addressed themselves, is substantially the Richmond News-Leader's verdict that to jettison the islands so that their dependent agriculture may be excluded is "economic foul play."

While a majority of those who oppose independence are in support of the administration's contention that they are not—and may never be—economically or politically prepared, a minority opinion is based on the fear that the islands would be submerged in "oriental turmoil." In contrast to this perfectly honest contention is the amazing argument advanced by nearly half of the journals that advocate independence that because Japan wants and intends to seize the islands, we should get out quickly to avoid complications.

avoid complications.

avoid complications.

There is a small minority of editorial writers in all sections of the country who take it sorrowfully for granted that ultimate Philippine independence is their unavoidable doom, in such phrases as "independence, if it must come"—with which fatalistic resignation this newspaper has no patience. But it is of more interest to note that, despite years of misleading talk about our "promises" and "pledges" to the Filipino, there are six newspapers only out of the entire catalogue which base their verdicts, one way or another, upon the assumption that any such "pledges" one way or another, upon the assumption that any such "pledges are binding upon the American Nation.

The survey is a revelation, justifying real pride in the American people's strong sense of responsibility to the Philippines, as revealed in the press, and as it is not revealed in the conspiracies that go on among the members of our highest legislative bodies to betray the national interest and the national honor.

PHILIPPINE INDEPENDENCE—A SURVEY OF THE PRESENT STATE OF AMERICAN PUBLIC OPINION ON THE SUBJECT, AS EXPRESSED IN EDITORIAL COMMENT THROUGHOUT THE UNITED STATES DURING THE PAST 12 MONTHS

(This survey has been independently conducted, at the request of the Philippine-American Chamber of Commerce, by Ten Eyck Associates)

Introduction

THE PHILIPPINE PROBLEM

Ever since the United States acquired the Philippine Islands. the Philippine-independence movement has been with us. There have been periods of quiescence, when little was heard of it. And there have been periods of bitter debate, when not only Filipinos but Americans have considered the independence question a major political issue.

Filipinos but Americans have considered the independence question a major political issue.

We are now in one of these periods of active interest. Filipino agitation has been strong. American Senators and Representatives have been badgered by their constituencies, some of which are anxious to block the competition which they feel is offered to American products by tariff-free Philippine goods. After fresh investigation, former Governor General Davis, Secretary of War Hurley, and President Hoover have all made fresh statements of their positions on the issue. Several bills are now before the Congress, demanding action. Finally, the present turmoil in the Far East has called to the attention of the general American public the extreme importance of the Philippine question.

During the past year every imaginable argument for and against immediate Philippine independence has been brought forward. Questions of human rights, questions of America's prestige in the Far East, questions of Filipino immigration, questions of the competition of Philippine products in American markets have been so intermingled that it has been almost impossible for the dispassionate observer to discover which way the country was leaning. But one question, stated and restated by observers who have gone to the Philippines to investigate on the spot, has been steadily gaining ground as the major issue. This is the economic question: If the Philippines are given their independence to-day and pushed outside the American tariff wall, can they maintain themselves economically? And if not, have we the right to push them out?

Governor General Davis, Secretary Hurley, President Hoover, together with many other observers, feel that there is much which must still be done, much time still to pass, before the Philippines can become economically independent, and that upon this time political separation must wait. They are, therefore, which must still be done, much time still to pass, before the Philippines can become economically independent, and that upon this time political separation must wait. They are, therefore, against immediate independence.

Some groups of Americans, representing producers of articles with which Philippine duty-free imports are claimed to compete, feel that in this time of depression no opportunity for reducing competition should be lost. They are, therefore, either in favor of immediate and complete Philippine independence or for an immediate application of the tariff, in one form or another, to Philippine products.

Philippine products.

There are, of course, other questions involved, chief among which is the danger to which the Philippines, independent or otherwise, are exposed in the present state of tension in the Far East. But these are the two major opposing points of view, and in recent months they have been expressed sufficiently often and with sufficient force so that the country at large has had an opportunity to consider them and to make up its mind upon their relative merits. In the past, although the Filipinos themselves have always had the country's sympathy, American opinion has been against granting them their independence. What has been the effect of the debates of the last year? Has there been a real change in American public sentiment on the question, and, if so, what is the nature of this change?

The following analysis of editorial opinion on the subject, as

The following analysis of editorial opinion on the subject, as expressed in nearly every State in the Union during the past 12 months, represents an attempt to answer these questions. Inaugurated at the request of the Philippine-American Chamber of augurated at the request of the Philippine-American Chamber of Commerce it has been impartially conducted by an independent research organization, Ten Eyck Associates; it is based upon a careful scrutiny of the entire American newspaper press for any expression of opinion on the issue, from clippings supplied by an independent and impartial news-clipping service; it covers a period of one year ending February 20, 1932.

Editorial opinion

THE NEW ENGLAND STATES

(Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Vermont)

New England, on the Philippine question as in other matters, takes her tone from Boston, and in this case Boston opinion is clear and unanimous. The Boston American (Feb. 12, 1932) says: "It is to the interest of both the American and the Philipsays: "It is to the interest of both the American and the Philippine peoples that they continue their present relationship until its future can be considered in calmer times." "It would be a mortifying spectacle," says the Christian Science Monitor in a widely quoted editorial (July 20, 1931), "to see the United States readjust its Philippine policy to fit the balance sheets of a select group of industrial and agricultural interests." "There can be no dispute," adds the Boston Transcript (June 27, 1931), "about the soundness of the argument that the economic interests of the Philippines and their inhabitants require the present status of the islands as United States dependencies to be left undisturbed for at least another generation." "We are obligated to grant the islands independence," echoes the Boston Herald (October 31, 1931), "but we are equally obligated to start them upon an independent career with a government so stable and an economic position so sound as to afford reasonable assurance of their permanent success when on their own." Finally, the Boston Traveler manent success when on their own." Finally, the Boston Traveler (December 5, 1931) is short and to the point: "Perhaps the Philippines should be free. We don't think so, for a while at least."

One paper, the Lowell Sun, dissents, saying that "the best course would be to give the Filipinos their freedom under some sort of international protection that would safeguard their independence against aggression by Japan or any other power." (January 28, 1932.) But from other parts of New England come many echoes of the same feelings that Boston holds.

Portland Press-Herald: "Independence can very well wait until circumstances are more favorable, and in waiting the Philippines have all to gain and nothing to lose." (February 15, 1932.)

Waterbury Republican: "The United States can not suddenly withdraw from the islands without flagrantly betraying the very people who asked for independence. The menace of seizure by larger, or flooding of emigration from Acids or the breaking down withdraw from the islands without flagrantly betraying the very people who asked for independence. The menace of seizure by Japan, or flooding of emigration from Asia, or the breaking down of the country through economic pressure in a world of keen competition would be too great. Time may come when the United States may relieve itself of responsibility for the Philippines, but that time seems to be beyond the horizon now within our vision." (May 20, 1931.)

Hartford Times: "In view of all the circumstances and conditions, the Secretary's [Mr. Hurley's] stand seems to be well taken. * * The advice to proceed slowly and cautiously possesses the elements of soundness." (February 12, 1932.)

Bangor Daily News: "As the cards lie, it would seem that the safest and best thing for our sunburned brothers of those fruitful isles is to remain under the benevolent management of Uncle Sam isles is to remain under the benevolent management of Uncle Sam and the protection of his big stick." (June 10, 1931.)

Portland Evening News: "Without retreating at all from the position that the Philippine Islands must eventually be free, this country should find it easy to concur with Secretary Hurley that the time for independence is not yet at hand and will not be at any predictable time." (February 13, 1932.)

Portland Evening Express: "There would be no objection from anyone in this country to granting the islanders their independence if we believed that they would survive the severance of their relations with us. Most Americans who have any knowledge of the subject do not believe that under existing conditions they would, and, therefore, to cut them loose to shift for themselves would be to shirk the responsibilities that our past relations with them have entailed."

Haverhill Gazette: "The Filipinos have the inherent right to independence which all peoples possess. It would be nothing less than contemptible cruelty, however, to cast them adrift solely to erect a tariff wall against them." (October 31, 1931.)

Lowell Courier-Citizen: "Uncle Sam * * * can hardly afford to let go until the islands are fit to go it alone. When that will be no one knows." (January 6, 1932.)

Worcester Evening Gazette: "America is bound to see that before the islands are cut adrift they are able to maintain themselves." (June 19, 1931.)

Providence News Tribuna: "Secretary Hyptorical and the contempts of the con Haverhill Gazette: "The Filipinos have the inherent right to Providence News Tribune: "Secretary Hurley's statement is a convincing document against the proposal of those on both sides of the Pacific—American farmers in certain lines as well as Philippine enthusiasts for freedom—that we shall terminate our connection with the islands. Some day? We are pledged to that under given conditions. But not now or soon." (February 12, Providence Journal: "Well-informed Americans will agree that it would be bad for the Philippines as well as for us to grant them their independence in the early future." (February 10, 1932.) Other papers, scattered throughout the New England region, which hold the view that economic self-sufficiency is the prerequi-which hold the view that evolutine sensual terms in the process site to political separation, include the Danbury News, which calls immediate independence "hardly wise"; the Ansonia Sentinel; the Norwich Bulletin; the Waterbury Democrat; the Meriden Journal; the Hartford Courant; the Hampshire Gazette; the Worcester Telegram, which observes that "America is bound to see that before the islands are cut adrift they are able to maintain themselves"; the Springfield Union, which whole-heartedly back Governor General Davis's view; the Springfield Republican, which says that "when independence is granted, the conditions of the grant should be considerate of Filipino interests," and that "nothing harsh or be considerate of Filipino interests," and that "nothing harsh or callously selfish need disfigure the disposition of the problem"; the Gardner News; the Gloucester Times; the Fitchburg Sentinel, which feels that "political independence to-day would be an illusion"; the Bath Daily Times; the Waterville Sentinel; the Bangor Commercial; the Kennebec Journal; the Manchester Union; the New-

THE MIDDLE ATLANTIC STATES

(New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania)

(New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania)

New York City, ever the home of alarmism, contributes at least one opinion which represents a frank shrugging off of American responsibility for the Philippines. "One thing that will probably happen in the next 20 years," states the New York News (January 20, 1932), "is the taking of the Philippines by Japan. We can quit these islands now in peace, or we can wait for a humiliating national adventure there. Which is it to be? The Philippines are a nuisance to us, and we owe them nothing." This argument, however, is opposed by many calmer heads in equally influential positions, among them the Philadelphia Bulletin, which writes (July 14, 1931): "If this country should end free trade with the Philippines, it would forfeit its present hold on this important section of the Far East as an export outlet. American agriculture, tion of the Far East as an export outlet. American agriculture, no less than the manufacturing industry, would stand to lose immensely by such a reversal of previous policy."

Other journals, small and large, back the administration's present stand in favor of waiting for the Filipinos to achieve economic independence before making further moves in the direction of political independence. The following are examples:

New York Journal: "Mr. Hurley said that it would be criminal folly to turn the islands loose in the Far East while a war is raging in China, the end of which none can yet foresee. The fact is that it would be sheer lunacy. There should be no change whatever in the present status of the Philippines, now or for years to come." (February 13, 1932.)

New York Times: "There is no abandonment of the hope ultimately to set up a self-governing Filipino republic, but the strong and prevailing conviction at present was well set forth by Secretary Hurley when he declared to the House committee that the tary Hurley when he declared to the House committee that the people of the islands are not yet ready for it, either economically or politically." (February 12, 1932.)

New York Sun: "It would be a cowardly thing to give independence to the Filipinos now." (February 13, 1932.)

New York Herald Tribune: "* * * the idea of cutting the Philippines adrift for this or that selfish or cowardly reason will be as criminally foolish a hundred years from now as ten, and that the Congress could do the Filipino no greater service than by giving the islands a fixed status under the American flag * * * Secretary Hurley has made a bold and devastating sweep of practically all the humbug with which this Philippine question of practically all the humbug with which this Philippine question has been obscured. The logical sequel to his splendid use of the broom would now be a constructive program for the permanent improvement of these islands as inalienable American propnent improvement of these islands as inalienable American property." (February 12, 1932.)

New York Mirror: "For the present we ought not to surrender our possessions in the Pacific." (February 12, 1932.)

Brooklyn Eagle: "On the whole, we think it would be well for the Filipinos to distrust the sugar and tobacco Greeks even bearing gifts. Their best policy is a waiting game." (February 13, 1932.)

Albany Evening News: "The Philippines are not ready economi-

Albany Evening News: "The Philippines are not ready economically for independence. It would be a mistake and a danger to grant it now." (July 2, 1931.)

Newark Evening News: "It is up to us to go through with it to an end more conclusive than just granting independence because we are tired of the Philippines, or because some of their products compete with ours." (February 15, 1932.)

Philadelphia Record: "Because of free importation of competing goods from the Philippines, western farm States are demanding that the islands be cut adrift. Congress and the State Department will surely not decide so momentous an issue on grounds so localized. If western farmers need and deserve protection * * * ways of furnishing that protection will be found other than that of casting the island folk loose without assurance that their independence can be maintained." (July 5, 1931.)

Pittsburgh Press: "The right of the Philippines to their independence can not be denied—their right to have it whenever they pendence can not be denied—their right to have it whenever they want it. But this imperialistic chapter in our national history

Pittsburgh Press: "The right of the Philippines to their independence can not be denied—their right to have it whenever they want it. But this imperialistic chapter in our national history will not be made any brighter if we cut them loose for the reason, and in the brutal manner, advocated by those interests which claim to be hurt by Philippine competition." (July 16, 1931.)

Philadelphia Public Ledger: "Those American politicians and beet-sugar growers who are largely responsible for the renewal of the agitation for independence are not the true friends of the Filipinos. Nothing worse could happen to these people than to be deprived of the beneficent guardianship of the United States." (July 27, 1931.)

Philadelphia Inquirer: "If the Philippines are ever to become completely independent, it must be under far different conditions than those which now exist." (October 30, 1931.)

Wilkes-Barre Record: "We have seen by the fearful plight of other nations the danger of adopting self-government prematurely. We do not want to make ourselves responsible for a repetition can that misfortune in the Philippines. We do not want to expose the natives to revolution on the inside and aggression from the outside, due to native incapacity." (January 21, 1932.)

There are but few comments indicating an opposite attitude. The Brooklyn Citizen writes (February 13, 1932): "The Citizen, as it has frequently stated, is in favor of granting independence to the Philippines as soon as the islanders consider that they are ready for it, irrespective of the opinions of the men in Washington." The Jersey City Journal, combating the argument that independence would throw the Filipinos into the hands of the Japanese, says (February 13, 1932): "There are not yet any good reasons stated why the United States could not enter into a treaty with the Philippines and with China, Japan, and the other nations, which would effectively guarantee the islands against invasion." Two papers not mentioned above are inclined to wish we were out of the dilem surrender "-the Meadville Republican, and the Washington (Pa.)

THE SOUTH ATLANTIC STATES

(Delaware, District of Columbia, Florida, Georgia, Maryland, North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia, West Virginia)

Editorial opinion not only in the Nation's Capital but through the entire south Atlantic region is strongly against immediate independence for the Philippines and is particularly bitter against the activities of the so-called American sugar lobbyists. "The fact that Japan is engaged in an imperialistic spree should be sufficient to silence the demands of the Filipinos for independence at this time," writes the Washington Post (February 13, 1932).

"There is not the slightest indication that the islands could main-"There is not the slightest indication that the islands could maintain their freedom under present conditions in the Orient." The powerful Baltimore Sun is equally strong in its warning (July 14, 1931): "We can not afford to rush headlong into a grant of political freedom that might spell economic subservience and failure." As to the efforts of American agriculturalists to block Philippine competition, the Washington Herald calls their statements "false propaganda," saying (December 1, 1931): "The truth will be dragged into the light of day by a Senate investigation of the false propaganda which special interests have financed for the nefarious purpose of deceiving the American farmer." The Atlanta Georgian goes deeper into the question and arrives at the same conclusion. "The total exclusion of Philippine sugar from this country," says that paper (December 5, 1931), "would not affect the situation in the least, so far as the American sugar producer is concerned. It would only mean the admission of more Cuban sugar, as American sugar interests in Cuba well know.

* * Thousands of American farmers have been deceived by this propaganda."

Two smaller papers, the Williamson (W. Va.) News (January 28, 1932) and the Martinsburg (W. Va.) Journal (February 2, 1932), both tend to regret our possession of the Philippines, but 1932), both tend to regret our possession of the Philippines, but make no specific independence recommendations. "Our experience in colonial expansion" they say, "has not been a happy one. We wouldn't miss much if we had never had Porto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Hawaii, or the Philippines." One other paper, the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot (February 15, 1932), attacks Mr. Hurley's views, saying: "By what right does Mr. Hurley assume that the Philippine Islands, once set free and their independence regularized by solemn treaties recognized by the powers, will be regularized by solemn treaties recognized by the powers, will ne less safe from international robbery and spoliation than any other small nation incapable of insuring its independence by its own army and navv?"

army and navy?

Other South Atlantic journals, however, oppose the granting of immediate independence in forthright terms, as will be seen from immediate independence in forthright terms, as will be seen from the editorials quoted below.

Baltimore News: "In view of the grave developments on the mainland of Asia, Congress should postpone indefinitely further consideration of all proposals to end American sovereignty over the Philippines, now or at any fixed date in the future * * *. To abandon the Philippines to their fate until they are prepared economically, politically, and from a military point of view to maintain their independence would be a desertion of duty." (February 10, 1932.)

Jacksonville (Fla.) Times Union: "The Government of the United States surely can not be a party to bring about disaster United States, surely, can not be a party to bring about disaster to the Philippines, which have received the protection of this Government in order that they might advance sufficiently to become capable of administering their own government." (May 29, 1931.)

Lakeland Ledger and Star-Telegram: "As a matter of fact, the Philippine Islands are not ready for independence. It is impossible to conceive how they could make such an advance in 33 years as to enable them to govern themselves." (October 29, 1931.)

Atlanta Constitution: "On the face of all the reliable data obtainable in the Philippines, the people over there are distinctly not now fit to take upon themselves the burdens and critical obligations of national sovereignty. In the present state of world affairs, and particularly as they are in the Orient, scarcely anything more lamentable could happen to the Filipinos than to hand them their sovereignty. We can not now afford to throw up our obligations and scuttle off the islands, leaving the people to the possible evils of their own follies and inefficiencies, or to the envy and rapacity of oriental neighbors." (October 29, 1931.)

Columbus Enquirer-Sun: "The Filipinos will do well to retain Columbus Enquirer-Sun: "The Filipinos will do well to retain American protection, at least until they have established economic security and a considerable degree of international understanding."

security and a considerable degree of international understanding."
(February 24, 1931.)

Macon Evening News: "Since economic conditions are more often responsible for the collapse of governments than political oppression or ineptitude, it is vitally important to the United States that the Philippines should have a sound agricultural and industrial footing before being granted independence. Otherwise, Soviet crusaders would probably sweep immediately into the Philippines from China." (February 27, 1931.)

Winston-Salem Journal: "The present economic conditions the world over make the present a poor time to launch the Philippines out upon a sea of individual national existence. It is very doubtful whether any jury of international statesmen could be assembled that would render a verdict of independence for the Philippines at this time." (November 2, 1931.)

Durham Herald: "The Filippinos could not likely make the grade if left to paddle their own canoe, and would soon fall into trouble of a serious nature. It is not impossible that Japan would like if left to paddle their own cance, and would soon fall into trouble of a serious nature. It is not impossible that Japan would like to have the islands as a naval base." (October 31, 1931.)

Asheville Times: "There is no warrant for the agitation to set free at this time a people not yet prepared to stand alone in either politics or economics." (October 31, 1931.)

Greenville News: "Sugar producers want to put a tariff on Philippine goods, and they see no way of doing that except by having the islands set up as an independent nation. So they are for Philippine independence. The question, of course, should not be considered from any such selfish grounds, and Mr. Hoover's pronouncement is a wholesome curb to a movement of that sort." (October 29, 1931.)

Richmond News-Leader: "To build up Philippine agriculture on the assumption that the market is to be open, and then to close the gates, is economic foul play." (October 28, 1931.) Norfolk Ledger-Dispatch: "The United States is committed to Norfolk Ledger-Dispatch: "The United States is committed to independence for the Filipinos eventually. But the time for that independence is not yet at hand." (January 24, 1931.)

Parkersburg News: "Entirely out of the question at this time is Philippine independence. The situation in the Far East has shown this country that America must control the Philippines and Hawaii for bases of military operations." (February 13, 1932.)

Wheeling Intelligencer: "Philippine independence at this time is ill-advised." (February 13, 1932.)

THE EAST SOUTH CENTRAL STATES

(Alabama, Kentucky, Mississippi, Tennessee)

The tone is set for this mixed region by a considered editorial in the Lexington (Ky.) Leader. "Some of the Democratic newspapers," says that journal (July 29, 1931), "seem to have undergone a change of heart about the problem of Philippine independence. They continue to speak of American occupation and control as 'imperialism,' and to talk of ultimate independence, but they do not think that the time has come to set the Filipinos control as 'imperialism,' and to talk of ultimate independence, but they do not think that the time has come to set the Filipinos adrift. * * It may be that the Philippines will at some distant time be given independence. * * * But as time passes and the financial and economic ties between the two countries are strengthened, the demand for independence will probably grow less and less vociferous." This prediction is followed by the following judgment as applying to the present: "Many Filipino leaders have changed their minds about immediate independence. It would prove to be a calamity, an act of scuttling, and a black mark against this country. It would, at the same time, prove a bad move from the standpoint of national defense."

These same general sentiments find echo throughout the region in a number of strong journals. A selection appears below.

Birmingham News: "While this country is willing to grant that independence avidly sought by the politically minded islanders in due course, Americans will hardly feel like dropping them like a hot brick because of fears that Japan will come swooping down to capture them." (December, 1931.)

Paducah Sun-Democrat: "Before striking out for themselves politically, the Filipinos should take a lesson from Cuba and secure their economic independence. Cuba has seen some rough sledding economically because of its separation from our country." (November 16, 1931.)

Talladega Home: "The argument from the sugar interests that the Philippines should be freed so that their Talladega Home: "The argument from the sugar interests that the Philippines should be freed so that their sugar crop would come under the United States tariff ban for the benefit of the sugar growers is not very statesmanly. Looking at everything from a dollar standpoint is one reason why so much injustice is done by legislation." (July 20, 1931.)

Mobile Register: "If the islands are to be independent, they must also be self-reliant and able to hold their own in the conflicts that rage in the Far East." (July 19, 1931.)

Anniston Star: "America should see the Philippines through, guiding them and upholding them until such time as they can make their way without assistance." (March 5, 1931.) Tuscaloosa News: "The duty and obligation remains to hold

Tuscaloosa News: "The duty and obligation remains to hold things together until the people are able to stand upon their own feet." (March 9, 1931.)

Louisville Courier-Journal: "The present is obviously no time to set the Philippines adrift." (February 11, 1932.)

Meridian Star: "For America to withdraw the protection of our flag from our oriental wards might mean Philippine economic destruction from within as well as military oppression from without. America will no doubt continue the present policy of watchful waiting—guidance and protection until the Filipinos are in all essentials ready for self-government." (March 15, 1931.)

Knoxville Journal: "While a love of liberty and dream of independence holds them to remember America's pledge to them of ultimate independence, in all sane process of government they would delay their national dream until liberty and prosperity may become one and the same thing." (March 1, 1931.)

One small journal, the Kingsport (Tenn.) Times, feels otherwise about it, and takes the attitude, condemned by those papers in-about it, and takes the attitude, condemned by those papers about it, and takes the attitude, condemned by those papers interested in upholding national responsibility, that we would be wise to get out from under (November 30, 1931). "It would seem that it would be the part of wisdom to give the Philippines their independence * * *. We have no part in the endless wars and hates of Europe and Asia * * *. And our connection with the Philippines certainly does entangle us to a considerable extent with Asiatic military and diplomatic affairs."

Many other journals throughout the region, however, stand Many other journals throughout the region, however, stand squarely on the position that political independence must wait upon economic independence, which means a postponement of action for the present. Included in this group are the Gadsden Times; the Ashland Independent, and the Natchez Democrat, both of which urge the Fllipinos to "take a lesson from unhappy Cuba and establish their economic independence before demanding political separation"; the Hattiesburg American, which urges that we "help the Fllipinos gain economic independence that they may be truly prepared for political independence"; the Vicksburg Herald; the Laurel Leader-Call; and the Chattanooga News, which says that the arguments for delayed independence "must command attention."

THE WEST SOUTH CENTRAL STATES (Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Texas)

In this region, particularly in Louisiana, one would expect strong arguments in favor of protecting American products, especially sugar, against Philippine encroachment, and, indeed, the New Orleans States makes the following forthright statement (January 17, 1932): "A large number of Americans believe, including a great many in Louisiana, that the sooner we give the Philippines their independence we shall be the better off for doing so." From their independence we shall be the better off for doing so." From the same city, however, comes a clear and forceful statement of the opposing point of view on the Philippine import question. "Some of the islanders point out," writes the New Orleans Tribune (November 18, 1931), "that even were the islands independent, it is entirely unlikely that copra, the dried coconut-meat fiber, from which oil is extracted, could be made dutiable under any reasonable tariff. It is the raw material for large soap and other industries in the United States, which could be expected to fight such a tariff. Within the last few years realization has been spreading tariff. Within the last few years realization has been spreading that many pleas for tariffs by advocates of regional protection have been in a high degree ill advised." From Texas the San Antonio Express sounds a similar note of warning (October 29, 1931):
"Congress * * should consider the islands' value as a purchasor of American group has a purchasor of American group has been absolute that the protection of the purchase of chaser of American goods before checking the imports of Philippine sugar, copra, and manila hemp."

The drive against Philippine independence before the islands have achieved economic self-sufficiency is taken up in other parts of the region also.

The Okmulgee Sunday Times-Democrat: "The Philippines have much to do yet before they are ready for independence. It would be an ignoble end to put the Filipinos on their own in the middle, of the experiment." (April 12, 1931.)

The Tulsa World: "The Philippines are not in an economic position to go into world affairs."

The Houston Chronicle: "In the present disturbed condition of the Far East, it would be unfortunate, to say the least, for the Filipinos to be cast adrift." (October 29, 1931.)

Fort Worth Star-Telegram: "There are a great many Americans Fort Worth Star-Telegram: "There are a great many Americans who regard the duty-free sale of Philippine products in this country as an imposition upon American producers. It will be a sad day for Filipinos if this view takes hold in America sufficiently strong enough to hasten 'freedom' for the islands. It will be the same sort of freedom as that coming to a man who is kicked out of a place of safety and comfort into a jungle of discomfort and danger." (April 31, 1931.)

Beaumont Enterprise: "Informed opinion is overwhelmingly opposed to granting complete autonomy to the Philippines until the Filipino people are better equipped to govern themselves and the islands are placed on a firm economic foundation." (February (February islands are placed on a firm economic foundation."

12, 1932.)

Beaumont Journal: "Independence at this inauspicious time would be a dangerous thing." (November 3, 1931.)

Denison Herald: "Much as it may displease some of the Filipino politicians, the Stars and Stripes will probably continue to float over Manila." (February 14, 1932.)

Dallas Times-Herald: "The simple fact is that complete independence for the islands is out of the question at this time." (November 1, 1931.)

Dallas Morning News: "The present is no time for complete in-dependence. The Far East is in turmoil and in all the East there is the sinister threat arising from Bolshevist propaganda." (April

One paper, the Oklahoma City Oklahoman (February, 1932), dis-One paper, the Okianoma City Okianoman (reordary, 1932), dissents, saying: "Many will believe that America has played the good Samaritan rôle for the Filipinos long enough, and that this country would be well rid of its far-eastern holdings, particularly since Americans are no longer welcome over there. Secretary Hurley speaks for the administration, but it is improbable that he aks for a majority of the American people."

speaks for a majority of the American people."

Other papers scattered throughout the area here considered, however, again attack the argument for independence because of Philippine competition or urge waiting for economic self-sufficiency. They include the New Orleans Times-Picayune; the Muskogee Phoenix; the Houston Press, which cries out against "self-ish interests" and "abrupt severing of economic bonds "; the San Antonio Light, which calls the sugar argument "false propaganda"; the Galveston Tribune; the Temple Telegram; the Waco News-Tribune; the Austin Statesman; the Denison Daily Herald; the Gainesville Daily Register, which says "the Filipinos might well wait for the dawn of a better day before they ask for complete independence"; and the Lake Charles American-Press.

THE EAST NORTH CENTRAL STATES

(Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Ohio, Wisconsin)

This region seems nearly unanimous in condemning the efforts of American farm groups to force through an independence measof American farm groups to force through an independence measure on grounds of national self-interest, and lays particular stress upon the high obligation of the United States to safeguard the welfare of the Filipino people. Typical of these sentiments is an editorial which appeared in the Milwaukee Sentinel (January 24, 1932), saying: "A group of energetic lobbyists are busy pumping Members of both Houses of Congress full of specious arguments for the case of Philippine freedom. * * It is to be hoped that the administration will take the first opportunity to discredit this Cuban propaganda." From Michigan comes a similar view, in the Ann Arbor News (July 16, 1931): "Uncle Sam has a moral responsibility that must not be submerged by lobbyists and politicians." Ohio echoes the sentiment when the Dayton Journal writes (November 2, 1931): "America can not quit and leave the islands to a fate that would include bloody civil war, foreign intervention, and ultimately, no doubt, a mandate that never would be surrendered by the holding power." Illinois, represented by the Decatur Herald, repeats bitterly (October 31, 1931): "If the Filipino gets independence within the next decade, it will not be because Americans still burn with the political idealism of Jefferson, but because the arrangement looks like smart business." And finally from the Muncie (Ind.) Evening Press (October 31, 1931) comes the reiterated warning: "Those who have studied the question can not escape the conviction that American responsibility to the Philippines demands retention of present control for the welfare of the natives themselves."

Backing these selected comments are a mass of editorials from all over the region here considered. A few of them are quoted below.

Dayton Herald: "The future of the islands is safer in American hands than in those of insular politicians. This trust can not be relinquished with honor until national development in the islands has reached such a point that their political and economic safety is assured." (February 13, 1932.)

is assured." (February 13, 1932.)

Springfield (III.) State Journal: "When special interests are urging the concession of immediate independence for selfish reasons America should display not only more magnanimity but more intelligence upon doing the right and just thing for the Chicago News: "Not devotion to high principle but selfish material considerations have caused a notable accession of strength to the Philippine-independence movement." (November 2, 1931.)

La Fayette Journal-Courier: "The fact remains that if we were to get out of the archipelago we should leave a lot of brown babies to get out of the archipelago we should leave a lot of brown babies adrift to be snapped up by the waiting Nippon. We are not getting out." (November 9, 1931.)

Fort Wayne Gazette: "Having been in sovereign occupancy for a third of a century we can not now get out without leaving 'the little brown brother' in some state of security both economically and politically." (November 2, 1931.)

Indianapolis Star: "There is probably more sentiment to cut the islands adrift in the ranks of American Congressmen than among the Filipinos themselves. The demagogues from a few sugar-beet States, echoed by a handful of other agricultural representatives, may be expected to clamor for independence. Their motives would be selfish. Such legislation would be little short of wanton neglect of a national responsibility." (May 28, 1931.)

Jackson Citizen-Patriot: "In view of unsettled political conditions in the Far East it is especially important that the United States should maintain its present sphere of influence. To free the Philippines at this time undoubtedly would mean their surrender to domination by another foreign power." (November 9, 1931.)

Kalamazoo Gazette: "To cast them off suddenly for the avowed Kalamazoo Gazette: "To cast them off suddenly for the avowed purpose of combating their trade would be hardly in keeping with the spirit in which we are supposed to have been exercising our suzerainty all these years." (August 1, 1931.)

Battle Creek Enquirer: "No right-thinking American wishes to surrender the Filipinos to the certain ill fortune which would attend the withdrawal of United States protection." (August 5, 1931.)

Lansing State Journal: "We understand all about the fine theories involved and we have kindly enough feeling for 'our little brown brothers,' but our judgment tells us that it is good neither for them nor for the Orient to turn them loose at this time." (January 5, 1932.)

Grand Rapids Press: "The Philippines are not yet developed either politically or economically for independence." (February 15, 1932.)

15, 1932.)
Detroit News: "Would it not be better to wait a while, develop more diversified industries, and achieve a more balanced economic situation?" (October 31, 1931.)
Marion Star: "Uncle Sam hasn't attempted to hide the fact that the Philippines represent a hot potato in his hands, but a potato that he can't very well drop lest it turn cold and be picked up by another party with a great need for cold potatoes. The other party might be Japan, for instance." (January 12, 1932.)
Cincinnati Inquirer: "Premature independence would be dangerous both for this country and the island government." (January 27, 1932.)

ary 27, 1932.)
Cincinnati Times-Star: "The conclusion is inevitable that the Cincinnati Times-Star: "The conclusion is inevitable that the economic dependence of the islands on the United States is such that political independence would mean economic suicide. In fact, one big commercial house in Manila has taken out insurance against Philippine independence!"

Oshkosh Daily Northwestern: "When politicians and selfish interests prate and shout about immediate independence for the Philippines it would be well to investigate their motives."

Philippines, it would be well to investigate their motives." (August 25, 1931.)

Milwaukee Journal: "When you have a child you do not turn it Minwatkee Johnshi. When you have a child you to not turn it loose in the world all at once. You expect it to grow up. In the same way we shall have to give increasing freedom of action to the Filipinos until they finally attain a dominion status and then, if they want it, complete independence." (November 24,

One moderately strong paper holds some doubts in the matter. The Fort Wayne Journal Gazette says: "If America has any notion, as some urge should be the fact, of washing hands off the bloody affair between China and Japan and permitting the entire situation in the Far East to develop and work out as it may without any intervention by us, the sooner we clear out of the Philippines the better. Otherwise, we can not clear out."

Many other papers, however, back the stand that there should be no independence, or no independence until economic self-sufficiency has been attained. Among them are the Adrian Telegram; the Flint Journal; the Grand Rapids Herald, which says that "some independence must come, but not yet and not too soon"; the Saginaw Sunday News; the Pontiac Daily Press; the Iron Mountain News, which says, "the times invite a closer cuddling under the friendly arm of Uncle Sam"; the Sandusky Register; the Steubenville Star; the Youngstown Vindicator; the Columbus Dispatch, which calls postponement "the better part of wisdom"; the Toledo Blade; the Pomeroy Tribune; the Lowell-ville Journal; the Springfield Sun; the Chicago Daily Tribune; the Chicago American; the Chicago Herald-Examiner; the Chicago Evening Post; the Jacksonville Journal; the Quincy Herald-Whig; Many other papers, however, back the stand that there should Chicago American; the Chicago Herald-Examiner; the Chicago Evening Post; the Jacksonville Journal; the Quincy Herald-Whig; the Rockford Star; the Rock Island Argus; the Danville Commercial News; the Racine Times Call; the Racine Journal News; the Kenosha Evening News; the Green Bay Press-Gazette; the Superior Evening Telegram; the Rhinelander News; the Kokomo Tribune: the Anderson Herald; the Fort Wayne News Sentinel.

THE WEST NORTH CENTRAL STATES

(Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota)

"We seem about ready," says the Des Moines (Iowa) (November 1, 1931), "to grant autonomy to the Filipinos not because they want it but because our sugar growers and dairymen want it." This states the issue for the region, which answers it variously. In answer to the proposal of independence the St. Louis Globe-Democrat lays down the law (November 1, 1931): Louis Globe-Democrat lays down the law (November 1, 1931):

"One point on which Filipino politicians and all other Filipinos may be certain is that they can not eat their cake and keep it too. They can not have both independence and the special American concessions that have been the life of Filipino prosperity." The Minneapolis Tribune, commenting upon proposals for a progressively increasing tariff against Filipino products, says (September 18, 1931): "If such a transition is possible only at the expense of the American farmer, and if it simply means that the dairy farmer must submit a great deal longer to a competition he should not have to undergo, then we believe some more abrupt shift to autonomy is in order." The strong St. Paul Pioneer Press, however, takes a much less radical view of the problem (September 25, 1931): "The interest of the dairy farmer in end-(September 25, 1931): "The interest of the dairy farmer in ending competition with imported coconut oils is one weighty factor for consideration in connection with the Philippines. What they stand to gain is not so much as they are being led to expect. By no means does all, or even most, of the imported copra products go into butter substitutes. Their interest in Philippine independence is certainly not such a one as precludes their sharing whole-heartedly in a wish that America meet the problem with whole-heartedly in a wish that America meet the problem with full regard for every obligation that is owed the Filipino." And the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, one of the strongest papers in the region, sounds the final note of warning against precipitate action (July 20, 1931): "We would be false to our pledges and would abandon our altruistic aims, and would doom our unparalleled undertaking to establish a republic in the Philippines, if we withrew prematurely, before our task is finished."

Other strong organs in the region have expressed candid opinions on the question. A few are quoted below.

Joplin Globe: "To grant the Filipinos independence when they are in no wise able to govern themselves and have no prestige to protect themselves from the ambitions of different nations of the Orient would be a poor way for us to carry out the obligation of humanitarian service we have all along pretended and believed to be our aim." (July 14, 1931.)

Kansas City Star: "Until the necessary foundation for political independence is laid in a self-supporting economy, the conclusion of the Secretary of War must be accepted that the best interests of the Filipinos and of the United States are served by a continuation of the status quo." (February 14, 1932.)

Kansas City Times: "We should not be keeping faith with the Kansas City Times: "We should not be keeping faith with the Filipinos if we should give them political independence while they are still economically dependent." (November 10, 1931.)

Kansas City Post: "Japan's treatment of China will delay Philippine independence indefinitely." (February 2, 1932.)

Topeka State Journal: "Premature withdrawal might upset stability, with unfortunate consequences to the peace of the world." (April 23, 1931.) Wichita Beacon: "Our insular possessions in Pacific waters will wisely wait for a more auspicious time before insisting upon political separation from the Stars and Stripes."

Emporia Gazette: "Their (the sugar trusts') Senators will vote to sever all connections with the islands. This would mean unemployment and suffering in the Philippines and higher prices for the American consumer. And what could be nicer if you happen to be a beet-sugar producer?" (December 18, 1931.)

Lincoln State Journal: "The granting of immediate independence would be a disaster for the Philippines * * *." (October Omaha Bee-News: "When the new Congress assembles its members will be bombarded with demands to haul down the American flag over the Philippines upon the ground that a great mass of Philippine products are coming into this country in direct competition with American farm products. American farmers should not allow themselves to be swindled by false propaganda of this cort." (July 11, 1021) sort." (July 11, 1931.)

Fargo Forum: "Sufficient time for sound economic adjustment is most desirable." (October 30, 1931.)

Sioux Falls Argus-Leader: "The United States should grant the Filipinos their freedom, but ordinary decency requires that we properly prepare this child we have adopted before casting it out upon the cold world."

Duluth News-Tribune: "Immediate independence under present conditions would be a calamity." (September 26, 1931.)

Duluth Herald: "The present agitation in this country for immediate freedom for the Filipinos would be more impressive if it did not so palpably come from people who care more for shutting out Philippine sugar for the sake of their own beet sugar than they do about human freedom and the sanctity of the word than they do about human freedom and the sanctity of the word America has given to free the Philippines as soon as it had a right to do it." (October 31, 1931.)

St. Cloud Times: "If independence is to be given them (the Philippines), as a matter of fair play there should be an economic adjustment for the benefit of both them and the United States. The problem is too big and too important to be solved by merely getting out from under." (September 22, 1931.)

Sioux City Tribune: "The moral obligation this country assumed in attempting to make the Philippines self-sufficient has not yet been fully discharged. In the very nature of things the Little Brown Brother is apt to remain the white man's burden for some time to come, however discomforting the facts may be." (October 31, 1931.)

(October 31, 1931.)

Dubuque Telegraph-Herald: "Immediate independence is not

Dubuque Telegraph-Herald: "Immediate independence is not the right course to pursue, because it will destroy the Filipinos economically * * and will push them unprotected into the midst of Asiatic militarism and imperialism." (September 3, 1931.) Cedar Rapids Gazette: "It is to the interest of the United States, both sentimentally and practically, to devote some attention to the economic security of the Philippines before turning them loose in a world that has even our own veteran industrialists hereldered." (Sentember 1, 1931.)

tion to the economic security of the Philippines before turning them loose in a world that has even our own veteran industrialists bewildered." (September 1, 1931.)

Mason City Gazette: "We believe that the islanders are in no sense prepared for independence, that to grant independence would throw the conflicting races and religions at each other's throats overnight." (August 10, 1931.)

Three papers, one in Minnesota and two in Missouri, are inclined to minimize our responsibility in the Philippines and to wish we were out of them. "If they can not successfully paddle their own canoe now," says the St. Cloud Times-Journal, "they will not be better prepared in 5 or 10 years. If they want to be free, let them go with our blessing. If they can not make a go of it, Japan is close at hand." The St. Louis Star adds (February 12, 1932): "Considering the best interests of the islanders, independence may be a mistake. But isn't the making of mistakes one of the rights of man? If the Filipinos are making a mistake, and are anxious to make it, they should be allowed ing a mistake, and are anxious to make it, they should be allowed to do so." Finally, the St. Louis Times says (February 10, 1932): "It may not be to-morrow or within half a century that she (Japan) will assert her influence in the Philippines, but the time will in all probability come. Meanwhile, we should be well out."

Other papers throughout the district, however, seem generally opposed to immediate independence, taking their stand behind those who, with President Hoover, believe that economic independence must come first.

In Iowa, other papers backing this stand include the Council Bluffs Nonpareil, which calls it "sound and sensible"; Wallace's Farmer; the Iowa City Press Citizen; the Davenport Times; the Waterloo Daily Courier; the Atlantic News; the Fort Dodge Messenger and Chronicle.

senger and Chronicle.

In Kansas, the same stand is also taken by the Iola Register, which says, "It would indeed be a tragic joke if the Philippines should be finally given their independence for no other reason than to help the sugar interests of Cuba"; the Leavenworth Times, which says, "They must wait until they are strong enough to fight their own battles;" the Newton Kansan-Republican, which says, "the time is not now;" and the Hutchinson News.

Additional Minnesota papers which have expressed themselves as backing this stand include the Rochester Post-Bulletin; the Faribault News: the Albert Lea Tribune: the Brainerd Daily as backing this stand include the Rochester Post-Bulletin, the Faribault News; the Albert Lea Tribune; the Brainerd Daily Dispatch; the Crookston Times.

From Missouri comes further backing for this position, from the Hannibal Courier Post, which calls immediate independence, "not keeping faith with the Filipinos;" the Kansas City Journal

"not keeping faith with the Filipinos;" the Kansas City Journal Post, which calls waiting for economic independence "eminently sense;" the Springfield Leader; the Columbian Missourian.

Nebraska adds backing to the "no political independence before economic independence" stand from the Kearney Hub, which says, "There is no way to let them go at present;" in North Dakota the Jamestown Sun and the Grand Forks Herald take the same stand; and in South Dakota five more journals—the Huron Huronits, the Aberdeen American the Mitchell Republican the Huronite, the Aberdeen American, the Mitchell Republican, the Yankton Press and Dakotan, and the Vermilion Plain Talk-have gone on record as backing the same view.

THE MOUNTAIN STATES

(Arizona, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Wyoming, Utah)

In these regions, as one would expect, the debate between those who wish to eliminate Philippine competition with American agricultural products and those who wish to deal with the Filipinos unselfishly becomes acrimonious. Those in the first category are well represented by the Great Falls (Mont.) Tribune, which says (January 28, 1932): "Those who have reasons of their own for expressing Philippine independence contend that the Filipine opposing Philippine independence contend that the Filipinos are not yet ready for self-government. But that argument does not seem substantiated. * * * The Philippines should be put on the same tariff basis as any other foreign domain. The Filipinos are willing, even anxious, that this should be done. Propaganda are willing, even anxious, that this should be done. Propaganda—it is nothing more than that—has spread the report that the Filipinos have abandoned their efforts and wish to remain under the American wing." The Ogden (Utah) Standard Examiner (February 19, 1931), adds: "Many Americans, including the sugar people, would not be opposed to granting an immediate separation. The holding of the islands may eventually involve us in trouble with Japan." The Loveland (Colo.) Herald sounds the same note (January 2, 1932): "Let them (Senators Costraan and La Folgers) insist upon independence for the Philippines (a matter of LETTE) insist upon independence for the Philippines (a matter of long-deferred justice) and thus give relief from the unfair competition from those islands to our sugar and fruit and other industries." Hotly opposed to such sentiments, however, are such papers as the influential Rocky Mountain News, which says (July 15, 1931): "This imperialistic chapter in our national history will papers as the influential Rocky Mountain News, which says (July 15, 1931): "This imperialistic chapter in our national history will not be made any brighter if we cut the Philippines loose for the reason, and in the brutal manner, advocated by some of those interests which claim to be hurt by Philippine competition."

Other papers throughout the region are equally strongly opposed to such action, as the quotations below indicate.

Sheridan Press: "Any attempt to give the Philippines their independence for mercenary reasons is very apt to prove a boomerang. It would be foolish to give it to them for the sake of a high tariff." (November 19, 1931.)

Colorado Springs Gazette: " * * the hypocritical contention that the Philippines ought, of right, to be free. * * * The Lewistown (Mont.) Democrat News: "It might be well for us to maintain the status quo in the islands pending a further development of Japanese ambitions." (January 21, 1932.)

Lewiston (Idaho) Tribune: "There are certain to be those who will defy the voice of the President and demand independence because of tariff gains or losses. Their demand should be ignored, their voice and the president and demand should be ignored. their votes cast aside by a militant majority." (October 31,

THE PACIFIC STATES

(California, Oregon, Washington)

(California, Oregon, Washington)

A note of scorn for those who would retain the Philippines to protect the interests of the Filipinos comes from the Yakima (Wash.) Herald. "If the United States must retain control of the Philippine Islands because the Filipinos need a free market in which to sell their agricultural products," says that paper bitterly (November 10, 1931), "why should not generous old Uncle Sam abolish the tariff barrier against other nations struggling to attain economic security?" Overwhelming, however, is the opposition to this point of view. "It would be shameful," says the Fresno Bee (October 28, 1931), "to set the islands free and then, as some Congressmen have proposed, to slap a ruinous tariff on Philippine products." "Independence could be granted the islands now only in violation of obligations assumed in good faith," writes the Long Beach Sun (May 13, 1931). "To let them go now would be an utter waste of the sums expended, the creation of a condition of chaos, and then the grabbing of the islands by Japan." Both the Los Angeles Examiner and the San Francisco Examiner (November 28, 1931) characterize the claims of American agricul-Both the Los Angeles Examiner and the San Francisco Examiner (November 28, 1931) characterize the claims of American agricultural interests as "false propaganda," while the Seattle Post Intelligencer adds (October 28, 1931): "Thousands of American farmers have been deceived. The Philippines are the best customers for American dairy products." Finally comes the Hollywood Citizen with a new view of the problem which is in favor of postponing independence for reasons peculiar to the region (November 2, 1931): "Exclusion of foreign competition (in Filipino commerce) has enabled the United States to build up a good trans-Pacific commerce which it is feared will be lost by granting trans-Pacific commerce which it is feared will be lost by granting freedom to the islands."

freedom to the islands."

Other papers along the Pacific coast also back the "no independence without economic security" stand and attack the proposals of the American agricultural interests. In addition to the San Francisco Examiner (February 11, 1932) and the Los Angeles Examiner (February 10, 1932), which have again expressed themselves strongly in the matter, the following may be noted:

San Francisco Chronicle: "The American market is the chief support of Philippine business. An unprepared stoppage of this outlet would be sheer disaster." (October 28, 1931.)

Fresno Republican: "Shall the United States turn the Philippines loose only to see them tied up again, through their own acts or weakness, to some other world power? No." (October 28, 1931.)

Stockton Herald: "Independence will come for the Philippines. But it can not materialize before the people show that they are prepared to survive economically, establish a stable government, and be prepared to protect themselves from menacing neighbors." (February 11, 1932.)

"The islanders must bide their time." Stockton Record:

tober 30, 1931.)

Santa Barbara Daily News: "The big question is whether the islands are ready for complete self rule, and whether, as an independent country, they could follow the trail of independence without slipping into an economic morass. Well-informed persons agree that the Philippines are not ready to cope with such a test, and it seems apparent that the present campaign to force the issue is born of selfishness pure and simple." (July 20, 1931.) Riverside Enterprise: "It would be a safe guess that the United States will not soon say good-by to the little brown brothers."

(May 28, 1931.) Covina Argus: "The Filipino is not fit to govern himself. Everybody but the Filipino knows it. But some day Uncle Sam Everybody but the Filipino knows it. But some day Uncle Sam will get tired and pull out, leaving them to their own devices, and they will be gobbied up by Japan or some other nation that has plans for their exploitation." (July 3, 1931).

Modesto News Herald: "So gross a betrayal (the plan to put a tariff on Philippine products) of a people supposed to be under our protection that one imagines a self-respecting burglar or safe blower would view it with disgust." (July 7, 1931.)

Portland Oregonian: "Agitation for independence of the Philippine Islands, which was formerly the specialty of idealists, has been taken up by others whose motives are grossly materialist."

been taken up by others whose motives are grossly materialist."

(July 24, 1931.)
Walla Walla Bulletin: "Right now the less there is talk about Philippine independence the better." (February 11, 1932.)

An inevitable conclusion: The American people do not believe in either the wisdom or the justice of granting Philippine independence at the present time

The editorials quoted in the foregoing, as has already been stated, have been gathered for the purposes of this survey with the assistance of an impartial and responsible news-clipping service. The mass of comment leads, as the reader has seen, to the inevitable conclusion that, as a whole, the American people to-day are in full agreement with those who feel that the Philippines should not now be given political independence and more specifical independence and more specific. are in full agreement with those who feel that the Philippines should not now be given political independence, and, more specifically, should not be given political independence until their economic independence is assured. Nowhere has the belief been seriously stated that economic independence is at present attained or is likely to be attained in the near future. Eventually independence, yes, but not immediate independence; this is the spirit that is obviously moving the American people, with heavy stress upon the dishonorable cruelty of cutting our island dependencies off from their largest market in present world circumstances. The feeling is also strong that in the present turmoil of the Far East, with American interests intimately involved with the Sino-Japanese dispute, and international relations in such delicate equilibrium that the introduction of new factors might upset them irrevocably, there exist additional and compelling reasons for not at present disturbing the Philippine status quo.

Statistical table

Statistical table

NEWSPAPERS WITH CIRCULATIONS OF 20,000 OR OVER AGAINST IMMEDI-ATE INDEPENDENCE

partial list of newspapers with circulations The following is a partial list of newspapers with circulations of 20,000 or more which have gone on record during the past year as either specifically against immediate Philippine independence, or specifically against the independence arguments of American producing groups, or definitely in favor of a policy of no political independence until economic independence has been assured. Newspapers with circulations under 20,000, holding similar views, have been excluded from this table, there being so many of them that their inclusion would have made the table unwieldy and difficult of evaluation. The newspapers represented in this table difficult of evaluation. The newspapers represented in this table alone represent a total circulation of 15,589,740, in 34 States, and alone represent a total circulation of 15,589,740, in 34 States, and may be taken as a fair example of the present state of American public opinion on the question. It is hardly necessary to add that newspapers with circulations over 20,000 not included in this table are of course not necessarily for immediate independence; the great majority of them have expressed no view on the issue. Indeed, it has not been considered necessary to present a table listing those newspapers with circulations over 20,000 which have taken a stand for immediate independence, since, as the text of this pamphlet indicates, their number is negligible.

Newspapers with circulations of 20,000 or over against immediate

independence
City and State	Newspaper	Circulation
ALABAMA
Birmingham		79, 984 21, 309
CALIFORNIA
Fresno. Do. Hollywood Long Beach Los Angeles. Do. Oakland San Francisco. Do. COLORADO	Republican Citizen Sun Examiner Herald-Express Tribune Chronicle	20,000 28,140 206,578 339,050 79,065
Denver	Rocky Mountain News.	39, 775
HartfordDo		39, 675 59, 098
Washington Do		73, 923 66, 743

Newspapers with circulations of 29,000 or over against immediate | Newspapers with circulations of 20,000 or over against immediate

City and State	Newspaper	Circulation	City and State	Newspaper	Circulation
FLORIDA			NEW YORK
Jacksonville	Florida Times-Union	49, 458	Albany	Evening News	47, 638
Miami	Herald	38, 886	New York	Eagle Herald-Tribune	100, 021 325, 432
GEORGIA	The state of the s		Do
	Constitution	87, 879	Do	Mirror	584, 508
Atlanta		74, 067	Do	Sun	291, 560
Do		83, 536	Γο Do		460, 794 39, 649
LLINOIS ILLINOIS	te de dront en tront de	19.00	Rochester	Democrat-Chronicle	82, 353
ILLINOIS		F00 000	Do	Journal Gazette
Chicago	American Daily Tribune	503, 896 813, 708	Schanectady		23, 331 50, 203
Do	Evening Post	38, 476	Do	Journal	62, 112
Do	Herald and Examiner.	422, 076	Do	Post-Standard	59, 719
Do	News Commercial News	412, 939 27, 858	Utica	Observer-Dispatch	35, 311
Danville Decatur	Herold	24, 929	NORTH CAROLINA
Quincy	Herald-Whig	26, 534	Charlotte	News	23, 010
Springfield	Illinois State Journal	38, 755	Charlotte	110#3	20,010
			OHIO
INDIANA	0	49 077	Cipcinnati	Enquirer	97, 561
Fort WayneDo	Gazette News-Sentinel	43, 077 48, 492	Do	Post
DoIndinapolis	Star	112, 178	Do.
Do	Times	73, 026	Cleveland Columbus	Dispatch	129, 445
Muncie	Star	23, 337	Dayton	Journal	26, 311
IOWA			Do	Herald	46, 225
	Gazette	35, 162	Steubenville	Herald-Star Blade	20, 404 129, 581
Cedar Rapids Davenport	Daily Times	25, 328	Youngstown	Telegram	35, 610
Dubucua	Telegraph-Herald	33, 128	Do		35, 127
Sioux City	Tribube		OKLAHOMA		-41000
Waterloo	Dany Courier	01,001	The state of the s	D. H. O.L.
KANSAS			Oklahema CityTulsa	Daily Oklahoman	98, 804 73, 147
Topeka	State Journal	20, 589	Tuisa.		10, 131
			PENNSYLVANIA	United the season legislation of	JAN SENDEN
KENTUCKY	SILLS STREET TO SEE STREET		Frie	Daily Times	33, 976
Lexington	Leader	20, 861	Philadelphia	Bulletin
Louisville	Courier-Journal	98, 077	Do
LOUISIANA			Do		141, 137
New Orleans	Times-Picayune	100, 397	Pittsburgh	Press	179, 260
Do	Tribune		Do	Sun	161, 675
			Wilkes-Barre	Record	28, 316
MAINE	months of the course	the finishing	RHODE ISLAND
Bangor	Daily Commercial	20, 979	Providence	Journal	45, 044
PortlandDo	Evening Express Press-Herald	24, 174 39, 512	Do		30, 232
D0	11035 1101 01101	00,012			L CHILL
MARYLAND			SOUTH CAROLINA		12 180 - 11
Baltimore	News	155, 774	Greenville	News	28, 657
Do	Sun	147, 555	SOUTH DAKOTA
MASSACHUSETTS		75	Sioux Falls	Argus-Leader	33, 647
	American	253, 320	Siody Palis	Algus-Deader	60, 011
Boston	Christian Seience		TENNESSEE	TOTAL PRINT DESCRIPTION	DILL DISC
20	Monitor.	All manifesters	Knoxville	Journal	35, 348
Do	Herald		Memphis	Evening Appeal	85, 655
Do			TEXAS	S in to reserve and control	The moves
Springfield	Union	38, 443	Beaumont	Patamaia	00 047
Worcester	Gazette		Dallas
Do	Telegram	46, 649	Do	Times-Herald	64, 221
MICHIGAN	OP E Office Ten	no la com	Fort Worth	Star-Telegram	50, 281
Detroit	Free Press	204, 616	Do		83, 784 72, 194
Do	News	295, 186	Do	Press	50, 034
Do	Times		San Antonio	Express	41, 791
Flint Grand Rapids	Journal Herald		Do	Light	46, 251
Do	Press	£4, 654	VIRGINIA		The Early
Jackson.	Citizen-Patriot	_ 26, CO9	Norfolk.	Ledger-Dispatch
Kalamazoo		28, 562	Richmond	News-Leader	67, 780
Pontiae Pontiae			WASHINGTON		The same
Saginaw	Sunday News	27, 325	Seattle	Post-Intelligencer	95, 305
			Do	Times	27, 682
MINNESOTA		RATE OF THE	WIROWATH	CONTRACTOR OF THE PROPERTY OF
Duluth		40, 117 34, 655	Milwaukee	Journal	156, 040
Do			Do	Sentinel	80, 727
St. Paul	Pioneer Press	76, 369	Superior	Telegram	20, 484
			Total circulation		15, 589, 740
MISSOURI		A PARTY AND A STATE OF	Total Circumiton		10,000,110
Joplin	Globe News-Herald	21, 646	Note.—The newspaper-circulation dat	a used in this table are from the	international
Do	Journal Post	12, 492 85, 492	year book number of Editor and Publish	er for 1932.	ter Hacional
Do	Star	291, 908	The total number of newspa		on record
Do	Times	290, 297	during the past year as specific	ally against immediate	independ
St. Joseph		40, 267 227, 893	ence, as discovered by this surve
Springfield	Leader	22, 893	have gone on record during the
STANTING THE TRANSPORTER		-	of the islands, the survey indica
NEBRASKA		TANK GET	of course, have expressed no opin
Lincoln.					C to the
Omaha	Bee-News	47, 537	INTERIOR DEPARTM	ENT APPROPRIATIONS	200 7 185

Evening News.....

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 8397) making appropriations for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1933, and for | as to whether certain persons are starving is rather obscure.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. McKellar]: and the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. Bing-HAM ] is entitled to the floor.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, I was very much interested in the remarks made by the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. McKellar] yesterday, and particularly in the first part of his amendment proposing a general cut of 10 per cent in the amount appropriated by the bill, with the exception of certain specified items. I shall vote for the reduction. I only wish that the Senator from Tennessee and his friends over in the House of Representatives were as anxious to prevent a tremendous expenditure for additional Federalaid roads at this time.

The House of Representatives on the 27th of February pushed through, under very strict rules preventing any amendment, a bill providing for Federal aid for roads, an emergency bill which has been referred to several times on this floor, in their anxiety to have it passed, not only by the Senator from Tennessee but by the Senator from Nevada [Mr. Oddie], the Senator from Kansas [Mr. McGill], and the Senator from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN]. The bill provides for $120,000,000 to be given to the States, and some $16,-000,000 for Indian roads and forest roads and trails. stated by the chairman of the committee reporting the bill, it really means an expenditure on the part of the Federal Government in 1932 of $266,000,000, because the $120,000,000 is merely to enable the States to match another $120,000,000 which the Federal Government must give them when they get the new Federal aid to help them match the other

On February 27 that bill passed the House, notwithstanding all the protestations made by the Democratic leaders of the House that they desire to keep expenses down and cut appropriations down and not introduce bills providing additional authorizations for appropriations. On February 28 I sent out to the governors of the several States a telegram asking them two questions. The first was based on the fact that it had been stated on the floor of the Senate by a Senator that there were millions of people starving in the United States—I have forgotten the exact number he mentioned—and also on the statement of various Senators that there are 10,000,000 unemployed in the United States. That statement has been repeated several times in the Senate. I asked each governor if he would be so kind as to send me a wire telling me how many starving people there were in his State and how many unemployed there were in his State. I have received answers from very nearly all the governors. The replies are very interesting, and I ask to have them inserted in the RECORD at the close of my remarks.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

(See Exhibit A.)

Mr. BINGHAM. Briefly summarizing them, none of the governors, with the possible exception of the Governor of Pennsylvania, admits there are any persons starving in their States. The Governor of Pennsylvania states that starvation is widespread, but that there are no means of finding out how many are starving. He does state, however, that in Philadelphia the allowance of $4.38 per family per week is not sufficient to prevent starvation. But none of the governors in any other State admits there is anyone starving. Some of them were quite annoyed with me for asking the question, thinking it was a reflection on their States. Of course, I had no intention of making any reflection on any State. I was merely trying to ascertain the facts.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Connecticut yield to the Senator from Montana?

Mr. BINGHAM. I yield.
Mr. WALSH of Montana. Will the Senator read the questionnaire he propounded? It occurs to me an inquiry

Some might construe that as meaning that they were not having sufficient food, and others might not consider they were starving until they died.

Mr. BINGHAM. I merely asked, "How many persons in your State are starving and how many persons are there desiring work who are unable to secure work?"

Mr. WALSH of Montana. What does the Senator mean by starving"? "Starving" means a continuing process.

Mr. BINGHAM. I meant the same thing that one ordinarily means when using that word, as, for instance, when it is stated on the floor of the Senate that "millions of people are starving." I wanted to find out how many there are. Apparently, most of the governors so understood it. All but one of them replied that there are none.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Will the Senator read the questionnaire itself?

Mr. BINGHAM. I regret that I have not a copy of the telegram, but I used the word "starving" in its ordinary

However, the question regarding starvation does not immediately concern the bill. The bill which I am discussing is an attempt to provide money to put the unemployed at work.

It is entitled "A bill to authorize supplemental appropriations for emergency highway construction with a view to increasing employment."

The bill is being urged for immediate adoption as an emergency measure designed to relieve unemployment. In its present form the relief is very unfairly apportioned among the States. The greatest amount of unemployment occurs in the industrial States rather than in the large Western States. The apportionment of this fund among the States gives the larger amount to States large in area with extensive road mileage rather than to States with extensive unemployment.

So far as I have been able to learn from figures furnished by the Department of Commerce and published in the RECORD a few days ago, the distribution of unemployment shows-and I mention a few States specifically, for example—that Arizona contains three-tenths of 1 per cent of the unemployed persons in the United States. I mention Arizona because the junior Senator from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN] has been very active in asking for the passage of the bill. In the apportionment of this fund Arizona would receive 1.4 per cent, or four and one-half times as much as she would be entitled to under a fair distribution of the emergency relief fund.

On the other hand, the State of Michigan, with 6.2 per cent of the total unemployed, receives only 3 per cent of the relief fund, or less than one-half of what she is entitled to. To put it the other way around, the unemployed in Arizona get eight times as much relief as the unemployed in Michigan.

The Senator from Kansas [Mr. McGill] made a long speech the other day in favor of the bill. Kansas has ninetenths of 1 per cent of the total unemployed in the United States. Under this bill she would receive 2.6 per cent of the relief fund, or three times as much as she is entitled to. Massachusetts, on the other hand, with 5.1 per cent of the unemployed, receives only 1.4 per cent of the relief, or less than one-third of what she is entitled to. In other words, Kansas gets nine times as much relief, under this measure, as does Massachusetts.

Let us take another example: The Senator from Tennessee [Mr. McKellar] asked me the other day if I would agree to fix a time for voting on the bill. Tennessee has ninetenths of 1 per cent of the total unemployed and under this measure she receives 2.1 per cent of the relief, or more than twice as much as she would be entitled to under a fair distribution of the fund. Contrast this with Rhode Island, which has 1.1 per cent of the total unemployed and receives only five-tenths of 1 per cent of the relief, or onehalf of what she is entitled to. In other words, Tennessee gets four times as much relief for her unemployed as does the State of Rhode Island.

Let me give one other example of the operation of the bill reported by the Senator from Nevada from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads. Nevada has one-tenth of 1 per cent of the unemployed but receives under this bill 1.3 per cent of the relief, or thirteen times as much as she is entitled to on a basis of unemployment. Connecticut has 1.6 per cent of the unemployed and receives six-tenths of 1 per cent of the relief fund, or only about one-third of what she is entitled to. In other words, Nevada receives thirty-four times as much relief for her unemployed per capita as does the State of Connecticut. Surely it can hardly be claimed that this is an equitable distribution of a great emergency relief fund.

Let me put the matter in another way. How much per capita of unemployed, according to the latest figures received from the governors of the States and printed in the RECORD to-day, would this relief fund amount to? I am not now taking the percentages as furnished by the Department of Commerce, but the figures as furnished by the governors. According to these figures the relief varies from $5.07 per capita of unemployed in Illinois to $631.21 per capita of unemployed in Nevada. By the statements of their governors, then, this relief fund would provide one hundred and twenty-four times as much relief for Nevada as for Illinois. Surely no one can claim that this is an equitable distribution of a great national relief measure.

For the unemployed in the State of Ohio there would be allotted from this fund $9 per capita, but in the State of Idaho the amount would be $75.42 per capita, or eight times as much. For the unemployed in the State of Pennsylvania there would be allotted from this fund $5.26 per capita, while in the State of Utah they would receive $110.97, or twentyone times as much. For the unemployed in the State of Connecticut there would be allotted $9.16 per capita, while for the unemployed in the State of Wyoming there would be $616.32, or sixty-seven times as much. However, in fairness to Wyoming, let it be said that the Governor of Wyoming, in reply to my telegram, telegraphed as follows:

Wyoming is able and willing to handle its own relief situation and has not requested and will not request assistance from either the Federal Government or other States.

Of course, all this money is virtually coming out of the taxpayers' pockets. In that connection it is well to remember that the chairman of the committee reporting the bill stated that this emergency fund of $120,000,000 will provide a total of $250,000,000 for Federal participation with the States in 1932, in addition to the $16,000,000 carried for forest roads and Indian trails. In other words, this bill actually will cost the Federal Government $266,000,000 in 1932. Where is this money going to come from?

We are now spending $8,000,000 a day more than we are receiving, and this bill would add another million dollars a day to this deficit for the next nine months. Who is going to pay the bill?

Proponents of this legislation object to our using figures showing the internal-revenue collections because they point out that a large part of the revenue collected in North Carolina is paid by cigarette smokers all over the United States, and a large part of the revenue collected in New York is earned by companies operating in many Western and Southern States. I think it will be agreed, however, that the payment of income taxes shows a fair distribution of where the tax money must come from. This seems a fairer means of arriving at the distribution of taxes. On this basis, New York pays 33 per cent, Pennsylvania 9 per cent, Illinois 9 per cent, Michigan, Ohio, and California 5 per cent, Massachusetts 4 per cent, New Jersey nearly 4 per cent, Missouri 2 per cent, and Connecticut nearly 2 per cent. These 10 States will have to raise about 80 per cent of the money distributed by this bill, whatever it may be. Their apportionment of it is only 30 per cent. Perhaps the argument will be used that as they are the richest States they must bear the burden. In any event, they will have to bear it. But what makes the bill really unfair and unjust and un-American is that they of Nevada turned back to that State; but, as I have re-have 65 per cent of the unemployed, and yet they get only 30 per cent of the relief fund. In other words, the unemployed in the States that have to pay the larger share of the bill only get half as much relief from it as do the unemployed in the other 38 States.

There would be far more relief in the States where unemployment occurs if they would levy a special tax on their citizens to meet the needs of their own unemployed. In that case their unemployed would get the entire benefit of the burdens placed upon the taxpayers instead of getting only a fraction of it.

It is safe to say that of the money which must be raised from the taxpayers of New York the unemployed of that State would get less than $1 in every $6. Of the money which must be raised from the taxpayers in Pennsylvania the unemployed would get less than $1 out of every $2.50; so also would the unemployed in Illinois, Massachusetts, and New Jersey. The taxpayers of Michigan must raise nearly 6 per cent of the fund. The unemployed of Michigan will only get 3 per cent of it. In other words, the unemployed of Michigan would be twice as well off if Michigan kept the money which she must raise for this purpose and used it for the unemployment of her own citizens.

In times of plenty and great prosperity it may be fair to say that the more prosperous States should be taxed heavily to provide roads and other benefits for the less fortunate States. But in this day when there is a far greater proportion of unemployment in the States that have to pay the larger share of the bills surely it is not fair that their unemployed should receive so much less benefit from the taxpayers' burden than they are entitled to under a fair distribution of the benefits of this so-called emergency relief legislation proposed, as stated in the title of the bill, "with a view to increasing employment."

Mr. ODDIE. Mr. President-

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Connecticut yield to the Senator from Nevada?

Mr. BINGHAM. I yield.

Mr. ODDIE. The Senator from Connecticut has made a number of statements and drawn a number of comparisons in which the State of Nevada was referred to. The population of the State of Nevada is small in comparison to its area, but the Federal Government, as I have previously stated, owns practically 90 per cent of the area of the State, and the people of that State pay from their own pockets large amounts of money to maintain roads built by the Federal Government over Government-owned lands in the State, roads which are used principally by the people from all the States.

Mr. President, the Senator has tried to show from his tables that this emergency road money will not be distributed equitably, and consequently that the benefits will not be distributed fairly between various sections of the country; in other words, that the more populous centers will not get as much benefit as will the States containing smaller

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, I yielded for a question only and not for a speech. I hope the Senator will make his speech in his own time, and I decline to yield further at present.

Mr. ODDIE. May I say just a word further about this one question?

Mr. BINGHAM. I decline to yield further at the present

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Connecticut declines to yield.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, the statement the Senator from Nevada makes is very appropriate in relation to ordinary road legislation, the kind of road legislation we pass every year, and I have great sympathy for his position; in fact, so far as I am concerned, I should be delighted to have the lands belonging to the Federal Government in the State peatedly stated, the point now is that this bill is an emer- | Unemployed and proposed appropriation for supplemental highway gency relief measure; it is explicitly stated that it is to relieve unemployment. The Governor of the State of Nevada telegraphs me that there are only 2,500 unemployed in Nevada, and under this bill Nevada would get $1,578,025, or $631.21 per capita of unemployed.

Mr. ODDIE. Mr. President-

Mr. BINGHAM. Just a moment. I can not yield just The point is not whether there should be more roads built at public expense in the State of Nevada. I am not now making an argument against the usual road fund, the usual Federal aid to roads. I am making an argument against this extremely unfair distribution of aid. The larger States of Illinois, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Ohio, New York, and Massachusetts, with their large industrial populations, have a far greater percentage of unemployment per capita than have the Western States, as is admitted by telegrams from the governors. A fair distribution of this fund would be in accordance with the number of unemployed in each State; but that we are unable to determine, so that the next most fair thing, Mr. President, is a distribution of it in accordance with population.

Mr. President, I should like to read one or two telegrams which are very heartening to those who, like myself, regret to see the tendency to lean on the Federal Government for aid in times of general distress. In order that I may not be accused of partisanship in this regard I shall read first from a telegram received from the Governor of Maryland:

Your wire of February 28 received. It is difficult to estimate Your wire of reprury 28 received. It is dimcuit to estimate accurately number of unemployed in Maryland. Estimates vary from 30,000 to 50,000. I do not know where you get the idea that anybody is starving in this State. No such condition as that exists here. We are taking care of our unemployed through the regular community and welfare agencies without the necessity of any appropriation from the State government or from any county or city government. county or city government.

ALBERT C. RITCHIE. Governor.

I will now read one from a State that generally goes Republican—the State of Maine:

No one starving in Maine, to my knowledge. Unemployment relief work has brought number actually unemployed nearly down to normal for this time of year.

The Governor of Indiana replies:

There are no people starving in Indiana. From 80,000 to 100,000 unemployed. Relief agencies adequate. Indiana takes care of her

Mr. President, I have already asked that these telegrams may be printed in the RECORD, and I will ask also to have printed in the RECORD a table showing the number of unemployed according to the census of 1930 as contrasted with the governors' figures recently received in reply to this questionnaire; the proposed appropriation for supplemental highway work, for emergency relief, and its allotment among the States; the amount per capita of unemployed which would be granted to each State under this division, and the amount according to the governors' figures.

I have already called attention to some of the more striking examples. I will mention a few others, reading the list according to the governors' figures.

This unemployment relief bill would furnish per capita of unemployment in Arizona, $88-I omit the cents; in Arkansas, $44; in California, $9; in Colorado, $45; in Connecticut, $9; in Idaho, $75; in Illinois, $5; in Indiana, $34; in Kansas, $43; in Maryland, $25; in Minnesota, $22; in Missouri, $37; in Montana, $168; in Nevada, $631; in New Hampshire, $21; in New Mexico, $301; in New York, $32; in Ohio, $9; in Oklahoma, $36; in Oregon, $36; in Pennsylvania, $5; in Texas, $25; in Utah, $110; in Virginia, $90; in West Virginia, $41; in Wisconsin, $14; and in Wyoming, $616. I have only mentioned States whose governors gave me their estimate of unemployed.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the table referred to by the Senator from Connecticut will be printed in the RECORD.

The table is as follows:

State	Uner	nployed			per capita uployed
	Census, 1930	Governors' figures	supplemental highway work	Census, 1930	Govern- ors' fig- ures
Alabama	29, 900	TO THE RESERVE OF	$2,550,053.00	$85, 28
Arizons	9, 100	20,000	1, 762, 636, 00	193, 69	$88, 13
Arkansas	18, 300	45, 000	2, 091, 431, 00	114, 28	44, 87
California	189, 800	500,000	4, 669, 711, 00	24, 60	9, 33
Colorado	30, 200	50,000	2, 255, 281, 00	74. 67	45, 10
Connecticut	50,800	85,000	779, 324. 00	15, 34	9. 16
Delaware	3,900		600, 000. 00	153.84
Florida	38, 700		1, 629, 204, 00	42, 35
Georgia	39, 600		3, 120, 191, 00	78, 79	100 21 0 2
Idaho	7, 400	20,000	1, 508, 485, 00	203, 84	75, 42
Illinois	282, 800	1,000,000	5, 077, 245, 00	17.95	5. 07
Indiana	86, 300	90,000	3, 060, 266, 00	35. 68	34, 00
Iowa	31, 500		3, 173, 493, 00	100.74
Kansas	28, 100	75,000	3, 276, 334.00	116.59	43, 68
Kentucky	42, 200		2, 259, 648, 00	53. 54
Louisiana	39, 400		1, 740, 196.00	44, 16
Maine	21,000		1, 070, 600. 00	50.98
Maryland	31,600	40,000	1, 015, 296. 00	32.16	25. 38
Massachusetts	161, 400		1, 712, 774.00	10.61
Michigan	197, 000		3, 783, 179. 00	19. 20
Minnesota	55, 200	150,000	3, 373, 560, 00	61. 11	22. 48
Mississippi	15, 400		2, 160, 628. 00	140.03
MISSOURI	81, 400	100,000	3, 761, 014. 00	46. 20	37. 61
Montana	15,000	15,000	2, 525, 108. 00	168.34	168, 34
Nebraska	19,000		2, 557, 683. 00	13. 46
Nevada	3, 100	2, 500	1, 578, 025. 00	509.04	631, 21
New Hampshire	13, 500	27, 500	600, 000. 00	44. 44	21, 81
New Jersey	140, 300		1, 659, 121. 00	11.82
New Mexico	6, 500	6, 500	1, 962, 340. 00	301.89	301. 89
New York	428,000	184, 906	6, 057, 965, 00	14. 15	32.76
North Carolina	44, 100		2, 890, 203. 00	65. 53
North Dakota	7, 400		1, 940, 325. 00	262, 20
Ohio	214, 600	500, 000	4, 501, 069. 00	20. 97	9, 00
Oklahoma	45, 300	80, 363	2, 893, 101. 00	63.86	36.00
Oregon.	31, 400	54,000	1, 996, 128. 00	63. 57	36.96
Pennsylvania	325, 500	1,000,000	5, 621, 052. 00	16. 16	5. 26
Rhode Island	36, 100		600, 000, 00	16. 62
South Carolina	19, 200		1, 666, 492. 00	86. 79
Carrage South Dakota	4, 500		2, 002, 076. 00	44. 49
Tennessee	30, 100	200 000	2, 609, 757. 00	86.70
Texas	95, 200	300,000	7, 668, 024. 00	80. 54	$25. 56
Utah	10,900	12, 500	1, 387, 190. 00	127. 26 72. 28	110.97
Vermont	8,300	05 000	600, 000. 00		06.00
Virginia Washington	35, 300	25, 000	2, 258, 196. 00 1, 905, 627. 00	63. 97 41. 06	90. 32
West Vissisia	46, 400	20.000
West Virginia	35, 300	32,000	1, 316. 720. 00	37. 30	41.14
Wisconsin	64,000	200, 000	2, 992, 438. 00	46.75	14.96
Wyoming	4,900	2,500	1, 540, 811. 00	314. 45	616.32

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, it may be interesting to note, in view of the criticism made of my estimate of the number of unemployed the other day by the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. Bratton] when he said that I was the only person of whom he knew who did not think there were 10,000,000 unemployed in the United States, that the census of 1930 gives a total of the two kinds of unemployed-

Mr. LONG. Mr. President-

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Connecticut yield to the Senator from Louisiana?

Mr. BINGHAM. Just a moment. I am not quite through with this statement.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Connecticut declines to yield.

Mr. BINGHAM. Of the two kinds of unemployed; that is, those who have no job and those who have a job but are not employed in it. The census of 1930 gives the figure at about 3,187,000. My present estimate, increased by the figures I have recently received, and giving a liberal allowance to States not reported, brings the total up to about 6,000,000.

I have gone over these figures with a group of interested and keen young men this morning, and they have come to the conclusion that a fair estimate of the number of unemployed in the United States, according to the best figures which we have been able to obtain, is about 6,000,000, and not 10,000,000.

Mr. BRATTON. Mr. President-

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Connecticut yield to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. BINGHAM. I yield.

Mr. BRATTON. Despite the figures given by the Senator from Connecticut, I still adhere to the firm belief that the true facts are that at least 10,000,000 people are out of employment in this country.

The Senator a while ago referred to starvation among the citizens of the country. I do not mean to say that 10,000,000 people are starving, or bordering on starvation; but I reaffirm the belief that there are 10,000,000 people out of employment in the country, and that that condition does present a very serious problem to every right-thinking citizen of the country.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, "A man convinced against his will is of the same opinion still."

EXHIBIT A

Copy of telegram sent to each of the governors of the States on

February 28:

"Will you please let me know by telegraph reply collect how many people in your State are starving, also how many can find no employment of any kind?

" HIRAM BINGHAM."

MONTGOMERY, ALA., February 29, 1932.

Hon. Hiram Bincham,
United States Senate:
The statistical information is not available for me to answer questions asked in your telegram.

B. M. MILLER Governor of Alabama.

PHOENIX, ARIZ., February 29, 1932.

Hon. HIRAM BINGHAM

United States Senate:

Re telegram. People are not actually starving in our State. Mr. D. W. Fountain, State director of unemployment relief in Arizona, estimates that there are 20,000 unemployed wage earners in Arizona, of whom 8,000 are in actual distress. The unemployment situation is bad all over Arizona and in all lines of endeavor. It is particularly acute and distressing in our large copper-mining camps where the mines have either curtailed production drastically camps where the mines have either curtailed production drastically or ceased producing altogether because of low prices for copper. We believe that the quickest relief in our copper-mining areas would come through the enactment by Congress of an adequate tariff against foreign copper entering this country. The competition of cheap-labor copper from the Latin American countries and Africa is forcing our Arizona copper mines out of business. The plight of the copper mines is reflected in business, livestock, and agricultural industries, as the copper camps have been the best customers. Our State has gone its financial limit in providing highway and other work for jobless citizens. Our problem of unemployment is intensified by large numbers of jobless transients who come to this State because of its equable winter climate. I believe that failure of Congress to enact legislation providing for immediate highway and other public work for relief of unemployment would be a tragic mistake.

Geo. W. P. Hunt,

GEO. W. P. HUNT, Governor of Arizona.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK., March 4, 1932.

Senator Hiram Bingham,
United States Senate:
Your telegram of February 28 delivered to my residence during absence. Am directing reply to question by mail.
HARVEY PARNELL, Governor.

Bureau of Labor and Statistics, Little Rock, March 5, 1932.

Senator Hiram Bingham,

United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

My Dear Senator: Governor Parnell has transmitted to this department your telegram of March 3 with instructions to forward the information requested.

There are approximately 45,000 people unemployed in this State from the group of 283,000 gainfully employed other than in agriculture during normal times. Of course a great majority of our from the group of 283,000 gainfully employed other than in agriculture during normal times. Of course a great majority of our population is rural and not included in these figures.

Naturally, there are many families struggling for existence, and many being cared for by our relief organizations, which are sorely taxed and in need of funds, but we do not have any record of people actually starving.

Trusting this is the information you desire, I am,

Very truly yours,

WAR ROOMSERRY

W. A. ROOKSBERY, Commissioner of Labor.

SACRAMENTO, CALIF., March 3, 1932.

Hon. HIRAM BINGHAM,

United States Senator, Senate Office Building.

Dear Senator Bingham: Replying your wire February 28, we are not advised of any starving people in this State. Our unemployment commission roughly estimates that there are approximately 500,000 unemployed in this State, which includes all dependents.

With kindest regards,

JAMES ROLPH, Jr., Governor of California.

DENVER. Colo., February 29, 1932.

Hon. HIRAM BINGHAM,

United States Senate: Unemployment problem Colorado now at its most acute stage. We badly need passage Federal emergency highway appropriation to furnish work. Local relief agencies still able, in a limited way, to cope with demand for food.

WM. H. ADAMS, Governor of Colorado.

DENVER, Colo., March 5, 1932.

Senator Hiram Bingham:

Jesse F. Wellborn, chairman Denver Employment (Inc.), after careful survey Denver and good general knowledge Colorado, estimates number totally unemployed this State to be more than 50,000. State-wide surveys now being made will enable us make information more specific in short time.

WM. H. ADAMS. Governor.

HARTFORD, CONN., March 2, 1932.

Hartford, Conn., March 2, 1932.

Senator Hiram Bingham:

It has not been brought to the attention of the Connecticut Unemployment Commission at any time that anyone in Connecticut is starving or near starving; regard to the number of unemployed, the commission states there is no way to get dependable figures. The commission is now making a survey to determine changes in employment in all industries in the State between the peak of employment in 1929 and the trough of unemployment in late 1931 and early 1932. The survey to date indicates that the number of unemployed in the State is probably between eighty and ninety thousand. eighty and ninety thousand.

WILBUR L. CROSS.

DOVER, DEL., March 1, 1932.

HIRAM BINGHAM,

United States Senate:

There is no record of anyone ever having starved in Delaware, and there is part-time employment now in the State for all who want it.

C. D. BUCK. Governor.

TALLAHASSEE, FLA., February 29, 1932.

HIRAM BINGHAM,

United States Senate:
No persons, to my knowledge, are starving in Florida. Many are in need of employment.

DOYLE E. CARLTON, Governor.

ATLANTA, GA., March 3, 1932.

Hon. HIRAM BINGHAM,

United States Senate, Washington, D. C.: Inasmuch as no definite survey has been made, it is impossible to give exact figures on unemployment and sufferers from unemployment in Georgia.

RICHARD B. RUSSELL, Jr., Governor.

Boise, Idaho, February 29, 1932.

Hon. HIRAM BINGHAM.

United States Senate:

To our knowledge, no one in Idaho starving. Have surplus farm products on hand. Considerable unemployment at present. Emergency Federal aid for road construction would help immensely.

C. BEN Ross, Governor.

Boise, Idaho, March 4, 1932.

Hon. HIRAM BINGHAM.

Senator:

Government employment bureau, Boise, estimates 20,000 unemployed in Idaho.

C. BEN Ross, Governor.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL., March 2, 1932.

Hon. HIRAM BINGHAM, United States Senate:

While there is much destitution in Illinois, none of our people are actually starving, due to unemployment relief funds provided both privately and by the State. We estimate that approximately 1,000,000 people in Illinois are unable to secure employment, although able and willing to work.

Louis L. Emmerson, Governor.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., February 29, 1932.

Senator HIRAM BINGHAM:

There are no people starving in Indiana. From 80,000 to 100,000 unemployed. Relief agencies adequate. Indiana takes care of her own.

HARRY G. LESLIE, Governor.

TOPEKA, KANS., February 29, 1932.

Hon. Hiram Bingham,

Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.:

None starving. Thousands can not find employment. If you

None starving. Thousands can not find employment. If you are interested in relieving our unemployed, you can not do so more effectively than by working and voting for the additional hundred and thirty-two million emergency Federal-aid bill for highways. With these additional funds available Kansas immediately could do with these additional funds available Kansas immediately could do more for actual unemployment relief than through any other action of Congress. Congress unhesitatingly has voted generous Federal aid to foreign governments, banks, corporations, railroads, and industry. Here is an opportunity, through local public improvements widely distributed through the agricultural States, directly and immediately to benefit the unemployed. Ninety cents of each dollar of Federal aid for highways goes to labor directly or indirectly. Question of source of Federal funds should not mitigate against this bill when not raised in consideration of previous appropriations. Passage of this bill alone can not force a Federal sales tax on the people if previous appropriations have not already made such a tax necessary. Kansas people ask the administration and all Members of Congress, regardless of party, to see that this Federal aid for unemployment is passed immediately. Through the reduction of Federal-aid appropriation in the agricultural bill from one hundred twenty-five millions to one hundred millions, and through repayment clause of previous $80,000,000 Federal aid, Kansas this year will suffer curtailment of more than $1,000,000 in Federal aid, thus reducing ordinary and needed benefit to unskilled labor to that extent at a time when the need is greatest. the need is greatest.

HARRY H. WOODRING. Governor.

TOPEKA, KANS., March 4, 1932.

Hon. HIRAM BINGHAM,

United States Senate:

I am informed by the State labor department there are at least 75,000 seeking employment in Kansas at this time, many receiving temporary aid from cities and towns where there are emergency employment committees. Thousands of others receiving direct charity from cities and counties.

HARRY H. WOODRING, Governor.

AUGUSTA, ME., February 29, 1932.

HIRAM BINGHAM,

United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:
No one starving in Maine, to my knowledge. Unemployment relief work has brought number actually unemployed nearly down to normal for this time of year.

WILLIAM TUDOR GARDINER.

ANNAPOLIS, MD., February 29, 1932.

Hon. HIRAM BINGHAM.

United States Senate:

Your wire February 28 received. It is difficult to estimate accurately number of unemployed in Maryland. Estimates vary from thirty to fifty thousand. I do not know where you get the idea that anybody is starving in this State. No such condition as that exists here. We are taking care of our unemployed through the regular community and welfare agencies without the necessity of any appropriation from the State government or from any county or city government.

ALBERT C. RITCHIE, Governor.

Boston, Mass., February 29, 1932.

HIRAM BINGHAM, United States Senate:

Massachusetts law requires local departments of public welfare Massachusetts law requires local departments of public weitare to care for needy citizens. Due to their work and the fine assistance of groups of citizens we feel confident that there is no starvation in Massachusetts. Attempts to determine number unemployed have been unsuccessful because of rapidly changing conditions and because many of so-called white-collar workers do not register at employment bureaus. In general Massachusetts communities are handling the situation in splendid fashion.

JOSEPH B. ELY, Governor Commonwealth Massachusetts.

LANSING, MICH., February 29, 1932.

Hon. HIRAM BINGHAM,

United States Senate:
Disinclined to estimate extent of unemployment in advance of report on survey now in progress. Facts at hand indicate Michigan well able to care for its own. Special legislature session will be called shortly to deal with emergency problems.

WILBUR M. BRUCKER

ST. PAUL, MINN., February 29, 1932.

Hon. HIRAM BINGHAM

Hon. HIRAM BINGHAM.

Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.:

In answer your wire requesting information unemployment conditions in Minnesota. A complete survey of Minnesota finished last October estimated 134,020 persons therein not engaged in any employment. The number has increased, and a conservative estimate would be 150,000 at the present time who are unable to find any kind of employment. These figures are exclusive of persons living on farms.

FLOYD B. OLSON. Governor of Minnesota. JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., March 1, 1932.

Hon. HIRAM BINGHAM,

United States Senate: As far as I know there are no people starving in Missouri; and I am sure if any person is hungry he need but let it be known and he will have food. It is estimated that there are about 100,000 people out of employment in Missouri.

HENRY S. CAULFIELD, Governor of Missouri.

HELENA, MONT., February 29, 1932.

Hon. Hiram Bingham,

United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

Re your telegram 29th. Nobody starving in Montana. Red Cross at sometime furnished relief to 9,800 farm families. March program contemplates aid to 7,000 families. Estimated unemployed, 15,000.

J. E. ERICKSON, Governor,

LINCOLN, NEBR., March 4, 1932.

Hon. HIRAM BINGHAM, United States Senate:

Replying to your telegram as to how many people starving in Nebraska, will say that no one is starving here. However, the generous people of our State have been feeding, through public donations, about 8,000 people, and also feeding their livestock in nine severely drought-stricken counties in northern Nebraska. nine severely drought-stricken counties in northern Nebraska. Public contributions of more than 1,000 carloads of food, feed, and clothing have been donated, and donations are continuing to carry these people along, but they will need a great deal of assistance for the coming year to live on as well as to feed their stock while they are growing another crop. The emergency road fund by the Federal Government enabled us to greatly relieve the unemployment situation by employing men and requiring the construction work to be done by hand and team labor, but that money is now exhausted and another Federal appropriation for road construction is badly needed to help our unemployed tide over this dreadful economic depression.

Charles W. Bryan.

CHARLES W. BRYAN, Governor of Nebraska.

CARSON CITY, NEV., February 29, 1932.

Senator HIRAM BINGHAM,

United States Senate, Washington, D. C .:

Re telegram 28th, no starving people in Nevada. Approximately 2,500 people unable to find employment of any kind, of whom one-half are at city Las Vegas in connection with construction of Hoover Dam, Colorado River.

F. B. BALZAR, Governor.

CONCORD, N. H., February 29, 1932.

Senator HIRAM BINGHAM:

Much malnutrition among New Hampshire needy. Between 25,000 and 30,000 have no work at all; 30,000 to 40,000 more working only part time, many of them for less than living wage. This answers your telegram to Governor Winant.

JAMES M. LANGLEY, Chairman New Hampshire Unemployment Commission.

SANTE FE, N. MEX., March 4, 1932.

Hon. Hiram Bingham,

United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

Replying your telegram February 28, asking how many people in New Mexico are starving, also how many can find no employment of any kind, will say that, after making careful check in all counties, that we have 6,000 to 7,000 individuals in need of employment, and we have approximately 16,000 persons in New Mexico now receiving or in immediate need of food relief. With assurances of esteem

ARTHUR SELIGMAN

Governor of New Mexico.

ALBANY, N. Y., February 29, 1932.

Hon. Hiram Bingham.

United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

Have referred your telegram to Jesse Isidor Straus, chairman of the temporary emergency relief administration, with request that he give you all available figures.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

STATE OF NEW YORK, TEMPORARY EMERGENCY RELIEF ADMINISTRATION, New York, March 1, 1932.

Hon. HIRAM S. BINGHAM.

Hon. Hiram S. Bingham,

United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

Dear Senator Bingham: I have a telegram from Governor Roosevelt, asking that I reply to a telegram you sent him requesting information as to "how many people in your State are starving, also how many can find no employment of any kind."

It is very difficult to reply specifically to your questions. At the moment, as far as we know, 72,964 persons are receiving work relief, and in the month of January 91,136 families received home relief under the Wicks Act (ch. 798 of the laws of 1931 of the State of New York). Our records on February 27 indicate that 98,442 individuals required but were not receiving work relief and it is individuals required but were not receiving work relief, and it is assumed that the major portion of this group was investigated. In addition, 34,560 individuals were registered at work bureaus and did not receive work relief, and our assumption is that this entire group had not been investigated.

All of this information is necessarily incomplete because certain cities and counties did not report fully and promptly last week, and it is assumed that of these nonreporting districts perhaps 13,500 additional individuals might be in need of relief.

In New York City and in Buffalo the estimates are admittedly low, due to incompleteness of records in these cities. Of the 58 cities and the 57 counties, 11 did not come in under the act. The act required affirmative action on the part of each municipal corporation in order to come within its provisions. What the conditions in these nonparticipating municipal corporations are is entirely unknown to us.

I regret that I can not give you more accurate information.

Very truly yours,

JESSE ISIDOR STRATIS.

BISMARCK, N. DAK., February 29, 1932.

HIRAM BINGHAM:

Replying your telegram to-day, there are no persons starving in this State. Any report to that effect is sheer nonsense. While number of unemployed is larger than normal, condition is not as serious as in industrial centers.

GEO. F. SHAFER, Governor.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 1, 1932.

Senator Hiram Bingham,

United States Senate:

All governmental subdivisions of Ohio, aided by community funds and other private charities, are utilizing every available resource to meet needs for relief in Ohio. Bare food needs are resource to meet needs for relief in Onio. Bare food needs are being met up to present time. Have no authentic record of any present cases of starvation. Impossible to state definite number of those who can find no employment of any kind. Many are employed part time or are on rotation basis. Many receive odd jobs locally, of which no records are available. Believe that number of unemployed who can find no work of any sort to be under 500.000.

GEORGE WHITE, Governor,

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA,

HIRAM BINGHAM,

United States Senate:
Number of people starving in Oklahoma, if any, unknown. Eighty thousand three hundred and sixty-three out of employment, shown by recent survey; also 17,346 aged and infirm. Only $400,000 State relief funds available.

W. A. PAT MURPHY Commissioner of Labor.

SALEM, OREG., February 29, 1932.

Hon. HIRAM BINGHAM.

Hon. Hiram Bingham,

United States Senate:

No persons in Oregon actually starving; 43,000 registered unemployed, without work of any kind, but being fed.

Julius L. Meier, Governor.

SALEM, OREG., March 2, 1932.

Hon. HIRAM BINGHAM,

Hon. Hiram Bingham,

United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

Since sending telegram dated February 29 am informed by J. M.
Devers, in charge of unemployment, there are in State 54,000 registered unemployed, with approximately 160,000 dependents.
Approximately 11,000 men given employment one week per month on highway work, remainder unemployed and dependents being cared for through charity, private and public. Charity funds will be exhausted by spring, necessitating drive for additional funds.
Practically all public work available is State or county highway work. State made available one and a quarter million dollars, city of Portland and Multnomah County each provided one million by bond issue, making over three million for emergency unemployment. These funds will soon be exhausted, leaving thousands destitute and dependent on public for necessities of life. destitute and dependent on public for necessities of life.

Julius L. Meier, Governor.

HARRISBURG, PA., February 29, 1932.

Hon. HIRAM BINGHAM,

United States Senate:

At least 1,000,000 people are unemployed in Pennsylvania. Philadelphia gives $4.38 per family per week for relief. That is practically starvation. Relief given in many other places far less. Underfed children have increased 30 per cent in Pennsylvania schools in one year. Suffering in coal regions east and west especially severe. We know starvation is widespread, but no one has anymerated the starving. Unemployment is costing Pennsylvania. especially severe. We know starvation is widespread, but no one has enumerated the starving. Unemployment is costing Pennsylvania wage earners a billion dollars a year. I regard the refusal of standpat Democrats and Republicans in the Senate to give relief to suffering people after giving two billions in dole to big business as most scandalous and indefensible preferring of money to human beings in my experience. beings in my experience.

GIFFORD PINCHOT.

COLUMBIA, S. C., March 3, 1932.

HIRAM BINGHAM, United States Senate:

There are many people in South Carolina who are suffering. I know of none who are starving for food or freezing from lack of fuel or shelter. There is a vast number who can find no employment. I hesitate to make definite statement for the lack of statistics and information. A mild winter has contributed greatly to the relief of our people. Much could be done to improve our situation

I. C. BLACKWOOD, Governor.

PIERRE, S. DAK., March 1, 1932.

Senator Hiram Bingham,

United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

Red Cross has averted any possibility of people starving in this State. Less fortunate of our people are being fed by Red Cross and local organizations. Three times as many unemployed in towns and cities compared with normal times.

WARREN GREEN, Governor.

NASHVILLE, TENN., March 3, 1932.

Nashville, Tenn., March 3, 1932.

Senato Office Building, Washington, D, C.:

In re telegram Governor Horton, please be advised we have no starving people in Tennessee; have never had, and do not expect to have. People do not starve in this State. Tennesseeans are real people and will always look after their own. Comparatively few people in Tennessee willing to work are out of employment, and this number is being gradually reduced. Tennessee and Tennesseeans are in good shape. Thanks for inquiry.

Charles C. Gilbert.

Chairman Tennessee's Committee to Aid Employment.

AUSTIN, TEX., February 29, 1932.

Hon. HIRAM BINGHAM,

United States Senate:
From our best information we have no reports of actual starvation. Probably 100,000 people destitute living on charity and invisible aid; 300,000 unemployed.

R. S. STERLING, Governor.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH, March 3, 1932.

Senator HIRAM BINGHAM,

Washington, D. C.:

More than 50,000 persons in Utah would be starving if it were not for relief extended by counties, cities, and charitable organizations. There are in excess of 12,500 heads of families who can not find employment. These figures are based upon actual surveys. GEORGE H. DERN.

MONTPELIER, VT., March 4, 1932.

Hon. Hiram Bingham,

United States Senate:

Telegrams received. There are no people starving in Vermont.
Difficult to state how many are unable to obtain employment of any kind, because at this time of the year there are quite a number of seasonal unemployed in Vermont. Many have insufficient work but work created locally to care for unemployment furnishes some work to most of those who otherwise might have none.

STANLEY C. WILSON,

Governor of Vermont.

RICHMOND, VA., February 29, 1932.

Hon. HIRAM BINGHAM,

United States Senate: Answering your wire, Virginia, in common with other States, suffering from unemployment. Number who can find no employment of any kind estimated at about 25,000. Passage by Senate of House bill advancing road money to States will give employment to many and hasten return of normal times.

JNO. GARLAND POLLARD, Governor of Virginia.

RICHMOND, VA., February 29, 1932.

Hon. HIRAM BINGHAM

United States Senate:

Second telegram received. So far as I know, nobody in Virginia is starving in the sense that they are dying for food, but in Virginia, as in all other States, there are many suffering for want of sufficient food and clothing.

JNO. GARLAND POLLARD, Governor of Virginia.

CHARLESTON, W. VA., March 2, 1932.

Hon. HIRAM BINGHAM,

Hon. Hiram Bingham,

United States Senate:

Have delayed acknowledging receipt of your telegram 1st instant to Governor Conley expecting his return to city. However, his return has been delayed and he is not expected back until next week. We have no reports of any deaths from starvation, although many are in need because of inability to find employment. employment.

VINCENT LEGG, Private Secretary to the Governor. CHARLESTON, W. VA., March 3, 1932.

Hon. HIRAM BINGHAM, United States Senate:

Last survey showed 64,000 unemployed in West Virginia. However, about half of this number are occasionally able to get a day's work.

Private Secretary to the Governor.

Madison, Wis., February 29, 1932.

HIRAM BINGHAM:

Two hundred thousand entirely out of work.

THOMAS M. DUNCAN, Secretary to the Governor.

CHEYENNE, WYO., February 29, 1932.

Hon. HIRAM BINGHAM

Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.:

I know of no community in Wyoming where people are starving. Wyoming is able and willing to handle its own relief situation and has not requested, and will not request, assistance from either the Federal Government or other States. The unemployed in Wyoming probably does not exceed 2,500, including coal miners who will probably be out of employment in the next two or three weeks. Our unemployed probably does not exceed 1 per cent of our population. Enactment of legislation providing for additional road construction would materially aid our labor situation.

A. M. CLARK, Acting Governor.

Mr. BORAH obtained the floor.

The VICE PRESIDENT. A point of order has been made against the pending amendment, and the Chair is ready to rule.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, may I say to the Senator from Idaho that after consulting with friends of the amendment on both sides, I believe the amendment is subject to a point of order. The Senator from Utah [Mr. Smoot] states that he is going to make the point of order. Therefore I will withdraw the amendment, and at the proper time I shall move to recommit the bill to the committee with instructions to report back a 10 per cent reduction on the gross amount of the bill.

JUDGE JAMES H. WILKERSON

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I do not rise to discuss matters connected with the pending bill. I desire to say a word about another matter.

There appeared in this morning's Washington Post an editorial on Judge Wilkerson. I shall not read the entire editorial, but there is a statement in it to which I wish to call attention:

Judge Wilkerson's nomination has been held in the grip of a few Senators who happen to have power to block a report. Weeks have passed and the Senate has not had an opportunity to reward this faithful public servant by approving his promotion.

Why does the Senate permit a subcommittee to block a vote on the confirmation of this nomination? How much humiliation must be dealt out to Judge Wilkerson before he is to be rejected or accepted by the Senate?

I think it proper to make a statement of fact in regard to that matter, and a statement of fact only, because I do not propose to argue the merits or demerits of Judge Wilkerson's nomination.

When the subcommittee was appointed it was immediately convened. Those who were opposing Judge Wilkerson asked for time in which to present the facts. At that time Mr. Donald Richberg, the attorney for the wage earners in Chicago, who were in a controversy over the wage question, was detained by his work in Chicago. He stated that it would be impossible for him to attend upon the committee for some time. We were compelled, therefore, to wait upon his attendance.

After Mr. Richberg appeared, those who were supporting Judge Wilkerson also asked for time in which to present the facts. The committee gave them time to the extent of two weeks. One of the parties interested in the matter was ill and could not attend, and therefore we allowed that length of time.

Afterwards the Bar Association of Chicago desired to be heard, and the committee desired to hear the bar association. But the committee of the association was not prepared at that time to present the matter and asked for time.

The bar association desired to familiarize itself with the record and to present the facts in the light of the record; time was thus extended for those who were supporting Judge Wilkerson to enable them to present the matter as fully as desired.

We are now waiting upon the bar association to present the final facts in regard to an important matter. Only this morning I received a telegram from Chicago, from the bar association committee, reading as follows:

Expect to send you written report in matter of Brundage appointment as receiver for St. Paul Railroad in two or three days at latest. Have been delayed in investigating facts because of absence of number of persons most familiar with the facts.

MEGAN. MILLER, HAIGHT.

Committee of Chicago Bar Association.

There has been no delay upon the part of the subcommittee itself. It has urged these people, with as much urgency as seemed proper, to present the facts upon both sides. We did not desire to preclude a full presentation, but we have in no instance failed to come together and to hear them when they were prepared to present the facts. I do not think either the proponents or opponents sought to delay the disposition of this nomination.

Judge Wilkerson is now on the bench, and I presume that nothing is being lost in the way of public service or the public interest by the fact that he may be delayed for a reasonable time in taking his position, if he is confirmed, upon the court of appeals. I desire to say, of course, that Judge Wilkerson is in no sense responsible for the editorial view. It has no bearing whatever upon his fitness or unfitness for the position, but I thought it proper to state these facts in the interest of justice to the subcommittee, as well as to all parties interested.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, the subcommittee in charge of the Judge Wilkerson matter needs no testimonial at my hands. It is headed by the able, distinguished, and wholly fair Senator from Idaho [Mr. Borah]. With him are serving other Members of the Senate of equally high character and reputation and standing in this body and in the country.

I desire to say, however, as one of those who indorsed Judge Wilkerson for nomination that the subcommittee have been diligent and prompt; and to those appearing upon behalf of Judge Wilkerson and in his interest they have at all times been most courteous. At this time I desire to express my thanks for the consideration which has been given to those appearing in behalf of and sponsoring the nomination and confirmation of the judge.

It is true that some considerable time has elapsed; but it has occurred exactly as has been stated by the Senator from Idaho. The delay has been occasioned at the request of both the proponents and the opponents of Judge Wilkerson. I have had occasion at one time to ask a week's continuance, owing to illness; and I recall and desire to mention the fact that the chairman of the subcommittee and the members of the subcommittee were kind enough to meet in special session at my request a few days ago to hear the statement of an aged witness, Mr. Frank J. Loesch, who happened to be here in Washington. They held that hearing upon very short notice, and at considerable inconvenience, as I was informed, to the chairman of the subcommittee and to certain of the other members.

I desire to say nothing further.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives by Mr. Haltigan, one of its clerks, announced that the House had recommitted to the committee of conference the report of that committee on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5315) to amend the Judicial Code and to define and limit the jurisdiction of courts sitting in equity, and for other purposes.

Mr. SCHALL. Mr. President, I desire to make a speech to-day of some length, because to-morrow 32 farm cooperatives are holding in this city their convention. It seems to me it would be a friendly act to summarize the arguments that appear to me in behalf of the Farm Board and the cooperatives, as well as to air some of the malicious and unjust charges being circulated by organized propaganda against them, to both of which their attention should be called.

Mr. President, the farmers are not able to meet their bills; they do not receive enough from the sale of their products to pay interest and taxes; they are unable to buy the manufacturers' products and output, and the factories of this country are closed because the buying power of the American farmer and producer has vanished.

When the farmer borrowed his money and mortgaged his farm in 1920 wheat was selling at $3 a bushel, and it would take only 1,000 bushels of wheat to pay off a $3,000 mortgage. Similar conditions confronted the cotton grower, the farmer who sold livestock, and the producer who sold his dairy products. When they borrowed on their farms in 1920 they were able to sell their products and livestock and their cotton for anywhere from four to six times as much as they receive for these same products now. To-day, with wheat selling at 50 cents a bushel, with cotton prices demoralized, with dairy products and livestock selling for a song, it will take six times the amount of the farmer's products to liquidate his debt.

One of the chief causes of the destruction of the credit of the American farmer and producer was brought about by the Federal reserve bank and its operations in deflating the American farmer. The Federal reserve bank is the financial agency of this Government, but in the enactment of the Federal reserve law and in its practice and operation no provision has been made for the proper financing of the farmer and producer. I have introduced a bill, S. 4058, which if passed will permit Federal reserve banks to discount first liens on improved farm lands, and I hope it may be given such attention that it will remedy this discrimination against the farmer.

The farmer's collateral is excluded and farm mortgages are not allowed to be used as a basis of credit. On the other hand, industry, the banks, the railroad companies, and the trust companies have been taken care of by the Federal reserve bank. The withdrawal of credit will ruin any business; the refusal to finance agriculture, on the part of the Federal reserve bank, is directly responsible for much of the condition that afflicts the farmers to-day.

This condition has not been given the attention it deserves by either of our major political parties or by the Congress of the United States. Because of our failure to take speedy and adequate action to rehabilitate agriculture, we find that the bankruptcy of the American farmer and producer is reflected in our closed factories, in our ruined banks, and the jobless men and women of America. Forty per cent of the population of this country is rural or dependent upon rural activities.

The American farmer and producer constitutes approximately 35 per cent of the buying power of this Nation, and that buying power has ceased to operate. Such a condition can not and must not endure. You can burn down your cities, but if the farm is left intact they will spring up overnight, but if the farm is not paying the cities will rot and grass grow in the streets, a thing which has happened.

When the manufacturers, the banking interests, or the insurance interests have asked for legislation in their behalf, it has been freely and willingly granted by Congress, but when we pass a law to reestablish agriculture, which is the basic industry of this Nation and upon which the prosperity of American labor depends, we find that those who have the privilege of making millions from the toil and the effort of the American farmer seek to poison the minds of the public and the Members of Congress against this law.

During all this time the traders in the farmers' commodities have been in control of the marketing system, they have fought every effort to give to the farmer and producer the cost of production or the right to own and control his own marketing system. The manufacturer, the industrial and financial magnates have gone along paying little heed to the demands or conditions of the agricultural interests of this

For years everything seemed rosy-mills and factories were running, labor was well employed, and no one was willing to listen to the cry of the American farmer and producer. To-day our mills and factories are closed and millions of men and women are tramping the streets. When 60,000,000 people have lost their buying power; when there are between six and ten million men and women walking the streets of our country looking for work, it is time that the financial giants and the industrial leaders of our country give some attention to the problems of the farmer.

The only people who are not in a position to fix the price of their labor-the compensation for what they raise-are the American farmers. Unless the agricultural marketing act is upheld and strengthened the farmer will be powerless to bargain collectively for the sale of his products. No marketing system should have the right arbitrarily to fix the price that the farmer and producer should receive for their products. Why should we expect to eat the food or wear the clothes obtained from the products of the farmer for less than cost?

FULFILL OUR PLEDGES

In 1928 both major political parties admitted the need of legislative remedy. The Republican platform contained this pledge:

We promise every assistance in the reorganization of the marketing system on sounder and more economical lines, and, where diversification is needed, Government financial assistance during period of transition.

The Republican Party pledges itself to the enactment of legis-lation creating a Federal Farm Board clothed with the necessary powers to promote the establishment of a farm marketing system, of farmer owned and controlled stabilization corporations or associations to prevent and control surpluses through orderly distribution.

favor, without putting the Government into business, the establishment of a Federal system of organization for cooperative and orderly marketing of farm products.

The Republican Party pledges itself to the development and enactment of measures which will place the agricultural interests of America on a basis of economic equality with other industries to insure its prosperity and success.

The Democratic platform promised:

Farm relief must rest on the basis of an economic equality of ram relief must rest on the basis of an economic equality of agriculture with other industries. To give this equality a remedy must be found which will include, among other things:

(a) Credit aid by loans to cooperatives on at least as favorable a basis as the Government aid to the merchant marine.

(b) Creation of a Federal Farm Board to assist the farmer and stock raiser in the marketing of their products, as the Federal Reserve Board has done for the banker and business man.

We pledge the party to foster and develop cooperative marketing associations through appropriate Government aid.

PRIVATE COMMODITY GAMBLERS CONTROL CREDIT

Those promises have only been partially fulfilled. The agricultural marketing act, as passed, was not as I wanted it. I was for the equalization fee, and I still think that law is inadequate without the equalization fee, which will furnish the machinery for taking care of the surplus of the farmer and avoid the piling up of grain where the world can see it and thereby continue a menace to higher prices. A measure should be passed to take care of the surplus and feed it out gradually to the foreign market, accepting such salvage as it brings. The protected home market is the thing sought.

During a period of 75 years prior to the enactment of the agricultural marketing act there had grown up a monopoly of commodity exchanges. For the last three decades the farmers have tried, through the cooperative movement, to have something to say about the fixing of the prices of their commodities.

The hearings before the Federal Trade Commission are filled with a record of intrigue, of corruption, of the spreading of false rumors against cooperative organizations, which have resulted in destroying these cooperative agencies. Hundreds of millions of dollars are made by private dealers belonging to these exchanges in the handling of the farmer's products in practically every grain, livestock, or dairy center of distribution. These same members of the commodity exchanges are often the stockholders and directors in banks, trust companies, and insurance companies, and because of this they control credit. Private elevator companies and commission merchants have for years loaned to the farmer, at excessive rates of interest, the money so necessary to enable him to move his crops or to sell his stock or products to meet the seasonal demands. When cooperative organizations desired money to assist in moving the farmer's crops, the banks, which were controlled by these same gamblers in the farmer's commodities, refused credit and discriminated against them.

At recent hearings before the House and Senate Committees on Agriculture, as usual when anything is attempted to be done for the farmer, we were admonished not to interfere with private business no matter how extortionate their profits or reprehensible their methods.

What is private business? If it is the banking business, it is the handling of the people's money, and the Government should give some attention to this. If it is the manufacturing business, does not that concern the consumers? When big business puts billions of dollars into foreign loans, they feel they should do so without this Government having a word to say about it; but when it becomes necessary to protect those loans with American troops, they are the first to squeal for Government aid. They are then willing to have Government in business as they wrap your flag and mine about them and to the strains of martial music cheer our boys on their march to the grave.

A living wage to the toilers and farmers of America is our job. Our biggest business is to leave as a legacy to our children and our children's children the opportunity to make a living; to stop forever the centralization of wealth and the enslavement that follows it.

Another slogan they advance for our lock step is that we should not subsidize the farmer. They argue that it should be the "survival of the fittest," that the cooperative and private trader fight it out. When the crops are to be harvested and sold; when the livestock is to be put upon the market, the problem is how to finance those crops and livestock. It is at this point that the unequal status is revealed. The private gambler in the farmer's commodities finds a ready welcome into the banks and financial institutions and can obtain the finance and credit which go to the very heart of this fight. Let the cooperative organizations start for that same bank or financial institution, and stealthy feet stick out to trip him on his way and he is suavely told that he can not receive credit, and the result is that the cooperatives can not finance the farmers in the marketing of their crops. This is not the "survival of the fittest," but of cunning and conniving greed.

The agricultural marketing act gives to the cooperative organizations the equality that is necessary for a fair fight for the "survival of the fittest."

INDEPENDENCE

The claim is made that we must not destroy the independence of the farmer; that he has a right to run his farm the way he pleases and to trade with whom he pleases. Under this so-called independent system the farmer has become a bankrupt. He is not an independent individual. He is dependent upon crop and weather conditions, upon surpluses and world markets, upon credit arrangements, including finance bonds and insurance, upon manipulations of the market, and cooperation is his only salvation.

When the farmer sells his grain he has nothing to say about the price. That price is arbitrarily fixed by the private grain trade and, until recent times, has depended upon the foreign market.

The Liverpool price of grain has dominated and dictated what the farmer has received.

UNFAIR PRACTICES

An investigation by the Federal Trade Commission, made at the request of the equity cooperative exchange, showed cars of grain shipped by the farmers to private dealers who are members of the Grain Exchange of Minneapolis were handled as many as 11 times by different commission firms, and that commissions or profits were charged against the farmer's grain every time it was handled. This cost the farmer from 12 to 15 cents a bushel. This law was passed to allow the cooperatives to keep control of the grain from the time it leaves the farmer's hands until it reaches the mill, to put an end to the looting of the farmer. Before its passage the American price for the farmer's grain was from 16 to 17 cents below the Liverpool market.

During the time the Farm Board was stabilizing grain prices our farmers received from 14 to 22 cents above the Liverpool price. The record shows that after the Farm Board ceased stabilization the farmer received  $1\frac{1}{2}$  cents above the Liverpool market instead of receiving 16 or 17 cents under the Liverpool market, as was the condition before the passage of the agricultural marketing act.

The average wheat crop of this country during 1929, 1930, and 1931, was approximately 800,000,000 bushels a year. If a saving of 17 cents a bushel were made, this would mean that the farmer received $136,000,000 more for his grain after the passage of the act than he would have received. Twenty-two cents above the Liverpool price would add to this amount $176,000,000 more, making a total of $312,000,000 saved to the wheat farmer, to say nothing of the hundreds of millions saved to the farmer raising other commodities. It must not be forgotten that the power to stabilize the price of grain, whether exercised continually or occasionally by the Farm Board, has a deterring effect upon short selling, and has prevented a further drop in the price of farm products. As a result of the increase in prices in grain there was inevitably a raise in price in livestock, cotton, and other farm products in sympathy with a stability which was given to the grain market during the stabilization operations.

The hearings before the Federal Trade Commission and Congress, with their disclosures of the abuses and unfair practices of the private grain and cotton exchanges, are a sufficient reason for the demand that is now being made by the farmer for legislation that will enable him to control and finance his own marketing system.

The interrelated connections between the banking interests and the private commodity exchanges of this country are well known. These connections have and will always oppose every effort of the producer to get away from the exactions and the tribute which the farmer has been compelled to pay to the gamblers in farm commodities and make plain the necessity of continuing the agricultural marketing act.

A greater emergency confronts this Nation to-day than during the World War when we gave to Julius Barnes unlimited power to fix grain prices. With that unlimited power, an arbitrary price, "a pegged price," but "pegged downward," was fixed. Financial support and the additional enactment of the equalization fee would put teeth into the agricultural marketing act and enable the farmer to market and sell his products without dictation, to enjoy the benefit of the protective tariff in his home market, and to get that equality "between agriculture and industry," which both the Democratic and Republican platforms solemnly promised.

The future of America depends upon the success of the tillers of the soil. The man who plants the seed, who gambles with nature, who takes his chances against drought, floods, heat, and cold is entitled to a fair deal for the "survival of the fittest." The agricultural marketing act does not give to any agency, cooperative or private, a monopoly of handling the products of the farmers. Only through a centralized agency, nation-wide in scope, can we ever hope to make a success of the agricultural marketing act. The "survival of the fittest" slogan will apply to the grain and cotton exchanges and the boards of trade if in fair competition they can render the same or better service to the producer.

The farmers have not forgotten that the traders in wheat, cotton, livestock, and dairy products grudgingly gave their assent to the passage of the agricultural marketing act because they thought thereby to defeat the equalization fee and figured they could control the Farm Board and hang onto the monopoly which they had of handling the farmer's products.

When President Hoover's appointees began to function, to the utter consternation of the traders, they made an honest effort to help the farmer and really to assist in the development and growth of the cooperative movement. This was not at all what the gamblers expected, and immediately a flood of malicious, subtle, false, and destructive propaganda was turned loose upon Congress and the public.

Section 5 of the agricultural marketing act specifically provides certain powers and duties of the Farm Board which are of the highest importance to every farmer and producer:

SEC. 5. The board is authorized and directed (1) to promote education in the principles and practices of cooperative marketing of agricultural commodities and food products thereof.

(2) To encourage the organization, improvement in methods, and development of effective cooperative associations.

Only by this method can the farmers and producers become independent of the gamblers in the farmer's commodities, and he has a right to expect that protection.

Chairman Stone, of the Federal Farm Board, correctly stated the purpose of the agricultural marketing act when he said:

A marketing system operating to their interest (i. e., the interest of the farmer and producer) and adjustment of production to the probable consumer demand are perhaps the most basic needs of American farmers.

Mr. Stone further said:

The agricultural marketing act offers aid to farmers, through organized effort, to make the necessary adjustment. It commits the Government definitely to the support of cooperative marketing. The Farm Board's main job is to assist in the development of the national cooperative movement.

One of the first conclusions reached by the board was that the sales activities of cooperatives handling a particular commodity, such as grain or livestock, should be centralized in a single agency if the interests of the grower were to be served best in merchandising his product. * *

Local cooperative associations, whose members are the people on the farm, constitute the foundation of all the central marketing organizations, which mean the latter are built from the farmer up. In every instance the plan of organization was developed by a majority of the cooperatives handling the commodity and without dictation from the Farm Board. These central associations are farmer owned and controlled, great care being taken to see that they are set up on a sound financial basis, and that they have competent management. Their services are open to all farmers on an equitable basis.

STABILIZATION OF PRICES

In an effort to protect the farmer against a falling market and against a world-wide depression, which have existed during the time these efforts have been carried on by the Farm Board, the price of grain was stabilized. Everyone knows that this action of the Farm Board resulted in upholding to some extent the credit structure necessary to give the farmer a fairer price. As a result of this program hundreds of millions of dollars were saved to the farmers of this country and this money, in these times of world depression, was spent by the farmer with the local merchant and deposited in the local banks, resulting in a distinct, actual benefit, not only to the farmer but to the merchants, to the laboring men, and to the bankers in these communities.

Whatever loss the Government may have sustained as a result of these stabilization operations has inured to the benefit of the farmer, who is certainly entitled to this little recognition, since his Government, under the Democrats in 1920, through the Federal reserve banks, started their deflation policy of the farmer. Any loss as a result of the stabilization of grain prices is worth all that it has cost. The money which the farmers received under such a program is all that has enabled those still left on the farms to stay there.

MILLIONS LOST

During war-time control this Government lost hundreds of millions of dollars in order to protect the railroad interests of this Nation and to stabilize the prices which they would receive for their services. The farmer renders just as great and important a service as do the railroads or the financial interests of this country. He is entitled to every bit as much consideration in solving his difficulties and in enabling him to get back on his feet as any other interest in the land.

The business of handling and marketing the farmer's crops, of meeting the unfair and dishonest competition of the commodity gamblers, of watching the price and protecting the seller every hour of the day is just as intricate and as involved and important as any other business.

ONE NATION-WIDE COOPERATIVE

In an effort to utilize the services of the cooperative organizations of this country the Farm Board realized that it would be essential to deal with one central organization which would give all of the cooperatives the opportunity to enter into such a national set-up on a fair and equitable basis.

As Mr. Stone stated before the Senate Agricultural Committee in the recent hearing:

Mr. Stone. The objective of the Farmers' National Grain Corporation is to bid a price on grain bought from its members based on the terminal market that is nearest to it, less a sufficient amount to take care of the handling charge of the grain, with a reasonable commission on the transaction. In other words, the Farmers' National Grain Corporation largely operates the same as does a grain merchant on any of the markets, only its objective is entirely different from the objective of the grain merchant. The objective of the grain merchant is to buy grain as cheap as he can and sell it as high as he can to make as much money as he can.

Senator Wheeler. Isn't that the same plan that we have here?
Mr. Stone. No. The objective of the Farmers' National Grain Corporation is to bid a price for the members' grain as high as they can to enable them to get their money back and make a reasonable commission in the transaction. Whatever it makes goes to its stockholders. That, in my opinion, has had a very beneficial influence on the price of grain, even though the price level has been low.

The Farmers' National Grain Corporation was organized under the direction of the Farm Board. It is a nation-wide cooperative organization. It—

Is primarily a merchandising agency and has made no effort to effect any feature of monopolistic control of the product. * * *

The greatest single service the Farm Board has rendered grain producers has been in helping to bring together into one national cooperative agency, Farmers' National Grain Corporation, practically all of the larger grain cooperatives in the country. This nation-wide organization enables growers to carry the producers' influence into the terminal grain markets, to represent their interest in shaping rules and regulations under which grain is to be sold, and to make the marketing system function more directly in the interests of the farmers.

Another service is that of avoiding market congestion. Even with facilities crowded to the limit, judicious handling of supplies through Farmers' National was instrumental in avoiding what otherwise might have been serious gluts at terminal markets during the 1930-31 season. (Second annual report of the Federal Farm Board.)

In carrying out the loan provisions provided for in the agricultural marketing act the Farm Board pursued the only safe and sensible method of dealing with this problem.

That was to loan to one nation-wide cooperative and to enable all cooperatives and farmer producers to enter into such nation-wide cooperative organization and obtain the benefits of such a loan program.

It would have been unbusinesslike for the Farm Board to deal with and loan to thousands of individual cooperative organizations and individual farmers without any reference to their financial standing or their ability to repay these loans

It was also important and the Farm Board was necessarily interested in the financial structure of the cooperative organizations who would handle the farmers' products and in the ability and personnel of the management of such organizations to the end that they would function efficiently and wisely for the benefit of the producer.

If the Farmers' National Grain Corporation can and does render better service to the producer, it follows that the cooperative organizations will enter into and become a part of its set-up and organization in the marketing of products.

This act has been in force a little over two years, and yet the grain cooperative organizations operating under the provision of the agricultural marketing act handled a total of 196,000,000 bushels of grain in 1931, as compared with 67,000,000 bushels handled by all grain cooperatives operating on terminal markets in 1927–28. This grain was handled at a cost of less than 1 cent a bushel. Contrast this cost of less than a cent a bushel for handling the grain with the 12 to 15 cents the farmers have been paying for years to the private grain traders for the same service and you must conclude that the farmer is unqualifiedly for the retention of this act. Similar gains and similar growths have been made in all the cooperatives, and similar benefits have accrued to the farmers in the handling of other products. The organizations representing the farmer are unanimous for the retention of this act.

Mr. Louis J. Taber, president of the National Grange of the United States, representing one of the largest farm organizations of the Nation, unhesitatingly approves the farm marketing act. This great organization, the National Grange, recently adopted, among others, the following resolutions:

Resolved, That—
2. The nation-wide cooperative marketing machinery, which has been expanded and developed during the two years under the agricultural marketing act as never before in any equal period of American experience, must be further extended and strength-

4. The Federal Farm Board, handicapped by a measure inadequate to meet the needs of a difficult situation, has nevertheless contributed greatly toward developing and strengthening the cooperative movement.

Showing the reaction of the American farmer, Mr. E. A. O'Neal, the president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, said:

I want to say for the act that I think, as a farmer—that is the only interest I have personally, and for my farmers—that the act itself has been very, very helpful to the cooperative organiza-tions of the Nation. * * * They have been very much dis-couraged with the way the surplus was handled, but I say this, that I think frankly the stabilization activities in wheat and cotton by the Farm Board were honest endeavors to do a job for the farmer.

I think the farmer ought to be in charge of his own marketing system, Senator Gore, and anything you can do to help him do it I am in favor of. You have done it for every other group. Why not do it for the farmer?

Mr. John Simpson, president of the Farmers' Union of America, representing hundreds of thousands of farmers, also expressed the need when he said:

We believe it is a fair proposition to put to Congress to say that every consumer should be willing to pay the farmer the cost of production for what they use of the American farmers' products.

Another line that is needed for farmers is finance if the farmers are to survive. Fundamental with this also is the fact that agriculture must be vital to the Nation. This Nation can not afford to see agriculture destroyed. It is a vital part of the Nation. That is the reason why you are seeking a way to make agriculture secure. If agriculture is to survive, the farms must be refinanced at much lower rates of interest. The Farmers' Union is back of Senator Frazzer's bill that, as I understand, when it will be beintroduced, will provide for 1½ per cent interest rate and 1½ per cent on the principal—3 per cent a year. We are back of that bill because this Government is financing Italy at 1.1 per cent and then gave them a moratorium. We feel like farmers ought to have a rate of 1½ per cent.

There are two major things that we would like to see done. First, refinance the farm mortgages of the country on the basis as outlined in the Frazier bill, and to find some way of building on the marketing act a program of guaranteeing cost of produc-Another line that is needed for farmers is finance if the farmers the marketing act a program of guaranteeing cost of production.

Let me call the attention of this body to the following significant opinion expressed by Mr. Simpson, of the Farmers' Union, in response to a statement of my colleague:

Senator Brookhart. Over in New York the gamblers get all the money they want at 1 or 2 per cent.

Mr. SIMPSON. Senator, we farmers feel that we ought to be worth as much to the Nation as the gamblers of New York.

Mr. Ralph Snyder, chairman of the National Committee of Farm Organizations, representing 16 farm bureaus and cooperative organizations, in the recent hearing before the Agricultural Committee of the Senate called their attention to the resolution adopted by these organizations in the following language:

Our faith in the efficacy of the agricultural marketing act remains unshaken. We hereby serve notice on its enemies who are working overtime to accomplish its defeat that this act and its proper and effective administration will receive our unqualified support. We favor any such constructive amendment to it that may strengthen the measure and express our willingness to work to that end with any and all friendly groups.

Let us not forget that Mr. Taber, president of the National Grange, Mr. O'Neal, president of the Farm Bureau Federation, Mr. Simpson, president of the Farmers' Union of America, and Mr. Snyder, representing 16 nation-wide cooperative organizations, are speaking for practically 3,000,000 farmers and producers in the United States, or more than one-half of the farmers of the Nation. The basic principles of this act are sound and workable and the mistakes which have been made, if any, can be overcome and rectified.

If, in the set-up of the national livestock organization, the Farmers' National Grain Corporation, or the American Cooperative Cotton Association, there have been some mistakes made in the administrative features, this by no means furnishes a justifiable basis for destroying the marketing act or passing amendments that will cripple and hamper its operation. The farmers of America can not be organized in a day or a week. The distribution of agricultural products has been built up by the handlers in grain for their own purposes.

It is because of the fear that the efforts that are being made to give the farmers an honest and a fair marketing system may succeed that we find unjustified attacks being made against the Farm Board and the agricultural marketing act. Every opportunity is used by the private grain trade to broadcast unfounded and dishonest charges against the cooperatives. Many of the newspapers of this country are willing allies in this campaign of deception. The cooperatives are semipublic institutions and at all of their meetings they disclose the detailed information of the affairs of their associations and these are given to the public, and rightly so. The mistakes and vicious practices of the private grain trade are seldom known. The privately owned grain institutions keep all of their affairs to themselves, including their intrigues and their manipulations of the market.

ORGANIZED PROPAGANDA

The agricultural marketing act has been under constant attack. There was recently held before the Governor of Minnesota a hearing which consumed some 10 weeks of time, involving charges against the Farmers Union Terminal Association, which is a cooperative. Under the guise of seeking to remove the railroad and warehouse commissioners of Minnesota, a complaint was filed with the governor of my State containing 14 separate charges of misconduct upon the part of the railroad and warehouse commission and the Farmers' Union Terminal Association. Half of the petitioner's complaint in the proceedings was devoted to an attack upon the agricultural marketing act and Stabilization Corporation and the Farm Board. It had nothing to do with the matter which was to be heard by the governor. Its only purpose was to destroy the faith of the people in the agricultural marketing act and in the cooperative movement.

At the close of this hearing 11 of the charges made in the petitioner's complaint were dismissed. Three charges remained to be considered by the governor, all of which involved the sale of wheat contained in what is known as Elevator M in the city of Minneapolis, by the Farmers' Union Terminal Association to the Grain Stabilization Corporation.

The complaint of the petitioner in this case attacked the integrity of the officers and officials of the Farmers' Union Terminal Association, a cooperative. The Grain Stabilization Corporation, the purchaser of this grain, made no complaint as to its grade or quality and when the testimony was completed it was clearly shown that there was not a single bit of evidence to sustain the charges made in the proceedings. The governor unhesitatingly found that there was no evidence to justify him in removing the railroad and warehouse commission, and it was ordered-

That said charges be, and the same are hereby, dismissed, and said petition for the removal of said railroad and warehouse commission be, and the same is hereby, dismissed. Dated this 18th day of February, 1932.

In order to understand the exact situation it might be well to explain that the governor's party is Farmer-Labor, that the railroad and warehouse commissioners are Republicans. The governor has, for cause, the right to remove these officials and fill their places with good Farmer-Labor workers, whose removal would have allowed him to increase his machine by three commissioners and through them 570 husky, partisan workers. He never would have held the hearing if some one had not persuaded him that the chance of removing the railroad and warehouse commission was good, which makes his decision of especial significance.

The governor, in further commenting upon the record in this case, had the following to say:

The testimony given does not justify any finding of misconduct on the part of the Farmers' Union Terminal Association.

Notwithstanding that every charge made to discredit the Farm Board and agricultural marketing act, and the Farmers' Union Terminal Association, was found to be untrue, yet the fact remains that when this charge was made it was broadcast in the headlines of all the papers in the Northwest, creating in the minds of the people and the farmers distrust in the Farm Board and in the agricultural marketing act. Their object was to broadcast the charges and to herald them through the newspapers; then to bring it to bear on Washington to assist their destructive plans. Those who know the conditions in the Northwest realize that the grain traders of Minneapolis were responsible for this hearing. Further information can be secured from the argument of Tom Davis, for years a leading northwest progressive counsel for the Farmers' Union Terminal Association, which I introduced into the record, and a reading of this argument will convince anyone that this hearing was inspired and financed by the Grain Exchange of Minneapolis.

FALSE PROPAGANDA

Many of the same charges which were presented to the Governor of Minnesota were issued by one J. W. Brinton in a book entitled "Wheat and Politics." Congress is undoubtedly familiar with this book, for I am informed that every Member has received copies of it.

In this book the author points an accusing finger at the Farmers' National Grain Corporation of being organized within the State of Delaware. Of course, they are organized in the State of Delaware. If they sought the advice of any reputable lawyer, he certainly must have advised them to organize in a State where the laws of that State would not hamper their operation. It might be necessary for them to sell 50,000,000 bushels of wheat in 10 minutes, and if they were organized in many States this could not be done without a lot of red tape, meeting of the board, and a few other things that would restrict immediate action and might entirely frustrate their deal. They must be organized where they have such freedom of action as have their private competitors. Delaware stands alone the most unrestricted State in the Union. Merely because some of the richest and most powerful corporations in the country are organized in that State is no reason why a cooperative should not avail itself of similar opportunity. They should be commended, not condemned, for their sagacity.

Until Mr. Brinton was refused a position with the Farmers' Union Terminal Association he wrote article after article favorable to the Farmers' National Grain Corporation, the Farm Board, and the marketing act.

It would be interesting to know what contact the author of this book has made with the private dealers in grain and cotton and what assistance they rendered in its circulation and distribution.

Mr. Brinton applied to the Farmers' National Grain Corporation and to the Farmers' Union Terminal Association for a position as a lecturer and speaker as late as July, 1931.

Brinton sent his agent, Mr. Hutchinson, to Kansas City, Mo., to sell to the private grain trade and to the members of the grain exchange of that city his book entitled "Wheat and Politics." Mr. Hutchinson, in making a report of his activities in Kansas City, on October 26, 1931, wrote a very enlightening letter to Brinton, in which he says:

While working in Kansas City I promised them that I would not have any correspondence with the office.

Mr. President, the following quotation explains why the grain trade were so careful to exact such a promise:

I never run across anything just like this to sell. Every member of the board would give all his old boots and shoes to see this get to the public, but there were three things that stood in the First was the storage of Government grain in the terminal elevators. They are afraid if anything was done that the grain would be ordered out, and the only people making any money there are those that have grain for storage; and the president of the board, Mr. Theis, was the heaviest interested, and he blocked the game.

Mr. President, the only restraining influence is clearly shown here to be the money they were receiving from the Government for the storage of grain.

Mr. Hutchinson continues:

Second was the liability. Mr. Theis insisted that if the Farm Board did not sue you for libel that they stood convicted of every count on the calendar, and they felt that anyone helping to distribute the book was equally suilty with yourself.

tribute the book was equally guilty with yourself.

Third, they felt that from your past record that the only reason for writing this book was because you did not get a place with the Farm Board and was merely squawking, and that as you had retained all the evidence that you have in the book and was now making it public that if you were able to secure any evidence of their making purchases that you might use the same in after years.

In other words, Mr. President, they were willing to deal with him, but they did not want to get caught. They were glad to have the falsehood circulated, but feared responsibility. We have here, Mr. President, from the mouth of Brinton's own agent, a picture of the real character of the author of Wheat and Politics.

Again, from the Hutchinson letter more enlightenment:

In this connection I would suggest that you write to Mr. C. E. Thompson, 933 Board of Trade Building, Kansas City. I explained things to him quite thoroughly; he is a bright fellow, is acquainted with the members of the trade, and I believe can do some business.

I worked the live stock exchange, met with the board of directors, and worked it hard, and I believe that something will come of it.

Further on he writes:

At Salina I found quite a little interest, but the three objections mentioned above cropped out; I, however, arranged with the Ted Branson Grain Co. to take over the sale, with the backing of the board of trade.

Mr. President, hundreds, if not thousands, of these books have been purchased by members of the grain trade and sent to managers of elevator companies and to leading farmers and grain dealers all over the country. There is more "chaff and poison" in this book than there is "wheat and politics."

This book not only attacks the farm marketing act but seeks to destroy the cooperative movement through false-hoods concerning its leaders.

Mr. C. E. Huff, now the head of the Farmers' National Grain Corporation, to whom he pays his compliments, was for years the president of the Farmers' Union of America. For over 25 years he was a leader in the cooperative movement in Kansas, where he still has his own farm. His experience was gained as a practical farmer. In 1927 he was the president of the Kansas Farmers' Union, having a membership of approximately 40,000. His work as president of the Farmers' National Grain Corporation has met with the approval of the Farm Board and of the cooperative organizations of the country, who realize that he has handled the business of the farmers honestly and efficiently.

Another "satan" in his romance, Wheat and Politics, is M. W. Thatcher, general manager of the Farmers' Union Terminal Association.

He makes the false charge that Mr. Thatcher was indicted. He never was indicted, as the following letter from the present Governor Shafer, of North Dakota, dated January 16, 1932, will verify:

In this grand-jury session both Lofthus and Thatcher appeared at their own request and testified. The grand jury returned an indictment against Lofthus but none against Thatcher.

I appeared in the hearings above referred to, including the grand-jury session, as an assistant attorney general of North Dakota. There was no immunity granted to Mr. Thatcher or to any other witness who testified before the grand jury. The State did not ask the grand jury for an indictment against Mr. Thatcher on the perjury charge. This was not because of any intention on the part of the prosecutor to grant him immunity, but because we did not consider that the evidence presented was sufficient to support an indictment.

Further corroboration, if needed, is in a letter from Mr. William E. Green, dated February 4, 1932, who at the time was State's attorney of Cass County, N. Dak.:

The matter was handled entirely by the attorney general of North Dakota and was in charge of Hon. George E. Shafer, now governor, and then assistant attorney general of North Dakota. It is my best recollection that the complaint was prepared by the attorney general's office and sent to me for signature, together with the statements of the facts upon which the complaint was based, and that I signed the complaint on the strength of the investigation which had been made by the attorney general's office. The complaint against Mr. Thatcher was dismissed on motion of the State.

I do know that I never at any time as State's attorney gave any promise of immunity to Mr. Thatcher in return for an offer to testify for the State, nor was any requested. I also recollect being advised by Mr. Shafer at the time of the grand-jury proceeding that he did not intend to ask for any indictment against Mr. Thatcher, because, in his opinion, the evidence presented did not warrant an indictment.

The efforts made by Brinton to injure the cooperative movement by destruction of Mr. Thatcher are as futile as were those of the grain traders in the recent hearing before the Governor of Minnesota.

Every Senator knows the unworthy devices used to destroy the faith of the people in a public servant, as I know the dishonest methods used against me.

One of the chief agencies which spread these unjust charges against the Farmers' Union Terminal Association was a newspaper known as the Minneapolis Journal. This paper is the mouthpiece of the Minneapolis Grain Exchange and the grain gamblers. The Minneapolis Journal has always opposed every progressive movement in this country. I speak from personal experience, for during my last campaign for reelection this same paper spent most of its time in trying to poison the public mind and in distorting and misrepresenting my record as a public servant.

For the success of the cooperative movement, the opponents know that the cooperatives need such men as Mr. Huff and Mr. Thatcher. If they can destroy the faith of the people in such men, they accomplish their purpose to destroy the cooperative movement.

EXCESSIVE SALARIES

One of the criticisms leveled at the Farm Board is that they and the cooperative organizations who borrow money from them are paid exorbitant salaries,

In my opinion, the salaries paid to some of the officials of the National Grain Corporation are too large and should be reduced, but in comparison with the salaries paid to executives and managers of competing private grain firms they are not excessive. Many of the technical men employed in the grain trade receive salaries of from $25,000 to $40,000 a year. The National Grain Corporation in order to compete, is compelled to procure the best type of grain men obtainable. The individual farmer is not familiar with the technical demands necessary successfully to market his crop. He must have experienced men, and in order to secure them is forced to pay them salaries accordingly.

It would be unfair to handicap a cooperative handling grain and say that they can not pay salaries substantially in line with what their competitors pay. If we are to do this, then we should limit the salaries which can be paid by the private grain trade to their employees. This we can not do.

The salary paid the manager of the Omaha branch office of the Farmers' National Grain Corporation is $15,000 a year. Contrast this with the salary of $32,000 paid to the general manager of a private grain company in Omaha. The manager of the Omaha branch before he was employed by the Farmers National was receiving the identical salary, plus a bonus.

A bill is now before the Senate which provides that the Farm Board can not loan money to any cooperative that pays a salary in excess of $15,000 to any of its employees except by reason of existing contracts and agreements or of agreements which may be made before this amendment becomes a law.

The Farm Board in making loans to the National Cooperative organizations must have the right to investigate and know their ability to pay. It is illogical to say to a privately owned commodity organization, whether cooperative or otherwise, that they can not receive a loan from this Government unless they pay salaries which will compel them to obtain inferior men. The cooperative organizations are anxious to reduce their salaries, but they can not, in their infancy, do so and succeed. If they did, it would mean failure. That is why the private-grain trade is back of such an amendment and the cooperatives are not.

Another amendment is proposed to take away stabilization. This would hamstring the Farm Board. Take away from the Farm Board the power to finance the cooperatives and we again place them at the mercy of the private trader. Deny to the producer finance and credit, and we destroy the marketing act. The passage of such an amendment means that the political party responsible for its passage is going to say to the farmers that the promises contained in their platforms are not worth the paper on which they are written. It has been asserted that under the operations of the Farm Board the law of supply and demand does not obtain.

Chairman Stone, in answering this charge, says:

Again the groundless charge is made that the cooperative marketing program is intended to set aside the law of supply and demand. The facts are that just the reverse is true. An effort is being made to have the law of supply and demand operate for the seller as well as the buyer. The purpose is to meet organized buying of farm products on equal terms with organized produce selling of those products. Until this is accomplished, the producer will be at a distinct disadvantage.

Let us not be misled by insidious propaganda. If the marketing act is to be amended, let it be amended by its friends, not its enemies. If these amendments are successful, every gambler who has "sold short" in an effort to discredit this administration will rejoice. Every interest which wants to destroy the marketing act will be pleased. Every gambler of commodities of the farmer will laugh up his sleeve.

Surely, my Democratic colleagues will not stand for this. Surely, the Republican Party will not destroy its own child. The farmer is well aware that all salaries, whether paid to the farm cooperatives or the private-grain trade, come out of his pocket, and that the huge profits of the grain trade were extracted from his commodities, making such salaries possible.

The cooperative organizations can not compete against years of experience and valuable contacts unless they can hire men who know the business, who have had these same years of experience and already have these same powerful contacts.

The private farm commodity gamblers would be glad to have Congress say to a cooperative, "You are forbidden to hire men with contact, experience, genius to compete with us."

When in this world depression it is popular to talk of reduction of the cost of government these commodity gamblers have cunningly utilized the slogan of the hour, "Reduction of salaries—curbing of expenses," to put over upon Congress and the farmers their destruction of the agricultural marketing act. It is such genius of knowing how to handle opportunity that demands and gets large salaries.

Why should the cooperative organizations of this country not have the best brains, the best experience, the best connivers that money can buy? Will you tell me why the grain gamblers should want this Congress to give them a law which will enable them to monopolize all of the brains and ability which would make unsuccessful the cooperative movement?

This is a race between commodity gamblers and the farmers. It is a race to see whether or not the farmer shall own and control his marketing system; it is a race toward economic freedom for the farmer; it is a race toward a square deal for the toilers and tillers of the soil. In that kind of a race all that the farmer needs is an even start, and then he will take care of himself. Give him the same kind of | mount, equipped with equal lung power, with equal strength, muscles that are built for the race or intrigue; above all else, give him a horse that has been trained for the race and a jockey who knows the other fellow's game.

These connivers know that the repeal of the act is impossible and they are trying by amendments to accomplish the same end. If the principle proposed in the amendment prohibiting the Farm Board from loaning money to a cooperative that pays a salary in excess of $15,000 a year is a good principle, let us make its application general.

AGRICULTURE MORE IMPORTANT

Not only are salaries in excess of $25,000 paid to general managers and expert operators in the grain and commodity exchanges, but it is well known that there is practically not a president of a railroad of any size in this country, or a vice president or general manager, who does not draw an annual salary of not less than $25,000, and some of them draw salaries as high as $80,000.

I am informed that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has made a loan of over $20,000,000 to the Wabash Railroad, whose president, according to reports, receives a salary of $60,000 a year. This railroad last year did a business of $60,000,000. The Farmers' National Grain Corporation during the same year handled a business of over $200,000,000, and the president of the Farmers' National Grain Corporation receives a salary of $15,000 a year.

If salaries were to be governed by volume of business, the salary to be accorded the president of the Farmers' National Grain Corporation, to be consistent with the salary given to the president of the Wabash Railroad Co., would be three times such an amount, or $180,000 a year, when as a fact he receives one-twelfth of this amount, although he is the head of an organization that handled more than three times as much business as the Wabash Railroad.

Why did we not hear an outcry that the Wabash Railroad president was receiving too large a salary? What the farmers are wondering about is why the Farm Board and the cooperative organizations are singled out.

The president and vice presidents and chairmen of boards of directors of hundreds of national banks in this country pay their officers salaries ranging all the way from $25,000 to $100,000 a year.

The president of the New York Life Insurance Co. in 1928 drew a salary of $126,600. The vice president drew a salary

The president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. in 1928 drew a salary of $200,000, or almost equal to the total salary paid the President of the United States and his entire Cabinet. One of the vice presidents drew a salary of $175,000; another, $135,000; another, $125,000; and two other vice presidents salaries ranging from $25,000 to $45,000.

Are we doing anything, can we do anything, to stop the Reconstruction Finance Corporation from loaning money to the banks, railroads, or insurance companies who pay salaries in excess of $15,000 to their officers? Why should the Democratic Party, who promised in their platform "we pledge the party to foster and develop cooperative-marketing associations through appropriate Government aid," now single out the cooperatives and say that they can not borrow money from the United States without limiting all the salaries they pay the men they hire, while at the same time giving free license to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to loan money to the railroads, banks, and insurance companies regardless of the salaries they pay?

Why should the Republican Party, who in their platform in 1928 said, "We promise every assistance in the reorganization of the marketing system on sounder and more economical lines and, where diversification is needed, Government financial assistance during the period of transition," in fulfillment of which promise they passed the agricultural marketing act, now say to the farmers that the promise made in 1928 is not good?

Why should either the Republican or the Democratic Party stab the farmers in the back, and by indirection deprive them of every opportunity to make a success of the cooperative movement? To adopt such amendments is to say to the American farmer and producer that the Republican as well as the Democratic Party have no regard for their promises.

We passed the agricultural marketing act as an effort to fulfill the promise made in the Republican platform. Our Democratic colleagues assisted in its passage in order to show their willingness to fulfill the promises made in the Democratic platform.

The farmers of this country are taking a leaf from the textbook of the power companies, the railroads, and big financial institutions, and like them are becoming less conscious of party. They are wondering if we are willing to continue to give to the farmer the same kind of deal that we have unhesitatingly accorded to the banker and the business man of this country.

AN OPEN MARKET

Charges have been made that the Farm Board in handling the products of the farmers limited the handling and sale of this grain to the Farmers' National Grain Corporation and the cooperatives.

In a recent hearing before the Senate Agricultural Committee the following appears:

Senator Thomas of Oklahoma. Mr. Stone, did I understand you to say this morning that the Farmers' National Grain Corporation was the exclusive agency for the buying and selling on the exchanges?

Mr. Stone. No; it is not. Senator Thomas of Oklahoma. What other agencies are used by the Federal Farm Board?

Mr. Stone. There are several other agencies used, and I will be glad to furnish you the names of those which they use.

There was then furnished to the committee the "list of agencies, corporations, firms, and brokers used by the Grain Stabilization Corporation in buying and selling wheat."

The importance of this list is that more than 100 private grain dealers were used by the Grain Stabilization Corporation in the buying and selling of wheat. (See pp. 56-57, Report of Hearings before the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, United States Senate, on the agricultural situation, November 24, 25, 27, and 28, 1931.)

This is a sufficient answer to the unfounded charge of monopoly.

It must be borne in mind that during all the years that the cooperatives have been fighting for a fair marketing system they have been met at every turn by inability to finance themselves in handling their products. They could not turn to the private banks and the private financial institutions, because these private institutions are too closely allied with the private grain and cotton exchanges of this

This is why the Farm Board sought, under the provisions of the agricultural marketing act, to finance the marketing program of the cooperative agencies of this country, and it is one of the chief reasons why the agricultural marketing act was passed. Unless the cooperative organizations of farmers and producers can be adequately and safely financed there is no hope for the cooperative movement in this country. This money that has been spent in an effort to stabilize prices and in assisting the farmers to market their products cooperatively has been well spent.

The Farm Board should be a militant body of men, fighting the propaganda that is leveled against them, and should not apologize for the attacks of the private gamblers in products. The Farm Board has failed to keep the Congress fully and fairly informed of the progress it is making. The Farm Board should demand of the Federal Trade Commission that an investigation be had of the private grain trade and of their methods used to destroy the marketing act.

The farmers are entitled to an investigation covering not only the Farm Board and cooperatives but the private grain trade as well.

The private cotton dealers of this country raised a fund of over $100,000 for publicity purposes and for the purpose of destroying or securing the repeal of the agricultural marketing act.

I particularly call attention to pages 393 and 394 of the hearing before the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry of the United States Senate on November 24, 25, 27, and 28, 1931.

The private grain trade wants the Farm Board and the cooperatives investigated, and there is no reason why they should not be; but before passing such a resolution let us see to it that an investigation is also had at the same time of the activities of the gamblers in the farmers' commodities.

Such an investigation will convince this body and everybody in this country that the attack now being made against the Farm Board and the agricultural marketing act is unfounded and only a self-serving propaganda. The grain trade's object is to headline through the newspapers that the Farm Board and the cooperative organizations are under investigation, in order to poison the public mind. What should be had is enough money so that the investigation can lay before the people the actions of the Farm Board alongside the actions of the private grain trade, and this will show "who's who and what's what."

To desert the American farmer now would be worse than treason. To take a backward step in this fight for progressive legislation would be rank cowardice. The rights of the farmers, who conduct the basic industry of this Nation, must be safeguarded. We must see to it that the marketing act is not rendered ineffective.

If those opposed to the marketing act can offer anything better for the benefit of the farmer, let them do it, and I am sure Congress will give it consideration. Now is the time when the farmers of America are demanding relief. Now is the time to stand up and be counted. This is no time for unfounded charges against the marketing act or the Farm Board. This is no time for tearing down the only law that can possibly protect the producer.

I call upon my colleagues to join with me in constructive legislation, giving to the Farm Board greater power, giving to the marketing act greater strength, putting, if you please, into the marketing act teeth by inserting the equalization fee.

Our foreign markets for grain have declined to a point where they are relatively unimportant; and this may be a permanent condition. It may be that the same fate in the foreign markets will overtake the cotton producer. Who knows but that Russia in five years will be able to furnish a substantial part of the cotton and wheat which the entire world will require? I am for America and the American farmer and cotton grower. We should be against any step that will not give to the American farmer and cotton grower full protection and full relief. The farmer should have a fair and full price in a domestic market for the wheat and cotton he raises.

We give an American market to American industry and rightly so. Why should not the farmer have the American domestic market 100 per cent?

Shall it be said that we are unwilling to give to the farmers what we willingly grant to the railroads, to industry, and to the manufacturers of this Nation? This discrimination against the farmer must stop. It is the cause of our unemployment.

The Republican Party is demanding protection for agriculture, and in the passage of the agricultural marketing act has taken a forward step in giving that protection to the producers; but we have not done enough. We should do more.

If the Farm Board fails to function as it should, then let us see to it that we have a Farm Board that will function for the benefit of the farmers.

The American laborer to-day is without a market, and men and women are walking the streets begging for work, and why? Because we have failed to protect the producers, the farmers, the cotton growers, and livestock raisers. The direct result of this is that the farmer can not buy; and, having destroyed the market for the manufacturers and producers, you have taken away the chance of men and women to work. Not until the farmers are put on a basis of economic independence can we ever hope again to give to labor a living wage.

We heard no outcry when industry was given the protection of an American market. We heard no outcry when the railroads were given aid. No complaint was made when the banks and the insurance companies were assisted. The moment an attempt is made to give the farmers the same privileges, however, we find that selfish interests seek to destroy the very industry that means the prosperity of this Nation. None are so dense as those who are unwilling to face the facts. We gave billions to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for the rearrangement of credit.

The only program that will reconstruct the commerce of this Nation is that which will give to those who produce the raw materials the cost of production. Will the Government deny over one-third of the population of this country the cost of production? The people of this Nation must have food, and are going to have food. It is for the home life of this Nation that I am pleading; for we all realize that no civilization has ever endured unless the tillers of the soil have been protected.

We have arranged for over $3,000,000,000 of credit for 60 per cent of the Nation. If agriculture were to have its proportion of 40 per cent, it would be entitled to an appropriation of $2,000,000,000.

Representing the agricultural and industrial interests of Minnesota, I desire to go on record as approving the agricultural marketing act and urging the Congress of the United States to strengthen and uphold it.

I am for America and for American industry and American standards. We shall never have American standards unless we also protect the 40 per cent which represents agriculture. The fight that the producers of this Nation are making for economic justice is a gigantic fight. The opposition to such equality is carried on by powerful private, selfish interests, and there has been no let-up in the efforts of these interests to destroy the faith of the people in the cooperative movement.

If the United States is to endure, the people of this country must have a free and honest market.

INTERIOR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATIONS

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 8397) making appropriations for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1933, and for other purposes.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, at this point I ask leave to withdraw the amendment concerning the 10 per cent reduction, which I offered yesterday afternoon.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the amendment is withdrawn.

Mr. McKELLAR. Now, if there are no other amendments to be offered—

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair will inquire. The bill is open to amendment. Are there other amendments to be offered?

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, I have two or three amendments yet to offer. I send to the desk an amendment, which I ask to have read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will report the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 55, in line 3, after the word "activity," the Senator from North Dakota proposes to insert:

Provided further, That no part of the money appropriated in this act shall be used for the payment of the salary or expenses of a special commissioner to negotiate with the Indians.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, this amendment provides for the elimination of a man known as special commissioner to negotiate with the Indians. The man in question is Mr. H. J. Hagerman, who lives in New Mexico. Mr. Hagerman has been a member of the Pueblo Lands Board, which had to do with the settling of the valuation of lands on the pueblos of New Mexico. There were two other members on that board with him, and their report was made and their work completed the 1st of last July. At least, their work was supposed to have been finished at that time.

A subcommittee of the Committee on Indian Affairs, in making an investigation, found, after visiting those pueblos and taking testimony, that there seemed to be a great deal of dissatisfaction on the part of the Indians, and also on the part of many white settlers there, with the Lands Board, of which Mr. Hagerman was a member, on the ground that it had been rather arbitrary, and that it had not carried out the instructions set out in the act which authorized the appointment of the board to make the settlements.

On January 6, 1932, the subcommittee of the Committee on Indian Affairs made a report upon this matter, and, after setting forth the reasons why they came to the conclusion, made recommendations which resulted in a bill being introduced by the Senators from New Mexico, which will be referred to later. Another report by the subcommittee, dated February 16, 1932, summed up their conclusions in this

The subcommittee recommends that Mr. Hagerman's position be abolished, and that there be no future appropriation for his salary and expenses, and that he be removed from the Government

These reports were signed by me as chairman of the subcommittee, by the Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER], and by the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Thomas]. There are four members on the subcommittee at present, the senior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. La Follette] being a member, but he did not attend the hearings and, therefore, did not sign the report, as he said he was not familiar with the situation. Therefore the report was signed by only the three members who were present at the hearings. No action has been taken by the department upon this recommendation.

I now want to read an editorial from the New Mexico State Tribune of February 2, 1932, and I might say that when there was some discussion and a hearing held in regard to Mr. Hagerman's situation about a year ago by the Committee on Indian Affairs this paper came to the defense of Mr. Hagerman very strongly. But this editorial is on the other side. It is as follows:

[From the New Mexico State Tribune, February 2, 1932] HAGERMAN SHOULD RESIGN

H. J. Hagerman, special commissioner to the Navajos, should resign. His usefulness in the Indian Service has long since ended. The Tribune has reached this conclusion reluctantly. During this controversy over the Pueblo Lands Board we have been neither this controversy over the Pueblo Lands Board we have been neither for Hagerman nor against him. But we have seen evidence pile up against the commissioner, evidence that convinces us that his services to the Indians should be discontinued.

Mr. Hagerman has had a long and useful life of public service in this State. We do not question his honesty or his ability.

We do charge that he has long since lost interest in the welfare of the Indians; that he has become an administration bureaucrat, indifferent to the Indian good, if not, indeed, actively arrayed against what has proved to be their best interests. His heart is not with the Indians he represents.

We believe Hagerman should resign for the following reasons:

We believe Hagerman should resign for the following reasons: In his administration oil lands worth millions passed from ownership of the Navajos to private hands.

He has, with Indian Bureau complacence, occupied two essentially incompatible posts, commissioner to the Navajos and member of the Pueblo Lands Board.

As the dominant figure on the Pueblo Lands Board Hagerman has ignored the findings of the board's own expert appraisers and has given to both Indians and non-Indians amounts far below the appraised values of land lost.

As a result of his activities on the lands board it has been necessary to go to Congress asking relief for the Indians he Hagerman's services to the Indians have been such that they are arrayed against him, have been forced to employ counsel to defend themselves against their own appointed protector and to seek relief from the results of his ministrations to them.

He has taken credit for threatened litigation that will cloud water rights of both Indians and non-Indians, rights already conceded by the lands board. The litigation will throw into confusion property values throughout the Rio Grande valley and do inestimable harm to its inhabitants.

If the matter were left to a vote of the Indians in New Mexico, Mr. Hagerman, we are convinced, would be deposed to-morrow. For these reasons we believe Mr. Hagerman should resign. If he does not resign, Congress should eliminate his salary from the next appropriation bill.

That comes from one of the big daily papers published in New Mexico, the New Mexico State Tribune.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, is the Senator just entering upon a discussion of the Hagerman case?

Mr. FRAZIER. Yes.

Mr. KING. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator yield for that purpose?

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, I do not know whether it will do any good or not, but I know there is a great deal of interest being taken in this amendment. I know there has been a good deal of lobbying done by some connected with the department, from the Bureau of Indian Affairs, and by others from the outside. Therefore I yield for that purpose.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Couzens	Johnson	Reed
Dale	Jones	Robinson, Ark.
Davis	Kean	Robinson, Ind.
Dickinson	Kendrick	Schall
Dill	Keves	Sheppard
Fess		Shipstead
Fletcher		Smith
Frazier	Logan	Smoot
George	Long	Steiwer
Glass	McGill	Thomas, Idaho
Glenn	McKellar	Thomas, Okla.
Goldsborough	McNary	Townsend
Gore	Metcalf	Trammell
Hale	Moses	Tydings
Harrison	Neely	Vandenberg
Hatfield	Norbeck	Wagner
Hawes	Norris	Walcott
Hayden	Nye	Walsh, Mass.
Hebert	Oddle	Walsh, Mont.
Howell	Patterson	Waterman
Hull	Pittman	White
	Dale Davis Dickinson Dill Fess Fietcher Frazier George Glass Glenn Goldsborough Gore Haie Harrison Hatfield Hawes Hayden Hebert Howell	Dale Jones Davis Kean Dickinson Kendrick Dill Keyes Fess King Fletcher Lewis Frazier Logan George Long Glass McGill Glenn McKellar Goldsborough McNary Gore Metcalf Hale Moses Harrison Neely Hatfield Norbeck Hawes Norris Hayden Nye Hebert Oddle Fatterson

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty-four Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President-

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield before he proceeds?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. FRAZIER. Certainly.

Mr. KING. Just as I was called from the Chamber a few moments ago, the Senator from North Dakota was making reference to some newspaper. Was it a newspaper published in New Mexico?

Mr. FRAZIER. I invited attention to and read an editorial of February 2, 1932, appearing in the New Mexico State Journal. It urges the resignation of Mr. Hagerman and sums up with the statement that if he does not resign his salary should be stricken from the appropriation bill.

I also have another editorial from the Albuquerque Journal in reference to the same subject.

Mr. KING. Does it, too, urge that the services of Mr. Hagerman be dispensed with?

Mr. FRAZIER. Yes. It takes the same position. It comments especially upon the action of Mr. Hagerman on the Pueblo Lands Board.

Mr. KING. May I inquire whether or not it is a Republican paper?

Mr. FRAZIER. I am not posted on the politics of either of these papers.

Mr. President, as I stated previously, after the Pueblo Lands Board had been in operation for a number of years, supposed to carry out the mandates of Congress contained in an act of that body, and had finished their work, it was found by the subcommittee on Indian Affairs, as was stated before that committee by many witnesses in their testimony, that the general feeling was that the land board had not given the Indians or the white settlers a fair deal. After the report by our subcommittee was made, to which I referred a few moments ago, and in order to carry out the wishes of that report on the Pueblo Lands Board action, a bill was prepared by the Senators from New Mexico [Mr. Bratton and Mr. Cutting to authorize an appropriation to pay a part of the liability of the United States to the Indian pueblos therein named under the terms of the act of June 7, 1924, and for other purposes. That bill is Order of Business No. 223 on the calendar of the Senate at the present time. It provides for paying the Indians what the Committee on Indian Affairs felt they were entitled to and what practically all the witnesses who came before our committee out there in New Mexico felt the Indians were entitled to have.

After the Hagerman board had worked on the proposition for some six or seven years and spent several hundred thousand dollars, it was determined that they have not been fair to the Indians and that a bill ought to be introduced which would give the Indians fair payment for their lands and also fair treatment to the white settlers who had taken land on the reservation.

I also have some letters from Indians out in that section of the country who know the situation very well. A number of Indians appeared before our subcommittee and made very strong statements. Practically all who testified on this particular subject stated that Mr. Hagerman had been of no benefit to the Indians. I have a letter from one of the most prominent Indians of the Navajo Tribe. I shall not mention his name. I have found from our experience on the subcommittee that where Indians have gone on record opposing the Bureau of Indian Affairs they have been penalized and punished because of their testimony. Therefore, I shall withhold the name, but I am going to read the letter. It is dated February 27, 1932, and addressed to me:

Some time ago I saw in the Albuquerque paper that your committee recommended the resignation of Mr. Hagerman. I was very glad to see that.

Mr. Hagerman has been in the service about seven and one-half years and has never done anything for the Navajos. The most we have ever seen him is five or six times at the tribal council at different places. I hate to say this, but he has never done the Navajos any good, and I do not believe he has done the Government any good, either.

Government any good, either.

His position is unnecessary. Outside of the tribal council, I have seen him only four or five times on the reservation. Mr. Hagerman did not go out among the Navajos; he never talked with them except at the council. In all his actions he never consulted the Navajos.

At each tribal council we brought up the land question. The minutes will show that we asked for more land, but Mr. Hagerman never got up a proposal covering what we wanted. It looks to me as if the Senate committee came out to see what was best for the Navajos and for the Government. I think your committee found out that Mr. Hagerman did not do anything for the Navajos. In fact, several of the Indians told you so. You were convinced yourselves that Mr. Hagerman should be removed.

The Commissioner of Indian Affairs seems to be trying to shield Mr. Hagerman against your people. It looks as if he is taking up

The Commissioner of Indian Affairs seems to be trying to shield Mr. Hagerman against you people. It looks as if he is taking up much of his time looking after the Hagerman affairs instead of Indian affairs.

I also have letters from other Indians. Another one comes from the official interpreter of one of the tribal councils of the Navajos. He is a man that appeared before our committee, a well-educated Indian. He writes a very intelligent letter. This is under date of March 4, 1932. I am going to read only a part of it and withhold his name also:

The Government has been very generous with its promises, but it has utterly falled in actual performance when it came to keeping those promises. The past winter thousands of sheep have died for lack of food, and many of our people have themselves gone hungry.

Mr. SMOOT (from his seat). Of course, that is not Mr. Hagerman's fault.

HAGERMAN IN THE STORM DISASTER

Mr. FRAZIER. The Senator from Utah says sotto voce that is not Mr. Hagerman's fault. Mr. Hagerman was appointed commissioner by the Secretary of the Interior to deal with those Indians. Instead of being out there in the crisis which faced the Indians, the worst they have suffered in the last 50 years, according to the Senators from those States, what was he doing for the Indians out there? He has done nothing for them. He has been here in Washington during that time conferring with the department, coming to Congress and lobbying for his own position, to try to hold his own job.

Mr. SMOOT. I suppose he ought to have stopped the snowstorms out there!

Mr. FRAZIER. He ought to have been on the job and trying to do something to help take care of the Indians.

Continuing with the letter:

The Indians who live some distance from the railroads have been shamefully neglected during the times of the deep snow the past winter.

The wishes of the Navajo people have always been ignored in whatever they demanded. The representative of the Government, Mr. Hagerman, never comes around to talk over our affairs with us or to discuss our needs.

Yet his title is "commissioner to negotiate with the Indians," and the Navajos comprise the great majority of the Indians in that section of the country.

The Government also promised that appropriations would be made for us so that funds would be available for schools and hospitals. But at the present time it is estimated that there are more than 5,000 boys and girls on this reservation of school age for which no schools are provided.

It was a part of Mr. Hagerman's work, if he had any interest in the Indians, to see that schools were provided. We had testimony before our committee, when the same matter came up only recently, showing that the bureau had taken Indian children away off the reservation to boarding schools, hundreds of miles in some instances. I do not blame the parents of those Indian children for protesting against having their children taken off the reservation several hundred miles away from home for years at a time. They want schools on their reservation. We had our attention called to cases on the Navajo Reservation where children of Indian parents were taken by force, if you please, kidnaped from their parents, and taken away to Government schools and kept there, their identity lost; they never came back, and their parents never have known and do not know this day what happened to those children. Mr. Hagerman has been there as commissioner for those Indians all these years.

No effort has been made by the Government to help students who have returned to the reservation from schools, although we have repeatedly asked for it.

At the tribal council meeting at Fort Wingate, N. Mex., last July, 22 out of the 25 delegates, alternates, and committeemen objected to having Mr. Hagerman preside. But the wishes of the Navajos had to give way to those of Commissioner Rhoads, who insisted that Mr. Hagerman be permitted to preside at the meeting. Commissioner Rhoads even went so far as to promise to have Mr. Hagerman removed from office if he continued to be objectionable to the Navajos. We mention this merely to show you how unpopular Mr. Hagerman is with the Navajo people, to whom he is supposed to minister.

The Navajo people have always maintained a high regard for Government officials, and especially for Commissioner Rhoads, but they fail to see why he insists upon upholding and keeping a man like Mr. Hagerman when he knows that Mr. Hagerman is objectionable to the whole Navajo Tribe.

We believe that it is for the best interests of our people that Mr. Hagerman be removed from office and the position he occupies abolished.

I have another letter, from the president of one of the councils out there. I want to say in regard to these councils that when Secretary Fall or Commissioner Burke, under Secretary Fall, appointed Mr. Hagerman to deal with the Indians—he was called "commissioner of the Navajos" at that time—a set of regulations was worked out in regard to the establishment of a Navajo council. Mr. Hagerman was sent out there to put it across. He called the Indians together. Under those regulations they were given a certain length of time to hold a general council meeting to elect councilmen. If within a certain number of days the councilmen were not elected, they would be appointed by the Secretary of the Interior on the recommendation of the superintendent. They went ahead and formed their council.

There was another provision that Mr. Hagerman, the man who represented the department, was to be there, and that they could not hold a council meeting without his being there, and that he should preside at that council meeting. It was also provided that they should sign their power of attorney to Mr. Hagerman, especially granting authority for the signing of oil leases.

The other letter written by the president of the council urges the same thing, that Mr. Hagerman has not been of any benefit to the Indians and that he should resign.

I want to say just a few words about the oil leases. In one corner of the State of New Mexico oil was discovered. After that discovery this position was made for Mr. Hagerman; he was appointed under the Fall administration to go out there and deal with the Indians. He obtained from those Indians a power of attorney to sign oil leases. There was one lease especially that has been in controversy for some time, and there has been a great deal said about it. The lease in question was on what is known as the Rattlesnake structure. One of the first developments in that region where much oil was found was on the Hogback structure, which was about 8 or 9 miles away from the Rattlesnake structure. One of the engineers from the Bureau of Mines, a Mr. Nowels, made a report in regard to the Hogback structure, in which he told how good the wells were and what a high grade of oil was there found. He said that the other leases which were going to be made in the near future embraced lands which were practically as good from a geological standpoint as those of the Hogback structure, and lands in the Rattlesnake structure were among them.

The lease was sold at public auction on the 15th day of October of the year in question. There was only one bidder on the Rattlesnake structure. In the lease there were involved 4,080 acres of land. The one bid was for $1,000 for the 4,080 acres of land. That was the so-called bonus that went to the Indians. Mr. Nowels made his report, which was transmitted by the Bureau of Mines to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs two days before the lease was made. It was held that that was not sufficient time, but under the regulations the Secretary of the Interior had the right to reject any or all bids. The Secretary of the Interior in this case did not approve of the Rattlesnake sale until the 4th day of December, seven weeks after the sale was made. In the meantime Mr. Hagerman urged the commissioner to hurry up the approval of that lease; and I want to read just a portion of what he stated in his letter. The letter from Mr. Hagerman was under date of November 28, 1923. The sale was made on the 15th of October. This letter is addressed to Hon. Charles H. Burke, and among other things Mr. Hagerman says:

I recommend that they be approved as soon as possible, as the test of these areas, especially the Rattlesnake structure, is highly desirable.

The lease of the Rattlesnake structure had been sold for $1,000. It embraced 4,080 acres, and I venture to say there is not a man in this Chamber or a man who knows the oil game any place who would have sold a structure of that kind, embracing 4,080 acres, for $1,000.

Mr. Hagerman said that it was very highly desirable that this lease be approved as soon as possible; and on the 4th day of December, seven weeks after the sale was made, and after they had all kinds of time to study the report of Mr. Nowels that had come in on the 13th of October to the department, the sale was approved and went through. Within a year's time there was sold a half interest in 200 acres of that Rattlesnake structure for $600,000, and within three years' time another interest in it was sold for between three and four million dollars, according to Mr. Hagerman's own figures. I just mention this to show that, in the opinion of the subcommittee of the Committee on Indian Affairs, Mr. Hagerman did not fairly represent the Indians, that he did not work for their benefit and did not work for what seemed to us to be the best interests of the Indians.

The department has stated that he has been doing a great deal to bring about exchanges of land. There are many acres of what are known as checkerboard lands in Indian reservations. When railroads were built through that region they were given the odd sections of land for a certain number of miles on each side of the railroad track, and much of that land was in Indian reservations. The Indians wanted to get rid of this checkerboard arrangement so that they might have their reservation all in one block instead of being checkerboarded either with railroad lands or with the lands of individuals to whom the railroads had sold.

The outstanding efforts of Mr. Hagerman to rectify this checkerboard arrangement was up in what is known as the Walapai district or reservation. I want to read a paragraph or two from a statement made by an official or attorney of the Indian Rights Association in a letter written by him. He states that Mr. Hagerman and two superintendents had been sent up there by the department to appraise this land and to make some deal, to exchange the lands between the Indians and the railroad interests; and this official of the Indian Rights Association states that on May 21 they called on the officials of the railroad company "and came to an agreement about the division of the spoils and agreed to give the railroad company the eastern portion, the wooded land, where the grass holds out better than on the treeless prairie," and also, to "give the railroad company the valuable springs-Peach Springs."

On May 22 they called the Walapais-

Indians in question-in council and talked about half an hour or so—only heard from two Indians on their claim, and then adjourned and left for the Mojave Reservation near Needles.

The letter goes on to state that these Indians followed Mr. Hagerman and one of the superintendents away down to another reservation, 100 miles away, and pleaded with Mr. Hagerman in regard to their land claims, but he told them, according to the statement, to go back home and consult with their own superintendent.

So far as I know, that is the outstanding effort Mr. Hagerman has made in regard to the lands of the Indians in whom he is supposed to be interested, whom he is supposed to represent and to be working for.

Mr. Hagerman was appointed to this position as special commissioner; and while holding that office, at least during the first part of his term and while on the land board, he was also head of the Taxpayers' Association of New Mexico. The Santa Fe Railroad, of course, is or was undoubtedly one of the big factors in that association, and Mr. Hagerman admitted that the railroad company put up a thousand dollars—I think it was, or perhaps a little more than that—for the expenses of that association.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?
The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. FRAZIER. I yield.

Mr. KING. The Senator challenged attention a moment ago to a letter which was written by an official of the Indian Rights Association. Was that Mr. Brosius, who has been connected with that organization for many years?

Mr. FRAZIER. Yes.

Mr. KING. As has also Mr. Rhodes, as I understand, the president of the commission. Is that the Senator's understanding?

Mr. FRAZIER. The present commissioner was a member of that same organization before he became commissioner.

Mr. President, if anyone can convince me that Mr. Hagerman has done anything outstanding for the benefit of those Indians, I will be glad to withdraw my amendment to strike out the item for his salary and expenses. I have another amendment which, if the pending amendment shall be adopted, I will offer, to reduce the amount of the total appropriation by $8,500, $6,500 representing his salary and $2,000 his expenses.

I do not think I need to take any more time. I could read from the hearings for several hours, if necessary, but I do not believe that it is necessary.

Mr. President, the subcommittee, after holding hearings in Washington, in New Mexico and Arizona and visiting the reservations, unanimously came to the conclusion that if Mr. Hagerman ever had any real interest in the Indians or had done anything for their real benefit the time of his usefulness had long since gone by and that he should resign or be removed from the office. We so recommended but the department took no action. I am sorry to be forced to take this means of bringing about his removal, but I can see no other way out of it.

Mr. SMOOT obtained the floor.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President-

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Arizona?

Mr. SMOOT. I yield to the Senator, if he desires.

Mr. HAYDEN. I should like to speak in my own time relative to this amendment.

Mr. SMOOT. I shall not take very long. I myself desire to speak on the amendment.

Mr. President, this is the old personal fight, it seems to me, which has been brought to our attention heretofore. This is not the first time it has come up. When the question arose last year practically the same speech was made then upon the floor of the Senate as has been made to-day.

I want now to call the attention of the Senate to what the Senate of the State of New Mexico has had to say in regard to this "awful" man. I read the resolutions which were adopted by the Senate of the State of New Mexico:

JANUARY 27, 1931.

RESOLUTION OF THE SENATE OF THE STATE OF NEW MEXICO REGARDING CHARGES MADE AGAINST HERBERT J. HAGERMAN

Be it resolved by the Senate of the State of New Mexico, Whereas the Hon. LYNN J. FRAZIER, chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs of the United States Senate, has been so flagon Indian Anairs of the United States Senate, has been so hag-rantly imposed upon and wrongly informed by designing and ma-licious persons that he was led to make use of the privileges and immunities of his position to attack the character and official integrity of our fellow citizen and former Governor of New Mexico. Herbert J. Hagerman, Federal commissioner to the Navajo Tribe of Indians, charging Commissioner Hagerman with conniving at and abetting an alleged fraud in the sale of an oil lease on cer-tain lands of the Navajo Indians, the State Senate of New Mexico deems it an act of justice to advise the Hon. LYNN J. Frazzer and the Members of the United States Senate of the following uncontrovertible facts:

1. That the sale of the lease known as the Rattlesnake Structure was at public auction, which had been duly and extensively advertised and at which a large number of prominent oil interests were represented.

2. That during the morning of the day of the auction the said lease was put up for sale by the auctioneer four times, no one bidding, and when it was put up in the afternoon, a fifth time, there was only one bid, that of $1,000.

3. That the fact that the lease became valuable was one of the incidents, not to say accidents, of the oil business, just as it was one of the incidents that at the same auction the Gypsy Co. bld in the Tocito structure for $46,000 and abandoned it after it had drilled two costly dry holes, and E. A. Carlton, of Colorado Springs, bid in the Table Mesa structure for $18,000 and abandoned it after drilling into nothing more valuable than water.

4. The Commissioner of Indian Affairs, the Hon. Charles H. Burke, was present and actually in charge of the auction; Commissioner Hagerman being little more than a looker-on.

In view of the undeniable facts be it therefore

In view of the undeniable lacts be it therefore Resolved by the Senate of New Mexico, That the charges against the integrity and efficiency of H. J. Hagerman, Federal commissioner to the Navajo Tribe of Indians, is condemned and reprobated as inexcusably slanderous and scandalously reckless as to facts, and that we request the Hon. LYNN J. Frazier to make due and honorable correction of the same and that he denounce upon the floor of the United States Senate, where he made the charges, the person or persons guilty of imposing upon his credulity; and

Resolved, That copies of this statement and these resolutions be sent to the Hon. LYNN J. FRAZIER and to the Hon. WILLIAM H. KING, United States Senator from Utah, who abetted the scandal, and to United States Senators SAM G. BRATTON and BRONSON CUT-TING and Congressman Albert G. Simms, in order that justice may be done to former Governor Hagerman, who is looked upon by the senate of New Mexico as a man of high character whose integrity has not been questioned in this State.

W. HOCKENHULL President of the Senate.

Attest:

R. H. POOLER, Chief Clerk of the Senate.

Mr. President, I have here numerous letters from officials of the Indian associations speaking of Governor Hagerman in the highest terms. I have here an editorial from the New York Times of January 28, 1931. A year ago, when this question was up before the Senate, I received a telegram from Floyd Lee, as follows:

I am sending you to-day, by air mail, copy of resolutions regarding Hagerman which unanimously passed New Mexico Senate.

Those are the resolutions I have just read. The telegram said that he was sending them, and I have just read a copy

Former Senator H. O. Bursum sent me a telegram reading as follows:

Charges against Hagerman very unjust and without justification. Our people believe him honest and capable. The Indian oil lease complained of was sold at public auction to highest bidder, in the same manner as all other leases sold at auction at the same sale, after advertising for bidders. Hope the item of salary eliminated may be reinstated in the bill.

I have here a letter from the Indian division of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, signed by Mrs. Joseph Linden Smith, chairman.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, may I ask the date of that letter?

Mr. SMOOT. January 29, 1931.

Mr. FRAZIER. Those are old letters, I take it. Mr. SMOOT. They are dated last year, because nobody thought the matter was coming up this year after it was so overwhelmingly defeated at that time.

Mr. FRAZIER. Oh, Mr. President-

Mr. SMOOT. I mean to say, nobody out there thought so. We may have known it here, but they knew nothing about it. Therefore I have not written to them, and I did not do so last year. The newspapers in the Senator's State may have called attention to the fact that he intended to make a fight against Governor Hagerman. That may be true. I do not deny that; but this was the time that the fight was made here, and these letters were sent to me as a member of the Appropriations Committee having this bill in charge.

Mr. President, I shall not take the time of the Senate to put in the RECORD all the letters that I have here from New Mexico, and from the women's clubs, and from the Indian welfare associations. I shall not bother with putting them in the RECORD at this time. I only call attention to the fact. As long as the other editorials that the Senator has referred to have gone into the RECORD, perhaps I had better put in the one of January 28, 1931, from the New York Times.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The editorial is as follows:

[From the New York Times of Wednesday, January 28, 1931] A GROSS INJUSTICE-ATTEMPT OF A UNITED STATES SENATOR TO GET RID OF AN HONEST AND USEFUL OFFICIAL

To the EDITOR OF THE NEW YORK TIMES:

I want to call attention to a disgraceful attempt in the United States Senate to get rid of an honest official at a time when public interest is diverted to other matters.

Interest is diverted to other matters.

On January 21, in the course of a general assault on the Indian Bureau, Senator Frazier offered the following amendment to the Department of the Interior appropriation bill:

"Provided, That no part of the moneys appropriated for this act shall be used in payment of the salary or expenses of Herbert J. Hagerman, designated as special commissioner to negotiate with Indians, Santa Fe, N. Mex."

Senator Frazier made the following statements:

"1. That there is an appropriation for Mr. Hagerman 'as sort of general superintendent for a tribe in New Mexico and Arizona. There is a superintendent there who has the same duties to perform, and for that district. It is a duplication.'

"2. That Mr. Hagerman was removed from the office of Territorial Governor of New Mexico by President Roosevelt 'as soon as Roosevelt came into office.'

"3. That Mr. Hagerman was appointed as special commissioner to negotiate with the Indians concerning oil leases by the then Secretary of the Interior, A. L. Fall.

"4. That Mr. Hagerman sold the lease of the 'Snake oil lands' for $1,000, and that within a year the same lease was resold for a million dollars.

"5. That he [Senator Frazier] does not believe 'that such a man should be carried on the Government pay roll at all. In plain language, he is, in my estimation, a political fixer for the Indian Bureau in those two States.'

"6. There was organized a tribal council among the Navajos for the bureau. Assistant Commissioner Scattergood made the state-ment that the council functions admirably because there is no dissension among the Indians.'

"7. 'Hagerman tried to organize some kind of a council among the northern pueblos and failed to do so.'"

Rarely has such a collection of misstatements, false inference, and plain untruths been assembled in one short speech.

I should like to take up Senator Frazzer's statements in order:

1. It is not true that Mr. Hagerman "is a sort of superintendent for a tribe in New Mexico and Arizona," nor is it true that "there is a superintendent there who has the same duties to perform and for that district." The Senator evidently did not trouble to learn for that district." The Senator evidently did not trouble to learn the terms of Mr. Hagerman's appointment or to inquire into his for that district." The Senator evidently did not trouble to learn the terms of Mr. Hagerman's appointment or to inquire into his duties. His responsibilities cover some 75,000 Indians on more than 20 reservations in the States of New Mexico, Colorado, Utah, and Arizona. He is coordinating officer for the countless ramifications of the Indian Service within that large district.

A list of his duties would cover several typewritten pages. In connection with the Pueblo Lands Board he has helped pass upon 5.532 claims, correcting the wrongs which the notorious Bursum bill was intended to perpetuate.

2. It is not true that Mr. Hagerman was removed from office "as soon as Roosevelt came into office." He was appointed by President Roosevelt and resigned a year and a half later. His honorable record as governor is well known to all in New Mexico.

3. Although Mr. Hagerman was appointed first by Secretary Fall, the inference that he was one of that corrupt crowd is false. Senator Fazzier passed over the fact that he was appointed in 1923, after the scandals of the Bursum bill and Teapot Dome had been aired, at a time when Fall felt the need of a few honest gestures. Mr. Hagerman had held a number of appointive offices, both State and National, and had been for five years president of the New Mexico Taxpayers' Association, in which nonpolitical office he has been continued unbrokenly. His appointment as special commissioner was a reform measure.

office he has been continued unbrokenly. His appointment as special commissioner was a reform measure.

4. Mr. Hagerman did not merely sell the Rattlesnake oil lease (referred to by Senator Frazier as "the snake oil lands") for $1,000. In compliance with the law and authorized by the Navajo Indians, he sold six leases at public auction, after wide advertising, from which the Indians received $87,600 on what was practically wildcat territory. The geologist's statements on the Rattlesnake structure were so discouraging that it was difficult to get any bid on it at all. Only two of these, of which the Rattlesnake is one, have produced any oil; from these the Indians have received to date $930,420.38, and the income is continuing.

5. The Senator's personal attack on Mr. Hagerman is best answered after the other points have been taken up.

6. This is a slighting reference to one of Mr. Hagerman's finest

6. This is a slighting reference to one of Mr. Hagerman's finest pieces of work, the creation for the Navajo Tribes, numbering over 40,000 and previously disorganized and divided into six jurisover 40,000 and previously disorganized and divided into six jurisdictions, of a true representative body elected by the tribe, holding a public annual meeting at which to consult with the Government and make known their needs and grievances. Through this council 40,000 of the most promising Indians in the United States are learning to govern themselves and handle their own affairs. Acting at a time of great corruption, Mr. Hagerman dared to set up an organization which guarantees for all time that no deal can be put over upon the Navajo Tribe without a thorough and public airing. The meetings are attended by representives of the Indian Rights Association, Eastern Association on Indian Affairs, and other such organizations. The Indians speak their minds freely, all their affairs are aired, and they are learning self-government. government.

government.

7. This statement that "Mr. Hagerman tried to organize some king of a council among the Northern Pueblos and failed to do so" was taken up and repeated in substance by Senator King, of Utah, who offered an amendment canceling the $300 appropriated for the United States Pueblo Council. In actual fact, Mr. Hagerman, on instructions from Secretary Work, successfully formed a council of all the New Mexico Pueblos, which met three times to consider matters touching the Pueblos as a whole.

Anyone familiar with conditions in the Southwest knows that Anyone familiar with conditions in the Southwest knows that Mr. Hagerman has been a tower of strength to those who are working to help the Indians. His reports on conditions wherever working to help the Indians. His reports on conditions wherever abuses or neglect occurred have been fearless and penetrating. Thanks to his efforts, and the support received from Commissioner Rhoads in Washington, conditions in the Southwest are better to-day than they have ever been in the history of the Indian Bureau.

To call such a man a "political fixer" and say that he "should not be carried on the Government pay roll at all" is not only false—it is ridiculous. Mr. Hagerman is the type of honest and fearless public official of which this country should be proud.

The Navajo Indians have had long and unhappy experience of the vagaries of our Congress. They are no fools. They have always feared lest Mr. Hagerman might be taken from them because of his very honesty, and, anticipating some such action as Senator Frazier's, have repeatedly asked, both in council and as individuals, that he be retained. The esteem in which he is held by those most familiar with his work, both white men and red men, is shown by the instantaneous protest against the Senator's action by the Indians of Arizona, transmitted through Congressman Douglas, of that State, and by the unanimous vote of protest man Douglas, of that State, and by the unanimous vote of protest of the New Mexico State senate.

The attempt to deprive this Nation of the services of such a man as Mr. Hagerman shows either gross ignorance or maliciousness.

OLIVER LA FARGE. Director Eastern Association on Indian Affairs. New York, January 27, 1931.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, that editorial was in the RECORD last year.

Mr. SMOOT. If it was in the RECORD last year, I will not ask to have it put in at this time if Senators interested in it will read it again.

Mr. FRAZIER. I have no objection to its going into the RECORD.

Mr. SMOOT. Very well. Then I think that is sufficient, Mr. President, without putting in other letters.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, a few moments ago, in my remarks, I referred to an editorial in the Albuquerque Journal. I did not read it; but since the Senator from Utah has brought up these old statements of a year ago, I desire to read this editorial. It is under date of February 5, 1932, and is headed:

NO BANDS FOR MR. HAGERMAN

There will be no bands out to play and no parade around the plaza in Santa Fe for Mr. Herbert J. Hagerman when he returns from Washington this time.

from Washington this time.

The special Indian commissioner and member of the Pueblo Indians lands board had successfully prevented himself from being removed from the Interior Department pay roll a year ago when he was accorded such a reception in Santa Fe.

Then he was defending himself as commissioner to the Indians. Now, he has run the gauntlet of a Senate committee investigation into the work of the extinct Pueblo lands board. But he still has hurdles to leap and the indications are that his days as special commissioner are numbered.

hurdles to leap and the indications are that his days as special commissioner are numbered.

He should have been displaced months ago. Only the amazing spectacle of stubbornness on the part of the Indian Bureau to the facts developed at the hearings in New Mexico last summer has held him on. It was evident to everyone else save the bureaucracy of the department that his usefulness had long since ended. The Journal contended after the hearings last summer that he should resign or be dismissed. Succeeding events have only strengthened that belief.

The recent hearing has devaloped that the Buchle Land and the state of the s

The recent hearing has developed that the Pueblo Lands Board expended $400,000 in trying to arrive at just awards to the Indians for lands taken from them and to the white settlers for lands on which they settled from which they are now faced with ejectment.

The awards were parsimoniously pared down by the board from

The awards were parsimoniously pared down by the board from the amounts fixed by appraisers, from $1,892,878 to $559,226. Mr. Hagerman did this as a member of the board, while at the same time supposedly representing the interests of the Indians.

The bill before Congress would add about $750,000 to these awards to the Indians and settlers. It seeks to correct the injustice of the awards of the board.

The result of the work of the board has been to complicate instead of conclude the 75 years' indifference and injustices of the Government. Water-right conflicts have been injected into the recent hearings, and nothing has been done by Commissioner Rhoads, of the Indian Bureau, to correct obvious evils in the department so glaringly shown in the hearings here last summer. The partial report of the Senate subcommittee flayed the overhead expenses of the Indian agencies and use of money appropriated expenses of the Indian agencies and use of money appropriated for the Indians. All this has been ignored by the department in a supreme effort to save Mr. Hagerman.

a supreme effort to save Mr. Hagerman.

Mr. Rhoads was pressed at the conclusion of the recent hearings to throw light on the plans of the bureau of suing for the transfer of white water ownership to the Indians. He was asked to state whether the bureau was going to proceed or not. Yet the last word he gave the committee was to the effect that the Indian Office reserved the right to proceed with these suits, which had in effect been planned before the hearings. These threatened suits bear the earmarks of being used as a device for protecting Mr. Hagerman, but once they are filed none can tell where the matter will end.

Congress will have to be aroused to the necessity for action.

matter will end.

Congress will have to be aroused to the necessity for action. It should approve the Cutting-Bratton bill for additional awards to the Indians and white settlers. It should eliminate Mr. Hagerman's salary from the Indian Bureau appropriation, compel a revolutionary change in the administration of the Indian Bureau, and end the threat of water suits.

There is little, if any, division of sentiment in New Mexico over the matter. The obligation to do all this rests upon Congress.

I want to say that the sentiment in regard to Mr. Hagerman has changed a great deal. Even many of those who defended him so staunchly a year ago have rather deserted him at the present time.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I desire to take occasion to enter my protest against this method of seeking to remove from office a worthy public official.

I know nothing about the controversies in New Mexico to which Mr. Hagerman has been a party. I am not familiar with the details of the decisions of the Pueblo land board. I speak here in behalf of the Navajo Indians of Arizona, with whom Governor Hagerman has been intimately associated for many years, and in behalf of other tribes of Indians in my State whose welfare he has well guarded.

There is no attack of any kind upon his honor, his honesty, or his integrity. No one has risen on this floor or elsewhere to make any challenge in those particulars. There can be differences of opinion, differences of judgment, as to what should or should not be done in a particular instance with respect to the affairs of any tribe of Indians; but that Governor Hagerman has been honest, that he has been sincere, that he has labored faithfully and diligently is not a subject of dispute.

I have talked many times with Governor Hagerman about every Indian tribe in Arizona. From my conversations with him I know that he is thoroughly familiar with every Indian reservation in the State. He has been in practically every Indian settlement in Arizona, and in talking with him I have found his judgment to be sound as to what is best to be done in behalf of the Indians.

The Senator from North Dakota has mentioned land exchanges within the checkerboard of the grant made to the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Co. It was to submit his final report on that problem that Governor Hagerman was recently in Washington. In cooperation with the senior Senator from New Mexico [Mr. Bratton], I have asked to have printed as a Senate document the recommendations made by Governor Hagerman with respect to a settlement of that long-standing controversy. Anyone who will read that document and then say that there is anything in it which is adverse to the interests of the Navajo Indians suffers from some form of dementia. The whole report is pro-Navajo and pro-Indian, and so favorable to them that the chief reaction I have had from it is a vigorous protest from the governor of my State to the effect that Governor Hagerman's recommendations go entirely too far and do too much for the Navajos. No one can read the report-and it will soon be available—without finding that it shows clearly upon its face that it contemplates an extension of the domain to be occupied by those Indians and that they be given permanent title to a vast area of land.

With respect to land exchanges within the Walapai Reservation, to which the Senator has referred, let me say that I attended the hearing at the Valentine Indian Agency. The Senator from North Dakota himself was there, as was the junior Senator from Montana [Mr. Wheeler]. We listened to the evidence during the morning and afternoon. That was the only hearing in northern Arizona when I was privileged to be with the committee. I am sure that when we concluded the hearing that day there was no question in the mind of any Senator there that any unfair advantage was being taken of the Walapai Indians. It was conceded that if there was to be an exchange of lands at all, the proposal presented was fair and equitable to both the Indians and the railroad company.

What happened, as I understand from the extract read by the Senator, was that long prior to the time that the details of this proposed consolidation had been worked out Governor Hagerman went to the Walapai Reservation to make some preliminary investigations with respect to the matter. At that time the Indians wanted Governor Hagerman to say that they should have the entire reservation. That is what they were talking about, and that is what Mr. S. M. Brosius, of the Indian Rights Association—a very sincere man and an old friend of mine—really wants to see done. Mr. Brosius insists that there shall be no consolidation; that the entire 950,000 acres within the exterior boundaries of the Walapai Reservation shall be given to the Walapai Indians.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Arizona yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. HAYDEN. I yield.

Mr. KING. The letter from Mr. Brosius, a copy of which I have on my desk, discusses the unfairness of the division, and charges that the Indians were given the inferior parts of the reservation; that the advantages were against the Indians; and the complaint in that letter from which the Senator read was not because they were not given the whole 950,000 acres but because they were given the worst part of it.

Mr. Brosius is a man of integrity and honor; and he challenges the good faith of Mr. Hagerman and the policy by which the Indians, as he believes, have been deprived of valuable rights.

Mr. HAYDEN. At the time Mr. Brosius wrote that letter he was not in possession of all the facts. He was misinformed as to the areas that were actually to be assigned to the Indians and the character of the land that they were to have. I remember talking with him about that time. Mr. Brosius insisted to me that all the valuable timberlands on the reservation—or the major part of them—were to be given to the railroad company; whereas, as a matter of fact, the best timber on the reservation is reserved for the Indians.

Mr. Brosius specifically mentioned certain springs of water, which, of course, are exceedingly valuable in that arid country, which would be taken away from the Indians. The report shows that the Indians retain title to the most valuable springs. The division of the Checkerboard area as finally worked out is a fair trade, without injustice to anybody.

The exchange was worked out by a representative of the railroad company which owns half the checkerboard and a representative of the Indian Bureau, who made an actual appraisal on the ground of every surveyed section of land within the Walapai Reservation to determine its grazing value. Upon the basis of appraised value the lands are to be consolidated. The Indians will acquire title to over 60 per cent of the lands; and, in addition to that, they get all of the unsurveyed area, which aggregates about 175,000 acres.

I am satisfied that any impartial jury that could examine the facts would decide that the trade was fair, and to the advantage of the Indians, if there is to be a consolidation of holdings at all. I speak for the Walapais. They are my constituents, and I know what they want. They do not want to divide their reservation with the railroad company. They insist that they are entitled to have the whole area upon the ground that their ancestors once occupied it, and therefore the entire reservation should belong to them.

The facts are, however, that at the time white people first came to Arizona and established contact with these Indians there were about 1,500 Walapais. To-day there are about 450 in the tribe, and only a comparatively few of them live upon the reservation. The only possible way that Congress can acquire the entire reservation for those Indians—because the title of the railroad company is perfect—is to buy the railroad lands and give them to the Walapais, which would require a cash appropriation of at least a quarter of a million dollars. I have said frankly to Mr. Brosius that I do not believe it is possible to induce the Congress to appropriate $250,000 to buy a vast area of land for Indians who do not make use of the land that they now have.

I did not rise to speak entirely of that matter, however. I want to protest that the Senate is not the proper forum in which to determine whether or not somebody shall or shall not be employed in the Bureau of Indian Affairs. The American people elect a President; he appoints a Secretary of the Interior, who selects a Commissioner of Indian Affairs. Those are the responsible executive officials, and it is not a congressional function to step into the inner administration of a particular bureau and say, "This individual employee is not doing just exactly what the United States Senate thinks he ought to do, and therefore he shall be taken off the pay roll."

I have inquired of Senators who have served in this body for many, many years, and I am told, on that authority, that this is a wholly unprecedented motion. It is presented in a disguised form. It does not name Mr. Hagerman. I would have more respect for the motion if its sponsors were frank in naming whom they seek to remove from office.

I repeat my protest and now say that, so far as my contacts with Governor Hagerman are concerned, speaking from my own personal knowledge, I can assert that at no time, in no instance, have I found him failing in any way to look out for and support the best interests of the Indians of Arizona. There is no instance of record, no occasion at any time or at any place of which I know where he has done anything that was not in behalf of the welfare and advancement of those he has been appointed to represent.

That being Governor Hagerman's record, I must denounce this indirect method of seeking to remove him from his

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, I desire to encroach on the Senate while I pay a little heed to an editorial appearing in one of the leading journals of our community, also to advert to a criticism-in perfect propriety-on the part of one of the members of the distinguished Cabinet of our eminent President.

A short while ago on the floor I alluded to the constant profession of reorganization of departments, and, with it, I charged was the pretension of economy, in the threat to cut away certain of these organizations and release from the salary lists numbers who are enlisted upon them.

I then said, sir, that the distinguished gentlemen who are constantly asserting that this economy was needed, and that these changes should be had, never described what particular branch they favored cutting off, and never designated any particular list of employees whom they asked to have dismissed. I used that to illustrate that there was not in the minds of these eminent political masters any real intent of ridding this Government of any specific number of satellites or parasites. In some spirit of satire and gentle raillery I quoted something from Shakespeare's dialogue between Hamlet and Polonius which seems to have been treated as an accusation by me of hypocrisy and lack of good faith on the part of the high officials of our Government.

It is asked where does Lewis refer to any department that he claims should be abolished? Where, it is asked, have I described any who should be discharged, and where now do I propose any department that I claim should be amalgamated? The accusation is that I have named none, lest I shall "discharge those whose connections with the departments were inherited from the Wilson administration." This comment by my critics leaves the impression that a natural partisanship upon my part forbids that I should designate any department where some of those previously Democrats were still engaged.

Mr. President. I desire to accept the challenge of the estimable gentlemen, and acknowledge their perfect right to criticize. I also add that their criticism strikes me as one that needs to be replied to. I reply that, first, if I had in my power to carry out the need of the country, and the recommendations which have been intimated, I would start with calling the attention of the country to the fact that the department now called the Interior Department has no justification for longer existence in the Government of the United States.

Much of the public land of our country, some of which the distinguished former Senator who serves as Vice President of the United States and as President of this body has seen administered in his renowned State, throughout the West has been disposed of. Very few of the areas, as public land, remain, and little of those which do remain is of any Fifteen thousand seems to be the number of those directly and indirectly engaged upon the salary list of the Interior Department. I propose that the Interior Department now be abolished as an obsolete branch, and whatever there may be of usefulness in it amalgamated with the Department of Agriculture and be treated as the land department. Thus we lessen the salary list, reduce the expenses, and cut off this bureau now more of adornment than of usefulness. The department dwells upon the history of its past rather than upon the value of its present. Rid our Government of that one department and $15,000,000 would be saved.

I take the liberty of calling the attention of Senators to the fact that the farmers of this country are heartily in favor of this form of reorganization, if I am to judge from a splendid brochure which I see has been printed under the designation of the Hon. Charles Barrett, one of those who has been president of farm organizations and very active in cooperation with them for a considerable number of years, particularly as we have observed him around Congress.

I now take the second. There never was a blunder upon business and government created under an honest anticipation such as the creation of the Interstate Commerce Commission. In the days gone by there were busy gentlemen around the Senate ever impressing us with the great evil there was in the various forms of local government which we speak of as States. They demanded what they called "uniformity," but which to-day has passed into the more commonly designated phrase, often alluded to, of stabilizing.

The final result was that eminent representatives in government, beginning with Senator Cullom, of Illinois, one of my distinguished predecessors, and a Representative from Texas, Senator Reagan, then a Member of the House of Representatives, were the authors and sponsors of the bill known as the Reagan-Cullom bill, the cradle of the birth of the Interstate Commerce Commission. I ask the senior Senator from Utah whether that is not correct.

Mr. SMOOT. That is correct. Mr. LEWIS. They began the foundation of the Interstate Commerce Commission. There began a system by which a Federal commission at Washington took from every State of the Union little by little, until finally every power was evaporated and destroyed of the right of the State to sit in judgment upon the equity and justice of railroad rates in the shipment from one border of the State to the other. The farmer was denied a voice as to rates from his farm to his market. It was insisted, as asserted by the United States Supreme Court in the Shreveport, La., case, that as a road in a State had connections with roads in other States of the Union over which the products might pass they were treated as interstate commerce, wholly supervised by the Federal Interstate Commerce Commission, and completely denied to the States the privilege to protect their own.

The final result was that there was no more power in the local commissions whatever, and only the Interstate Commerce Commission was authorized to pass upon the question of the rates of freight and passenger rates in the dealings with the railroads.

What has been the result? Time and time again there has been an effort to ascertain the value of the railroads in order to reach what should be a just rate of freight under a measure sponsored by the distinguished senior La Follette. The fight went on, 15 years elapsed, and at the end of that length of time the necessity for the inquiry when it began was at an end. An expense of millions and millions had been incurred by our country, and the Supreme Court of the United States decided, in a case familiar to the distinguished gentlemen now sitting in the Senate, the O'Fallon decision, that the basis of the rulings of the Interstate Commerce Commission had for years been wholly wrong. By this announcement the standards were all set aside.

Now we turn to contemplate them. Sixty-five million dollars of the people's money has this great body expended in 10 years in the pursuit of regulation which has been held to be ineffective and invalid. The people of the sovereign States of the Union have been denied the privilege, under the theory of interstate commerce, of establishing local government or administering their own private affairs among their own people, leaving them without relief and promoting, at the instance of this institution, these large expenditures upon the part of the Government. This leaves us to-day with no source of relief to the shipper, none to the merchants, and no regulation, Mr. Vice President, by which any man can see where is the law that can govern the relative rates of freight by which others can be adjudged, guided by any precedent of the past.

I respectfully assert that with the Interstate Commerce Commission dissolved, and the subject returned back to the States, where, among the States themselves, they may by their own arrangement between their respective State commissions adjust the matters of their freight rates, added to whatever adjustment may be brought about by the heads of the companies and the managers themselves—that would get results satisfactory to the people and just to the community.

We would then have $50,000,000 in 10 years expended saved and $50,000,000 more to be expended in 10 years cut away, or $100,000,000 saved to the people. The vast number of employees who have been going about the country in different forms of investigation resulting in no final result of benefit to mankind would have been cut off, and that much added to the salvation in the list of preservation.

I now at this moment make a suggestion. I hear these eminent Senators to-day discussing the Indian question. I am not so much learned upon Indians; that is, outside of cities where they participate politically at certain times and earn the title. [Laughter.] I think it is the poet Pope who alludes in a gentle way to "Lo, the poor Indian," alluding to him as seeing God in the wind. But where I exist he creates the wind and is of great value at certain times, depending largely on the count. [Laughter.]

As I look upon this question I observe the title "Committee on Indian Affairs," and, as I heard the distinguished junior Senator from Utah [Mr. King] and the senior Senator from North Dakota [Mr. Frazier] and my friend from Arizona [Mr. Hayden], I would imagine that among the Indians there must be a great deal of "affairs" that need some form of attention.

It seems to me, however, that to maintain this bureau to which these gentlemen allude is to indulge in an unnecessary luxury. Why should not the Indians, as a bureau, be added likewise to the Department of Agriculture, joining with the Geological Survey, the Bureau of Mines, and the National Park Service, all there aggregated within the service of agriculture, cutting off these multiplied pending expenditures, and letting this general agriculture department administer them as a part of that which is the public land. For the Indian, sir, being a ward of our country, would not be under the supervision of government in the manner he is if it were not that the desire is to preserve those segregated portions of the lands which we speak of as his "reservation," and treat as his right.

Mr. President, in this connection has it occurred to us that under the title of the Bureau of Education and the charitable institutions there is an expenditure of $10,000,000, and that it is impossible to ascertain where it has gone, other than that it has gone for salaries in what is called "service"? If these organizations known as the Bureau of Education are to continue, and these charitable institutions, separately, of the Government are to be maintained as branches, let them be added to the Department of Commerce, and address themselves to such attention as is necessary to these several functions through the commerce heads of that department.

But here let not my honorable colleagues misunderstand me. When I refer to this bureau let it not be assumed that I approve of what I observed along the way of some theory of creating for the Federal Government the privilege to pass upon what should be the qualifications of the schools of the different States and likewise the standard of education as applied to the children. I utterly oppose it; and if the time should ever come when the matter is brought before this body and I am licensed by your generosity to speak upon the subject, I shall do all I can to disclose the most vicious example I have ever seen attempted to be foisted under the name of "education."

We have lately been celebrating George Washington's birth anniversary. We can not for the moment fail to recall that he makes great allusion to the education and freedom of the people; and if we are to violate one of the principal precepts in the preservation of the right to education, in the preservation to the citizen of his home and his family as distinguished and free from bureaucracy, then we offended the memory of George Washington instead of perpetuating him in glory—

Mr. KING. Mr. President-

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Illinois yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. LEWIS. I yield to the Senator with pleasure.

Mr. KING. In view of the criticism which the Senator is very justly making against the Federal Government injecting itself into our educational system, may I invite his attention to page 10 of the bill, where we find the following item?—

For all expenses, including personal services in the District of Columbia and elsewhere, purchase and rental of equipment, purchase of supplies, traveling expenses, printing, and all other incidental expenses not included in the foregoing, to enable the Secretary of the Interior, through the Office of Education, at a total cost of not to exceed $350,000, to make a study of the sources and apportionment of school revenues and their expenditure, $50.000.

There is $350,000 to ascertain the source of school revenues. We could, by sending a wire to the superintendents of education of every State, within 24 hours obtain the information, and yet $350,000 was authorized for this useless and unnecessary expenditure, and out of the authorization $50,000 is carried in the present appropriation bill.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, I appreciate the contribution. I had a moment ago adverted to the matter, but I did not have the figures with accuracy as presented by the Senator from Utah.

I want to say, not to take too much time in discussion away from the main theme, that I observe we have a Shipping Board. My eminent leader on this side of the aisle and others participated with me in earlier days in the creation of that body. I ask why should that which now contributes $14,000,000 to the deficit be continued? The senior Senator from Florida [Mr. Fletcher] a while since conducted an investigation into the whole phase and character of the Shipping Board and what had transpired with its administration and what had ended with its ships. From him we have a statement before us now that those ships for which the American people paid have been destroyed, many of them passed into the hands of the monopoly, some buried in the sea, some burned in the flame, all confiscated practically from the Government. We ask what is the use of that Shipping Board-and if it has any use and we desire to establish a form of transportation and shipment, why not annex it to one of the departments of business? Let it go to the Department of Commerce as a part of that organization instead of maintaining this separate expensive branch under very heavy expense put upon our people and inflicted upon the taxpayers of the land.

The last and final matter I take the liberty of offering is the Federal Trade Commission. Mr. President, the Federal Trade Commission likewise was created at a time when I was honored with a seat in this body. The theory was to create something of a supreme court of business. The Federal Trade Commission has in one instance or another done some good service, but ordinarily the investigations of that body have extended through a great period of time to ascertain whether a thing is wrongful or not, fraudulent or just. At the end of that length of time the whole procedure has evaporated and all the results that could have flowed are at an end. Hundreds of citizens are brought from their homes and their businesses to give testimony here in the Capital. Pending their long wait, much money, to the extent of millions of dollars, has been wasted with no results of any benefit to the citizens.

Here I now unite the Interstate Commerce Commission. In every one of the great instances where the Interstate Commerce Commission has assumed to pass judgment resort is taken to the courts on appeal or protest, and since everything has to wait until the courts have determined whether or not they will affirm the finding or reverse it, nothing in the form of relief is enjoyed by the citizen. I propose a complete change, that all of these subject matters be turned over to the State has a grievance where he feels he has been wronged in a matter of his business or there has been an invasion upon it, or by the railroads because of freight rates which they regard unjust, at once they shall have the privilege of going into the Federal court, the nearest tribunal to them, and there set forth their grievances, and, under the system of law which I hope we can amend, have an immediate hearing and a decree involving their rights in order that judgment may be had hastily, for justice delayed is justice denied.

Mr. President, I present these suggestions in answer to criticism of me from eminent sources as to where I will at once begin to cut off. I have named what approximates in figures almost $1,000,000,000 in the aggregated sum. I leave to the excellent sense of legislators of all parties where to provide the other $1,000,000,000 to equal the deficit. But, alas, every time anything is suggested in the way of a saving of this kind there arises, as has been well said, the immediate defenders of that particular branch, and then to condemn those who tender it as a sacrifice. Sir, we can, if I may be pardoned the suggestion, imagine the distinguished heads of the great tribunals in protest, as here we catch the very echo from the oaks of Iowa or from the long-reaching eucalyptus of California. The moment the blade is lifted high or the ax leveled, comes the echo:

> Woodman spare that tree Touch not a single bough. In youth it sheltered me And I'll protect it now.

[Laughter.]

Mr. President, I propose the relief, and I trust it may be received by such audience as will recognize there are things to be done and that in doing them we may wrest the community from that clutch which literally grinds at their vitals in strains of taxation.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President-

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Illinois yield to the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. LEWIS. Certainly.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator would not omit the bureau misnamed the Bureau of Efficiency, would he? It is really the "Bureau of Inefficiency," and I am sure the Senator would not want to omit that bureau.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, I will say to the Senator from Tennessee that my experience since returning to the Senate has not been able to observe anywhere other than in the Senate a true "bureau of efficiency." Here is one which operates so very efficiently that it heartily has my approval. I should not want to demolish it. If there be another one justly entitled to the appellation which the Senator from Tennessee suggests, I would be glad to have the list, that I might include it in this my list of those whose roots should now be laid under the ax and the further fungous growth be prohibited by turning upon it the light of burning truth. I thank the Senate.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I regret that the Senator having charge of the bill did not accept this amendment as well as a number of others to which attention has been called. If that had been done, there would be no occasion for extended debate. I have examined the Budget as well as the House hearings and the Senate hearings dealing with items in the pending bill, and I respectfully submit that there is not a full disclosure by the Indian Bureau of all relevant facts which should have been presented in order that a fair and just appropriation bill could be prepared. There is no provision in the bill indicating the existence of a "special commissioner to negotiate with the Indians," nor that any part of the large appropriation carried in the bill was to be devoted to paying the salary and expenses of any such official. There is no law creating such a position and, I submit, no authority for the creation of such an office or authorizing the appointment of any person to fill such a position if created.

UNAUTHORIZED SALARIES IN LUMP-SUM APPROPRIATIONS

Mr. President, too many appropriation bills have lumpsum appropriations or so-called special, or even general, the jurisdiction directly of the courts, and if the citizen in | appropriations without anything to indicate in the bills presented the specific purposes for which the appropriations are to be used or the persons or officials or employees who are to be the beneficiaries of such appropriations. It is becoming too common for departments, bureaus, and executive heads to ask for large appropriations upon which they may draw for various purposes not enumerated or specified in appropriation bills. The result is that activities are carried on, positions created, and multitudes of persons employed without Congress being advised by appropriation bills or other measures concerning the same. This policy contributes to swelling the great army of Federal employees and the assumption by the Federal Government of a multitude of activities, many of which are not within the legitimate authority of the Federal Government. Certainly appropriations of the character indicated make for extravagance and inefficiency, for a multiplication of employees, a duplication of service, and for increase in the power and authority of executive agencies. The Indian Bureau has an enormous number of permanent or regular employees-more than 6,800-together with more than 2,000 so-called irregular employees-and a very large part of the appropriation of the Indian Bureau is consumed in paying the salaries. expenses, and compensation of these thousands of regular and irregular employees. My information is that more than one-half of the $25,000,000 carried by the appropriation bill for the current fiscal year, ostensibly for the Indians, was expended in paying the salaries and expenses of the unnecessarily large army of persons in the Indian Bureau.

FALL APPOINTED HAGERMAN WITHOUT AUTHORITY

In conversation with a Senator I was asked to point out the statute creating the office of "special commissioner to negotiate with the Indians" and also to indicate where the Indian Bureau found authority to name Mr. Hagerman for such special commissioner. I insist there is no such authority. However, former Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall in 1923 attempted to create this position and named Mr. Hagerman to fill the same. There was no necessity for such action, as there were many officials in the Interior Department and in the Indian Bureau who could have negotiated agreements if agreements were desirable. The agents upon the various reservations knew the Indians and their conditions, and one or more were available to negotiate agreements.

A year ago, when the Indian appropriation bill was under discussion, the Senate adopted an amendment providing that no part of the appropriation should be used for the payment of the salary or compensation of Mr. Hagerman. It was contended then, as it is now contended by the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. Frazier], that there was no reason for the appointment of a special commissioner, and that Mr. Hagerman was not a suitable person to fill such position if it legally existed. I think the discussion then, as well as the statements just made by the Senator from North Dakota, indicate the reason why Mr. Hagerman was appointed by Secretary Fall.

PROPOSED ACTION A USUAL ONE

The Senator from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN] has just stated that it is an extraordinary and unheard-of proposition to restrict the use of an appropriation as proposed in the amendment offered by the Senator from North Dakota. As I understood him, this is the first instance where the Senate has attempted by legislation to separate a Government official from a position. I respectfully insist that the Senator is mistaken. In many appropriation bills special items of appropriation and general appropriations have contained restrictions limiting the objects and purposes for which the moneys appropriated might be used. Appropriation bills frequently contain limitations which result in separating from Government service one or more employees. In the pending bill there are provisions which will result in cutting off salaries of employees the retention of whom the Bureau of Indian Affairs contend are important to the service. If the Senator's position is correct, then Congress would be compelled to appropriate for the salaries and compensation of every employee of the Government, whether needed or not, and to continue forever positions though they | should be abolished. Senators know that there are tens of thousands of employees in the Government who should be separated from the service. It would be a most extraordinary situation if Congress was powerless to abolish positions or to limit appropriations in such a manner as would result in separating from the service persons whose services no longer were required.

HISTORY OF HAGERMAN CASE

For a number of years Mr. Hagerman has been paid from $6,500 to $9,500 annually out of appropriations made for the Indian Service. His was not a statutory position, and, as I have stated, there was no authority for his appointment. A year ago the Senate amended the Indian appropriation bill by prohibiting the payment of any portion of the amount carried in the bill to Mr. Hagerman. Unfortunately, the Senate conferees, when the bill went to conference, yielded to the House conferees, thus eliminating the Senate amendment.

Notwithstanding that the discussion at that time revealed the impropriety of retaining Mr. Hagerman upon the Government pay roll, the Indian Bureau, in an obstinate, capricious, and defiant manner, continued him in its service and paid him out of the funds appropriated for the bureau, many thousands of dollars. I might add that Mr. Cramton was then a Member of the House and was one of the conferees who led the fight, as I am advised, to defeat the Senate amendment. I make no criticism of Mr. Cramton in saving that he was a dominant influence in preparing and passing the House appropriation bills, and as a representative of the House upon conference committees. I might add that Mr. Cramton was not reelected to the House, but was soon thereafter given a position in the Interior Department and is now, as I am informed, employed in that department, in what capacity I do not know, but his activitiespart, at least-concern the Indian Bureau. Because of the attitude of the Indian Bureau and its obstinacy in keeping Mr. Hagerman upon the Government pay roll, it has given an importance to the Hagerman case entirely disproportionate to its merits, but the defiant position of the bureau compels Congress to deal once and for all with this matter.

Moreover the Indian Bureau has so identified itself with Mr. Hagerman and he is so much a part of it and its policies that in discussing the so-called Hagerman case the bureau and its policies and administration are necessarily involved. In other words, Mr. Hagerman is the representative of the bureau, and the bureau puts him forth as its representative and the symbol of its authority, so that when reference is made to Mr. Hagerman the methods and policies of the Indian Bureau are necessarily considered. The great naturalist Cuvier, from the bone of an animal, even though it were extinct, could determine the form and shape of the living animal. Without drawing any analogy, it may be observed that the controlling authorities in the Indian Bureau, having identified themselves with Mr. Hagerman and indorsed his course, approved his policies and demanded his retention as an indispensable part of the bureau, it is inevitable that the bureau and Mr. Hagerman should be regarded as more or less of an entity where the policies and procedure of the bureau are under consideration.

Senators know that the Indian Affairs Committee of the Senate is charged with the duty of making a thorough investigation of the Indian situation. A subcommittee was appointed, of which the Senator from North Dakota is chairman. In the course of that investigation-as the record shows-Mr. Hagerman and his connection with the Indian Bureau were discussed. The committee soon learned that his record in the bureau was unsatisfactory; that the Indians-whose rights it was assumed he was to protect-were hostile to him; and that to permit him to remain in the Government service would be unwise and highly improper. This conclusion was not reached until after a thorough investigation had been made and the interests of the bureau, as well as the Indians, had been fully considered.

The Indian Bureau refused to accept the findings of the that there be further investigation of the matter. The committee, not having completed its work, again considered the Hagerman matter. During the investigations Mr. Hagerman testified at length. Hundreds of pages of testimony were taken, many witnesses testified, and numerous documents were incorporated in the record. After a complete investigation of the entire matter, the committee submitted a report to which I shall call attention. I do not think the junior Senator from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN] can challenge, nor can any one challenge, the good faith of the members of the committee making the investigation. Probably they never heard of Mr. Hagerman until, in the investigation. he and his relations to the Indian Bureau were brought to their attention. The complaints made to them by Indians and others were of such a nature as to compel them to inquire into the official conduct of Mr. Hagerman. This they did impartially, and reached a conclusion which seems to me inescapable-a conclusion and judgment that would have been reached by any fair and impartial investigator.

Mr. President, I have confidence in the committee and believe that their judgment should be the judgment of the Senate. However, I have examined hundreds of pages of the record and have no hesitancy in saying that their conclusions regarding Mr. Hagerman are just and that it is the duty of Congress, if the Indian Bureau will not do its duty, to remove by legislation Mr. Hagerman from any connection with the Indian Service.

TEXT OF SENATE COMMITTEE'S REPORT

The chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs, for the committee, submitted a report under date of February 16. 1932, with respect to the "Charges of misconduct of Herbert J. Hagerman, special commissioner to negotiate with Indians and a former member of the Pueblo Lands Board." The report is as follows:

Pursuant to said resolutions and within the limits of its authority the subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs has conducted its survey and investigations generally among the various Indian tribes of the United States, and in pursuance of such investigation the subcommittee has held numerous hearings in Washington and within the States of New Mexico and Arizona inquiring into the charges of neglect of duty and misconduct of one Herbert J. Hagerman, special commissioner to negotiate with Indians in New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, and Colorado, and formerly a member of the Pueblo Lands Board. At the numerous and exhaustive hearings which were held in Washington, Mr. Hagerman was present, but in New Mexico and Arizona he failed to appear.

The printed testimony is found in parts 11, 17, 18, 19, and 20, hearings of the subcommittee.

The subcommittee finds that said Hagerman in his said capacity as a member of the Pueblo Lands Board failed, neglected, and refused to comply with the mandate of Congress (act of June 7, 1924, 43 Stat. 636) creating and controlling that board, in that he failed, neglected, and refused to find the fair market value and to award fair compensation to the pueblos when ownership of land and water rights were extinguished through the actions of the board in violation of section 6 of said act of June 7, 1924.

And by reason of such failure, neglect, and refusal to comply with the provisions of the act the Government has been put to great expense, while the board has not disposed of the claims and great expense, while the board has not disposed of the claims and counterclaims of the Indians and white settlers as was intended by Congress and provided for in the act, but on the contrary has beclouded the situation, has complicated the issues by trying to read into the act and the judicial decisions an arbitrary and fantastic theory, has practically forced the Indians to institute independent suits of wholesale character, and has brought about a situation forcing Congress to legislate anew in order to accomplish the results plainly intended by the said act of June 7, 1924.

The subcommittee further finds that he has in numerous particulars reglected his duties as such special commissioner to necessity.

The subcommittee further finds that he has in numerous particulars neglected his duties as such special commissioner to negotiate with Indians in New Mexico, Arizona, Colorado, and Utah, with resultant serious injury to the property and the tribal interests of the Indians, and has completely lost the confidence of the vast majority of the Indians of the Southwest, who have petitioned the subcommittee that he shall no longer represent them or act in the capacity of such commissioner, and the committee is of the opinion that he is unfitted for the position assigned to him by the opinion that he is unfitted for the position assigned to him by the Secretary of the Interior.

The subcommittee further finds that the said office of special commissioner to negotiate with Indians, etc., is an unnecessary extravagance on the part of the Government. It is the belief of the subcommittee that the superintendents upon the various reservations should be held responsible for the management of the affairs of the reservations to which they are assigned and should make their reports directly to the Indian Bureau rather than through some intermediary, and that if there are superintendents or agents incapable of managing the affairs of a reservacommittee, or, as stated, the action of the Senate, and asked tendents or agents incapable of managing the affairs of a reservation or unable to maintain the confidence and respect of the Indians, they should be replaced by men who have the necessary qualifications to handle the business and social problems involved. The present system of having superintendents report to Commissioner Hagerman makes for delay and inefficiency, stifles the enterprise of competent superintendents, and serves as a barrier behind which the Commissioner of Indian Affairs escapes responsibility.

The subcommittee's conclusions are supported by records, complaints, allegations, and admissions contained in the printed hearings, and in records, documents, and files of the subcommittee.

Wherefore, the subcommittee recommends that Mr. Hagerman's position be abolished, that there be no future appropriation for his salary and expenses, and that he be removed from the Government service

Respectfully submitted.

HAGERMAN AND HAGERMANISM

Mr. President, it seems to me that in the face of this report the Senate should unhesitatingly and unanimously agree to the amendment offered by the chairman of the committee [Mr. FRAZIER] and thus get rid, once and for all, of Mr. Hagerman and close the chapter of Hagerman and Hagermanism. The report says that he should be removed from the Government service. The chairman has called the attention of the Senate to communications received by the committee from the Navajo Indians as well as Indians in New Mexico, other than those belonging to the Navajo Tribe, in which they strongly oppose Mr. Hagerman and declare that they are unwilling that he shall longer hold any position which will bring him into contact with them. It may not be inappropriate to mention that because of the failure of Mr. Hagerman to properly discharge his duty in connection with the Pueblo Indians, the able Senators from New Mexico-one a Republican and the other a Democrat-have felt constrained to introduce a bill in the Senate calling for compensation to the Pueblo Indians because of the wrongs inflicted upon them for which Mr. Hagerman is primarily responsible. I shall refer to this later in my remarks. I may add, however, that this bill, which would, in part at least repair the wrongs done the Indians, is violently opposed by Mr. Hagerman and by the chief officials of the Indian Bureau. Mr. Rhoads and Mr. Scattergood, and I think the Secretary of the Interior, in the face of the report of the committee and the mountain of testimony condemnatory of Hagerman, still doggedly and defiantly support him and also stoutly oppose the bill for the relief of the Pueblo Indians, though everyone who examines into the matter dispassionately and fairly will be compelled to the conclusion that these Indians should be compensated for the unjust treatment to which they have been subjected. Mr. Hagerman was supposed to represent the Indians and protect their rights. The record to which I have referred, composed of hundreds of pages of testimony, reveals the reasons why the Pueblo and the Navajo Indians, lacking confidence in Mr. Hagerman, desire that he shall no longer serve in the position which he is

Mr. President, it is obvious that if the Indians have no confidence in an official of the Government, he can be of but little service to them, and that it would be unjust to have him superimposed upon them.

FACTS HAVE DESTROYED HAGERMAN'S SUPPORT

A few moments ago the senior Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT] read into the RECORD a statement made by some State officials of New Mexico more than a year ago, when Mr. Hagerman's case was before the Indian Affairs Committee as well as before the Senate. In that statement they denounce the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. Frazier] and indirectly criticize me for supporting him in his contention that Mr. Hagerman should no longer be forced upon the Indians by the Indian Bureau. My information-and it is authentic-indicates that those who supported the resolution of criticism entertain an entirely different view now. The leading newspapers of the State are opposed to Mr. Hagerman and definitely state that he should no longer be continued in the position which he now occupies. Editorials have appeared in two of the leading newspapersone a Republican and the other independent-which, in effect, support the action of the committee in calling for Hagerman's removal.

It is unnecessary to state what all Senators know. The investigating committee acted fairly toward Mr. Hagerman and only reported against him and in favor of his removal when the record overwhelmingly called for such action. The report that they made a year ago has been reinforced by a further investigation in Arizona and New Mexico at which Mr. Rhoads and other representatives of the Indian Bureau were present. I supported the committee a year ago, and I am supporting them now, notwithstanding the objurgations of the Indian Bureau and the Secretary of the Interior.

Apropos of the critical statement given to the press a few days ago by Secretary Wilbur, in which Mr. Collier and myself were criticized, I desire to have placed in the RECORD a copy of a letter written by Mr. Diego Abeita to Secretary Wilbur, dated March 14, 1932. I have asked the senior Senator from New Mexico [Mr. Bratton] whether he knows the writer of the letter. He answered in the affirmative. He will correct me if I am wrong, in stating that the writer is an Indian of education and considerable ability and of standing in the community.

Mr. BRATTON. That is a correct statement.

A STATEMENT FROM THE PUEBLOS

Mr. KING. The writer of the letter, may I say, is secretary of one of the Pueblo councils, and as spokesman of such council, he takes exception to Mr. Wilbur's criticism. He particularly criticizes the Secretary for his, as I believe, unfair and unwarranted assault upon Mr. John Collier. He also resents the statement of the Secretary concerning Judge Hanna, who has served the Indians for years without compensation.

Mr. President, I ask that the letter, without reading, may be inserted in the RECORD.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the letter will be printed in the RECORD.

The letter is as follows:

ISLETA PUEBLO. Isleta, N. Mex., March 14, 1932.

Hon. LYMAN WILBUR,

Secretary of the Interior, Washington, D. C.
DEAR MR. WILBUR: Acting through the election of the All-Pueblo Council, representing 13 pueblos, which met at Santo Domingo on March 12, I, as spokesman of the said council, hereby take exception to your statements to Members of the United States Senate as contained in an Associated Press dispatch of March 9, wherein you refer to Senator King's knowledge of our affairs as the work of John Collier, "a well-known and well-endowed lobbyist," whose word "can not be depended upon to be fair, factual, or complete."

John Collier is a friend of the Pueblo Indians, and he is recognized as such by us. It certainly is not to the credit of the Indian Bureau that a sense of justice compels him to fight constantly for decent treatment for the Pueblo Indians.

A lobbyist, as we understand the term, is one who hides behind the curtain as he tries to control legislation. John Collier has not hidden behind anyone or anything while trying to obtain justice for us. On the other hand, the success of his actions has depended largely on the knowledge the public has obtained about

We resent and consider improper and unfair your designation of him and his associates, whom we have trusted to present our case to the Congress of the United States, as endowed lobbyists. The Pueblo Indians of New Mexico have never paid John Collier one cent to represent their interests against the neglect of the Indian Bureau.

As for our attorney, Judge R. H. Hanna, of Albuquerque, and our other attorneys, they are trusted by us with a task of undoing our other attorneys, they are trusted by us with a task of undoing the harm done us by those whose duty it was to protect us. We regret to tell you that it is necessary for us at all times to be prepared to defend ourselves against the policy of your bureau.

You have told the Members of the United States Senate and the public that the statements of John Collier and his associates can not be considered as facts. In effect, you call him a liar; and this is a direct reflection upon the Indians of New Mexico who have charged him and Judge Hanna with the duty of presenting their side of this matter of the Pueblo Lands Board controversy. We therefore challenge you to prove your statement of March 9. As it now stands it plainly implies that we are a party to dishonest means to obtain justice for ourselves. Since this is utterly false, we demand that you retract your insinuations.

The 10 per cent fee-or, as you figured it out, $75,000 joint fee if it is approved, is for the expenses of several law firms who have worked for several years on this matter. This work has been about equal to the work of the Pueblo Lands Board, which cost the Government at least $250,000 and possibly $400,000—estimates seem to vary. Indeed, if this lands board had done its task fairly and correctly, we should have been spared this heavy expense. But why didn't they do it? Their methods forecasted another expensive fight for us, and why didn't your office correct them, when it could have done some good and spared us this expense? * * *

Respectfully yours,

DIEGO ABEITA, Secretary Isleta Pueblo Council.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT REMOVED HAGERMAN

Mr. KING. Mr. President, the record shows that Mr. Hagerman was brought out of retirement by Secretary Fall, under whose administration oil lands belonging to the Government were leased or otherwise disposed of. These two men were friends and had been political associates. As stated by the Senator from North Dakota, Mr. Hagerman had been removed as Territorial Governor of New Mexico by President Roosevelt. Part 11 of the hearings shows the reasons for President Roosevelt's action; they also show the series of letters passing between the President, Mr. Hagerman, and Mr. Garfield. Mr. Roosevelt's action is stated in the following words:

It is a grave question in my mind whether I ought to remove you instead of requesting your resignation. Under no circumstances would I reconsider this action.

From January, 1923, until the conclusion of the hearings by the committee the record of Mr. Hagerman as special commissioner and as a member of the Pueblo Lands Board has been subjected to an examination by the Senate Incian investigating committee and the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs. Of course, I do not ask the Members of the Senate to examine the nearly 2,000 pages of testimony containing this record. I can only repeat that the record not only justifies but compels the report submitted by the committee and which I have placed in the Record. The hearings establish that Mr. Hagerman failed in his duty to the Indians and pursued a course disadvantageous to them and which has culminated in their entertaining for him a feeling of fear and repugnance.

ESTABLISHMENT OF NAVAJO FIAT COUNCIL

The record supports the view that Mr. Hagerman attempted to destroy-and he was largely successful-the Navajo tribal organization which had existed among them for generations. He presented to the Navajo Indians regulations prepared by Secretary Fall, or under his direction, which had for their purpose the destruction of the tribal administrative system and the subjugation of the Indians to a tyrannous and bureaucratic control. These regulations compelled the Navajo Tribe to effect an immediate organization under the ægis of the Secretary of the Interior. The Indians were informed that if they refused to submit to the practical destruction of their tribal organization and the acceptance of these regulations, the Secretary would appoint tribal delegates. These regulations required the tribal council, which was the administrative and representative organization of the Indians, to meet only on Mr. Hagerman's call and only in his presence.

In July, 1923, this rubber-stamp Indian council that Mr. Hagerman, under the regulations referred to, had created, was required to and did sign over to Mr. Hagerman an unlimited power of attorney to deal with certain of their lands. Under this authority he was authorized to sign, in behalf of the Navajo Tribe, all oil and gas mining leases. I have before me these regulations, but I shall not take the time of the Senate to read, or because of their length have them inserted in the Record. I shall, however, briefly refer to two or three of the regulations:

Paragraph 1 permits that there should be appointed one commissioner of the Navajo Tribe (Hagerman) who shall meet and confer at general headquarters at a point to be designated by him.

Paragraph 2 provides that he shall have general supervision over each of the superintendents on the reservation and be charged with the general supervision of the affairs of the tribe. Notwithstanding the existence of tribal councils selected by the Indians, and which had been their governing body for perhaps centuries, the regulations declared that this bureau organization was created a continuing body, and that in the event the Indians or any superintendency failed or neglected to elect a delegate or alternate the Secretary of the Interior was to appoint the same.

Paragraph 17 provides that the tribal council was to meet at such time and place as may be designated by the commissioner (Hagerman), after notice in writing, for the consideration of such matters as may be brought before it.

Paragraph 19 provides that no meeting of the tribal council shall be had "without the presence of the commissioner" (Hagerman).

Paragraph 20 gives the right to the Secretary of the Interior to remove any member of the council upon proper cause shown, and to require the election or appointment of some other delegate.

It is a matter of common knowledge that the Indian tribes from time immemorial have enjoyed their own tribal councils. The progress of the Canadian Indians is in part due to the recognition of the government of the tribal councils among the various tribes. These organizations have been of benefit and have been recognized by them as their official organizations. The new plan was to convert the tribal council or tribal governmental organization into a creature or rubber stamp of the representatives of the Interior Department. This seems to me to have been unwise, unfair, and unjust to the Indians.

POWER OF ATTORNEY TO HAGERMAN

On July 7, 1923, this rubber-stamp council was called to meet by Mr. Hagerman, and acting under his direction there was executed and delivered to him an unlimited power of attorney, under which he was authorized to execute in behalf of the Navajo Tribe all oil and gas mining leases.

I should add that for a number of years prior to 1923 it was believed that the Navajo Reservation contained valuable oil deposits. Oil had been discovered upon the public domain in the same region, and legislation had been enacted by Congress providing for leasing the same. Requests were made for legislation providing for the leasing of Indian lands supposed to contain oil deposits. After Mr. Hagerman had obtained this power of attorney, he disposed of an oil structure of great value, containing an area of 4,080 acres, to two men, both of them his friends, and one of them, as I am advised, an intimate friend. The bonus consideration paid to the Navajo Tribe was only $1,000. In less than a year these individuals had conveyed a one-half interest in 5 per cent only of the structure, receiving therefor $300,000. In less than three years thereafter they disposed of a one-half interest in the leased oil structure for more than $3,000,000.

THE RATTLESNAKE OIL LEASE

The record shows that near Shiprock, N. Mex., and on the Navajo Reservation, there are two neighboring oil structures, one called the Hogback, the other the Rattlesnake. In the summer of 1923 it was established that the former possessed great value because of the quality and quantity of oil which it contained. It was of the highest grade and gave evidence of indefinite production. Less than 9 miles away, and as part of the same geological formation, was the Rattlesnake structure. Early in 1922 the Federal Bureau of Mines began an investigation, at the request of the Indian Office, of the Navajo oil fields. Some time prior to October 2, 1923, Mr. Kenneth B. Nowles, of the Bureau of Mines, reported that the Rattlesnake oil structure was equally as good as the Hogback from a geological standpoint.

The Senator from North Dakota [Mr. Frazier] referred to the testimony regarding this matter in his address a few minutes ago. The record of this report appears on page 4823, part 11, of the hearings. The Indian Bureau did make this report public. An affidavit, however, filed with the Senate Indian Investigating Committee August 4, 1931, shows that Mr. Nowles was in contact with Mr. Hagerman prior to the leasing of the 4,080 acres of the structure to the two friends of Mr. Hagerman. I refer to part 19 of the hearings, pages 10389 and 10390. I should add that the regulations, under which the proceedings were conducted resulting in the two friends of Mr. Hagerman obtaining a lease upon the structure, reserved to the Secretary of the Interior the authority to reject any and all bids. Secretary Fall had left the department and his successor had been named. Mr. Hagerman urged upon the department that the lease be issued without delay, and on December 5, 1923, after the Secretary had withheld for seven weeks his approval, the lease was approved by him. As I have stated, in less than a year thereafter one-half interest in 200 acres of the 4,080 acres was sold to the Continental Oil Co. for a $300,000 bonus paid to whites. The Navajo Tribe, however, received for the lease of the entire structure but $1,000 as bonus. The Continental Oil Co. thereafter acquired a one-half interest in the Rattlesnake structure for between three and four million dellars of bonus.

I do not contend that this transaction proves any corruption upon the part of Mr. Hagerman or those who acquired the oil fields. It is, however, a fact to be considered in connection with the entire record and with the general attitude of Mr. Hagerman toward the Indians. It is to be weighed in determining whether he earnestly and loyally discharged his duty to the Indians who were under his supervision and whose rights he was supposed to sacredly guard and protect. It bears upon the question as to whether he was negligent or indifferent in the discharge of his duties and whether there is justification for the Indians believing that he should no longer have authority to handle or control any of their property or have any concern in their affairs.

MISREPRESENTATION OF NAVAJOS IN OIL LEGISLATION

I now call attention to a matter which it is contended proves that Mr. Hagerman was careless or indifferent to the rights of the Indians and failed to observe his duty as a guardian of the Indians. As Senators know, many reservations have been created by presidential order. About threefifths of the Navajo Indian Reservation belongs in this category. My recollection is that all Indian reservations created since 1868 have been by Executive order. Treaty making with the Indians was ended by Congress in 1868; however, Congress, by various enactments, including the general allotment act, has recognized the substantial identity of Indians' vested rights in treaty grants and Executive orders. That is to say, reservations created by Executive order gave to the Indians a valid title to the lands and mineral wealth therein. However, it was contended by some, including Secretary Fall and the Indian Bureau officials, that the Indians did not obtain valid and indefeasible titles to lands included within Executive order reservations. The contention, as I understand, was that the Indians, though not trespassers, acquired no rights which Congress or the public were bound to respect.

On June 9, 1922, Secretary Fall, holding that the Navajo Indians had no title to the lands within the Executive order reservation, sought to bring them within the provisions of the general leasing act of February 25, 1920, which authorized the leasing of oil and other mineral lands by the Secretary of the Interior. The validity of his order announcing his view, which, as stated, was a denial of the ownership of the Indians in and to the minerals within the reservation, was challenged. Manifestly the view of the Secretary was unjust to the Indians. They had occupied the lands within the Navajo Reservation, as well as other lands, for centuries, and the Executive order relating to a part of the lands which they and their ancestors had occupied for generations was, it seems to me, but a confirmation of their title. For the Government to question their right and to seek to deprive them of either the surface or the minerals beneath the surface of their ancestral domain and of the lands within an Executive order reservation was a most unethical, unjust, and reprehensible act. Fortunately, Attorney General Stone, in an important opinion dated May 27, 1924, repudiated the view of Secretary Fall and declared that the Indian title to Executive order reservations was coequal with treaty title, and that the general leasing act of 1920 had no application whatever to such lands.

ATTEMPTED DESTRUCTION OF NAVAJO LAND-TITLE CLAIMS

It is obvious that if the position of Secretary Fall had prevailed the Navajo Indians would have been deprived of the oil and gas developed within their reservation. Senators know that much of the reservation is arid, barren, and rocky.

To have deprived the Indians of whatever oil resources might be found within the reservation would have been an act of the greatest injustice. Following the opinion of the Attorney General, the Indian Bureau attempted to secure the passage of a bill known as S. 3159, Sixty-ninth Congress, first session, the object of which was to deprive the Indians of a considerable part of the oil royalties derived from leases to Executive order reservations. This measure was an attack upon the Indian title to their lands and was an effort to prevent them from receiving the full benefits arising from the leasing of their own property. When this bill was pending in Congress Mr. Hagerman came to Washington to urge its passage. Senators will bear in mind that he was supposed to be the protector of the Indians. It was his duty to defend their rights and to guard them against any attack, whether by private persons or by the Federal Government itself. Under the regulations to which I have referred the Indians could only speak through the council, and their council could only meet when called by Hagerman and in his presence. Even though under the regulations of the Interior Department he was given such arbitrary and improper authority, the obligation rested upon him to advise the Indians of their rights, of the holding of the Attorney General, and to take such course as would protect them against the efforts of the Indian Bureau to deprive them of any part of the royalties or benefits arising from the leasing of their lands. Certainly it was his duty to explain the entire situation to the Indians and to advise them of their rights and against any course that would be disadvantageous to them. He appeared before the Senate Indian Affairs Committee and testified on February 25, 1926, in substance, that the Navajo Indians, through their council, had indorsed the plan and measure and were glad to surrender 371/2 per cent of the royalties, and if necessary would surrender 50 per cent. The council had not taken that position nor had they authorized Mr. Hagerman to make any such statements or representations. His testimony will be found in the printed Senate hearings of the Sixty-ninth Congress, first session, March 10, 1926, page 1000.

The bill was finally defeated, and legislation enacted providing that all royalties should be deposited in the Treasury to the credit of the Indians. In addition, the executive department was prohibited thenceforward from changing the boundaries of Executive order reservations. In this instance, Congress protected the rights of the Indians. The bold attempt of the Indian Bureau to deprive the Indians of their property did not succeed and, as stated, Congress went to the extent of providing by law that the boundaries of Executive-order reservations should not be made subject to attack by the Executive.

Mr. President, I regard this assault by the bureau and Mr. Hagerman upon the Indians as most unfair. I can not help but view the conduct of Mr. Hagerman as that of disloyalty to the Indians whom he should have protected. Mr. Hagerman appeared before the Senate investigating committee in January and February, 1931, and under cross-examination by the junior Senator from Montana [Mr. Wheeler] was forced to admit that the Navajo tribal council had never authorized him to surrender 371/2 per cent of their royalties to which they were entitled. If Senators will read the crossexamination, they will discover that Mr. Hagerman misrepresented the attitude of the Indians when he testified adversely to them in support of the Indian oil leasing bill offered in 1926, which was then under consideration. The junior Senator from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN], I feel sure, was not aware of these facts or he would not have stated, as he did in his address to-day, that he knew of no action of Mr. Hagerman that was detrimental to the Navajo Tribe. I repeat that Mr. Hagerman incorrectly stated the facts as to the position of the Navajo Tribe, and the record shows that he had not been authorized to make the statements made or to yield any of their rights with respect to oil royalties. His attempt, during the cross-examination by Senator Wheeler, to explain his testimony before the committee in 1926, was most pitiful, and reveals that he was not frank and that he had not correctly stated the facts as to the desires and wishes of the Indians.

HAGERMAN AND PUEBLO LANDS BOARD

I now invite the attention of the Senate to Hagerman's record in matters pertaining to the Pueblo Lands Board, of which he was a member from 1924 to 1931. The examination of the record contained in part 20 of the Senate Indian investigating hearings establishes, in my opinion, that Mr. Hagerman, when recently testifying before the Senate Indian Affairs Committee on the Pueblo bill, failed to state the facts and apparently sought to misrepresent matters of material importance. His testimony with respect to the Pueblo Lands Board record becomes of more significance because Commissioner Rhoads and Secretary Wilbur have chosen to believe him in the face of his recent testimony, which, if believed, would establish that he not only failed to state the facts but misrepresented them before the Federal court two years ago. If his statement were true, it would force the conclusion that the two other members of the Pueblo Lands Board were not frank and accurate in their statements before the Senate investigating committee in their hearings last year.

For many years the Pueblo land situation was a controversial matter between the Indians and the white settlers in New Mexico. The Pueblo Indians had resided for many centuries on the lands in question and had received grants from the Spanish Crown, but many white settlers had entered upon some of the most valuable lands of the Indians and had established homes and engaged in agricultural activities. They had possessed themselves of the ancient Indian irrigation ditches and diverted water from various streams and used it in the irrigation and reclamation of the lands occupied by them. The record, I think, discloses that the white settlers entered upon the lands believing that they were subject to entry and that they could obtain valid titles to the same. The Indians unceasingly contended that they were trespassers and that their occupancy was illegal. The greater part of the Pueblo irrigated area was occupied by these white settlers, but the title to the same remained in the Indians. This situation, as I have indicated, was provocative of controversy and constant irritation. The white settlers in good faith were occupying the lands, making improvements thereon, and by their labors adding to the wealth and prosperity of the State. The Indians, owners of the lands, were suffering great want.

THE SETTLEMENT WHICH CONGRESS ENACTED

In order that the matter in controversy might be determined, Congress passed an act on the 7th of June, 1924, so that the complicated issues might be determined. Under the law the white settlers were permitted, under certain conditions, to remain on the Indian lands, and acquire title thereto, the Indians to be compensated for the "fair market value" of the land whose title was to become extinguished. Under the provisions of the law the white settlers who had been on the Indian lands for 25 years with color of title, or 35 years without color of title, and who had in good faith paid the taxes continuously, were to obtain title to the land so occupied by them. The Indians, by this act, were to surrender their title, but were to have a just and fair compensation for the lands so to be given to the white settlers. The compensation was to be the "fair market value of their lands less the improvements placed thereon or therein by the white claimants." There was an additional proviso that the Indians should be compensated for the amount of their loss. which necessarily would be an amount greater than the market value of the land, because it took into account the loss of the use of the land for a period of many years during which the same had been occupied by the white settlers, although a perfect legal title was in the Indians.

THE APPRAISERS DID HONEST WORK

In order to carry out the provisions of the act the Pueblo Lands Board was created, with three members. This board consisted of Mr. Hagerman, who represented the Secretary of the Interior, and the Attorney General named a representative and the President of the United States named a third. The outcome of the work of the board and consequent court actions have been to vest provisionally in the white settlers title to approximately 5,000 disputed parcels of land, and to return to the Indians about 500 parcels. The record shows that Mr. Hagerman was a dominant figure and power in the board. The lands board appointed a board of appraisers, who were sworn officials and whose duty it was to appraise the values of all the lands in controversy. The record shows that these appraisers were men of character and integrity, who seriously and faithfully attempted to discharge their responsibilities. The appraisals, however, were low, but on the whole, so far as I am able to determine, were fairly equitable; certainly they were fair to the white settlers. Their appraisements and reports were duly submitted to the Pueblo Lands Board. Obviously this board should have approved their findings and appraisements, unless facts were brought to their attention showing error or mistake.

The Attorney General's representative and the President's representative were not residents of New Mexico; they were not familiar with land values or with the conditions upon the reservation. The first appraisals taken up by the Pueblo Lands Board were those dealing with the Tesuque pueblo. There the lands board awarded the Indians the full value which the appraisers had found, and Congress promptly voted the award of money without discussion. It seemed to have been conceded that the appraisements were fair and that the action of the lands board in approving the same required an appropriation in harmony therewith.

PUEBLO COMPENSATION SLASHED TWO-THIRDS

Immediately thereafter the Pueblo Lands Board, in dealing with the appraisals made with respect to the Nambe pueblo, reduced the appraisal figures of its own appraisers by two-thirds, and thereafter the lands board adhered to this policy and awarded to the Indians about one-third of the values found by the appraisers. There was no reason to justify this rejection of the findings of their own appraising board; no new facts were developed, but, arbitrarily and capriciously, under the control of Mr. Hagerman, the work of their own appraisers was rejected and the Indians were denied the awards to which they were justly entitled. Moreover, with respect to over 19,000 acres to which the title of the Indians was extinguished by the action of the lands board, not one cent of award was given.

NEW WHOLESALE LITIGATIONS MADE NECESSARY

Mr. Hagerman's position was not that of a disinterested judge; certainly not that of a friend and guardian of the Indians. The explanations given by him to justify the action of the lands board in rejecting the findings of the appraisers, as well as of the law itself, are not frank; they do not rest upon facts; indeed, in my opinion, they are pretexts which can not be accepted. The action of the board was regarded as so unfair, and, indeed, so violative of the law under which the controversies were to be settled and compensation to be awarded, that the action of the Pueblo Lands Board was challenged by the tribes through independent suits as authorized by the act of June 7, 1924. The result is that the situation is chaotic, and litigation is in progress and more litigation is threatened, which will be highly disadvantageous to the white settlers as well as to the Indians, and harmful to the peace of the community.

In an action brought before the Federal district court of New Mexico-brought because of the action of the board-Mr. Hagerman testified that the making of compensation awards was left to him by his associates. This testimony appears in part 11 of the hearings of the Senate Indian Investigating Committee at page 4468. He then proceeded to explain that the awards, which the Indians contended were unfair and unjust, had been based not upon the appraisals by the board of appraisers which he and his associates had named but by going back 40 years in time and taking the estimated value of the lands with their appurtenant waters as of that date. This value, he testified, had been estimated at $25 an acre. In some instances $10 an acre had been added to cover possible Indian improvements upon the Indian lands 40 years before the appraisal. This position, of course, was an untenable one. The constitutionality of the act of June 7, 1924, was dependent on the award of present "market value" to the Indians. Their title to the land was a perfect fee simple title and their ownership was under the act was to be accomplished only by a form of condemnation procedure as of the present, not of 40 years ago. The act required the board to find the present market value; that is, the value as of the date that the Indian title was extinguished, and it was this value that the board's appraisers found but which Mr. Hagerman cut by two-thirds. The appraisers observed the law in finding what they conceived to be the present market value of the land with the appurtenant water. As Senators know, the Pueblos are located in what has been called an arid or semiarid region where water is important for the irrigation of the lands to make them productive. The water was, of course, an appurtenant to the land. The white settlers claimed not only the lands occupied by them and upon which were their improvements and homes, but also the water which they had used for domestic and irrigation purposes.

The court gave the settlers by final decree the land with its appurtenant water. The Indians, having the legal title to the land and the water, of course, claimed that they should be compensated for both; the Indians regarded the water as appurtenant to the land. That was the view of the appraisers; that was the view of all fair-minded persons; it should have been adopted by Mr. Hagerman and the award should have been made in harmony with this view. No wonder that the Pueblo Indians fear Mr. Hagerman and are opposed to his being retained in the position which he now occupies.

HAGERMAN'S REVERSAL OF HIS OWN TESTIMONY

As an excuse for rejecting the findings of the appraisers, Mr. Hagerman later, as I believe, adopted another position, and in doing so inaccurately stated what had been testified to by himself upon a former occasion. At any rate, he reversed his position. His new explanation was recently submitted to the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs in opposition to the pending Pueblo bill offered two months ago by the two Senators from New Mexico who believed that a great injustice had been done the Indians by the Hagerman board, and sought to repair the injustice by asking Congress to make an appropriation to partly, at least, compensate the Indians for the lands of which they were being deprived. Undoubtedly the two Senators would not ask the Federal Government to appropriate $765,000 to the Pueblo Indians in part compensation for their lands if they had believed that Mr. Hagerman's board had not dealt unjustly with the Indians. Mr. Hagerman in his testimony stated, with many repetitions, that the reason for the low award which rejected the findings of the board of appraisers was that the Indians were not entitled to an award for the water because it still belonged to them. In cutting the appraised value twothirds, he is now attempting to do an injustice to the white settlers, or at any rate to create a situation which inevitably would result in litigation and prove a source of irritation both to the Indians and to the white settlers. As I have stated, the act of Congress was in effect a measure for the condemnation of the land and the water appurtenant thereto. The findings of the appraisers cover land together with the water used thereon. As a matter of fact, the awards made by the Hagerman board declared that they were in fact given to compensate for the land and the appurtenances thereto which included the water. The lands without the water would be of but little value to the white settlers, and any effort to deprive them of the water used by them for so many years could not be defended. If Hagerman's latest position is sound, there will be litigation for an indefinite period. The whites will resist the efforts to deprive them of the water, and if the Indians are compelled to accept the view of Mr. Hagerman and the Interior Department, they may feel constrained to seek in the courts to recapture the water which the whites have used and which has been decreed to the whites, with the land, by the lands board and also by the court. Mr. Hagerman's present position belies the testimony of Mr. Warner and Mr. Jennings, his associates on the lands board.

The awards of the board, as the report shows, establish that the water was treated by the board as being appurtenant to the land, and in the awards made the compensaan ownership in præsenti. The extinguishment of their title under the act was to be accomplished only by a form of condemnation procedure as of the present, not of 40 years ago. The act required the board to find the present market value; that is, the value as of the date that the Indian title

Mr. President, these matters are relevant to the issue now before the Senate. With this record, and with the hostility aroused among the Indians by reason of the position taken by Mr. Hagerman, it seems manifest that to further continue him in a position of control and authority over the Indians would be not only unwise but a serious mistake. The evasion of the lands act of 1924 by the Pueblo Lands Board has resulted in throwing back upon the courts the whole tangled subject of adjusting more than 5,500 claims and counterclaims

THE WHOLE SETTLEMENT NOW JEOPARDIZED

As I have stated, the extinguishment of the Pueblo titles under the act of 1924 was made subject to the consent of the Indians themselves. The Pueblo Indians were given the right by the act to institute independent suits at any day within two years after the report of the Pueblo Lands Board had been filed. The Pueblos could reject the settlement contemplated in the act of 1924. In other words, they were not to be deprived of their lands without their consent, and it was assumed that the Pueblo Lands Board would make a fair and just finding and the Indians were content to leave the white settlers in possession of the lands which they had occupied, with the appurtenances thereto, if and when the Indians were assured a fair compensation for their property. Faced with the partial or total confiscation of their lands these tribes have proceeded to file omnibus suits in ejectment against the whites occupying the lands in question. The Pueblos have given as a reason for bringing these suits that their property is in part being confiscated because of the low awards of the Hagerman board and because of the board's refusal to make any award whatever for more than 19,000 acres to which the board by its findings sought to extinguish the Indian title.

The Indians do not want to engage in litigation; they desire an amicable adjustment of the matter; they believe that the white settlers were entitled to consideration. The settlers had, for many years, occupied and improved Indian lands; the Government had failed to protect the Indians; it had permitted the occupancy of the Indian lands, the building of homes and improvements upon the lands by white settlers, and, as I understand, the Indians felt that the white settlers had equities which should be recognized. If the awards of the board had been fair; if they had followed the plain directions of the act of Congress creating the board, and the findings of their own board of appraisers, there would be no litigation and the whole controversy would have been ended, and the white settlers and the Indians would have lived side by side in amity and peace.

CONGRESS NOW COMPELLED TO LEGISLATE AGAIN

The disturbed condition came to the attention of the Senate investigating committee nearly a year ago, and the members of the committee proceeded to New Mexico and conducted extensive hearings. The committee found that the Pueblo Indians were right in their contention, and that the Government, because of the unjust finding of the Hagerman committee, should make an appropriation that would afford reasonable compensation to the Indians for the lands and water of which they were being deprived.

Mr. President, my colleague in his statement a few moments ago seemed to imply that the contest here is between the chairman of the committee, Senator Frazier, and Mr. Hagerman. I respectfully insist that this is not the issue at all. There is no contest between Hagerman and the committee. The committee were charged with the duty of investigating the Indian problem and the condition of the Indians. It was their duty to visit the Pueblos as they had visited other tribes and to ascertain the conditions of the Indians. After their investigation they found that Mr. Hagerman ought not longer to be retained by the Indian Bureau. The two Senators from New Mexico—one a Republican and one a Democrat—believing that the Indians had not been fairly treated, introduced the bill to which I have referred. The suits in ejectment by the Pueblo Tribes have been permitted to lie inactive pending the anticipated action by Congress corrective of the action of the Hagerman board. I regret to say that at the expiration of one year after the filing of the first of these suits in ejectment, the Federal district court entered a nonsuit with prejudice for want of prosecution. I do not want to comment upon the conduct of the court. I can only say that to me it is inexplicable. The case has been appealed to the circuit court of appeals, where I hope the rights of the Indians will be fully protected.

In view of the situation the Indians have been compelled to go forward with litigation which they do not desire, and the pueblo of Picuris is now making service on more than 400 white settlers. The suits are in ejectment, and, as I have stated, they revive the whole controversy and disturb the peace of the white settlers as well as of the Indians and cause a condition harmful to the community. Yet even the white defendants acknowledge, I am informed, that in face of the Hagerman board's action the Indians have no other choice.

SECRETARY WILBUR'S UNJUST ATTACK

At this point I desire to refer to the assault made a few days ago by the Secretary of the Interior upon Mr. John The statement contained a charge that Judge Hanna, an attorney for the Indians, was to receive a large fee, and the implication was that it was to constitute a part of the "fund of the Indian Defense Association," with which Mr. Collier is connected. Judge Hanna is one of the ablest lawyers of New Mexico, a man of character and standing. This criticism of Judge Hanna is unwarranted and is not creditable to the Secretary of the Interior. Judge Hanna has labored for years for the protection of the Indians, but with little compensation. He is still fighting their battles, with no promise of compensation. Of course, the Indians will be glad to compensate him if they can for the years of service rendered in their behalf. Whatever he may be paid by the Indians, contrary to the indictment of Mr. Wilbur, will not be a "fund" from which Mr. Collier's association may draw. Mr. Collier is merely a secretary of the organization which has done so much for the protection of the Indians. His organization has had the courage to fight the Indian Bureau and to protest against the injustices to which the Indians have been subjected. It is unfortunate that there are not more organizations interested in the welfare and protection of the wards of the Government.

Mr. BRATTON. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Robinson of Arkansas in the chair). Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. KING. Certainly.

JUDGE HANNA AND THE PUEBLOS

Mr. BRATTON. Being familiar with the entire situation and having enjoyed a personal acquaintance and a close association with Judge Hanna for several years, I take this occasion to express my emphatic disapproval of the statement emanating from the Secretary of the Interior recently to the effect that the moving spirit in that legislation is to bring about the payment of enormous attorney's fees.

The statement is not true in point of fact. The purpose of the legislation is to compensate the Indians for the lands lost through negligence on the part of the Government. The bill authorizes an appropriation of about $775,000. It contains a provision for the payment of an attorney's fee in such sum as the attorney and the tribe or tribes may agree upon, and in no case to exceed 10 per cent. It has two safeguards. One is that no fee shall be paid until and unless the Indians agree. The other is that in no event shall it exceed 10 per cent.

A 10 per cent maximum is the usual provision in measures passed by Congress remitting Indian claims to the Court of Claims. In cases of that character it is not known in advance how much work the attorneys must do. In this case we know that several attorneys, Judge Hanna being the chief one, have represented the Indians for seven or eight years in various matters of substantial controversy. They have appeared for them in some 23 or 25 different cases in court involving different matters.

It is true that the bill contains a provision authorizing the payment of a fee in such sum as the Indians may agree upon with the attorneys, but in no event to exceed 10 per cent. In my judgment a fee of 10 per cent of the total authorized sum would not be excessive. I do not know what the Indians and the attorneys may agree upon; but if they agree upon the maximum of 10 per cent, I should say it would not be unreasonable. The Indians will benefit if the legislation should pass with that sort of a provision in it.

So I join the Senator from Utah in expressing my disapproval of the statement of the Secretary of the Interior criticizing the legislation upon that ground.

Mr. KING. May I ask the Senator if the appraisement made by the board's appraisers had been followed whether there would have been any further legislation required and whether there would have been any of this litigation which is now before the courts?

Mr. BRATTON. That is true. If the figures fixed by the appraisers had been adopted by the board and the awards made accordingly, and the appropriations made in harmony, all of the controversy now confronting us would not have arisen; the situation would have been closed in a manner reasonably satisfactory to everyone concerned.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, the Hagerman board have spent a minimum of $250,000 to meet their expenses. For eight years they have kept 20,000 people in a state of turmoil, and by their conduct have finally precipitated a situation worse than was the condition in 1924. My information is that not only are the Pueblo Indians hostile to Mr. Hagerman, but the white settlers feel that his services should promptly be dispensed with.

HAGERMAN'S ASSAULT ON PUEBLO SELF-GOVERNMENT

Mr. President, in 1926 Mr. Hagerman, as the record of the investigating committee shows, attempted unsuccessfully to destroy the ancient intertribal organization of the New Mexico Pueblos. His purpose, apparently, was to create an organization which would be under his thumb and which could only move as he directed. As a member of the Pueblo Lands Board, all of the Pueblos were compelled to appear before him, sitting as a judge, in their contests over land titles with the whites and in their efforts to secure compensation from the Government. An elementary sense of the fitness of things, it would seem, would have prevented a person sitting as a judge from interrupting his judicial work in an effort to destroy the civil and communal institutions of the Indians appearing before his tribunal. In November, 1926, after the Pueblos had denounced the Indian oil leasing bill to which I have referred, Mr. Hagerman, presumably with the support of the Indian Bureau, summoned the Pueblo governors to Santa Fe. He told them that the time had arrived for the Pueblos to organize themselves into an organization which would be "official," meeting on Indian Bureau premises under Indian Bureau auspices, and generally conforming to the precedent which he had established with the Navajo tribal council. The Pueblos refused to allow Mr. Hagerman to organize them. They departed from Santa Fe and met in their own council of all the New Mexico Pueblos, at Santo Domingo Pueblo, and adopted a resolution couched in courteous language, repudiating the Hagerman and bureau scheme. I have before me copies of the resolution, one in Spanish and one in English. I will read a sentence or two from the latter.

SANTO DOMINGO PUEBLO, N. MEX., December 10, 1926. Sotero Ortiz, chairman of the meeting, stated the following motion:

"I make a motion of recommending in this meeting that each pueblo shall write to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, telling him that we will be glad to meet with them if they call us through this council, not otherwise."

Mr. Ortiz's motion was duly seconded.

The motion was then explained, discussed, and restated in Spanish, as follows:

"The resolution was that the Council of All the New Mexico Pueblos recommends to each New Mexico pueblo that it shall immediately write a letter to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, stating courteously that the pueblos are anxious at all times to confer with representatives of the Indian Bureau and will at any time attend a meeting for this purpose when called by the officials of the bureau, through the officers of the Council of All the New Mexico Pueblos, in the manner prescribed in the by-laws of the Council of All the New Mexico Pueblos. It is likewise recommended to each pueblo that in its letter to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs it shall state that it will not send a representative to any meeting of the so-called United States All-Pueblo Council or any general meeting except a meeting called through the officers of the Council of All the New Mexico Pueblos, and in accordance with the by-laws of that council."

The resolutions or recommendations above quoted were then voted upon and passed, as follows.

Then follow the names of the various pueblos that joined in adopting the resolution.

The record shows that the rubber-stamp council that Mr. Hagerman and the Indian Bureau attempted to create was not formed, though, as I am advised, the bureau and Mr. Hagerman still pretend that such an organization exists. However, the bureau renewed its efforts in 1927 and in 1928, but on both occasions, as the record shows, failed. Since 1928, neither Mr. Hagerman nor the bureau has tried to assemble the rubber-stamp council which they attempted to create and to which they gave the name of the United States Pueblo Council. I should add, however, that Mr. Hagerman has assumed and assisted the existence of such an organization, and the Indian Office each year has put into the Budget a $300 appropriation for the expenses of this ghost council never created and which never meets. When the Indian appropriation bill a year ago was before the Senate this appropriation for the ghost council was challenged and stricken from the bill.

The Indians have believed that Mr. Hagerman and the bureau have desired to destroy their organization and to create a pliable Indian council to be dominated by Mr. Hagerman and the bureau. I should mention that each pueblo in New Mexico lives under a communal organization that existed hundreds of years ago. This organization was examined into by Spain when it took possession of the New Mexico area more than 300 years ago. Under Spanish influence the communal organization was developed into a complete system of domestic self-government. Its various branches, legislative, executive, and otherwise, are chosen by members of the tribe, and the governor and subordinate officials are chosen by election, and they serve without pay. Each pueblo has a body of civil and criminal law traditional in character, and a kind of supreme court which makes and modifies the basic custom law or organic law of each tribe. These pueblo organizations were maintained in full authority by Spain and later by Mexico, and in 1852 treaties were negotiated with the tribes by James S. Calhoun, the first Indian agent sent into New Mexico by our Government. I might state that these treaties, guaranteeing the domestic sovereignty of the tribal governments, were never submitted to the Senate for ratification, but were buried in the Indian office files. President Lincoln, however, in 1864, placed in the hands of each pueblo governor a silver-headed cane bearing his autographed signature in token of the acknowledgment by the United States of pueblo tribal sovereignty within domestic limitations. These Lincoln canes, along with canes several hundred years old, presented by the Spanish crown, are the indispensable tokens of authority passed on annually at each pueblo to the newly elected officers.

ATTACKS AGAINST PUEBLOS RENEWED

Hostile as the Indian Bureau is to tribal organizations, it never disturbed the pueblo domestic governments, but after the failure of his pueblo council scheme, Mr. Hagerman became one of a group, which included the local Indian Bureau attorney, that prepared a bill introduced as H. R. 12615, Seventy-first Congress, second session. This bill proposed to subordinate the pueblo governments absolutely to the Indian Office. Section 3 went so far as to provide that the pueblo governments, with their political, judicial, and other branches, should be made over to conform to "rules and regulations and methods of procedure" to be laid down by the Secretary of the Interior.

The Pueblos denounced the bill, and their opposition and that of their friends prevented its passage. Mr. Hagerman's connection with this bill is shown by the testimony shown on page 4453, part 11, of the Senate investigating committee's hearings. His efforts in trying to secure the passage of this bill increased the animosity of the Indians toward him; and yet, as I have stated, the bureau is determined to force his authority upon these Indians as well as upon other Indian tribes.

The reason is clear why the Pueblos condemned Mr. Hagerman before the Senate investigating committee at its hearings in New Mexico. They regarded him as the enemy of their property rights as well as of their civil liberties. He has continued his opposition to them, and only recently appeared before the committee in opposition to the bill offered by Senators Bratton and Cutting, which was designed, as I have stated, to bring relief to the Pueblo Indians. It is believed by the Indians and others that he has influenced Commissioner Rhoads, so that the latter and his assistant, Mr. Scattergood, are bitterly fighting this just measure. To continue Mr. Hagerman, as special commissioner over the Pueblos, is to invite a complete destruction of the influence of the bureau over the Pueblo Tribes.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President—
The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Arkansas?

Mr. KING. I yield.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I have been necessarily absent from the Chamber during a part of the debate, attending other business of the Senate. I should like to have the Senator state now whether Mr. Hagerman's position as special commissioner was created by authority of law or by mere act of the department?

Mr. KING. The position was not created by any act of Congress, and in my opinion there is no authority of law for such a position. Mr. Hagerman, who was a friend of former Secretary Fall, was given this high-sounding title of special commissioner to negotiate with the Indian tribes. The position was created solely by the flat of the Secretary of the Interior and at a time when there was considerable interest in the oil lands owned by the Government and by the Indians. Mr. Hagerman has been continued in this position, drawing a large salary and a considerable sum annually for expenses. The present Secretary of the Interior, the Indian Commissioner, and Mr. Scattergood are fighting with an intensity that is remarkable to keep him in office and to force him upon the Indians who are hostile to him.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Can the Senator state from what item in the appropriations of the Interior the special commissioner, Mr. Hagerman, is paid?

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from North Dakota?

Mr. KING. I yield.

Mr. FRAZIER. In reply to the Senator from Arkansas I will state that I have another amendment prepared to be offered if this amendment striking out the title goes through to deduct from the appropriation on page 54, line 19, the sum of $8,500, which covers the salary of $6,500 and $2,000 expenses for the special commissioner to the Indians.

Mr. KING. May I add that Mr. Hagerman's name is not mentioned in the bill nor is there any reference to the position which he holds. His large salary and expense account are taken out of a lump-sum appropriation. This is an example of the pernicious practice which obtains of making large lump-sum appropriations which may be used for many purposes by heads of departments. That evil is particularly conspicuous in Indian appropriation bills. Many lump-sum appropriations are carried in this bill. It is impossible to determine what they will be used for except in a general way; but in some such appropriations large amounts are taken to pay individuals who are given some title or designated to fill some position not authorized by law. I repeat it is a vicious practice and should be prohibited.

SENSATIONAL NAVAJO ABUSES UNDER HAGERMAN

While Mr. Hagerman was serving on the Pueblo Lands Board he was connected with the Navajo Reservation in Arizona. The able Senator from Arizona [Mr. Hayden] a few moments ago referred to Mr. Hagerman and stated in substance that his work for the Navajos had been satisfactory. I can not help but believe that the Senator is unacquainted with Mr. Hagerman's activities and his relations to the Navajos. I should add that between 1923 and 1928, when Secretary Work separated Mr. Hagerman from his Navajo assignment, a number of sensational abuses prevailed on the Navajo Reservation. Some of them are cited in detail in part 11 of the hearings of the Senate investigating committee beginning at page 4479.

Mr. President, it is no pleasant task to discuss the Hagerman case or the maladministration of the Indian Bureau and the wrongs to which the Indians have been subjected. I would not do so if I believed that the Indian Bureau had acted wisely and justly toward our Indian wards. I would not discuss Mr. Hagerman except for the fact that the Indian Bureau and the Secretary of the Interior, in the face of all opposition, were determined to force him upon the Indians against their will and in the face of the record submitted to the Senate by one of its important committees.

KIDNAPING OF INDIAN CHILDREN

As showing the lack of interest in the Navajo Indians by Mr. Hagerman, who was placed over the various agents on the reservations in a number of States, I shall briefly refer to some of the happenings upon the Navajo Reservation. A year ago during the discussion of the Indian appropriation bill I referred to some of the abuses upon reservations. For seven years under Mr. Hagerman's jurisdiction the cruel and brutal kidnaping and enforced confinement of Navajo children went ahead unchecked. The practice was inhuman and was a direct violation of an act of Congress which a Federal court had construed. After many of these abuses had been discussed in the Senate a year ago Mr. Hagerman and Commissioner Rhoads began to pay some attention to this evil, and an order was issued forbidding the continuation of this inhuman and illegal practice. When Mr. Hagerman was testifying before the Senate investigating committee, he did not even attempt to claim that during this seven years of his authority he had made a single move to correct this wrong or to call it to the attention of the commissioner or the Secretary of the Interior.

If Senators are interested in these kidnaping abuses, they will find the facts disclosed in part 11 of the hearings, pages 4481 to 4485. I have the hearings before me, and they are available not only to Senators but to the public. I shall not consume the time of the Senate by reciting other abuses which went forward under Mr. Hagerman's incumbency, with nothing done, or even claimed to have been done, by him to correct them.

THE LEUPP SCHOOL CASE

I mention one matter, however, because of the position just taken by my friend from Arizona, conveying the impression to me, if not to others, that Mr. Hagerman's work upon the Navajo Reservation had been valuable and satisfactory. The matter I refer to shows financial waste and administrative blundering that are inexcusable. I refer to the Leupp Boarding School on the Navajo Reservation, 25 miles from Winslow, Ariz. This school, through a peculiar quirk in the bureaucratic mind, was located almost, or, as I am advised, actually, within the stream bed of the Little Colorado River; at any rate, it was so close to the water that whenever the river was flowing slightly over normal, the sewage system could not be operated, and when there was a slight rise above the level just mentioned, the school was isolated by a flood of shallow water. At any time it was apparent that the waters of the river might destroy the school and drown the occupants. Four hundred Navajo children were placed in this school and kept there. The Government during a 15-year period has sunk nearly a million dollars in the plant of this school. The Navajo Indians have protested, and they voiced their protest to the Senate investigating committee when it was at the school. The district engineer of the bureau, Mr. Neuffer, had issued warnings that the school could not be protected by dikes or drains, but neither the Indians nor the engineer could per-

Arizona. The able Senator from Arizona [Mr. Hayden] a suade the bureau. Six weeks ago, or a little longer, there was a rise in the river and the waters drowned out the substance that his work for the Navajos had been satisfactory. I can not help but believe that the Senator is unacquainted with Mr. Hagerman's activities and his relations to

A CRUEL AND AWFUL CONDITION

Before the investigating committee testimony was produced showing the cruel, deplorable, and indeed, awful condition which existed at this school during Mr. Hagerman's administration. The record is summarized in the printed hearings on Senate Resolution 341, on February 23, 1927, of the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs, page 48 et al. The record reveals that the Indian children were mistreated, that they were denied proper food or care, and were exposed to diseases and epidemics which were the result of this indifference of those in charge. The record shows that children were kidnaped and taken by force, oftentimes from their parents by force, and placed in boarding schools. When complaints were made by employees, they were ignored and the employees discharged. I have before me this testimony, but I shall not take the time of the Senate to read the same.

NO EFFORTS AT CORRECTION BY HAGERMAN

Notwithstanding the distressing and deplorable conditions upon the Navajo Reservation, Mr. Hagerman made no effort to bring about reforms. When he was testifying before the committee, he made no claim that he had interested himself to correct these abuses. His attorney, when defending Mr. Hagerman before the Senate committee at Santa Fe in May last, made no claim that Mr. Hagerman had attempted to correct the abuses at the Leupp school or any of the other abuses testified to by witnesses and established by documents submitted to the committee. There has been no denial of the record with reference to the situation at the Leupp school. I think the record shows that Mr. Hagerman, while drawing his salary and large sums for expenses, paid but little attention to the Navajo Reservation under his control. The Indians at Ganado, one of the large Navajo centers in Arizona, testified that he had made but one visit to this center and had not conferred with the Indians, but had stopped only long enough to buy gas for his car. The superintendent of the Fort Defiance jurisdiction, the largest and most accessible of the Navajo Agencies, testified before the Senate investigating committee that Mr. Hagerman had visited Fort Defiance only twice during the superintendent's tenure, which had lasted for two and a half years. At Ignacio, the headquarters of the Utes, the testimony showed that but one solitary visit had been made by Mr. Hagerman.

HOPI REPRESENTATION DICTATED BY HAGERMAN

The spokesman of the Hopi Indian Tribes testified that their only contact with Mr. Hagerman had taken place when he interviewed them in a dictatorial manner with respect to the question, which was a delicate one, relating to the Hopi-Navajo tribal boundary. The Hopi spokesman testified that Mr. Hagerman had summoned the Indians to Flagstaff, 80 miles away, had dictated through the superintendent, Mr. Miller, as to what delegates should represent the Hopis; and at Flagstaff had conducted the intertribal negotiations in star-chamber fashion, totally destroying the confidence of the Hopis. This testimony appears in the hearings of the Senate Indian investigation committee, part 18, pages 9382 to 9386.

STATEMENT OF S. M. BROSIUS

The record shows that Mr. Hagerman pursued similar methods in dealing with the Walapai Tribe of Arizona, as described by the attorney of the Indian Rights Association, Mr. S. M. Brosius, appearing on page 4610 of part 11 of the Senate Indian investigation hearings. I might add that Mr. Brosius for years has been connected with the Indian Rights Association, of which, I understand, Commissioner Rhoads was at one time president. Within the past few days, Mr. Brosius has visited me and protested against the course pursued by Mr. Hagerman in dealing with the Walapai Indians. I have a letter dated February 27, 1932, containing copy of a letter written by him to Senator Frazier, and copy of a letter written to Commissioner Rhoads under date of August 15, 1930. I also have a copy of a letter written by Mr. Brosius to Miss Clara D. True, under date of August 23, 1930. In that letter he refers to the "serious matter before him" in dealing with the Walapai Indians. He states that he has "made a start by appealing for justice." He then adds that the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Co. obtained a grant of land, part of which was located on the Walapai Reservation. He refers to the fact that the railroad did not receive the consent of the Indians. He then adds:

For more than 50 years the Indians have been objecting to the odd-numbered sections going to the railroad. While Commissioner Burke succeeded finally in inducing the powers that be to institute suit for the Indians, there is now an effort to force settlement of the issues by giving the railroad company the better portion of the reserve lands and give the Indians more land, but portion of the reserve lands and give the Indians more land, but the worthless portion, or least valuable portion.

District Superintendent Faris and Governor Hagerman were appointed to go to Walapai and settle the issues. The above two, together with Superintendent Wattson, of the reservation, met the railroad officials on May 21 and came to an agreement about the division of the spoils and agreed to give the railroad company the eastern portion, the wooded land, where the grass holds out better than on the treeless prairie. And also gave the railroad company the valuable spring—Peach Springs. On May 22 they called the Walapais in council and talked about half an hour or so—only heard from two Indians on their claim—and then adjourned and left for the Mohave Reservation near Needles.

HOW TO SETTLE INDIAN GRIEVANCES

This is the latest way to settle Indian grievances. Settle the differences before you see the Indians, then meet the redskins afterward and talk briefly, without disclosing what their decision was.

The Walapais followed Governor Hagerman and Faris 100 miles to Mohave-Needles and asked for further interview. Hagerman told them to go back home, that they had finished their investigation at Valentine (Walapai reserve), and their report was on the way to Washington. To go back home and talk with their agent, Watson.

Mr. Brosius thereafter adds:

That it seems to me proper to show that Hagerman was not a disinterested judge to decide the case of the Walapais.

It would seem that Mr. Hagerman ought not to have authority over these Indians as desired and demanded by the Indian Bureau. The Senator from Arizona in his remarks a few minutes ago indicated that the letter of Mr. Brosius was "ancient history." The Senator must be in error, the letter is quite recent and Mr. Brosius within 10 days visited me and reaffirmed what is stated in this letter. If Mr. Brosius's view is accepted, it would seem that Mr. Hagerman is too closely allied to the railroad and may have arranged an exchange of lands disadvantageous to the Indians. It is apparent from the testimony in the record that whatever deal was consummated between the railroad and Mr. Hargerman it was without the consent of the Indians. Mr. Hagerman summoned them into council, talked a half hour or so, heard only two Indians, and then adjourned the meeting and at once departed for Needles, 100 miles away.

This episode reflects the general attitude of Mr. Hagerman toward the Indians over whom he is supposed to exercise a paternal care.

EXCHANGE OF LANDS-NO ACTION ACROSS SIX YEARS

Mr. President, one of the first assignments of Mr. Hagerman after his appointment by Mr. Fall was to expedite exchanges and consolidations of land between the railroad, the public domain, and other parties, including Indians, in the State of New Mexico. These exchanges and consolidations had been authorized by the act of March 3, 1921, applicable to New Mexico. They were desired by all parties because the checker boarding of landholdings made grazing operations unsatisfactory and costly. The testimony before the investigating committee at its hearings in the Southwest last May, established that from 1923 to 1930 practically no exchanges or consolidations had been consummated. It is fair to say that regulations governing exchanges and consolidations, promulgated by the Commissioners of the Indian Bureau and the General Land Office, as well as by the First Assistant Secretary of the Interior, were cumbersome and undoubtedly retarded operations under the law. However, Mr. Hagerman, who was presumed to advance the interests of the Indians, exhibited an indifference in the matter that is not compatible with the position which he held.

I should state that Secretary Work separated Mr. Hagerman from his Navajo assignment in 1928 for the reason that the latter was inactive, but Commissioner Rhoads restored to him his position and gave to him a wider assignment covering four States.

NAVAJO ALLOTMENT RIGHTS DENIED

I think the record will show that Mr. Hagerman after being reappointed by Mr. Rhoads made no effort to carry out the provisions of the law directing the allotment to the Navajos of portions of the public domain. There were more than 6,500 Navajos resident on the areas within the public domain in New Mexico which had been their home from time immemorial. Of course, their title was based on occupancy, but under the general allotment act of 1887, the Secretary of the Interior is empowered to vest title to each one of them to 160 acres of the public domain.

Without going into the details, I think I am safe in asserting that these Indians were entitled to an allotment as a matter of right, and not as a matter of discretion upon the part of the Secretary of the Interior. If their allotment rights were nullified, they would be compelled to buy with tribal funds or reimbursable moneys obtained from the Government lands upon which they might subsist. Mr. Hagerman in 1930 succeeded in having allotment agents removed and in 1931 he favored a policy that would result in the Indians being compelled to secure lands, not from the public domain but by purchase from the railroad company. As a matter of fact, of the lands purchased before November, 1930, 73 per cent of the acreage had been obtained from the Santa Fe Railroad and a larger per cent thereafter was tentatively arranged to be purchased for the Indians from the railroad. These purchases were made by Mr. Hagerman with tribal and reimbursable funds exclusively.

Mr. President, I have further data that I could submit showing the relations of Mr. Hagerman to the Indians over whom he had control and whose interests it was his duty to promote. I shall, however, pretermit a presentation of the same. These data which I omit, together with the data which I have submitted, lead me to the conclusion that it is unwise and certainly unfair to the Indians to permit the Indian Bureau to retain him any longer on the pay roll of the Government. I have no feeling in this matter. I am, however, deeply concerned in the welfare of the Indians. I have tried to be their friend for many years and expect so long as I am in public life to do what I can in a proper way to protect and defend them.

HAGERMAN IS A SYMPTOM AND AN EXAMPLE

The Indians have been the victims of injustice; they have been robbed and pillaged; they have been driven from their ancestral homes by the pressure of the white race and often by the military forces of the Government. They have had occasion to fear the white man, and by reason of the treatment accorded them they have too often been driven to regard him as an oppressor rather than a friend.

The Indian question is still unsolved; the present administration has failed to remedy existing evils or to adopt measures which, in my opinion, will promote the advancement, happiness, and civilization of the Indians.

INDIAN BUREAU POLICY TYPIFIED

And the attitude of the Secretary of the Interior and the Commissioner and Assistant Commissioner of the Indian Bureau toward the Hagerman affair is illustrative of the reactionary policies which have too long characterized the Indian Bureau. It has defended officials when they have been guilty of derelictions of duty, even flagrant offenses. It has ignored recommendations made by disinterested parties, and often by its own officials, which were calculated to effectuate reforms and to remedy proven evils. Its policy seems to have been to retain in position all persons who found refuge in the Indian Service; to constantly add to the personnel; to increase salaries and secure larger appropriations to be expended in multiplying positions and in extending the power and the authority of the bureau.

Before concluding, and in proof of the statement that the present officials of the bureau, as well as the Secretary of the Interior, have been determined to protect and to retain Mr. Hagerman, I call attention to an incident which occurred at the close of the hearings on the Hagerman case.

A JURY VERDICT IN ADVANCE OF THE TRIAL

A year ago, when the Hagerman matter was before the investigating committee, the Indian Bureau requested that the case be not closed until further investigations were had. This was assented to by the committee, and later it went to New Mexico to take evidence. Every opportunity was afforded Mr. Hagerman and his attorney and the bureau to present data explanatory of Mr. Hagerman's conduct or in extenuation of the derelictions charged against him. Mr. Hagerman, though he had testified before the committee in Washington, did not appear in New Mexico, where he resides. He sent his attorney, however, who was given every opportunity to speak for and present evidence on behalf of Mr. Hagerman, his client. At the conclusion of an exhaustive investigation into the Hagerman matter, and before the committee had had any opportunity to express an opinion or submit any finding, Commissioner Rhoads arose, and taking a paper from his pocket, proceeded to read what he claimed was a decision or judgment of the Secretary of the Interior and the Indian Bureau.

I have before me a photostatic copy of this remarkable document. Apparently Mr. Rhoads had forgotten-or else he was wholly indifferent to the extraordinary nature of his proceeding-that this document had been written in Washington and was dated April 17, 1931. It contained the signature of Secretary Wilbur, as of that date; also, his own signature and that of Mr. Scattergood. The facts in regard to this extraordinary situation in brief are these: The investigating committee went to New Mexico for the purpose, among other things, of investigating the Hagerman case. Commissioner Rhoads had specifically requested that such investigation be made, supplemental to the one which had occurred several months before in Washington. Mr. Scattergood accompanied the committee and was with it when it began its investigation on April 20. Commissioner Rhoads joined the committee about May 1 and was with it, as was Mr. Scattergood, throughout the entire investigation which dealt specifically with Mr. Hagerman. The investigation terminated May 8. Thereupon, as I have stated, Mr. Rhoads arose and read this remarkable document which evidently had been written in Washington and bears the date of April 17, 1931, and which he had doubtless carried in his pocket without revealing it to the committee during the several days spent in the investigation of Mr. Hagerman. This extraordinary performance indicates the determination of the Indian Bureau to ignore any recommendations of the Senate or its investigating committee and to contemptuously treat officials of the Government charged with important legislative responsibilities. If I were disposed to be critical, I would say that this fact alone demonstrates that perhaps Mr. Rhoads and Mr. Scattergood lack a proper appreciation of their responsibilities, and would justify Congress in questioning their findings and their claims concerning Indian matters under their jurisdiction. If a jury decided a case before it heard the evidence, and prepared their verdict before they went into the jury box, their verdict would be promptly set aside and the court and the public would have reason to question their future

Mr. President, I ask that this extraordinary letter or verdict of the jury in the Hagerman case, dated before the case was tried and heard, be inserted in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, OFFICE OF THE COMMISSIONER OF INDIAN AFFAIRS. Washington, D. C., April 17, 1931.

As the reputation and character of H. J. Hagerman, special commissioner to negotiate with Indians, has been unjustly attacked and misrepresented, the Bureau of Indian Affairs makes the following statement:

A careful review of H. J. Hagerman's past and present record demonstrates the absolute integrity and sincerity of the character of H. J. Hagerman. We desire to affirm that in our experience of Indian work rarely has anyone served the Indians with more idealism and devotion nor more effectively advanced their welfare. C. S. RHOADS, Commissioner. J. HENRY SCATTERGOOD, Assistant Commissioner.

Approved:

RAY LYMAN WILBUR. Secretary.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I have a letter addressed to the President of the Senate by Secretary Wilbur which I ask to have printed in the RECORD.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, I understand the letter is a reply to an article by Mr. Charles S. Barrett, printed in the RECORD of yesterday's proceedings at my request, and assuming that if Mr. Barrett desires the privilege of answering the statement it will be accorded him. I have no objection.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

> THE SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR Washington, March 16, 1932.

The PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE.

MY DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: I note in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of March 15, 1932, a statement by Charles S. Barrett, inserted by Senator Robinson of Arkansas, entitled "Abolish United States Interior Department" (p. 6249). It may interest you to note the genesis of Mr. Barrett's attack, and I hope that you will place this statement in the Record, so that it will be publicly understood that an effort is being made by a lobby, conducted by Charles S. Barrett, against the Interior Department appropriation bill to influence the administrative and quasi-judicial functions of the War Minerals Relief Commission.

War Minerals Relief Commission.

The only point of contact that Mr. Barrett has had with this department over a period of years occurred about a week ago, when he injected himself into the adjudication of a war minerals relief claim involving $622,000 filed by the Chestatee Pyrites & Chemical Corporation, now before the department. He called at my office on March 10, 1932, to secure information about this claim and was given a complete statement of its status. Before he left he asked for response the left he asked for response the left has a left he left he asked for payment of $622,000 that afternoon. He called again later in the day with the two claimants, Messrs. Pratt and Ashcraft, and was referred to the Assistant Secretary of the Interior, whom he left almost immediately with the statement that he was going up to the Senate. An hour later he called a that he was going up to the Senate. An hour later he called a representative of my office on the phone and, with considerable vituperation, announced that he was going to "get the Interior Department" for not having settled this claim for $622,000. He stated that since he had left the Interior Department he had seen 16 Senators, that he was going to have the Interior Department abolished, that he had stopped consideration of our appropriation bill on the floor of the Senate, that he had more "power" than many people gave him credit for, that he could "break" the officials in the department, that "skullduggery" existed in the department, that everybody knew we could not stand the light of day, and made similar threats to unduly influence the adjudicaday, and made similar threats to unduly influence the adjudica-tion of this claim. He was told that he could not compel me to handle a matter of this import because of any political or other pressure which he might bring to bear on the department. He has concentrated within the last week on bringing pressure to bear on me from various sources which I have, in the interest of the public and for the good of the Government, been compelled to ignore, although consideration of the claim is going forward expeditiously regardless of his efforts. He has now placed before Congress an irresponsible recommendation to abolish the department which I would not consider worthy of answer except that it is damaging to the reputation of the officials of this department.

The facts in the claim are as follows:

The claim of this corporation was filed informally on March 4,

The claim of this corporation was filed informally on March 4, 1919, in the amount of $914,172.73 for alleged loss incurred in producing and preparing to produce pyrites for war purposes.

On October 15, 1919, the Secretary of the Interior made an award to the claimant in the sum of $223,529.17, which was accepted conditionally. Following consultation between auditors for the Government and representatives of the claimant the amount of the ernment and representatives of the claimant, the amount of the claim was reduced from $914,172.73 to $909,925.69.

On September 29, 1922, under an amendment to the act, the Secretary of the Interior made a second award of $469,784.62, which was accepted and paid, thus making a total of $693,313.79 paid on

In February, 1929, the Congress further amended the act to permit claimants to file in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia a petition for review of the decisions of the Secretary on questions of law. This claimant filed two suits. One covered interest on borrowed capital, which had been denied in the consideration of the claim by the Secretary, and the other suit covered other items in dispute. By agreement of counsel the suit as to interest was made a test case. It was carried to the Supreme Court of the United States, and that court on December 7, 1931, held that interest should be considered in fixing the amount to be allowed claimants.

On December 15, 1931, the Secretary received the decree of the court and proceeded to carry out its mandate. Immediately there arose the legal question whether interest was to stop at March 2. arose the legal question whether interest was to stop at March 2. 1919, or be paid to the date of settlement, and the solicitor and the Attorney General were requested to give opinions on the question. While waiting for the opinion of the Attorney General (not yet received), George A. Pratt, of the Chestatee Co., and Lee Ashcraft, the chief creditor, requested that the interest be computed to March 2, 1919, and paid, without prejudice to either side, and on March 14 the Secretary ordered this to be done, with the result that, on March 16, 1932, there was certified for payment a third award to this company amounting to $44,451.45.

The items contained in the second suit will be adjusted promptly upon termination of the litigation.

Of the amount of $909,925.69 first claimed, the department has paid $737.765.24, and the claimant now claims that approximately $622,000 is still due.

$622,000 is still due.

It will be seen that the Chestatee claim has had preferred consideration in the department since last December, as it was a test case for the payment of losses for interest on which the Supreme Court made its decision. It has been my policy in all these war minerals claims to expedite action. The Chestatee claimants have been before the department almost continuously since January presenting their cause, and everything has been done to advance final settlement. However, there is now no question for action in this claim before the Department of the Interior. The two pending items, payment of interest from March 2, 1919, to December 31, 1931, and the question of appealing on the decree of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia for alleged losses of approximately $100,000 being now with the Attorney General for decision. Sincerely yours, sideration in the department since last December, as it was a test

RAY LYMAN WILBUR, Secretary.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, as I stated this morning, at the proper time I intend to offer a motion to recommit to the Committee on Appropriations with instructions to report the same back to the Senate with amendments providing an aggregate reduction of 10 per cent in the amount of the appropriations contained in the bill as received from the House of Representatives. I ask unanimous consent to have the motion printed and lie on the

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the motion will be entered and printed and lie on the table.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I should like to address an inquiry to the junior Senator from Utah [Mr. King]. Is it the wish of the Senator to have a roll call on the pending amendment?

Mr. KING. I will follow the desire of the chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs, the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. FRAZIER].

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, I am not particular about there being a roll call.

Mr. McNARY. I particularly wanted to know whether we could dispose of that amendment at this time. If there is to be a roll call, we can not. If the debate is concluded,

Mr. KING. The debate is concluded as far as I am con-

Mr. BRATTON. I shall take just a few moments before the vote is taken, whether by roll call or otherwise.

PHILIPPINE INDEPENDENCE

Mr. HAWES. Mr. President, the Senate Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs have reported to the Senate a bill for the independence of the Philippine Islands, placing a limitation of 15 years.

The House committee, with practically the same unanimity as the Senate committee, has reported a bill whose philosophy is the same as the Senate bill, with a limitation of eight

The unanimity in the reports of these two committees is but a reflection of the attitude, as I understand it, of both Democratic and Republican leaders in both Houses. So it is quite evident that within a short time the subject will be debated in both branches of our Congress and some sort of a bill will be passed.

While the hearings were voluminous and many witnesses heard preceding the congressional discussion, some expert magazine writers and observers are beginning to investigate and discuss this question.

There has been some informal discussion of our ability to hold the Philippines under war pressure from a first-class power, and our position there seems to be so little understood that I ask that an extract from an article in Current History for March, 1932, by Mr. Roy Veatch, describing the Conference for the Limitation of Armaments, which met in Washington in 1921, and the outcome of that agreement, may be inserted in the RECORD. Mr. Veatch makes it perfectly clear and understandable that in an effort to secure a limitation of armaments we deliberately and purposely (whether advisedly or not) agreed to an abandonment of the defense of the Philippines, and quotes several outstanding naval authorities:

In opening the Washington conference, Secretary of State Hughes made an unexpected offer to scrap the whole of the American building program of capital ships on which $350,000,000 already had been expended. Japan, in turn, was to cancel her program and to accept a ratio of battleship strength with the United States of 3 to 5. In addition, strong pressure was brought upon Japan to end her long-standing alliance with Great Britain and to relinquish her recent gains in China.

and to relinquish her recent gains in China.

Japan would not accept such a ratio of naval inferiority unless she were guaranteed security in her own waters. Her own formula went to the heart of the problem with a demand that naval bases should not be developed in Guam and the Philippines. On this question hung the fate of the conference. The United States yielded finally and joined with Great Britain and Japan in an agreement (art. 19 of the naval treaty) to maintain the status quo as regards the fortification of naval bases in all the outlying possessions of these powers in the Pacific. This settled, Japan yielded on nearly every other point.

Most naval men in the United States were outspoken in their condemnation of the Government's policy of "scuttling" the naval building program and of relinquishing the power of absolute command of the seas. But their most vehement attack on the treaty was directed at the surrender of the right to fortify the Philippines and Guam, which to them was a disastrous anticlimax Philippines and Guam, which to them was a disastrous anticlimax to the policy they had assisted in developing with such energy and consistency since the Spanish War.

Capt. Dudley W. Knox, United States Navy (retired), says in his book, The Eclipse of American Sea Power: "Without adequate bases at Guam and the Philippines to serve the Americaneses" these extensive and populous islands are virtually defenseless." In an address before the American Society of International Law In an address before the American Society of International Law in 1922 Rear Admiral Harry S. Knapp, United States Navy (retired), said: "The United States has yielded the possibility of naval equality in this region. * * * Our military prestige has received a blow; and with the waning of military prestige political prestige wanes also. The treaty may very well mark the beginning of a decreared influence in the Far East, with attendant loss to our proper, if selfish, trade interests and to our altruistic purpose for China and Siberia."

The present Chief of Naval Operations, Rear Admiral W. V. Pratt, United States Navy, was the expert naval assistant to the Americans.

The present Chief of Naval Operations, Rear Admiral W. V. Pratt, United States Navy, was the expert naval assistant to the American commissioners at the Washington conference. Although a friend of the treaty, he admitted that "the active defense of our Philippine possessions, if such ever becomes a necessity, must now rest entirely upon the back of our floating naval establishment, geographically placed many thousands of miles away."

In other words, the Philippines could not be defended in case of war with Japan, and it is well understood that the Navy would abandon them, expecting the first blow to be struck there. They are a liability, not an asset, in time of war in the Pacific.

In the same issue of this magazine Mr. Raymond Leslie Buell, research director of the Foreign Policy Association, discusses the element of time and the responsibility of the American Congress for the situation that now exists:

Although the aim of the administrative and educational policy Although the aim of the administrative and educational policy of the United States in the islands has been to stimulate self-government, the economic policy dictated by Washington has made the Philippines artificially dependent upon the United States. Had a system of nondiscriminatory tariffs been established levying equal duties upon all imports, regardless of origin, a vigorous foreign trade would have developed with Japan, China, Indo-China, and the Dutch East Indies. But, despite the protest of the Philippine Assembly, the American Congress many years ago inaugurated free trade between the Philippines and the United States. At the same time exorbitant duties have obstructed trade States. At the same time exorbitant duties have obstructed trade with foreign countries, such as China or Japan. Thus the economy of the islands has become dependent upon the American omy of the islands has become dependent upon the American market, located 7,000 miles away, and immediate independence by abruptly closing this market would jeopardize the economic and financial existence of the islands.

Until November, 1931, every political leader and party of importance in the Philippines was unanimous in the demand for immediate and complete independence; but, on November 9, Manual Ouegan president of the Philippine Senate and leader of Manuel Quezon, president of the Philippine Senate and leader of the Nationalist-Consolidado Party, which has a majority in the legislature, presented a 26-page memorial to the legislature. He stated frankly that, in view of the economic issues involved, the Philippines should substitute a demand for gradual independence instead of the traditional agitation for absolute and immediate independence. He proposed two alternatives:

(1) Immediate establishment of an independent government, with free trade between America and the Philippines for a period of 10 years, limiting the amount of sugar entering the United States free of duty to 1,000,000 tons and of oil to the amount that is exported at present, and with restriction of laborers going to the United States.

to the United States.

(2) Immediate establishment of an autonomous government with all the consequent powers, including that of enacting measures considered necessary to meet the responsibilities of an independent government, when independence is granted, with the restrictions necessary to safeguard the rights of sovereignty of the United States in the Philippines. For a period of 10 years the trade relations between the United States and the Philippines and the labor immigration into the United States would be governed as stated in the first plan. At the end of 10 years absolute independence of the Philippines to be granted or the Filipino people to decide through a plebiscite whether they desire to continue with this kind of government or prefer to have one that is absolutely independent. lutely independent.

If the American Congress should refuse to accept either of these alternatives, Senator Quezon declared, the Filipino people should then demand independence at all costs.

Continuing, Mr. Buell, in his interesting article, says:

Filipinos assert that the United States has repeatedly promised independence. Presidents Taft, Roosevelt, and Wilson encouraged the Filipinos in their national aspirations, and the American Conthe Flipinos in their national aspirations, and the American Congress provided in a preamble to the Jones Act of 1916 that it was the purpose of the people of the United States "to withdraw their sovereignty over the Philippine Islands and to recognize their independence as soon as a stable government can be established therein." Finally, the Filipinos urge that they are able to support a stable government. The racial and linguistic differences are the Filipinos are a greater it is maintained than to support a stable government. The racial and linguistic differences among the Filipinos are no greater, it is maintained, than such differences in Egypt, Iraq, Switzerland, or Yugoslavia. The proportion of literacy—only 50 per cent—is higher than in independent nations like China, Colombia, Mexico, Brazil, Portugal, Russia, and Siam. Despite Japanese aggression on the Asiatic mainland, Filipinos do not believe that the problem of defending themselves against attack, once independent, will be difficult. They expect the Philippines to become a member of the League of Nations and some of them urge a neutralization pact with of Nations, and some of them urge a neutralization pact with the United States, Japan, Russia, China, and other powers. Since the passage of the Jones Act in 1916 colored peoples in

Since the passage of the Jones Act in 1916 colored peoples in many parts of the world have received their freedom or at least a large measure of self-government. Thus, Egypt to-day has virtually thrown off outside control over its administration; India has been promised a measure of self-government considerably greater than that enjoyed by the Philippines. Great Britain has announced its determination to surrender its mandate over Iraq and to support the application of this State for membership in the League of Nations. It seems probable that France will take and to support the application of this State for membership in the League of Nations. It seems probable that France will take similar steps to relinquish its control over Syria. The people of the Philippines are fully as able to govern themselves as the people of Egypt, India, Iraq, or Syria. They have been promised independence by the United States, and they have been educated with independence as a goal. It is difficult to see, therefore, how the United States, which has always prided itself upon being "nonimperialistic," can oppose the movement for self-determination in the Philippines. tion in the Philippines.

Mr. President, these two articles briefly but effectively tell the story, first, that of the Pacific disarmament treaty of 1921, in which we agreed to retain the status quo as of 1922 in the defenses of the Pacific islands and the opinion of naval men.

The second article explains why some years are required for a balancing of economic conditions, and admits the claim of the Filipinos that these conditions were created by the United States Congress and not by the Filipinos, further substantiating their position that as we gave Spain 10 years at the conclusion of the Spanish-American War to adjust its trade relations before our laws were changed, that at least the same treatment should be accorded the Filipinos for a similar period of readjustment.

SMITH WILDMAN BROOKHART

Mr. NYE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a speech by Prof. Ivan L. Pollock to the Political Science Club of the State University of Iowa

- 1. Unusual sensitiveness to the strength and direction of social and industrial tendencies with reference to their party and political bearings.
- 2. Acute and quick perception of possible courses of community conduct with prompt action accordingly.

  3. Facility in group combination and compromise—political diplomacy in ideas, policies, and spoils.

  4. Facility in personal contacts with widely varying types of

- 5. Facility in dramatic expression of the sentiment of large groups of voters, usually with voice or pen, fusing a logical formula, an economic interest, and a social habit or predisposition
- in a personality.
  6. Courage not unlike that of the military commander whose best-laid plans require a dash of luck for their successful completion.

I shall not attempt to present what I have to say about Senator BROOKHART in the order of these basic qualities but suggest them as valuable tentative norms, and I have kept them in mind in presenting the data I have before me.

SMITH WILDMAN BROOKHART was born of pre-Revolutionary English stock in a log cabin on a farm in Scotland County, Mo., in 1869. He was educated in the public schools of southern Iowa and the southern Iowa Normal at Bloomfield. He studied law in and the southern lowa Normal at Bloomfield. He studied law in law offices at Bloomfield and Keosauqua and was admitted to the bar of Iowa in 1892. For a time he taught school and later practiced law and farmed. He was married relatively early in life and has four sons and two daughters. He operates his own farm just outside the city limits of Washington, Iowa, and produces fine crops of fruit and blooded livestock.

Senator Brookhart is gifted with tremendous physical vitality and maintains a very high degree of physical fitness. There is and maintains a very high degree of physical fitness. There is not a stronger man physically in the Senate. He is big framed, broad shouldered, and short necked, with an abundance of brown broad shouldered, and short necked, with an abundance of brown hair. He has a round, stubborn, short-nosed face with many fine wrinkles around a really remarkable pair of gray eyes—the eyes of a sharpshooter. Physical fitness he regards as a necessity. He is not a drinking dry but a teetotaler as to liquors, tea, coffee, and tobacco in all forms. He has the physical capacity for the stress and strain of political campaigns, and for political contacts of all sorts. He is an ideal campaigner, first, because his morals and integrity are sound to the core; and second, because of his physical vitality. Mr. Louis H. Cook has said of him that "He can make a dozen meetings in a day, six days a week, and wind up as keen eyed and clear skinned as a child. He never believes that anyone is going to vote against him and never worries about the result." This untiring energy serves excellently in the arduous work in the This untiring energy serves excellently in the arduous work in the Senate.

Senate.

Psychologically, also, the Senator is well equipped for the hurly-burly of political life. He is endowed with an equable temperament that leaves him calm and placid after many trying situations that would unnerve less firmly balanced men. He maintains his good humor and evenness of disposition in the face of repeated rebuffs and defeats and galling criticisms. He is not cursed with an inferiority complex; but has rather an overwhelming assurance that he can not be wrong. In his committee work and on the floor of the Senate he is persistent but always fair and courteous. He is sometimes blunt and crude in his expressions, and somewhat given to calling names. He occasionally gets mad and voices his reactions in undignified terms, as in his recent reply to an insinuating attack by Representative Cyrenus Cole. In his personal relations with other Senators he is jovial and anything but a recluse. He takes his senatorial duties seriously and is absolutely honest. There is no pose in Brookhart, only a very simple and unaffected democracy. His manners and contacts are genuinely democratic.

democratic.

Senator Brookhart is not an orator of the Bryan caliber but he is a convincing speaker and can hold a crowd. His manner is disarming and his arguments plausible. "Although called an 'economic illiterate' by his former colleague, the late Albert B. Cummins, he always has a mass of facts and figures at his tongue's end, and these can seldom be contradicted successfully." "His speeches win over many people who came to sneer at him." He believes what he says. He is a hard hitter who takes himself with the utmost seriousness and has not a particle of fear in his make-up. Moreover, he never makes a formal speech in the Senate unless he is prepared to defend his position.

Senator Brookhart has the distinction of being one of the best rifle shots in America. He joined the Iowa National Guard in

Senator Brookhart has the distinction of being one of the best rifle shots in America. He joined the Iowa National Guard in 1894 and served almost continuously until the World War. He was a lieutenant of the Fiftieth Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry in the Spanish-American War; a major in First Iowa Brigade, Mexican border service; and major and lieutenant colonel of Infantry during the World War. While in the Iowa National Guard he became its champion marksman and its leader in rifle treining. He was central of the America Palma Plife Team which the Political Science Club of the State University of Iowa in February, 1932.

There being no objection, the matter was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

A public man presents a problem, a situation to be analyzed and explained. In the present generation increasing attention is being given not only to the social environment out of which public men emerge, but also to the analysis of the individual qualities of the leaders, and finally to the interrelation of these qualities to the environment.

Professor Merriam has suggested the following basic qualities as a working list of the common attributes of the political leader:

Guard he became its champion marksman and its leader in rifle training. He was captain of the America Palma Rifle Team which won the world championship in 1912, and has been elected four times as president of the National Rifle Association of America. During the early years of the World War many European and American military authorities had concluded that infantry marksmanship was of no great importance; that a poor shot would get more hits in battle than a good shot. Brookharar went to Washington and "sold" the contrary idea to Secretary of War Baker, and was made chief instructor in marksmanship at Camp Benning and at Camp Perry schools and doubtless thereby made a substantial contribution to American success in the war.

As a small-town lawyer-farmer of the thinking type, reared in Iowa and beginning his professional career in 1890, Smith Brook-

HART naturally turned his attention to politics. He served three terms as county attorney in his home county and was ambitious to represent his district in Congress, but the Burlington Railroad would not let him. J. W. Blythe, general solicitor of the Burlington, with headquarters in Brookhart's district, ran the politics as well as the railroad. Instead of making peace with the railroad and so getting to Congress, Brookhart elected to fight the railroad. He supported Cummins as governor of Iowa, was a Bull Mooser, and chairman of the Republican State convention in 1912. From that time on Brookhart was more progressive than the controlling leaders of the Republican Party in his State. He broke with Cummins when the latter reversed his policy on the broke with Cummins when the latter reversed his policy on the railroad question at the close of the war.

When Senator Cummins came up for reelection in 1920, the regulars were inclined to let him have the nomination by default; but Brookhart, who is no respecter of "regular" amenities, came out as an opposing candidate for the Republican nomination. The chief issue in the campaign was Cummins's famous relief hill. Brookhart relief of 7000 votes to 115 000 for Cumins. railroad bill. Brookhart polled 97,000 votes to 115,000 for Cumrailroad bill. Brookhart polled 97,000 votes to 115,000 for Cummins. This was a very respectable showing and made Brookhart the obvious leader of any radical movement which might follow. Normally there would not have been another senatorial election in Iowa until 1924, but Senator William S. Kenyon resigned in 1922, thus bringing another election two years earlier. Brookhart immediately announced his candidacy. The Iowa Old Guard was frantic and bungled the situation. Instead of giving the prestige of temporary appointment to an outstanding leader, Governor Kendall, who was friendly to Brookhart, appointed Charles Pressen Penublican State chairman and old-time regular. Charles Rawson, Republican State chairman and old-time regular, with the understanding that he would not be a candidate at the primary. The Old Guard tried in every way to defeat Brook-primary. The Old Guard tried in every way to defeat BrookHART—that is, every way except the one way that would have been effective. They did not present a real leader with a real policy and an honest appeal to the people. They tried rather to keep the people from having anything to do with it.

The direct primary has always been anathema to the Old Guard, and the scheme was to prevent any choice at the primary, thereby throwing the nomination into a stacked State convention. Iowa has a 35 per cent law. Three harmless candidates came out to divide the vote and prevent a nomination. It was soon evident that they were not making headway, and so Clifford Thorne, a very able man, also from Brookhart's home town of Washington, was brought out as a fourth candidate, and finally a gallant soldier as a fifth candidate. Against these odds BrookHART got nearly 42 per cent of the vote and was nominated. He HART got nearly 42 per cent of the vote and was nominated. He frankly accepted the challenge of the Old Guard and made his campaign on a Brookhart-against-the-field basis.

Now there are all kinds of Republicans in Iowa, and a candidate is usually safe as long as he can be classified as one of them. As the chosen candidate of the Republican Party, BROOKHART was anxious to be in good standing. But when the State convention met on August 2 it openly snubbed the colonel. The convention commended the work of Senator Cummins and of Governor Kendall, but it didn't even permit BROOKHART to make a speech nor did it seek his advice in drafting the State platform. It repudiated BROOKHART's whole platform but did not go so far as to repudiate him as the Republican candidate. BROOKHART took his snubbing philosophically and, without help from the organization and with little support from the press, waged his own campaign and was elected by a majority of 160,000 votes. And he spent less than $500 doing it.

The Baltimore Sun said of this election: "The fight upon is usually safe as long as he can be classified as one of them. As

The Baltimore Sun said of this election: "The fight upon BROOKHART was the more violent because his platform was in conflict with almost every important policy of the administration. conflict with almost every important policy of the administration. For example, he stood squarely against the sales tax but stood out from first to last for the soldiers' bonus. He opposed the repeal of the excess-profits tax. He demanded the repeal or a radical modification of the Esch-Cummins Act, and he swallowed almost whole the platform of labor and farmer organizations. He denounced Newberryism in every county in the State."

Quotation from Louis H. Cook:

Quotation from Louis H. Cook:

"Insurgents are nothing new in Washington. They come and go. Their best ideas are stolen and become orthodox. Most of them wake up some morning to find themselves conservatives, and the folks back home either heave a sigh of relief, or proceed to elect other radicals, depending somewhat upon existing economic conditions.

"So when SMITH W. BROOKHART, United States Senator, arrived from Iowa back in 1922, the elder statesmen received him with a quizzical air and started out to teach him the rules and the unwritten laws of what was once termed the greatest deliberative body in the history of mankind.

"Both in Washington and in Iowa it was assumed that Senator BROOKHART, although elected as a crusader, would settle down in his seat, damn Wall Street and the railroads just often enough to keep him solid with the home folks out on the prairies, and to keep him solid with the home locks out on the prairies, and make his peace with the regulars of his party.

"There seemed no particular reason why he should not. He had safely arrived at a dignity to which many aspire, but few are chosen. The United States Senate is one of the most select and exclusive of clubs, membership is so desirable. * * "Even the Republican organizations at home were willing to meet him half way. It never pays to quarrel with the man who controls the patronage.

But! Brookhart did not follow the easy path. He takes himself seriously, he has no fear, and he considered himself bound to work for the fulfillment of his campaign promises. His first major accomplishment was to direct the successful filibuster against the notorious ship subsidy bill fostered by President Harding. This action demonstrated ability but did not make him popular with the regular Republican organization. His next assignment was chairman of the select committee of the Senate to investigate the administration of the United States Attorney General, Harry Daugherty. The task was one which the Senator was anxious to do.

The work was accomplished in the face of presidential opposition and opposition from the regular Republican organization, which sought to pack the committee for a whitewash. Brookhart bore the brunt of the burden with the assistance of Wheeler, of Montana, and Ashurst, of Arizona. Daugherty was forced to resign. In Mr. Daugherty's forthcoming book it is reported that Brookhart and Ashurst are given special attention, both being pointed out as traitorous Bolsheviks against whom the Attorney General was seeking to save the country.

BROOKHART easily won the nomination in the June primary in 1924, but he played a lone hand and had a hard fight in the election in November. He was sympathetic to the candidacy of Robert M. La Follette for the Presidency and very outspoken in his criticism of Calvin Coolidge. Early in the fall he wrote to Chairman Butler, of the National Republican Committee, demanding that the committee secure the resignation of General Payer. ing that the committee secure the resignation of General Dawes as Republican candidate for the Vice Presidency. He was perfectly frank in his attitude toward the Republican platform and Candidate Coolidge. On October 3, 1924, he opened his campaign with this attack:

I belong to the farm bloc; the President belongs to the Wall

I was snubbed by the Coolidge-dominated Republican machine in the State because "I was against Newberryism. The President was for it.

"I was against the ship subsidy. The President supported it.
"I was in favor of repealing the Esch-Cummins railroad law,

"I was in favor of repealing the Esch-Cummins railroad law, and the President opposed its repeal.

"I was in favor of investigating corruption in the departments. The President opposed the investigation.

"The President favored the Mellon tax bill. I helped amend the bill to revise reduction in favor of the common people.

"I favored the soldiers' bonus bill. The President vetoed it, and I voted to pass it over the veto. It succeeded.

"I favored the postal employees' bill. It was vetoed and I

"I favored to pass it over the veto. It succeeded.
"I favored the postal employees' bill. It was vetoed, and I will vote to pass it over the veto.
"I oppose giving Muscle Shoals to Henry Ford. The President favored selling it without much regard to price."

On the same day as this speech was made, the Republican central committee of Iowa issued a statement to the Republican voters of the State, characterizing the attack on the Republican nominees by Senator BROOKHART "as a repudiation and bolt from the Republican Party."

the Republican Party."

The Iowa Homestead, one of the few newspaper supporters of the Senator in the State, said: "Brookhart has placed his allegiance to the voters above his allegiance to a rotten and water-logged party leadership."

Coolidge carried the State by a large majority, but Brookhart scaled through with a bare 1,300 votes over his Democratic rival. Steck.

When Brookhart took his seat in March, 1925, on the governor's certificate that he had been reelected under the Iowa laws, he was disciplined by the Republican organization along with Senators Ladd, Frazier, and La Follette for their opposition to Coolidge and Dawes during the campaign. This discipline was in the form of demotion from seniority standing on committees. In form of demotion from seniority standing on committees. In the meantime, a contest had been instituted by the Democratio nominee. After a long and bitter contest, the Senate, on April 12, 1926, adopted by a vote of 41 to 45 the report of its Committee on Elections and Privileges, which, after recounting the Iowa ballots and disregarding the Iowa election laws, reviewed the case and declared Daniel F. Steck elected. To the Republican organization Steck was given the toga on the ground that he was a better Republican than BROOKHART. The contest was bitter in the Senate. Senator James Watson, Republican floor leader, insisted that party regularity was necessary and that Senators who did not fully support the major platform and the party candidates during national campaigns were not Republicans and not to be considered as such in making committee assignments. Senator Watson, Republican floor leader, and Senator Ernst, Senator Warson, Republican floor leader, and Senator Ernst, chairman of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, frankly chairman of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, Irankly admitted that the regulars, both Republican and Democratic, saw a good chance to make BROOKHART a horrible example of discipline and used it. The Republican organization in Iowa opposed BROOKHART'S election in 1924 and aided and abetted Mr. Steck in his contest. It chortled with satisfaction when the Senate finally ousted BROOKHART and seated the Democratic contestant.

The ousting of Brookhart, however, cost the venerable Cummins his seat. The Brookhart-Steck contest was finally decided on April 12, only about seven weeks before the Iowa June primary of 1926. BROOKHART immediately launched his campaign for the senatorial BROOKHART immediately launched his campaign for the senatorial nomination on the Republican ticket in opposition to Senator Cummins, showing no more respect for the veteran Cummins than Cummins had 20 years before shown the veteran Allison. The result vindicated BROOKHART. He was nominated by 71,000 votes over Cummins and elected by a huge majority in the November election. On June 8, 1926, "The newspaper Iowa depends upon" ran the following headline: "The Republicans of Iowa have nominated Col. SMITH W. BROOKHART for United States Senator. They have defeated Senator Albert B. Cummins." Thus, within the last 10 years Brookhart has gone through I three bitter primary campaigns and three general elections, winning every time. Three times elected to the United States Senate without either the support of his own party leaders or substantial financial backing. The Republican leaders in Iowa have used every possible political weapon against Brookhart and are undepublied by now assembling their mentions of workers and the discontinuous contracts and the contract and doubtedly now assembling their munitions of war for another drive against him in the present year. The question asks itself, How BROOKHART is essentially the product of the economic and political conditions of the agricultural Middle West, as they have existed during the past 40 years. His background is that of revolt, not so much against political bosses and patronage as against industrial oligarchy, against railroads, against powerful banking interests as instruments of attack upon agrarian prosperity and upon democracy. Agricultural distress and fear of plutocracy are the bases of his attitude.

In 1922 we had the low price of farm products and the high price of everything else: High interest, deflated credits, high freights, high taxes, and opposition to the Esch-Cummins law, to the Federal Reserve Board, to ship subsidy, and to Wall Street influences generally.

In 1924 BROOKHART'S platform was much the same as his 1922

Louis H. Cook says: "BROOKHART never had but one political speech. He wrote it back in 1920, revised it in 1922, and has stuck to it ever since." Certainly he has continued to charge the Federal Reserve Board with deflating the farmers; to charge that railroad rates should be based upon the value of the stocks and bonds of the systems; to maintain that business should be limited to earnings of not to exceed 6 per cent; and to urge that agriculture and commerce should be conducted as cooperative ventures on a profit-sharing basis. The nonpartisan league of Wall Street continues to be his obsession.

Wall Street continues to be his obsession.

Colonel Brookhart gets support in Iowa because the people believe that he is sincere and because he voices a lot of protests which touch a sympathetic spot in the hearts of common people. He is a leader of the people, voicing the views of the masses of citizens as against the views of men who represent the oligarchies of business and partisan politics. He is honest and fearless and the mouthpiece of inarticulate, unorganized people with grievances. Some years ago during the campaign a disgruntled regular opposing Brookhart before a farm audience made this guery. ances. Some years ago during the campaign a disgrunted regular opposing Brookhart before a farm audience made this query: "Why do you support Brookhart? You don't expect him to help you any, do you?" Some one from the audience spoke up in answer, "Well, maybe not. But he hollers for us, and that's more than anybody else does." It is something "to holler" for people than anybody else does. It is something to holler for people who are in distress, and it is service to do all that one can do to help even though that be not enough to save them.

It is charged that BROOKHART never has been representative of It is charged that BROOKHART never has been representative of the political thought of Iowa. It may be true, but how is the political thought of a people to be determined? He certainly rep-resents the political thought of many individual Iowans even though it may not be that of the self-constituted guardians and directors of the Republican Party organization in the State. The directors of the Republican Party organization in the State. The farmers do vote for him.

Why does the intelligentia of Iowa try to appear so superior to Brookhar? This question puzzles me and I have not found a satisfactory answer. Why does Brookhar have no support from the Iowa press? Why does The Register conduct a constant sniping campaign against the Senator? For one reason he is not regular in the accepted sense. He thinks for himself and acts on his own convictions even though it may be at his own expense politically. Brookhart is not a good follower. He is not amenable. politically. Brookhart is not a good follower. He is not amenable to party direction. He is too forthright, too individualistic.

Brookhart has powerful enemies. He is painted as a radical, he is caricatured as crude by the big out-of-State newspapers, and

I venture to say that many good people in Iowa have gotten their whole impression of BROOKHART from this artificial source of information. His mistakes are played up; his crudities are emphasized. They are accepted at their face value and some good people blush when they have to admit that they have such a man for United States Senator.

They would not need to blush if they followed his work in Congress. He is working at his job. He gives a good account of himself in committee work and in committee hearings. He is fearless on the floor of the Senate and a study of his record will show that fundamentally he is consistently representing the best interests of the common people of the United States. To take this stand, if one's interpretation is sound, may not be good politics, but it approaches statesmanship.

Party irregularity is serious, but having a proper leaven of irregulars may cause the party to rise and prevent its sinking into BROOKHART has been called "an apostle of agrarian revolt." His first responsibility as United States Senator as he sees it is to battle relentlessly for the best interest of the American farmer. His panacea for all farm ills is cooperation, which he preaches in season and out of season. His objective is to secure for agriculture a basic equality with other industries, and this can only be done by governmental control of the exportable surplus. His stand on banking, on the railroad question, on the tariff, on power control, and on taxation is in each instance determined by the relation of each of these or the effect of each upon agriculture. To use his own words, he says:

"I think most of our economic organizations have been formed with little regard to the ultimate welfare of agriculture. I think agriculture has been an incident all the time. I think the farmers have been numbered as so many units as a basis for profit, and somebody else has arranged the rate of profit. * * * Agriculture from the economic standpoint has never had a square deal in ture from the economic standpoint has never had a square deal in the United States. Its economic condition always has been at the mercy of somebody else. It has always been the victim of other economic organizations. The farmers are entitled to a system of laws that will raise agriculture to the same artificial level of all other great industries—the only alternative would be to repeal the laws that have given these discriminations."

It is fashionable among Brookhart's political enemies to attack his economic platform as unsound. If we go back to fundamentals we find that Brookhart bases his program for farm relief on what he calls cooperative economics in contrast to competitive eco-calls cooperative economics in contrast to competitive ecohe calls cooperative economics in contrast to competitive economics. He maintains that competitive economics based on the so-called law of supply and demand, which is a fiction rather than a law, has broken down. He holds that under present-day conditions of combinations, of consolidations, of monopolies, and of artificial conditions interposed by law wherein it is estimated that from 80 to 95 per cent of the people who go into competitive business ultimately fail, failure of the system is obvious. That any system which results in such percentages of failures is without defense and must be rated as a failure per se.

In his proposed system of cooperative economics in which he envisions cooperation in production and in processing in distribuenvisions cooperation in production and in processing, in distribu-tion, in marketing, and in transportation, in credit, and in education, Brookhart means cooperation as a complete economic system that will do everything in human civilization that competition is now doing. He simply means a system organized and operated primarily for service rather than for profit. He means business organized on the principles of the Sermon on the Mount.

BROOKHART works to secure the acceptance of his cooperative economics, but he is a realist also and does not stand and wait for the better day to arrive. Agricultural relief is needed now. He favored the original McNary-Haugen bill but sought to substitute his own plan of export control patterned after the war-time grain control act administered by Mr. Hoover and Julius Barnes for the succeeding farm bills. He supported the export debenture feature of the Federal Farm Board act and voted for the act without the debenture feature only because it was the best that could be had at the time. He opposed the Smoot-Hawley tariff bill and voted

The annual accretion of wealth in this country for the past century has been about 4 per cent. Out of this margin must come all dividends and profits. BROOKHART maintains that agriculture deserves its share, and since the cards have been stacked against the farmer he advocates the extension of the functions of the Federal Farm Board to enable it to consider our whole agricultural effort as one big farm with a surplus of some two billions' worth of products which must be handled as a single problem. He would relate earnings to the actual rate of wealth increase and empower the Farm Board to purchase the agricultural surplus at a rate the Farm Board to purchase the agricultural surplus at a rate which would pay the actual cost of production plus 4 per cent.

The board being the sole agency for handling the surplus would be in a position to dispose of it without serious loss. Since the population is increasing and the agricultural surplus is decreasing, he maintains that the surplus problem will disappear within a reasonable time. This, he holds, would do for agriculture what steel and other industries have been able to do through organization, combination, and tariff protection. He compares the deflation of agriculture from 1919 to 1923, which amount is estimated. tion, combination, and tariff protection. He compares the defla-tion of agriculture from 1919 to 1923, which amount is estimated at $32,000,000,000, with the permission extended to the railroad companies under the Esch-Cummins Act to inflate to the amount of seven billions after having received a direct subsidy from the Government of $529,000,000 during the first six months of operation after being turned back to private control.

I quote a paragraph from a speech made by the Senator in

"If we are going to handle this proposition, I want to handle it as any business man would handle it if it were his single proposition.

The Halfard States is the big farm of this Congress. This as any business man would handle it if it were his single proposition. The United States is the big farm of this Congress. This big $2,000,000,000-a-year surplus is the big surplus the Congress should handle, and since it has given this advantage to the railroads by law, by enactment of Congress; since it has given an advantage to the banking industry of the United States by creating a governmental reserve bank, controlled and operated by the Government, a board appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate; since it protects the patented industries of the United States by law; since it fixes the value of every public utility by law and fixes a return of at least 7 per cent, and that when the American people are producing only 4 per cent; I say, since the Government has done these things for all these industries, it owes it to agriculture to do as much and go into the tries, it owes it to agriculture to do as much and go into the Treasury of the United States for that whole three thousand BROOKHART relates his stand on almost everything with its effect on agriculture or else compares the attitude of the Government and administration with its attitude to comparable prob-lems in agriculture. In reply to President Hoover's telegram requesting support for his moratorium last summer, Senator BROOKHART gave a grudging support and read the President a lecture on the urgent necessity for a special session of Congress for the purpose of properly considering the moratorium proposal and the equally important necessity of looking after our own suffering agriculture, our great army of unemployed, and our pathetic horde of starving people at home. He urged upon the President's attention the truth of the old proverb that charity begins at home. Senator Brookhart has opposed the President's Reconstruction Finance Corporation proposal until it was amended in conference to provide $200,000,000 for closed banks. He sees in this gigantic project another raid upon the Treasury of the United this gigantic project another raid upon the Treasury of the United States engineered by the same great banking corporations at whose door must be laid the responsibility for the present crists. He maintains that the only benefits will accrue to the railroads and the great banking houses, to wealthy bondholders, and to speculators. He turns the table on the President and the bankers and applies the term Bolshevik to the whole proposal, stressing the point that he is termed Bolshevik when he seeks aid for ing the point that he is termed Bolshevik when he seeks aid for agriculture and for citizens of the country who are in desperate need. He emphasizes the fact that the desirability of Government in business depends upon whose ox is being gored. He calls upon the President and Wall Street to aid now in the search for "rugged individualism." He maintains that the Government aids banking, transportation, shipping, not as service agencies, but as profit takers at the expense of the whole people.

Time will not permit a review of Brookhart's stand on other measures, but his position on outstanding problems may be noted in a sentence:

National economics: Relate earnings to the actual annual accretion of wealth.

Taxation: Graduated upon ability to pay as measured by income, excess-profits tax, and estates tax. Opposes sales tax.

Banking: Revision of Federal reserve law. Restrict use of funds for speculation. Federal authorization of cooperative banking. Inflation to normal price level.

Railroads, inland waterways, shipping, busses, antisubsidy: Effective regulation in all phases of Government ownership and operation. Revision of Esch-Cummins law. operation.

Power, communications, radio: Safeguard public interest. Development for use or service, not for profit. Government operation of Muscle Shoals.

National defense: Adequate defensive arms only. Against extravagance.

Veterans' relief and bonus: Adequate but not extravagant, Universal conscription: Only with conscription of wealth.

Chain stores: Favors the Capper-Kelly bill of Seventy-first Con-

Tariff: Revision downward. Limit earnings of protected industries to 5 per cent.

Lame-duck sessions of Congress: Opposed. Favors constitutional amendment.

Corruption: Aggressive opposition and relentless exposure.

Injunctions: Restrict use of injunction in labor controversies. Agriculture: Place agriculture on a basis of equality with other industries. Improve conditions by removing discriminations.

(a) Provide surplus control.
(b) Adequate credit. Overhaul Federal farm-loan system. Authorize establishment o cooperative banking.

(c) Export debenture to counterbalance the tariff then the equalization fee.

(d) Development of cooperation-

One man, one vote—capital does not vote.
 Limited earnings on capital.

3. Trade dividend.

Prohibition: Favors enforcement. Opposes revision. Foreign affairs: Cautious to point of suspicion. Opposed to entangling alliances. Objects to having Government pull chest-nuts out of the fire for international bankers. League of Na-tions, opposed to United States membership in. World Court, opposed to membership. Debt cancellation, opposed to cancellation. Favors use of American capital and energy at home. Opposed to tariff that encourages American capital to build manufacturing plants and use foreign labor behind foreign tariff walls. Favors Kellogg Peace Pact.

It did not make Brookhart an "economic illiterate" to disagree with Senator Cummins on the railroad question in 1920. Cummins was wrong. Brookhart was not "an economic illiterate" and his disagreement made him a United States Senator. Moreover, Brookhart has increased in stature during the past 12 years. over, Brookhart has increased in stature during the past 12 years. His energy, his physical strength, his persistence against great odds, his curiosity, his honesty, his courage, his self-confidence, his innate democracy, his desire to serve the best interests of his people have enabled him to achieve a position of real influence in the United States Senate. His colleagues in the Senate respect Brookhart as an adversary even when convictions on issues can not be reconciled. Brookhart's social philosophy is fundamentally sound. It may be that he does not have the constructive genius to secure its acceptance and to properly implement it, but his claim that the Government should play no favorites stands and nobody can succeed with a program without a majority. A radical in the United States Senate during the second decade of the nineteenth century was a voice crying in the wilderness. It remains to be seen what such a radical may accomplish during the third decade. third decade.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I move that the Senate take a recess until to-morrow at 12 o'clock.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock p. m.) the Senate took a recess until to-morrow, Thursday, March 17, 1932, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 16, 1932

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Heavenly Father, as we are confronted with hard duties and at times with oppressive cares, we ask for grace sufficient to live each day right, neither being overpowered by temptation nor overwhelmed by burdens. Blessed Lord, we pray for that strength which triumphs over weakness, hope over fear, faith over doubt, and good cheer over despair. Father, make our lives large and full, so that they shall be altogether worth while. O take them and impart unto them such a spirit and such a satisfaction so that they shall be rich and helpful. By the manifestation of the truth, walking in the might of honor and uprightness, may we commend ourselves to the favor and esteem of all men. We thank Thee for Him who commands our supreme love. He is not only the Light of one age and one land but the Light of the world and the greatest personal revelation of a merciful God. All glory be unto His holy name, Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Mr. Craven, its principal clerk, announced that the Senate insists upon its amendments to the bill (H. R. 7912) entitled "An act making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1933, and for other purposes," disagreed to by the House; agrees to the conference asked by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. McNary, Mr. Jones, Mr. Keyes, Mr. HARRIS, and Mr. KENDRICK to be conferees on the part of the Senate.

THE RECK-LINTHICHM RESOLUTION

Mr. HESS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. HESS. Mr. Speaker, the Beck-Linthicum resolution, as embodied in House Joint Resolutions 208 and 209, proposes a substitute for the present eighteenth amendment. It is designed to recognize and restore our traditional dual form of government, giving to the State control of local matters and to the Federal Government jurisdiction over national affairs. It is this duality which has been the distinguished feature of our Federal Constitution and from its inception has received the encomium of the best thought in the world.

The eighteenth amendment was a radical departure from this duality, in its failure to accept prohibition as a local matter.

The mere fact that what may fit Kansas, the only State out of 28 States which the recent Literary Digest poll shows to favor existing conditions, while New York, very much to the contrary decidedly opposes, is proof of the local nature of prohibition and likewise proof that you can not have one unbending, rigid prohibition law for both States. It is idle and futile to expect it to operate well. In the final analysis laws must fit the community for which they are intended; this in order that they may merit and command respect and observance.

When you multiply the problem of observance to include 48 States, composed of varied stock and ancestry, having varied ingrained habits and views on a proposition which only in the last 12 years has become acutely personal and criminal, it is easy to understand why national prohibition has failed.

The constant Federal appeal to the States for their help, as necessary, is significant. If State help is so sorely needed, that leads to the inevitable conclusion that the subject matter might as well be left entirely to the State's decision within its own jurisdiction.

Unfortunately, judicial construction has made nugatory section 2 of the eighteenth amendment, giving the States concurrent power with Congress.

I am satisfied that investigation would disclose that many Members of Congress who voted for submission of the amendment did so because of section 2, with full expectation that due regard would be given to it. Thus a doubt is raised whether the amendment without section 2 would have received votes sufficient for submission.

This same doubt, but much more seriously, arises as to the ratification by the State legislatures. Who can tell to what degree section 2 influenced the concurrence of 46 States? It is not reasonable to believe that they were unaffected by it; that they wished to surrender their sovereignty in abject submission to the rigid will of Congress, overriding their own representatives in Congress. It is much more reasonable to believe, not having our hindsight now on the judicial construction given, that many legislators, perhaps in number sufficient to prevent ratification, relied on section 2 as affording some measure of development to the home-rule desire of the people of each State, consonant with local conditions.

Be such doubts dismissed as unimpressive, as dealing with accomplished facts, have you not to-day similar reaction, in that State after State which ratified the eighteenth amendment, now is repealing its prohibition laws? Such action means more than to make clear their legal and justified contention that national prohibition, being a supreme, all-pervading Federal law, must be enforced by Federal authority, with little help, particularly financial help, from the States. Can we not readily conclude, therefore, that the present desire, whatever may have been their past decision, is now firmly set on provisions, such as will be found in the Beck-Linthicum resolution?

This resolution is the joint product of many minds. It is presented by Members of the House, regardless of party lines. It follows recommendations made, I believe, by a majority of the members composing the Wickersham commission. Above everything else it restores to the States a power rightfully theirs. It applies and amplifies what section 2 was intended to cover.

While direct repeal of the eighteenth amendment would be preferable perhaps as simpler procedure, since that when accomplished would automatically restore jurisdiction to the States, this resolution carries appropriate safeguards to permit dry States to be as dry as they please.

The new amendment has other decided merits. Not the least is that it will stop recurrent congressional elections on the issue. It will relieve Federal courts of their crowded dockets and restore them to their old dignity. It will practically abolish the national prohibition department, saving considerable money. It will divert to the Government revenue now adhering to the pockets of criminal racketeers. It will put an end to the farce of "bargain-day" penalties, and of making room for new inmates in overcrowded prisons.

Vote for the resolution and place the liquor problem with the States. There, if I may venture to say, the ideal solution would be through local option, confined to the smallest political untis of township and municipality. This would produce local laws responsive to the will of the local community, and that community will should not be overridden by the votes of others.

ANTI-INJUNCTION BILL

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the conference report on House bill 5315, the anti-injunction bill, be recommitted to the committee of conference.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request from the gentleman from Texas?

Mr. DYER. Reserving the right to object, being one of the conferees, I am in hearty accord with the request of the gentleman from Texas.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

KIDNAPING BILL

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I have handed to the Clerk a bundle of petitions signed by mothers in St. Louis urging the Congress to pass the bill I introduced making it a Federal offense to kidnap a person and move that person into another jurisdiction. The petitions were prepared and the signatures secured by the St. Louis Times, one of the leading newspapers of my city.

Mr. Speaker, the petition of the mother is a most sacred petition and her right to be heard and her voice heeded is undisputed.

My bill does not seek to supersede the responsibility of the local authorities, but all I ask is that the Federal Government assist in apprehending the violator when the victim is taken across the boundary of the State where the victim was seized. The commerce clause in the Constitution prevents the States from extending its police power to an adjoining State, and it at the same time gives the Congress the constitutional authority to enact such legislation as I suggest.

I ask that the petitions be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary where the bill is under consideration.

I might add the petitions contain thousands of names and represent many more thousand mothers as some petitions are signed by the entire congregation of churches, as well as represent all the members of numerous lodges and societies.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE

Mr. JONES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that Senate Joint Resolution 116 and House Joint Resolution 334 referred to the Banking and Currency Committee be rereferred to the Committee on Agriculture.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

Mr. McFADDEN. Reserving the right to object, this measure was properly referred to the Banking and Currency Committee, and I think it should remain there, and therefore I object.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, there is such a splendid editorial in the Washington Post this morning that I hope our friend from Massachusetts will not adhere to his regular rule and object to all editorials. I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record by publishing that splendid editorial. It is of vital interest to every red-blooded American in the United States.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the Record, including an editorial. Is there objection?

Mr. UNDERHILL. Mr. Speaker, all editorials look alike to me, and I object.

SALES TAX

Mr. LaGUARDIA. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record by inserting a letter which I this day have written to the Secretary of the Treasury on the subject of the sales tax.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. LaGUARDIA. Mr. Speaker, under leave granted to me I hereby file a letter that I have this day mailed to the Secretary of the Treasury, the Hon. Ogden L. Mills. I believe the reference, therein contained, to a speech made by the honorable Secretary on December 14, 1931, and inserted in the Congressional Record of December 15, 1931, will be of special interest to the membership, now preoccupied on the subject of sales tax.

The letter follows:

MARCH 16, 1932.

Hon. Ogden L. Mills, Secretary of the Treasury, Washington, D. C.

My Dear Mr. Secretary: I heard your radio speech last Saturday advocating the so-called manufacturers' tax in the pending revenue bill. I am somewhat confused in reconciling your present enthusiasm for the sales tax with your learned and scholarly address delivered before the Economic Club of New York on December 14, 1931. The December 14 speech was so impressive, instructive, and informative that the distinguished gentleman from Oregon, the Hon. Willis C. Hawley, who is now sponsoring the sales-tax provision of the bill, had it inserted in the Congressional Record on December 15, 1931, the very day after you delivered this address. This was inserted by unanimous consent of the House of Representatives because we all felt that it was worthy of being made a matter of public record and that we could send it to our constituents at Government expense. This speech was made about three months ago. The condition of the Treasury is no different now than it was then. The deficit is no greater now can it was then. The administration has within the last few days stated that business conditions are a little better to-day than they were three months ago. I am firmly convinced that you spoke with delibera-tion, and I know you did with conviction, on December 14, when you stated:

"The attainment of our goals necessitates additional revenue in excess of $900,000,000 in the year 1933. In the development of a program we considered many forms of taxation. We weighed, for instance, the merits of the general sales or turnover tax, but rejected it, not only because it bears no relation to ability to pay and is regressive in character, but because of the enormous administrative difficulties and the lamost inevitable pyramiding of the tax in the course of successive sales. "We studied the limited manufacturers' or producers' sales tax, which is being administered with a fair degree of success in which is being administered with a fair degree of success in Canada. In Canada a tax is imposed at the rate of 4 per cent on the manufacturers' sales price, or the import value of all goods not exempt, which are produced or manufactured in Canada or imported into Canada. Retailers are exempt. It is distinctly not a turnover tax. Practically all raw materials of farms, mines, fisheries, etc., are exempt, as are most small manufacturers or producers, such as customs tailors, shoemakers, plumbers, opticians, et al. The extent of the exemptions is very great. They fill 10 closely printed pages and cover thousands of specific items and classes of items. * * * The tax is unquestionably passed on and adds, therefore, to the cost of living.

on and adds, therefore, to the cost of living.

"With some 200,000 manufacturing establishments in the United States, our much more extensive and complicated industrial mechanism, our tendency to set out administrative procedure with almost meticulous accuracy in our statutes, and our reluctance to grant administrative discretion or the authority to administrative officers to make final decisions, it is more than doubtful whether the Canadian sales tax would meet with the success in our country that it has across the border. Certain it is that many months would elapse before the necessary administrative machinery could be firmly established in this country. And we are in need of additional revenue now.

"In any event, we concluded that, on the whole, it is wiser for

"In any event, we concluded that, on the whole, it is wiser for us to resort to these forms of taxation with which we have had experience and are thoroughly familiar, rather than to embark on new and untried ventures. If this conception is sound, we have but to take a step backward and to relinquish temporarily the benefits of the tax reductions effected in the period of expanding revenues. It isn't necessary to retrace many steps and to return either to the revenue act of 1918 or of 1921, but what we desire can be accomplished by returning in principle to the general plan of taxation existing under the revenue act of 1924, with such changes as are appropriate in the light of existing conditions. The advantages of such a program are manifest."

I am in entire accord with you and, in keeping with the authoritative information contained in your speech, many of us are vigorously opposing the sales tax or manufacturers' tax, whichever you desire to call it, in the revenue bill.

Will you be good enough to give us your latest views on the subject?

With kind personal regards, I am,

With kind personal regards, I am, Sincerely yours,

F. H. LAGITARDIA

THE REVENUE BILL

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 10236, the revenue bill, and pending that, I would like to see if I can get an unanimous-consent agreement as to closing the general debate on this bill. This morning I brought the matter up before the Ways and Means Committee and asked their advice as to how and when I should suggest closing debate. We have already had five days of general debate, which is an unusually long time. In the committee this morning the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Doughton] said he had requests from a number of gentlemen who desired to speak. He said it would be agreeable to him under the circumstances if general debate was to close when the House adjourned to-morrow. The Committee on Ways and Means directed me to make that request; and, therefore, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns to-morrow general debate will be closed on the revenue bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Georgia asks unanimous consent that when the House adjourns to-morrow general debate shall be closed on the revenue bill. Is there objection?

Mr. FERNANDEZ. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. Some of us from Louisiana would like to have a few minutes' time to discuss the bill. I shall not object if I am assured that I can get at least 10 or 15 minutes to-day or to-morrow.

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Speaker, the only reply that I can make to the gentleman is that I yielded half the time allotted to me to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Doughton], opposed to the bill, to be allotted by him. The gentleman from North Carolina has used more than I have of the time allotted to me. As I understand it, the gentleman is opposed to the bill. Therefore, of course, he should get his time from the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. FERNANDEZ. Unless I am assured of some time, I shall be constrained to object.

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Speaker, I move that when the House adjourns to-morrow night general debate upon the bill be closed.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman withhold that motion for a moment?

Mr. CRISP. Yes.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, being in charge of the time on the majority side of the House, for those who are opposed to the bill, I have had many more requests for time than I anticipated. I have done all that I could to give those who oppose the bill on this side an opportunity to be heard and to agree to use as little time as possible. I did not know that debate would be concluded as early as it is desired; but I must say that the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Crisp], in charge of the bill, has been very generous in the matter of debate. I have requests on this side from those who oppose the bill for something like seven or eight hours, not including any time to be used by myself. I would rather take no time than have them denied time.

I am going to support the chairman in this matter because I agreed to this this morning in the Committee on Ways and Means. I hope no one who is opposed to the bill on this side will object, and I ask those on this side who have asked for time in opposition to the bill, to be reasonable, and agree to cut the time they have requested in half. so that time may be allotted to others.

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Speaker, I wish to accommodate gentlemen, I want everybody to be heard and am willing to ask that the House take a recess from 6 o'clock to-morrow evening to 8 o'clock, and that general debate be had from 8 o'clock until 10.30 o'clock to-morrow night.

Mr. HARE. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object. I happen to be one of those who asked for time in opposition to the bill. I asked for 20 minutes. In view of the suggestion of the gentleman from North Carolina, I should be very glad to renew my request and make it for 10 minutes.

Mr. LINTHICUM. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman from Georgia yield?

Mr. CRISP. Yes.

Mr. LINTHICUM. I want about 10 minutes' time on the oil schedule. I do not know whether I am going to vote for the bill or not. It is getting better all of the time. I may eventually vote for it, but I would like to have 10 minutes from one of these gentlemen. I do not want to pledge myself one way or the other.

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Speaker, I shall take the chance on the gentleman voting for the bill, and yield him 10 minutes' time. Mr. PARKS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman from Georgia yield to me?

Mr. CRISP. Yes.

Mr. PARKS. With a bill of this importance, and with so many other matters that do not amount to very much taking up considerable time, why should not there be an additional day of general debate?

Mr. CRISP. My only answer to the gentleman is that the request would mean seven days of general debate. There never has been that much general debate on any tax measure since I have been here. Furthermore, at the conclusion of general debate, debate does not stop. The bill will be read by sections under the 5-minute rule, and Members of the House will be given an opportunity to discuss the bill under the 5-minute rule, and I shall have no disposition to cut them off from doing that.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. CRISP. Yes.

Mr. DOUGHTON. I wish to say to my friends on this side that it was the desire of the majority of the members of the committee to close debate to-day, and they doubtless have the votes to do it. I do not want to be contentious about the matter. I hope that no one on this side of the House who is opposed to the bill will object to the request of the gentleman from Georgia, because I think he has been fair with us.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Speaker, may I ask the gentleman a question?

Mr. CRISP. Yes.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Has the committee any other amendment that it has agreed to adopt which it is ready to announce to the House?

Mr. CRISP. No. The committee has not. It is my purpose to call the Committee on Ways and Means in session each morning while this bill is being considered, so that the committee may consider any amendment it desires to consider with a view as to whether or not it should be offered as a committee amendment as the bill progresses. This morning the committee was occupied in another way and did not take up the question of whether or not it would recommend any amendment making further exemptions to the bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Georgia asks unanimous consent that general debate on the tax bill end when the House adjourns to-morrow. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Speaker, to accommodate gentlemen I ask unanimous consent that when the Committee of the Whole rises to-morrow afternoon at its usual time the House shall take a recess until 8 o'clock, to remain in session until 10.30 p. m., the night session to be confined exclusively to debate on the tax bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Georgia asks unanimous consent that when the Committee of the Whole rises to-morrow afternoon at its usual time the House shall stand in recess until 8 o'clock p. m.; that during the evening session general debate in the Committee of the Whole shall be confined to the revenue bill and continue until 10.30 o'clock p. m. Is there objection?

Mr. UNDERHILL. Reserving the right to object, the gentleman from Georgia has very clearly stated, I think, that we have had a long period of general debate on this bill, also that there will be plenty of opportunity under the 5-minute rule to discuss the bill.

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Speaker, I think I am close enough to the gentleman from Massachusetts to express the hope that he will not object.

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. Speaker, I join with the chairman of the committee in his suggestion.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

Mr. UNDERHILL. Mr. Speaker, in deference to the gentleman from Georgia, I shall not object.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Crisp] that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the revenue bill (H. R. 10236).

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 10236, the revenue bill of 1932, with Mr. Bankhead in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield one minute to the gentleman from New York [Mr. Reed].

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman already has that permission. Let the Chair state for the benefit of those who intend to speak that the House has already granted unanimous consent that all Members may have the privilege of extending their own remarks on this bill for five legislative days after the conclusion of the consideration of the bill.

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Chairman, there was a time when the production of petroleum was limited to a few well-known localities. To-day the production of crude oil is quite evenly distributed throughout the United States, and more and more fields are entering the picture. This industry has developed to a point where it has become one of our chief industries and one that plays an important part in our economic stability as a nation. There are several States that produce petroleum in such large quantities that any curtailment in the production and sale of oil has a most depressing effect upon all classes of business.

I have in my congressional district an oil-producing section. The low price of petroleum has placed a heavy strain upon the banks, the merchants, and other business enterprises. It has created a tragic situation among those who depend for their employment upon the oil industry.

The oil producers throughout the United States have shown a most commendable spirit and an unusual degree of foresight in an honest effort to curtail production to save the market. This effort might have succeeded in a more marked degree had the industry been protected from foreign competition. The fact is, however, that ever-increasing imports of petroleum and petroleum products have nullified the efforts made by domestic producers to stabilize the market by restricting home production.

I do not wish to have the inference drawn from my remarks that there has been overproduction of oil in the United States during the last 10 years. The fact is that had it not been for the large volume of imported oil, our domestic demand would have absorbed the oil produced in this country. The difficulty all along has been that during the time-1929 to 1930-that our producers in the United States had curtailed production to the extent of 109,000,000 barrels, there were imported into this country 105,000,000 barrels of oil. During the year 1931 the domestic oil producers reduced their production 48,000,000 barrels, while the foreign producers shipped into our market 47,249,655 barrels of crude petroleum, valued at $39,220,620, and refined petroleum, 24,998,016 barrels, valued at $16,215,281. Other petroleum products were imported in comparatively large quantities. Just so long as foreign producers can destroy every effort made by domestic producers to rehabilitate the oil industry in this country the responsibility for the prostrate condition of the oil industry will rest upon the inactivity of our Government. The oil producers of the United States have done their best to meet the crisis, only to find themselves hamstrung by foreign competition.

I am reliably informed that the American petroleum industry normally employs more than a million persons. A large percentage of these million persons are out of employment. Considering the families of those who labor, it is safe to say that 5,000,000 persons are affected by the present deplorable condition in the oil industry.

Such a reduction in a pay roll is not only a hardship to those who labor in the oil industry and their families, but it accentuates the unemployment in a multitude of other industries. While our oil industries are prostrate, unable to earn a return on their investment, burdened with local and State taxes, and thousands of their faithful employees without work, their foreign competitors, more or less free from the heavy taxation of the States, have been able to pay hundreds of millions of dollars in dividends. It is manifestly unfair to the oil producers and to labor to permit so distressing a condition to continue.

A recent report of the United States Tariff Commission shows quite conclusively that the cost of producing petroleum in the United States and delivering it to the Atlantic seaboard is $1.03 per barrel more than the cost of producing oil in Venezuela and delivering it to the same points.

It has been the policy of the United States since its inception to protect American industry.

With such a differential between the cost of production of petroleum abroad and at home the domestic industry can not hope to survive without protection. The failure to afford this protection will eventually destroy the small independent producer and place production in the hands of a few large concerns. Such a result would be unfair to the independent producers and an unwise public policy to pursue.

I believe that the proposed tax on imported oil will do much to alleviate the difficulty in which our oil producers find themselves. The facts found by the United States Tariff Commission would warrant, it seems to me, even a larger tax than 1 cent per gallon on crude petroleum, fuel oil, gas oil, and gasoline derived from crude petroleum imported into the United States.

I hope that the proposed tax will tend to restrict oil imports sufficiently to afford the oil producers of the United States some measure of much needed protection. [Ap-

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. CRAIL].

Mr. CRAIL. Mr. Chairman and my colleagues, I wish to discuss a feature of this bill which is of much importance to the people of California, as well as to the people of the midcontinent field. There has been a great deal of acrimony, hard feelings, and personality enter into the debate in regard to the excise tax on the importation of oil from foreign countries. I do not want to indulge in this acrimony or become involved in any personal controversy, but I do think it is my duty to urge upon my colleagues the adoption of that feature of the tax bill which is before the House.

Oil is one of the largest industries in the country. It was the third largest industry in the United States until two years ago. In California it was the largest industry. At the present time the oil industry is prostrated. It is paralyzed. In my State there are thousands and thousands of oil workers out of employment. In the United States there are hundreds of thousands of men and women out of employment who were engaged in the oil business. The official statistics of the State of California show that 63 per cent, almost two-thirds, of all the men and women who were engaged in the oil industry are out of employment at the present time because of the condition in which it now is.

In addition to that the owners of the oil lands who have been receiving royalties are now suffering. Nearly all of the small independent companies have thrown up the sponge in defeat or are now in the hands of receivers. Gasoline at the present time is selling in California at a cut-throat price. Gasoline has been sold generally at as low as 61/2 cents a gallon, and at the present time the largest companies are selling gasoline at 91/2 cents a gallon. They must pay a tax of 3 cents a gallon to the State of California and in most cases 4 cents per gallon to the retailer. You can figure out that that leaves about 21/2 cents for the price of gasoline to the manufacturer, which is less than the cost of manufacture.

Mr. MICHENER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CRAIL. With pleasure, to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. MICHENER. The gentleman favors a tax on oil, I

Mr. CRAIL. I would favor an emergency embargo, but that is not before the House at this time. In lieu of an embargo I would favor a tariff duty of more than $1 per barrel on oil.

Mr. MICHENER. But the gentleman does favor a sales tax on oil?

Mr. CRAIL. I am arguing for a protective tariff duty on petroleum and its products which are now admitted to this country duty free. I claim this importation of oil duty free has been the chief cause of the deplorable condition of the oil business.

Mr. MICHENER. But we are not dealing with a protective tariff bill. We are dealing with a tax bill. If a tax goes on oil it must be in the shape of a sales tax on oil. The gentleman is in favor of that, is he?

Mr. CRAIL. My friend from Michigan is evidently misinformed about that. This tax bill we are now considering provides that on all oil which is brought into this country there must be paid a tariff duty of 1 cent per gallon. Some prefer to call it an excise tax of 1 cent per gallon or 42 cents per barrel.

SEVERAL MEMBERS. That is correct. Mr. MICHENER. Yes; that is correct.

Mr. CRAIL. That has nothing to do with the sales tax, and I am not discussing and do not care to discuss the sales tax at this time.

Mr. MICHENER. But the gentleman is opposed to the sales tax?

Mr. CRAIL. I have not said that.

Mr. MICHENER. Well, I am asking the gentleman if he is.

Mr. CRAIL. I am against a sales tax on the necessities of life; food and clothing and fuel and whatever is necessary to sustain life in health and even in comfort. However, I am not making a special argument against a sales tax on gasoline. Possibly there is just as good argument for a sales tax on gasoline as there is on any other necessity of life. I am opposed to a sales tax on life's necessities. But I am arguing for something which is in the bill.

Mr. MICHENER. But how does the gentleman figure we are going to get a tax to raise revenue which is necessary if every Member of the House takes the same position that the gentleman takes?

Mr. CRAIL. I can not see any inconsistency in arguing for a good provision of the bill as I am doing. It might be inconsistent if I should argue in favor of the bill generally but oppose some particular part of it which adversely affects my district.

Some Members have done this, and my friend may have them in mind. However, what I am advocating is a part of the bill.

Mr. MICHENER. The gentleman is advocating the part that affects his district primarily, and possibly the gentleman will oppose everything else. Is that correct?

Mr. CRAIL. I have not said that. I am still hoping that the bill will be so amended that I can give it my full approval and support. As the bill is now framed I can not give it my approval and support. I do not think the time has come yet that we must tax the poor people of the country on the necessities of life in order to maintain and operate this Government. There are many things we can do to balance the Budget without resorting to a tax on what a poor man must have to sustain life, to keep from going naked and to keep from freezing to death. So far as I know, such a policy never has been adopted by this country, and certainly I have a different idea of the duties of government than a tax on life's necessities. Anyway, I am not ready to commit myself at this time on this bill. The argument will last several days. Many amendments will be offered. We do not know what shape the bill will be in when the vote is taken on its passage. My friend will concede me the privilege to do what I think is right when the vote is taken. I would not promise my vote for what otherwise might be a bad bill in order to get something into it which I desired.

Returning to the feature of the bill for which I am arguing, a protective-tariff duty on oil is absolutely necessary if the independent oil operators are to be saved from being swallowed up by the large companies.

On almost every commodity the price to the producer is fixed—not by the cost of production but by the price which can be obtained for the surplus in foreign lands. This is true of almost every commodity of which there is more produced in this country than can be consumed in this country. Apply that rule to wheat, or cotton, or corn, or manufactured goods, or whatever you will and you will find that it is generally applicable.

The oil producers of America have controlled their production during the last few years so that there has been no overproduction of oil in this country. The evidence before the committee clearly showed that the consumption of petroleum in America was greater than the production. Under these conditions the American producer should be able to get a fair price for his oil—at least a price that would pay the cost of production. On the contrary, he has been forced to accept a price way below the cost of production, and in some States only a fraction of the cost of production.

This has been accomplished by the major oil companies shipping into this country free of duty millions of barrels of oil which was produced in South America at a very low cost. By this means the major companies have been able to maintain a surplus in this country and have been able to force the independent American producer to accept for his oil whatever price the major companies were willing to pay him for it. By means of this importation of cheap foreign oil, duty free, the major companies have been able to maintain an absolute dominance over the oil industry, have held the independent producers at their mercy, have brought about a condition which has forced the independent companies in hundreds of instances to sell out to the major companies at low prices or go out of business. This importation of cheap oil from foreign countries, duty free, is what has demoralized the oil industry and thrown hundreds of thousands of men and women out of employment. Something must be done about it. Congress can give the remedy. The placing of this 42-cent per barrel excise tax on oil imported to this country will be very helpful. The duty should be more than a dollar per barrel. Certainly we can not well refuse to vote the 42-cent excise tax carried in this

Mr. NELSON of Maine. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. CRAIL. Gladly, to my friend from Maine.

Mr. NELSON of Maine. On Monday I presented to the House some rather carefully prepared facts and figures relative to the oil industry, which, if true, would indicate that this tax would not accrue to the benefit of the independent producers but would accrue to the benefit of the major oil companies, which have absolute domination over this industry. I have been waiting for some Member of the House from the oil States to refute some of those facts and figures, but up to date the only reply has consisted of some rather amusing references to a proposed tariff on lobsters. The question which I would like to ask the gentleman is whether he has examined the statements which I made and found any of the facts which I presented or the statements which I made to be incorrect; and if so, which ones?

Mr. CRAIL. In answer to the gentleman's question, I will say that I have not examined the figures to which he refers, but I have on several occasions discussed this matter with the gentleman from Maine and I heard him testify before the Committee on Ways and Means, and well know his views on the question. I can not agree with his theory as to the oil business at all. He represents a territory which does not produce petroleum. His point of view is, frankly, that of the consumer only.

I do not agree with the gentleman's statement that this tariff duty on oil would not be for the benefit of the independent producers but would be for the benefit of the major oil companies. The companies which are importing this oil. duty free, millions of barrels a year, and making a big profit on it, are the four largest oil companies operating in the United States of America. They can produce that oil in Venezuela and other South American countries, ship it to the United States, sell it if they wanted to so as to make a good profit on it at a selling price of 30 cents a barrel, 42 gallons to the barrel. The American independent producers can not meet that competition because it costs the American independent oil producers $1 a barrel to produce the oil without any profit at all. The Tariff Commission investigated this situation at the request of Congress and made a report upon it to Congress. That report showed that the differential between the cost of production in South America and in the United States was $1 a barrel. If this is so, and no report could be more authentic, the United States Congress ought to put a tariff duty of more than $1 per barrel upon all oil which comes into this country. Does that answer the gentleman's question?

Mr. NELSON of Maine. Well, the gentleman does not mean that, does he—that the Tariff Commission, in the first place, found any such differential, and, in the second place, recommended a tariff of $1 per barrel?

Mr. CRAIL. If my friend will procure a copy of House Document 195 of the last Congress, he will find the report of the Tariff Commission to which I have referred. It is entitled "Production Costs of Crude Petroleum and of Refined Petroleum Products." If he will read the last section of the first paragraph on page 50 of this report, he will read this sentence: "Unadjusted, the domestic cost thus exceeded cost of the great Maracido oil by $1.03 per barrel." I am reliably informed that if the domestic cost were adjusted as suggested by the Tariff Commission, it would have exceeded the production cost of the South American oil by $1.19 per barrel. [Applause.]

I would like to reassure the gentleman from Maine that the cost of fuel oil to the New England manufacturers should not be any greater if this excise tax is placed upon the importation of foreign oil than it is now. There are good reasons for this assurance as I shall try to set forth further along in this discussion.

Both State and National issues of greatest importance are involved in the proposed protection of the American petroleum industry. No economic reconstruction program which has been suggested is either so feasible or so important as the restoration of what was formerly the third basic industry of this country. Every phase of our national life is being affected harmfully by the ruin experienced by this industry and every such phase would be benefited if we removed the difficulties in the way of the revival of that industry.

The American petroleum industry is the key log in the jam which is holding up prosperity. We may be able to recover from our present depression without tackling that key log, but the way will be harder and longer and less successful. Common sense suggests that we take the shortest cut to prosperity. There is no shorter cut than correcting an economic evil which is maintaining unemployment, reducing public revenue, and spreading distress broadcast.

California is one of the best illustrations of what has occurred to the American petroleum industry, of its effect upon industry in general, upon State revenues, and upon the various sources of Federal revenue, whether we consider taxation or incomes from Government-owned lands. From this State also we may study the effect of the present prostration of this industry upon the merchant marine and even upon the Panama Canal tolls. In all this, California must not be considered "a horrible example." This phase of the life of my State is only typical of similar phases in other States which may not be so fortunate as to have other interests so important as California possesses. Using this State, however, as an object lesson we may be able to form a reasonable estimate of the potential gains to be expected when Congress recognizes the justice of the proposed protection of the petroleum industry and passes this sorely needed legislation.

The industrial exploitation of petroleum resources in California began in 1861, and since 1915 the development of our oil fields has been under State supervision. In 1929 our annual production of petroleum was approximately 292,037,000 barrels, or 29 per cent of the national output. For a long period California supplied the fuel oil requirement of the Atlantic seaboard.

It continued to do so until the steady development of foreign petroleum fields brought into this country, free from all duty, such large quantities of foreign oil that California oil was displaced. This displacement was not entirely due to the lower price of foreign oil at the port of delivery. It was largely traceable to the greater profits available to the oilimporting concerns who had obtained grants of valuable oil properties in South American countries through the usual methods pursued. It was to the immense financial advantage of these concerns to control distribution on the Atlantic coast and secure these markets for their foreign product. California oil continuously lost in this very unequal contest until it practically ceased to be a factor in the fuel-oil problem of the East.

To-day, California has in storage 99,000,000 barrels of fuel oil. There is little or no market for this oil. It can be purchased at from 40 to 50 cents per barrel. At an additional cost of 43 cents it can be delivered into the ports of the industrial section. Of course it is distress oil, but that is the very point I am trying to emphasize. The whole industry is in a condition of distress. Production costs are greater than possible receipts from the sale of this product. That is why the whole industry is disorganized, labor unemployed, and the public revenues facing great deficits.

California oil is largely produced on United States lands. The Federal Treasury benefits through its receipt of royalties upon this production. This creates the unusual situation that the Federal Government is permitting foreign oil to enter this country duty free to the tremendous decrease in the Government's receipts from its own holdings of oil lands.

A still more significant item in the financial balance sheet, however, is the decrease in the receipts of the Federal Government from corporation taxes and income taxes paid by those who are concerned in the California petroleum industry. These receipts have naturally been steadily decreasing. It is impossible to pay taxes on profits that are not made or upon incomes that have dropped, in many cases below the exemption mark.

This decrease in the production of California oil has been marked by the growing unemployment of oil workers and those who catered to them. The official figures compiled by the State of California show the number of oil workers out of employment is 63 per cent of the total normally engaged in this occupation. Naturally this has eliminated a large part of the purchasing power of these people so that retail merchants, auto dealers, home builders, insurance firms, banks, and so forth, have all been seriously affected. The ever-widening circle spread by the disappearance of so large a number of people from the active consumers group has naturally touched, in its turn, the wholesaler, the railroad carrying freight, the factory producing goods, the stockholder and the mortgager, and thus touched for harm our whole financial as well as industrial structure. Other oil States have similar suffering, some of them in very much greater degree than California.

When California was shipping her oil to the eastern markets this gave employment to a considerable group in our merchant marine. The maintenance of a strong merchant marine is important to our national strength. Without the merchant marine we may be seriously crippled in the event of any hostilities. Even in peace time it is the part of wisdom for us to develop our own shipping industry. We can not afford to be at the mercy of the world for lack of bottoms. Many nations are forced to give large subsidies to maintain their marine. Increased coastwise traffic, such as would be promoted by the substitution of American for foreign fuel oil, would give a new lease of life to our merchant marine. This, too, applies to many States besides California, although California has a very special interest in the maintenance of the merchant marine.

The Panama Canal tolls will be increased if California oil are once more given an opportunity to enter American markets. This great governmental business enterprise should not be handicapped in its endeavors to become a profitable business venture. Neither should we blame those in charge if we destroy traffic upon which the canal must depend if it is to meet expenses. When it fails to pay these expenses from its income the taxpayers have to meet this deficit through the Treasury. The debt on the canal in 1926 was $543,837,453, which was its largest figure. Since that date there has been a gradual decline, and on June 30, 1931, it was $535,571,809.

Ordinarily a one-half billion dollar indebtedness is not alarming, but when several of these have piled up into the enormous deficit of the Treasury it is a businesslike procedure to look for steps to change deficits onto the other side of the ledger and to prevent their becoming greater. Canal tolls and other income from the many activities of the operation of the canal now earn slightly more than 3 per cent on the $535,571,809 debt. Since revenue to the canal depends upon freight carried, it is significant to learn what commodities make up this great tonnage and to consider the source of revenue and the factors that affect its change and which governments they benefit.

One of the largest factors of the canal tolls is mineral oils. The following is quoted from page 97 of the Petroleum Refinery Statistics for 1929:

Imports of refined oils, after declining steadily during 1927 and 1928, rose rapidly in 1929. Total imports of refined oils in 1929 amounted to 29,777,000 barrels, a new high figure, and an increase over 1928 of 17,987,000 barrels (153 per cent). Imports of gasoline rose from 4,198,000 barrels in 1928 to 8,834,000 barrels in 1929. From the standpoint of quantity this increase was equivalent to only about one-third of the increase in imports of fuel oil, yet on the basis of value and general economic significance it was of much the greater importance. Practically all of the increase in gasoline imports in 1929 resulted from increased receipts from the Dutch West Indies. This gasoline was produced in the Dutch West Indies from crude obtained in the near-by Venezuela fields. Although the increase in imports in 1929 from the standpoint of quantity was 153 per cent, the gain in value was only slightly over 50 per cent.

The peak of oil transportation through the canal occurred in 1923, when approximately 54,000,000 barrels were carried eastward from California. The following is quoted from Petroleum in 1929, published by the United States Department of Commerce, page 476:

SHIPMENTS FROM CALIFORNIA THROUGH THE PANAMA CANAL

Shipments of crude oil from California through the Panama Canal to eastern ports in the United States continued to decline and amounted to only 1,299,000 barrels in 1929, compared with 2,301,000 barrels in 1928. No shipments were recorded during the last four months of the year, as contrasted with 1923, when an average of approximately 150,000 barrels of crude passed through the canal every day.

We face this fact: California has and could supply all Atlantic seaboard requirements with as good or better oil than can be obtained from any other source and that the westward shipments of the canal would be greatly increased by the shipments of oil field and refining equipment. At present the manufacturers of iron and steel constitute the largest single item of westward freight, which has been reduced almost 50 per cent within the last year.

In addition to the losses caused in commerce through the canal, which virtually amounts to a Government subsidy in favor of the importing group, these imports which have so disrupted California production and commerce to the Atlantic seaboard pay nothing in the way of tax to any part of the Federal Government or to the canal because they are imported from Venezuela. I mention the heavy loss to the Panama Canal as merely one phase of the destructive effects of imports from Venezuela fields into Atlantic seaboard markets.

Without making any claims as to remedy, the significance of the value of California oil production to the canal revenue is very plainly stated in the Annual Report of the Governor of the Panama Canal for 1931, which says on page 18:

Pacific to Atlantic: Since the beginning in the fiscal year 1923 of shipments of mineral oils on a large scale from the California fields, this product has been the leading commodity shipped from the Pacific to the Atlantic. As pointed out in the report of last year this item of cargo reached its high point in 1924 with 9,721,446 tons. In 1925 the shipments declined to 5,989,622 tons and in 1926 they were slightly lower, with 5,930,716 tons. The year 1927 saw an increase to 7,143,165 tons, followed by decrease in 1928 and 1929. In 1930 shipment of mineral oils aggregated 5,700,587 tons, the highest since 1927. In the past year they decreased to 4,824,333 tons, the lowest for any fiscal year since 1923 when 4,334,664 tons were reported. In comparison with 1930 the past year's mineral-oil tonnage from Pacific to Atlantic decreased 876,249 tons, or 15,4 per cent. Of this decrease 547,455 tons, or 16.2 per cent, occurred in the United States intercoastal trade, and 436,661 tons, or 31,2 per cent, in the trade between the United States and Europe. The trade between the United States and the West Indies showed an increase in this business of 102,344 tons, or 119.3 per cent, over the preceding year.

The longer haul from California, which is greater than the distance from the Venezuelan oil fields to our Atlantic ports, would give employment to a larger number of tankers and to a larger number of American seamen. Foreign oil does not favor American ships. It utilizes the cheapest vessels and the cheapest labor obtainable within the margin of safety. By law only American tankers and American seamen would find employment in the carriage of American petroleum, whether from California or from the Gulf ports to those Atlantic coast cities which are the largest consumers of this product.

Any increased business in oil from the west coast to the Atlantic coast would be an incentive for much other increased business activity and trade for railroads, aviation, and shipping. The Treasury is annually appropriating large sums for subsidy of the merchant marine which to-day does not and can not pay expenses unless business is provided for it. The American merchant marine is having difficulty competing with foreign shipping on account of the lower labor requirements on foreign ships and because many of the seamen on these vessels can be paid in depreciated currency.

At present there are 21 tankers, of a total dead-weight tonnage of 195,000 tons, idly tied up on the Pacific coast. The owners of these vessels and the seamen and officers who would be employed by them would welcome the opportunity for employment which would be assured them if the American petroleum industry is given a fair chance at American markets.

California and the other oil States of the Union must compete not only with the present quantities of petroleum entering from Venezuela or other South American fields. They must face the imminent possibilities of increasing floods of oil coming from the Black Sea ports. Under the present charter rates and present rates of exchange the cost of transporting a barrel of refined products from Batum, Russia, is 26.22 cents. The distance from Batum to New York Harbor is 5,600 nautical miles. Under current charter rates the cost of transporting a barrel of refined products from San Pedro, Calif., to New York Harbor is 45 cents. The distance is 4,930 nautical miles. Between San Pedro and New York the law requires that registered United States ships only be used. It is apparent that the Russia-Rumania products can be shipped to the Atlantic coast in competition with California products even on an equal-cost basis, and it is notorious that in Russia costs are impossible to calculate, and, so far as competing for business is concerned, the Russians disregard costs entirely. Three such shipments from a Black Sea port were made in 1931, two to a Detroit distributor and one to the port of Baltimore. This latter shipment entered with a declared valuation at port of delivery of 1.94 cents per gallon. If this is Soviet oil, as seems currently accepted, the costs are purely nominal. The hopeless impossibility of any petroleum producer who pays even the lowest imagined wages to his help competing with the unpaid labor of Russia is self-evident.

California fuel oil is of far better quality than that which the eastern seaboard is now receiving from the oil importers. It has lower sulphur content. It is a lower viscosity. It has higher gravity. It has greater heat value. It has less wax. The specifications of the United States Government covering fuel oil of the Bunker "C" class is somewhat bettered by the California product. California not only has sufficient oil to meet all the demands of the eastern industrial market but it can provide a better oil and can do this at practically the same price that is being paid at present for the foreign product or at such a slight increase as would be practically negligible. Of course, this can only be achieved if the distributing agencies now giving preferential treatment to foreign oil are forced by a tariff to consider the advantages offered by an American rather than a foreign product. The restoration of the eastern market of the California producer might decrease the present swollen profits reaped by the oil distributors who are related to the oil importers, but it should not affect the ultimate consumer. One may be quite certain that it will not when fair competition is given its opportunity.

California has been the outstanding leader in the attempts to stabilize the American petroleum market. The office of State oil and gas supervisor was established in 1915, since which time the economic and material wastes in the petroleum fields have been eliminated so far as possible. The Bureau of Mines is now giving the most rigid supervision to the development of the California oil fields. The example set by the State has contributed very largely to the solution of the conservation problems of other oil States. While California did not find it necessary to adopt such legislation as some of the other oil-producing States, it obtained the same or equivalent results through the influence and authority of the State department.

The self-discipline of the California oil producers is registered in the official figures of production. Neal H. Anderson, State oil umpire, reviewing the petroleum situation in the State during 1931, finds that California oil production last year averaged 54.31 per cent of the State's potential production. Concerning this, the Pacific Coast Wall Street Journal states:

The potential production of all oil fields for the year was 409,934,785 barrels. Actual production totaled 187,302,305 barrels and total curtailment was placed at 222,632,480 barrels. Due to the greater effectiveness of curtailment efforts, actual production reflected a substantial decline in 1931, despite the substantial increase in the State's potential, dropping from 225,962,703 barrels for 1930 to 187,302,305 for last year. Potential production increased from 398,933,005 barrels to 409,934,785, a gain of 11,001,780 barrels.

Curtailment by the seven major producing units in the industry averaged 56.75 per cent last year, standing at 131,522,640 barrels, as against 102,891,382, or 48.59 per cent for 1930, an increase of 28,631,258 barrels over the preceding year. Their total production was 22,577,822 barrels under the previous year's total of 100,220,970, against 122,798,792 for 1930.

The Los Angeles Times of February 10, in an unusually fine editorial entitled, "An Unprotected Industry," has this to say concerning this tremendous drop in California's petroleum industry:

It is perhaps superfluous to point out how large a stake the Pacific coast has in the oil industry and how much its well-being means to the general economics of southern California. Two years ago the southern California basin produced 19.7 per cent of all the oil produced in the world, and even now we are producing 16.1 per cent. In 1929, 80,000 Californians secured their livelihoods and those of their families from the oil business. Nearly all of these were employed in the southern half of the State. To-day the number has shrunk to 40,000, due to the industry's demoralization. The rest have been forced into other lines of work or are unemployed.

What the fall in the prices of oil and the curtailment of production have done to California's income is set out in the figures of the State division of mines and the Los Angeles Marine Exchange. In 1931 production in this State was 39,000,000 barrels less than that of 1930, when the total amount produced was 188,268,000 barrels. The value of the 1931 production was $146,873,000, which was 46 per cent less than that of 1930. In 1929, the peak year of local oil shipments, 127,703,362 barrels were shipped to consignees from Los Angeles Harbor, according to Assistant Manager Glasscock, of the marine exchange. In 1930 this fell to 117,566,000 barrels, and last year the total shipped was only 89,772,604 barrels.

The other side to this limitation of production by the industry in general as well as California is thus set forth in the same editorial:

In 1930, for example, American producers by voluntary agreement cut production by 109,000,000 barrels. In the same period that curtailment was almost completely offset and its effect on oil prices virtually nullified by the importation of 105,000,000 barrels of cheap foreign crude oil and refined products, which came in duty free. In 1931 a further shut-in of 53,938,000 barrels was made and offset by importation of 78,000,000 barrels (up to December 1).

We can not afford to permit any of our basic industries to be wrecked when the means of restoring them are at hand. The history of our experiment with duty-free cheap foreign oil has been one of disaster piled on disaster. No one knows how large a factor this has been in creating the desperate situation in which our whole business life finds itself to-day. No one, however, can deny that it has been a factor and one of the most important factors. We can remedy this. We can send back to their jobs many thousands of American workers by substituting an American product for a foreign one. We can restore to American merchants American customers by making it possible for the American petroleum industry to resume operations. The imposition of an oil tariff will not cause any of the multimillionaires now reaping tremendous profits from our present policy to do without a meal or to stand in line at some charity organization asking for help in paying the rent. But such a tariff would take off the list of the unemployed, and of those receiving charity, countless Americans whose jobs have been taken from them and given to cheap labor in foreign lands. There are many arguments for the proposed tariff.

To my mind, the most impressive argument is that lack of a tariff puts American workers on the street and in the bread line, while adoption of an oil tariff would send these workers back to their jobs and reestablish American homes now in danger of being broken up. Is it not time that we gave some thought to these problems faced by our own people and let other lands carry some portion of their own burden?

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Gilchrist].

Mr. GILCHRIST. Mr. Chairman, I do not find myself in agreement with the committee so far as the sales tax is concerned. I think that one who is not so in agreement ought to be able to say why he does not agree and also be ready to state wherein he would choose to make up any deficit which will have to be made up and give his ideas as to how he would handle the matter of the Budget. Statesmanship requires that, good politics requires it, honesty requires it, and it is fair for me to say so at the outset.

In the eighth century before Christ there was a man who taught down in the plains of Judea, and he made very impressive statements about conditions that then existed. I refer to Amos, one of the lesser prophets. He was a farmer and a sheep herder. He dreamed dreams and he saw visions. He cried out against the iniquities that then existed. He uttered exhortations and administered reproofs, and among other things, he said something about those that swallow up the needy and that make the poor of the land to fail. Especially did he excoriate and flay those that wished to make the ephah small and the shekel great. He put them into the same category as those who were falsifying the balances by deceit. I may say for those on the other side of the aisle who have forgotten their Biblical lore that the ephah was a dry measure about the size of a bushel, although a little bit larger. If Amos were here to-day, he would condemn any man or system or practice or policy which would make the bushel small and the dollar great. There is no question but what that condition exists and is the reason why agriculture is prostrate and hopeless at this time. The bushel is of small consequence while the dollar is aggrandized and exalted.

I have seen the time, in my district, when a bushel of corn was selling for $2.23, and within a year the same bushel on the same streets brought only 25 cents. One who contracted a debt of $1 could have paid it easily with a half a bushel of corn; but within the course of a year and out of the same crop of corn, it would have required 4 bushels for him to have paid that same dollar debt.

That is what has caused the economic conditions in this country to-day. The farmer has been "debushelized"; and when any basic industry such as agriculture is ruined, then all industries are injured. The value of a dollar has become great, while the value of a bushel has become very, very small, indeed. In consequence of this it costs entirely too much for a farmer to buy a dollar. It costs entirely too much in labor and produce for a farmer to pay a dollar's worth of debts, and I sometimes think that we need an Amos to cry out his maledictions upon us. I am not at this time seeking to charge any man or set of men with evil intentions. I simply bring the plain facts to your memory in connection with the consideration of the bill now before us.

I may say, however, that there would not be any material increase of price to the citizens of this country who buy agricultural products if the bushel were restored to equity. The other day on the floor here a very distinguished gentleman from New York said that eggs were a luxury in his great metropolis. On that very day I received a letter from home which told me that eggs were selling in my little village for 7 cents a dozen, that they were expected to go down to a nickel before long, and yet gentlemen tell us that they are a luxury in New York City. My wife bought a package of shredded wheat the other day and paid 11/4 cents an ounce for her wheat, and yet wheat in my district is selling along about 40 cents per bushel. The American public pays $10 to $12 a bushel for wheat in the market when it buys it for food. Nevertheless, the farmers are only getting 40 cents for it.

If you buy a package of cornflakes, you will pay $9 or $10 a bushel for the very corn that they are selling at home around 22 cents per bushel. And the same thing is true of other farm commodities, including beef and bacon, cotton goods, and wool yarn, and almost every other article produced by a farmer or stock raiser. So I say to the great masses of the people of the East and of the North and of the South and of the West that when conditions are changed and when agriculture is restored to prosperity the change will not add materially to what they now pay for foodstuffs. And we must bring relief to the farmers of this country, many of whom are now homeless, hopeless, and in despair and are lying awake at night in sleepless torment, conjuring how they may pay living expenses and interest and heavy mounting taxation.

I indict the sales tax because it violates basic principles which should regulate the imposition of all taxes. It does not distribute the burden upon those who are best able to carry it or make the charge against those who are best able to pay. It is a tax upon living. It strikes at the laboring man who is without a job and at the farmer who has no market for his crop. It levies its tribute against those who are in extreme want and compels those who are already destitute to endure greater destitution. If we must balance the budget of this Government, we should not do it by exacting tribute from the very people who are unable to balance their own budgets and who are bereft of the necessities of life. This will make matters worse instead of better.

The sales tax is a tax upon consumption and it therefore reduces consumption. The present panic has been described as a panic of plenty. We have too much of everything except money and we should consume more. When we consume more we employ men. People are demanding bread and we must not give them stone. Let us see that they consume more and not less. Every dollar added by taxation to the expenses of people having an income below a standard minimum reduces consumption, and it is stated on good authority that three-fourths of our American families now have less than that minimum. Taxing ultimate consumers on their necessities falls with peculiar severity on wage earners.

It has been argued that this tax is an invisible one and that our people will scarcely be conscious of it while they are paying it, but this is one of its very iniquities. Because it is an insidious and invisible tax is one of the dangers of it. Abuses are more likely to arise, and reckless prodigality in expenditures is more likely to be practiced if the money comes to the Treasury in an invisible and insidious manner. It will ensnare and entrap us. It is crafty and full of guile in exact proportion as it is invisible and indirect. It is like a disease which exists without marked symptoms, but nevertheless ruthlessly destroys life. A painless tax is a bad tax.

It will be just another tax. It is not proposed as a substitute for other forms of taxation nor as a replacement tax. We do not need new devices and new schemes for imposing taxes upon the people. We have already too much taxation, and if we establish the principle involved in this tax and start it once into motion, then it is not likely that the American public will ever get out from under it. Most forms of taxation become permanent. It has been said here in this debate that if the camel once gets its nose under the tent it will never withdraw. While it is now proposed for an emergency only, nevertheless we must be on guard that the principle is not established and that this tax does not survive through all the years to harass the American public. Kill it in the bud. Do not allow it to blossom and bring forth seed.

Sales taxes will be and always are pyramided; and while the bill speaks of taxes based on 2½ cents per hundred, nevertheless the amount which the consumer will have to pay will be augmented. The manufacturer must have a profit upon this extra money. The jobber will be compelled to pay twice the amount of the sales tax which the manufacturer added to his product. The wholesale merchant will come next and he will multiply the whole by two. Then the retailer will add his own exactions and by the time the article has reached the consuming public, this sales tax is likely to multiply itself many times and become a real burden upon our people.

It has been said that the tax would be inconsequential and that it would take not more than $15 or $20 per year, perhaps, from each farm, but I know ladies in my district who have not been able to buy even a cheap dress for the past five years. Fifteen dollars is a mighty big sum to them. There are some things that are beyond price. Put a little sunshine into their farm homes. Add a little comfort and happiness there. Even $15 per year may do it and $20 will go very far toward helping a farmer whose home has been sold by the sheriff during the past two years.

I said the other day in a little talk something about sheriff's sales. I have with me a statement made up from the records of the courts in 10 of the counties which I have the honor to represent, and this statement shows the number of times the sheriff has stood at the front door of the courthouse and auctioned off farm homes out there in Iowa. I do not have time to give you these figures, but in some places and in some counties one-seventh of the farms have been sold within the past few years, and the farmer and his family have been left without home, hope, happiness, or scarcely anything else. Such a man must live, and his wife might like to have a little $10 dress some time between now and Christmas. She is saving her money to the utmost farthing, even though she sells her eggs for 7 cents a dozen.

This bill contains many propositions which do not seem proper to me. I do not think that the smaller admissions to theaters and moving pictures should be taxed at all. The small movies in the country places are already unprofitable. They can not exist if we add to their burdens, and they ought to exist. They are a great force in our present civilization. They make for happiness and cheer, and in times of trial and tribulation cheerfulness is the most precious thing that we can have. A little wholesome pleasure once in a while is good for all of us. We ought not to confront a man with extra taxes when he takes his little family into a moving-picture house. Most of us are perfectly willing to pay admission taxes and amusement taxes, but let us not put any burden on admissions of 50 cents or less.

Stamp taxes as included in the bill upon checks or drafts are especially reprehensible. This will drive money out of the banks and out of the channels and currents of business instead of putting money into them. It will encourage hoarding and will tend to prevent the thrifty from employing their money in useful ways. We already have too much money hidden in tin cans and mattresses. We need more money in circulation. A tomato can is not a good bank. A tax upon checks is a tax upon the Saturday night pay envelope. It is a tax upon the cream check which hundreds of thousands of farmers are getting almost daily. And a stamp tax upon checks falls with a heavier hand upon small business than it does upon big business.

We can raise the money in other ways. I have not time to discuss all that I have in mind, but I want to say something here about the estate tax. We have hardly scratched the surface of the possibilities which are open to us when we come to estate taxes. Wealth is concentrating. Statistics are before us showing that 504 men had an income in 1929

1930. People are amassing great wealth. Eighty per cent of our vast wealth is owned by only 4 per cent of our people. I am glad to live in a country where possibilities are open to me to acquire a competence and even to acquire wealth; but if the Lord prospers a millionaire, then he properly owes something to society when he passes on. Many of them do not think so. In my study of this bill I ran across the hearings back in 1925. At that time there was determined opposition against estate taxes. They brought down here from my State a company of men to appear before the committee. I have learned that their expenses were paid by somebody somewhere and somehow, but I do not know who paid them or where or how they were paid. One of them at that hearing made some remarkable statements. I want to call these to your attention. A member of the committee interrogated this man who had been a lobbyist out there in my own State legislature. This lobbyist objected to the levying of estate taxes on the very rich and intimated that the laying of the heavy burden at the top would destroy the top and that a man getting $4,000 per year was better able to pay $40 in income taxes than many very rich were able to pay upon estates. Then the member of the committee interrogated him and said:

"In other words, your position is this: It was Lazarus, wasn't it, who picked up crumbs from under the table of the very rich? If there are no very rich, then there would not be any crumbs for Lazarus. Therefore you want to be as easy as you can on the very rich."

And what did this lobbyist say in reply? He said this:

"That is a very beautiful illustration of the thought I had in mind and I thank you for bringing it out."

(Laughter.)

It is true that there are some people—but I hope they have no exponent in this House—who do not want even crumbs to fall from the rich man's table into the lap of Lazarus, and if a crust should sometimes fall they would think it was a calamity.

Now these taxes, I think, could be raised in some other way. I am for a more liberal taxing of estates. I know that the estate taxes can not be collected within a year or 18 months after decedent's death, and that this time can be extended upon a showing of hardship. But in such cases we know that the money is already earned and forthcoming and will reach the Treasury. Why is it necessary to balance the budget if you know that the money is coming? The deficit was created over a space of two years, and there is no imperative reason why it must be met in less time. There seems to me to be no danger in this.

The Treasury frequently sells short-time bonds or Treasury certificates of indebtedness. Such short-time certificates could well be issued and be allocated against such estate taxes. It has been pointed out by my colleague from Iowa [Mr. Ramsever] that this estate tax could be increased $300,000,000 per year, or about half of the increase that we are proposing to raise under the present sales-tax features of this bill. Why is there such a marked difference in principle between the tax on the income of a living man who works and produces and supports families and in the tax to be laid upon a man who does not earn a legacy but is fortunate enough to have rich—though dead—relatives?

Gift taxes are intimately connected with those levied upon estates, and emergency revenues can be raised from this source. There has been a practice among the very rich who are in anticipation of death or in the presence of imminent death to give away their property in order to avoid estate taxes. If we levy estate taxes we should also devise forms for taxing those gifts which are made for the purpose of avoiding estate taxes. This will raise revenues in lieu of the general sales tax. Amendment to the pending bill are proposed or will be proposed at the proper time, which if adopted will substitute such taxes in lieu of a portion of the sales taxes.

Then there are unpaid taxes which might be brought in. Recently the Secretary of the Treasury stated that there were unpaid taxes due the Government and pending on appeal amounting to almost a billion dollars. These were due for the year 1929, and for previous years. Could not their collection be speeded up? Could not these taxes be brought into the Treasury? Even if they can not be harvested for a few months, still there must be and is good reason to believe that we will come into possession of these unpaid taxes within a time sufficient to help materially in balancing the Budget. One billion dollars is much more than is proposed to be raised by sales taxes.

But the final method for balancing the budget must always be found in practicing economy, in lumping off appropriations, in accommodating our expenses to our income, in a reduction of all extravagances, and in realizing that a penny saved is a penny earned. If we learn the lesson of economy, then the depression from which we are now suffering will be partially compensated.

We can reduce many appropriations. For example the higher salaries should be cut during this depression. I am not one in favor of reducing what may be called wages of our laborers. I do not favor reduction of the smaller salaries, but those in public life who are receiving big salaries can well afford to reduce them for the general good. I would vote for a liberal reduction of the salaries which are paid to Members of Congress. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Knurson].

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Chairman, on yesterday the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Rankin] sang to us the same old song about the inequalities and iniquities of the Hawley-Smoot tariff bill that we have been hearing ever since the rates of that measure went into effect. But, like all Democrats who have attacked the measure, he failed to get down to cases. He talked about taxing the swaddling clothes of the infant and the shroud and coffin of the dead and indulged in all the other loose tariff talk that we Republicans have come to look for from the other side.

Mr. CLARKE of New York. Is this the same gentleman whose name is so prominently mentioned for Vice President?

Mr. KNUTSON. I believe he has been mentioned, but I do not know how prominently.

Let me paint another picture of the tariff, or rather the lack of an adequate tariff, and the picture that I would paint for you pertains to vast industries that are absolutely closed down, with tens of thousands of employees walking the streets looking for work—all because of the lack of an adequate tariff.

In 1930 Russia exported to the United States 63,412 tons of manganese ore. In 1931 this figure had increased to 278,612 tons, which is an increase of 339 per cent in one year. This imported ore had a declared value of $2.05 per ton. Lake Superior and southern ores, produced under American conditions of living and being burdened with high taxes, can not hope to compete with the conscript and forced labor produced ores from Russia.

The Minnesota Tax Commission has computed the average cost, for tax purposes, of the iron ore produced in that State during the period from 1921 to 1929 at $1.43 per ton, plus an average tax of 61 cents per ton, making a total of $2.04 per ton, free on board the mine. Adding 25 cents per ton for costs not allowed by the tax commission and for return of capital and $1.79 per ton freight and vessel charge to Lake Erie and Chicago district steel plants, the total average delivered cost, exclusive of profits, equals $4.08. Under these conditions importation of Russian ore will show a yearly increase and within the next three years all ironmining operators in this country will be forced to suspend.

Now, how will that affect my own State of Minnesota and our tax situation? The iron-ore industry of Minnesota for a 9-year average period has paid annually $22,000,000 in local taxes; $52,000,000 for labor, supplies, and royalties; and $33,000,000 to the railroads for freight. Here we have an industry normally paying out $107,000,000 a year, of which 80 per cent remains in the State.

For the lack of adequate protection against the devastating competition of Russian iron ore produced by convict and forced labor, the iron-mining industry in Minnesota is in a very bad way. It is estimated that the production for the coming year will not be in excess of 30 per cent of normal and that disbursements will fall from $107,000,000 to $50,000,000, or less. Now, how is that going to affect the people of my State? It will result in greater unemployment; it will mean that the taxpayers of Minnesota will have to make up the enormous deficit in tax receipts from the iron-mining companies; it will mean that the ore-carrying roads will have to still further greatly curtail their operations. It will mean that many ore-carrying boats on the Great Lakes will be laid up for the want of cargoes, and so I could go on and enumerate indefinitely evil upon evil which will follow in the wake of reduced mining activities in this country.

What is true of the iron-ore industry in the Lake Superior district is equally true of the copper industry in Montana and Arizona; of the oil industry in Oklahoma, Kansas, and Texas; it is true of the print-paper and pulpwood situation in the States along the Canadian border. All of these big industries are languishing for the lack of a sufficient tariff, and yet Democratic Members will get up on the floor of this House and berate the Republicans for having enacted a tariff law which is the only thing that has stood between us and absolute ruin since its enactment. [Applause.] The need for a tariff is greater than ever before in history because of the constantly falling foreign-exchange rate. I am not sure that a tariff alone would be altogether effective in some of the situations that I have cited. Many believe that we should have an absolute embargo on all importations from Russia, including lumber and shingles, and I am in thorough accord with that principle. I call upon the Ways and Means Committee to report out an embargo act that will give to the American producer and laborer the protection to which he is entitled, and which he must have if the American standard of living is to be maintained in our

When we take the revenue bill up under the 5-minute rule I will offer certain amendments proposing excise taxes on several commodities now entering the country duty free or under wholly inadequate rates. [Applause.]

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. OVERTON].

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, I rise in opposition to the manufacturers' sales-tax provision of the pending bill. I am opposed to it in principle. I have no hesitancy, therefore, in making a favorable response to the requests of any of my constituents when they ask that any particular article be eliminated from the imposition of the tax. I favor the elimination of all products of manufacture from the imposition of this tax.

It has been stated in to-day's newspapers that the removal of canned fruits and vegetables and canned meats by the Ways and Means Committee from the tax levy has rallied a certain number of votes in this House to the support of this bill, which votes would otherwise have been cast against it. Such eliminations have no effect upon my attitude toward this measure, because I am opposed in principle to the imposition of a sales tax upon the general mass of our people.

Being a new Member in this House, it is peculiarly fitting that I should join many of my colleagues in bestowing deserved praise upon the acting chairman and members of the Ways and Means Committee for the faithful, painstaking, and patriotic manner in which they have discharged their duties. I do so gladly. And I would gladly follow their leadership by supporting this bill if, in good conscience, I felt that I could do so.

When, Mr. Chairman, I entered the Halls of this Congress I came impressed with the serious financial and economic ills that affected both our Government and our people. I felt then, as I feel now, that the best thought of our ablest statesmen and financiers would have to be directed toward a solution of the many grave problems presented to us as Representatives of the people of this Nation. I was willing, therefore, to follow, as far as I possibly could, the suggestions of our ablest financiers and economists and of our political leaders regardless of the party with which they are affiliated.

When, therefore, the President of these United States, although elevated to his high office by a party with which I am not affiliated, did, in conjunction with a majority at least of the Republican and Democratic leadership of the Nation, recommend that in order to aid in turning the tide of affairs toward prosperity, we should forego the collection of $250,000,000 due us by other nations, I voted for the resolution that authorized a year's moratorium on these intergovernmental debts. I did so in the face of the argument, fairly well supported by subsequent disclosures, that this moratorium was as much perhaps of a benefit to the bankers of New York and London and our international bankers as it was to the fisc of our foreign debtors.

When, a little later on, we were advised by our great financiers and political leaders, regardless of party affiliations, that we had not gone far enough, and that it was necessary, in order to aid in restoring to normalcy the business and industry of our Nation, we should by legislation create a super-Reconstruction Finance Corporation and endow it with half a billion dollars out of our National Treasury, and make our Government responsible for an additional one billion and a half dollars, again I followed the advice of our financial and political leadership and favored the measure that brought this corporation into being

But if, my colleagues, when the moratorium was proposed, and if, when the formation of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation was suggested, the Ways and Means Committee had so far progressed in their work that they could have appeared upon this floor and said to us, in effect, "The National Treasury shows a deficit for 1931 of almost $1,000,-000,000 and will show for the fiscal year ending 1932 a national deficit of more than $2,000,000,000, and will in all probability be confronted in the fiscal year ending 1933 with a deficit in excess of a billion dollars, and when you withhold from our National Treasury the $250,000,000 due us by foreign nations, and when you extract from our depleted Treasury a half billion dollars for a Reconstruction Finance Corporation, you will be called upon to make good the resultant deficits by the imposition of a manufacturers' sales tax," I question seriously that in such event and in such alternatives a majority of the votes of this House would have been cast for either the moratorium or the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. [Applause.]

Now, Mr. Chairman, I find that in the main throughout the financial legislation of this session of Congress, our footsteps have been directed along the great white way that leads from the Nation's Capitol to New York's Wall Street and New York's Fifth Avenue. Millions of dollars have been appropriated to aid big business in the hope and expectation that such appropriations would revive big business, and that the revival of big business would aid the farmers, laborers, and general masses of our Nation. We have been willing to follow the suggestions of our financial and political leaders in making these appropriations with this ultimate object in view.

But now the day of reckoning has come. The scene shifts. We are asked to retrace our footsteps, to pause for a moment in the pilgrimage that we have been making as bearers of gold, myrrh, and incense to the throne rooms of the corporate interests of this Nation and to go back to our people—to travel the cow paths that lead to the homes of our farmers and the alleys that lead to the tenements of the laboring classes of our towns and cities. And how are we to go back? Are we to go bearing gifts? No, Mr. Chairman; we are to go back to our people as taxgatherers. We are to collect from the poor and from the toiling masses of this Nation the sums necessary to overcome the deficits that we have been creating by the measures to which I have referred and by other appropriations made at this session of Congress. [Applause.]

We are directed to levy a tax upon the swaddling clothes of the newborn infant, and the cradle that rocks it to sleep; upon the medicine that alleviates human suffering; upon the instruments of surgery and the bandages that bind its wounds; upon the plow that furrows the field; upon the pot that boils the midday meal; upon the coffins that encase our dead, and upon the spades that dig their graves. I refuse, Mr. Chairman, to do this. In this particular I decline to follow any leadership that directs such a course. [Applause.]

What is this sales tax? It is a tax that has been condemned by my party, the Democratic Party, in national convention assembled. It is a tax that has been denounced as unsound by our greatest writers on political economy. It is a tax that heretofore has been decried by outstanding Members on this floor who are, to-day, advocating its imposition. It is a tax that even our present Secretary of the Treasury has publicly declared that he reluctantly suggests as a means of revenue. It is a tax for which the members of the Ways and Means Committee proposing it have apologized upon this floor.

It is true that it comes before us mothered by the Ways and Means Committee. But there is no one who, upon this floor or elsewhere, has acknowledged its paternity or stood responsible as the author of its proposed existence.

Why should we impose upon the general mass of our people a tax so reluctantly suggested, so much apologized for, so strongly condemned by both of our great national parties and by public economists? They tell us that we must do so in order to "balance the Budget." Such expressions as "balancing the Budget" and "national financial structure" are sonorous and awe-inspiring utterances, Mr. Chairman. They are being hurled at us like so many thunderbolts from the Olympus of high finance. I shall not be frightened or dismayed by this Jovian thunder. I am willing, under any reasonable and sound revenue measure. to balance the Budget, but I am unwilling to break the backs of the people in trying to balance the Budget. [Applause.] I am unwilling, Mr. Chairman, in an effort to balance the Budget to unbalance the tax-ridden, poverty stricken masses of our population now tottering to their fall. [Applause.]

Balance the Budget? Why balance the Budget? They tell us that we must balance the Budget because we are at war—at war against poverty, depression, and unemployment—and that we must, therefore, again rally the patriotism and manhood of our country. Indeed, my colleagues, we are at war against poverty when we turn against the poor of this Nation the guns of this iniquitous and indefensible method of national taxation. [Applause.]

I recall when we were engaged in physical warfare in the world's Great War. I remember that upon our entrance into this mighty conflict we had a national debt of less than $2,000,000,000. In the course of approximately two years we increased our national debt to over $26,000,000,000. We poured billions of dollars into the great maw of war and into the treasuries of our allies in that stupendous struggle. Then, when the war was over, when the great emergency had passed, we proceeded to reduce our national debt at the rate of almost a billion dollars a year. To-day that national debt is slightly in excess of $18,000,000,000.

The debt would have been still further reduced had it not been that under the influence of Mr. Andrew Mellon, then Secretary of the Treasury, the rates of the income tax, which is the main source of our national revenue, were greatly reduced. It is said that an income tax can not be depended upon because its avails are uncertain. The revenues of this tax may be uncertain from year to year, but they are not uncertain in the average of years. They are not uncertain in the life of a nation.

If we impose an income tax, uniform from year to year in its rates, we shall be able during periods of our prosperity to reduce our national debt and be prepared and able in the days of adversity to increase the debt.

What will be the avails of this proposed manufacturers' sales tax? Its estimated yield is, in round figures, $600,- 600,000 a year, or a total of $1,200,000,000 for the proposed 2-year period of its existence.

Are we to be seriously told that the financial structure of this Nation is in such peril that it will be unsound, that it will be disastrous to increase our national debt to the extent of $1,200,000,000 during the next two years if such a course becomes necessary? The objection is made that the securities of our Government, in order to be marketable, would have to bear a greater rate of interest than those of recent issues; but, in my judgment, it would be better, infinitely better, to place upon the market short-term obligations of the Government at higher rates of interest than it would be to introduce into our scheme of Federal taxation a sales tax which, once injected into our revenue measure, would be difficult, if not impossible, of removal, and which, like the old man of the sea in the tale of Sinbad the Sailor. would be fastened forever around the necks of our people. [Applause.]

I can not, Mr. Chairman, disassociate myself from the thought that this tax is intended in some quarters as a lieu tax for our income and inheritance taxes. The special interests that would favor a reduction or abolition of income and inheritance taxes may be powerful enough to retain this tax upon the general mass of the people if once we legislate it into existence.

We are now undertaking a campaign throughout the Nation to restore confidence to our people. Can it be said that we are restoring confidence by imposing this new method of taxation upon the masses of our Nation? Can it be said that we are inspiring confidence when those high in authority broadcast to the world that the financial structure of this Nation is in such peril that it can stand no additional national debt; that no further obligations of the Nation should be issued in order to tide over this present emergency; and that we have only one course left to pursue, and that is to conscript the dimes, the nickels, and the pennies out of the lean pocketbooks of the poor in order to balance our Budget and set our financial affairs aright? [Prolonged applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 20 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Arnold].

Mr. ARNOLD. Mr. Chairman, we have listened for five days to the debate on this revenue bill. I think perhaps every angle of the bill has been discussed pro and con, and in the short time that I shall consume here to-day it will be impossible, and it is not my purpose, to enter into a lengthy discussion of the provisions of the bill. I realize that the Committee on Ways and Means have had a most strenuous task in their efforts to present to us a tax bill that will balance the Budget in 1933. I have the greatest respect for each and every one of the members of the Committee on Ways and Means. They are industrious, honest, and sincere. I have the very highest regard for the acting chairman of that committee, the distinguished gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CRISP]. His devotion to duty and patriotism is recognized by all. I regret, however, that I can not follow the recommendations of the majority of that committee in some of the proposals they make to us in the bill here presented.

We are told the Government is at the forks of the road, and a choice must be made now. We are told one road leads to a balanced Budget, and through it the maintenance of financial stability and restoration of prosperity. We are told the other leads to financial demoralization, both in governmental affairs and in business life.

That the situation is critical none will deny; that something should and must be done to bring governmental expenditures and receipts more nearly in balance I think we are all agreed. If this is accomplished, it will have to be approached from two angles: First, reduce expenditures; and, second, raise additional revenues. Appropriations can not possibly be reduced in an amount sufficient to meet the deficit, in view of the declining revenues due to the depression, without destroying very necessary governmental functions. We have made material progress in this body in the appropriation bills thus far considered.

We have not gone far enough in this emergency. Further slashes should be made. Bureaus should be eliminated. The Federal Government should retire from many of its activities which are peculiarly within the province of the States. We should decentralize, get away from bureaucratic government. Our forefathers in formulating the structure of our Federal Government had in mind, and so provided, that all powers of government not specifically delegated by the States to the Federal Government, or not necessarily implied in such delegated powers, should be and remain in the States themselves.

The Federal Government has been gradually encroaching on those powers reserved to the States. The Federal Government has become top-heavy. We should return as far as possible and as quickly as possible to our original base. I realize the process will be slow. Bureaucracy has become so firmly entrenched in our Federal Government that it is a most difficult operation to curtail or eliminate it, but we should proceed along this line with all possible speed.

For the time being we must raise more revenue until retrenchment in governmental expenditures can be brought within our present income. I have listened with interest to the debate thus far.

The ideal system of taxation is that system that brings in the greatest amount of revenue with the least possible burden on the taxpayer. In other words, the burden should be distributed so that it will result in the least hardship to all and those least able to pay not be unduly burdened. We know that all taxes are burdensome on those who are called upon to pay. The question is, in considering tax bills, How should this burden be distributed to cause the least inconvenience, annoyance, and hardship on our people?

With much that is in this bill, I am in full accord. The income-tax provisions, the estate and gift taxes, taxes on the importation of crude and refined oils, and many others meet my approval. With some of its provisions I can not agree, such as the general manufacturers' sales tax, tax on admissions under 50 cents, and some others. To me the sweeping provisions of the so-called manufacturers' sales tax is the most objectionable feature. We have a dual system of government, State and Federal. Both must be maintained. Within the States are local taxing bodies. They must levy taxes to carry on their activities. The cost of local and State government has been mounting to such an extent that the people throughout the Nation have already been burdened by State and local taxes almost to the breaking point.

The Federal Government is here again seeking to invade the province of the States. To place additional tax burdens on the people through a manufacturers' sales tax, as here proposed, is unjustifiable and unwarranted. True, as the proponents of this tax insist, the amount is small, yet that amount, though small, added to the heavy burden of State and local taxation the people are now obliged to carry, may be the last straw—the straw that breaks the camel's back.

Speaking to-day, I am thinking of the farmers out in Illinois, the farmers throughout the Nation who have been struggling along from year to year fighting valiantly for existence. Receiving for their products far below the actual cost of producing them, and paying for the things they must buy to live and carry on their operations, prices that have not responded to the downward trend. State and local taxes mounting, mortgages increasing, and interest accumulating, already they are so burdened that this tax, small though it may be, but adds to their difficulties, and may tip the balance on the side of despair and perhaps wreckage. Can they now afford to pay an additional tax on their machinery, supplies, equipment, household articles, clothing, shoes, and the hundreds of other articles of necessity they must buy?

Speaking to-day, I am thinking of the vast multitude of laboring people, men who have jobs and earning barely enough money to pay for the necessities of life, their rents, or the interest on their mortgages and taxes on their homes, if they are so fortunate to own a home. I am thinking of the brave struggle they have put up to nurture, clothe, and educate their children and make them good, useful, intelligent American citizens. Should they be required to pay an additional tax on their household articles, clothing, shoes, medicines, and the many other articles of necessity of manufactured products they must procure?

Speaking to-day, I am thinking of that vast army of unemployed in this country. Some 8,000,000 of them walking the streets of our cities and towns begging for employment whereby they may work and earn money to pay for shelter, food, and raiment for wives and children. Distress and misery in the families of this great army of unemployed lurks in the land and yet these people are called upon to contribute to the deficit in every article of clothing, every pair of shoes they purchase, and every can of food they buy. It is claimed that many articles of necessity are excluded from the operation of this tax. That is true, and yet many more articles are included in the tax that are fully as essential to the health and well-being of the masses of our people than are excluded. Should we add to the burdens of the farmers, the wage earners, yes, the unemployed, by the imposition of a tax on the necessities of life they must have?

It is further claimed here that this tax at the rate of 21/4 per cent on the manufacturers' sale price, or a large portion, will be absorbed by the manufacturer and will not be reflected in the price paid by the ultimate consumer. I am unable to understand this attempted justification. If it can be, or is absorbed, by the manufacturer, then without it the manufacturer can reduce his prices proportionately and the consumer will get the benefit of the lower prices. pay that much less for the things he buys. If it is not absorbed by the manufacturer, then it must necessarily be handed down; and as the cost of handling merchandise is figured on a percentage-of-cost basis, as the articles pass from manufacturer through the wholesaler, perhaps one or two other intermediaries, through the retailer to the ultimate consumer, the profit of each, based on the added cost of the manufacturer by reason of the 21/4 per cent tax levied at the source, will by the time it reaches the ultimate consumer be from 3 per cent to 4 per cent, at least, more than he now

This is a consumer's tax, garbed as it may be, and if the tax of 21/4 per cent on the manufacturers' price yields the Government $595,000,000, as estimated for the fiscal year 1933, the consumers of the country, if all the tax is handed down, will pay not only the $595,000,000 the Government is expected to receive from the tax but the intermediate profits thereon as well, amounting in all to something like eight or nine hundred million dollars in the increased cost of their purchases. In other words they will pay at least $200,000,000 more than the Government receives from the tax. This additional amount represents the profits of the dealers on the tax itself, through whose hands the articles pass between the manufacturer and the ultimate consumer. This the consumer must pay if the tax is handed down over and above the amount of the $595,000,000 the Government will receive at the 21/4 per cent tax rate.

In my judgment a portion of the estimated deficiency of $1,420,000,000 for the fiscal year 1933 can well be absorbed by the issuance of additional bonds, such as has been done with the deficiency of $900,000,000 for the fiscal year 1931, and such as is proposed for the estimated deficiency of $2,122,000,000 for the fiscal year 1932. If it can not be done with safety to the Republic, I suggest that there are other sources of revenue that can be pursued where the burden will not result in extreme hardship and deprivation such as seems inevitable with this tax.

I can not vote for a tax that will in all probability add to the deprivation, want, suffering, and distress of the unfortunate men, women, and children of this land. It is a shifting of the burdens of taxation from the shoulders of those men most able to pay to the shoulders of those least able to pay. It violates the fundamental principles which should be the rule and guide of tax levies. It violates the great humanitarian principles of right and justice.

It is sometimes well to look behind the scenes to see if possible what motives are back of such movements as we have before us in this bill to levy a sales tax. Perhaps the most outstanding man in America to-day who has been advocating for many years the sales tax is William Randolph Hearst. On different occasions, I understand, to develop sentiment for a sales tax, he has gone to the expense of taking a number of Members of the House and Senate into Canada, so that those Members who accompany him might get some first-hand information of the workings of the sales tax in the Dominion of Canada.

I did not accompany Mr. Hearst when I received the invitation from him for that purpose shortly before the convening of this Congress, but a number of gentlemen here who were interested in learning as far as they could the workings of this system of taxation that is sought to be imposed upon the American people by this bill did accept that invitation.

There has always been a group in this country who have endeavored to shift the burdens of taxation from the shoulders of those most able to pay to the shoulders of those least able to pay. As far as I am personally concerned, I am a firm believer in the system of income taxation. I think it is the fairest and most equitable system of taxation that we have in this country. What do you suppose Mr. Hearst's opinion is of the income-tax system in this country? Mr. Hearst's idea is that if he could get Congress to adopt this manufacturers' sales tax, which is nothing more nor less than a tax on consumption largely borne by the poorer people, it would in the end displace entirely our income-tax system.

I hold in my hand a copy of the Washington Herald under date of Sunday, March 13, 1932. In that paper on the front page is a letter signed by William Randolph Hearst directed to the editors of the Hearst newspapers throughout the country—that great system of newspapers that covers practically the whole United States. Let us see what he thinks about the income-tax system. If the sales-tax system becomes established in our country, and Mr. Hearst and those of his political philosophy are able to control legislation, does anyone doubt the final result? The first thing he says is this:

Please carry on sustained crusade morning, evening, and Sunday against the present bolshevist system of income taxation.

The income-tax system has become the greatest racket in the United States and the Government the biggest racketeer. system is in itself unjust, unequitable, and un-American. paralyzes enterprise and penalizes honesty.

He further says:

The tax system has made bullies out of Government agents and a blackmailer out of the Government itself. Crime is compromised for cash and false accusations are made in order to be compromised by payment of blood money.

I will not quote further from that letter, but I simply wanted to call attention to the fact that those in this country who are most concerned in the establishment of the principle of the sales tax or a manufacturers' tax in the end hope beyond question to substitute the sales tax for our incometax system.

Mr. SABATH. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. ARNOLD. I yield.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. McCLINTIC of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Illinois two additional minutes.

Mr. SABATH. Is not the underlying reason why Mr. Hearst attacks the income tax due to the fact that millions upon millions have been refunded to those who originally paid an income tax, and two years afterwards came back and secured refunds? As I understand, close to $2,000,000,000 have been refunded to the large taxpayers. Is that not perhaps what is in the mind of Mr. Hearst when he attacks the income tax and calls it racketeering legislation?

Mr. ARNOLD. I do not know why he speaks of it as racketeering legislation, but the fact remains that the real advocates of this sales-tax system, those who are behind the scenes, have as their object ultimately the complete displacement of our income-tax system by that system of taxation which levies tribute on the masses of the people least | able to pay and relieves those most able to pay. It is wrong. It is unwarranted and without justification. We have been told that the manufacturers will absorb and pay the tax. How will they pay it? Out of profits? From the reports we get, many of them are on the wrong side of the ledger now, and those who are on the right side of the ledger claim they have a very narrow margin of profit. If so, they can not possibly absorb it. What, then, will they do? Either they will pay lower prices for the raw commodities they process in manufacturing establishments or they will add the tax to the cost of the article and hand it down to the consumer. The farmers and the laboring men of the country are the producers of the raw products the manufacturers use, and they are also largely the consumers of the country. In either event, it means the tax will be paid largely by the farmers and the laboring people—those least able to payand those most able to pay will be correspondingly relieved. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has again expired.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. KLEBERG].

Mr. KLEBERG. Mr. Chairman, I have listened with great interest since the day the debate on this bill began in this House to the various reasons assigned why the bill should not pass and the reasons assigned by those favoring the bill why the bill should pass. To be perfectly frank with you, before the first day's debate on this bill was opened I had already made up my mind as to what I personally intended to do in this matter, and I listened attentively to see if I could hear some one say something about that particular thing that had to do with my reaching this decision.

Referring to the RECORD of yesterday, I find a statement made by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CHINDBLOM] in which he said in one paragraph of his remarks:

Government securities find buyers, because the private pursuits of the people are not considered safe for investment. Such a condition does not promise well for the return of prosperity. Hoarding can be done in banks and unproductive securities as well as in vaults and mattresses.

To be perfectly frank with you, that particular statement is the first time that the question, as I see it, upon which we must determine to take this action depends has been broached before this committee.

As a matter of fact, my friends, all of the measures we have passed heretofore in this session of Congress having to do with the restoration of confidence on the part of the people through the appropriation of enormous sums for that purpose for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and other bills have failed in touching upon the particular problem which must be solved before we have any right to hope for a return to normalcy.

There are two things involved in my support of this bill. One of them is the creation of confidence on the part of those in whose hands the money of depositors is kept, not only for safe-keeping but for the purpose of investment, trust companies, and banks, who first look at the mercury in the investment barometer before they make any loans, I am absolutely confident that the mere establishment of a basis of Government credit, which would amount to a balancing of the Budget, would not be enough in itself to meet this requirement. There must be an expression of the people on this question, an expression showing their faith in their Government and their country. There must be a meeting of this issue squarely by the people.

We now come to a brief consideration of this bill, and I will attempt to show you one peculiar condition and difference that possibly exists in my mind and in the mind of the average member of this great forum. I have not been with you long enough to acquire entirely the viewpoint of a representative of the people. I still find myself speaking as a taxpayer and as an average citizen. Much has been said to you concerning the importance of protecting the American people from this unjust tax. Much has been said to you about the proposition of the American opposition to this tax. I vote for this tax, my friends, because I am a friend, individually and politically, of the laboring man in this country. I vote for this tax because I am a friend of the farmer. I am one of them. I am a livestock man. I also vote for this tax because as an average citizen, and speaking for myself in this connection, I deem it a privilege in time of stress to contribute my little to the needs of my country.

I note, in reference to the laboring man, a statement in the address by the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. BACHMANN] in which he quoted a telegram from a manufacturing concern in West Virginia. This was on yesterday, and the telegram reads as follows:

West Virginia manufacturers unable to pay additional sales tax.

This, of course, refers to the fact that they have a sales tax in West Virginia.

Suggest Congress to devote more thought to reducing salaries, commissions, and expenses, as all other business and industry has been obliged to do. Further sales-tax burden will result in stifling initiative and industries in West Virginia.

You have before you, my friends, definite evidence in this little telegram that the people you are seeking to befriend by the failure to pass this tax and balance the Budget will, in the last analysis, inevitably, if we do not do this at this time, be forced to bear this burden in the years to come. This, as I understand it, is a 2-year program and not a continuing one.

The question is asked: How can you believe that this will not be continued and displace our present form of taxation? Let me say to you, my friends, that a continuation of the idea of placing a greater and greater burden upon industry at this time and incomes, if you please, as contained in this measure, if enlarged, instead of allowing the great mass of the people to help, as we are suggesting in this bill, will result in the breaking down of that system to such an extent that everybody will have to pay some sort of a tax. The failure of the income tax, the estate tax, and other forms of taxation we now have in the breaking down by the placing of a too exorbitant and heavy burden upon those who pay these taxes now would result inevitably through the destruction and consumption of the capital assets of this Nation in placing the entire citizenship in the position where a tax which would reach them all would have to be levied and instead of a manufacturers' tax, in all probability, this would be a general sales tax.

I believe that the man who has the ability to pay should pay at the present time, and in the past he has paid, and is paying now; but you now have an emergency which calls upon you for a certain degree of patriotism, together with careful study concerning the future in the contemplation of this thing about which you talk as so onerous and so burdensome.

For my part, I am not in accord generally with the principles of the sales tax, and, as a matter of fact, taking the complaints that have come to me from my district, I find that everybody in my district is opposed to this sales tax. and everybody knows it is going to ruin him; but by the same token everybody knows that he is doing his part in this emergency.

I sympathize with the committee which had to make this decision before it came to us. I recognize that on that committee we have men of real ability, men who, in all probability, rank with the men of highest ability in this entire Chamber, in any chamber that has gone before or any that may come.

They had before them evidence of all sorts concerning the solution of this great problem, and in the last analysis they presented this measure to us as their solution of this difficulty.

Their solution of this difficulty embraces the two things which, in my opinion, are essential before we will ever get back on our feet nationally or individually. Through this bill every American citizen is granted the privilege of expressing himself in the form of paying taxes. When they pay them they will feel they are helping the credit of this Federation of Labor, for instance, having gone on record in country and adding to its perpetuity. On the other hand, you have been told that the committee thought, after exhaustive study, that the other means available would not produce taxes enough to balance the Budget. The Budget at this time, peculiarly different from other times, must be balanced lest the credit of this Government be damaged to such an extent that the restoration of it to a sound basis become still more difficult because of the inevitable fact that to continue as we are for any appreciable length of time means final ruin. It is always more difficult and costly to rebuild from ruins than to improve upon a soundly solid structure. The credit of this country and the financial integrity of Government securities and bonds has stood much in years gone by.

But never before has history recorded a situation of such intensity and of such all-embracing character as the one which now confronts us. Until the moneys in the banks referred to above are put to constructive work by making available loans to contractors and investors which in turn put the laboring man to work; until credit is established for those men in the livestock business who are not breeders and producers, but who in turn buy the livestock producers' calves and steers for stocker and feeder purposes and who in turn buy the farmers' corn and feed, and until continuing this process the appetites of the American people have been whetted by constructive employment and remuneration for their labors and until this remuneration enables them to buy to satisfy their hunger, we will continue in our present desperate plight. Every recommendation which has been made to prevent the passage of this bill in this House has, in reality, but deepened the rut we are in and rendered more difficult our getting out of it until finally, as in the case of Rome, we exterminate ourselves by internal revolt and self-destruction. In conclusion let me say that the organization in the House, through its leaders, has endeavored through all of the appropriation bills presented to this body to prevent additional expenditure of money and has just as determinedly used every effort to prevent the cutting of salaries.

The purpose of the majority has been thwarted in a few instances in the limitation of appropriations to present needs, and unless now we finally add a balanced Budget to the accomplishment of the House of Representatives the work which has gone before will not, in my opinion, relieve or improve conditions. The recommendation to balance the Budget by the issuance of bonds is vacuous and amounts precisely to increasing the deficiency and weakening the credit of this country and, by the same token, lowers in the last analysis the value of Government securities and at the same time fails again in bringing forth the expression of confidence by the American people in their Government upon which so much depends. I beg of you to consider the laboring man and his future; the future of the American farmer and cattle raiser, which depends entirely upon some impetus being given to that frozen and inert mass of currency referred to above upon whose circulation in constructive lines and channels the future depends. Vote for this 2-year tax program, as set out in this bill, with amendments to be made, and in my opinion you will have served a great and patriotic people well.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Davis].

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. Chairman, I was very much surprised when I learned that the Ways and Means Committee was seriously considering the imposition of a general sales tax. I was shocked when I learned that the Democratic members of that committee were giving serious consideration to such a proposition, because it is in violation of every principle of the Democratic Party. This party has repeatedly and unconditionally declared against any such policy in its national platforms and otherwise.

For instance, the platform adopted by the Democratic National Convention of 1924 declared:

The income tax was intended as a tax upon wealth. It was not intended to take from the poor any part of the necessities of life. We hold that the fairest tax with which to raise revenues for the Federal Government is the income tax. We favor a graduated tax upon incomes, so adjusted as to lay the burdens of government upon the taxpayers in proportion to the benefits they enjoy and their ability to pay. We oppose the so-called nuisance taxes, sales taxes, and all other forms of taxation that unfairly shift to the consumer the burdens of taxation. * * * We hold that all taxes are unnecessarily high and pledge ourselves to further reductions.

So far as I am aware, during the 125 years' glorious history of the Democratic Party, no Democrat who has ever attained any prestige has favored a general sales tax, either specifically or in principle.

The Democratic Party should not be censured because of this bill. The few Democratic members of the Ways and Means Committee who are proposing this infamous policy do not represent the Democratic Party. They are acting directly contrary to the well-established and repeatedly announced principles of the party.

The distinguished sponsor of this bill, the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Caisp], stated in his speech that it was not a Democratic bill, and in that respect I fully agree with him. This is one portion of his speech that I fully indorse.

I have repeatedly denounced a sales tax in speeches to my constituents. I have nothing to retract. I am opposed to it in principle. The same gentlemen who propose this sales tax presented the moratorium resolution foregoing the collection of $250,000,000 interest due us from foreign nations, one large reason for the Treasury deficit. I did not follow them on the moratorium, and I shall not follow them on the sales tax. Having followed the lead of President Hoover in granting the moratorium, they now want us to make it up by the imposition upon our own people of the most unjust and oppressive tax conceivable.

The gentleman from Georgia also says that it is not a Republican bill. While the proponents of a general sales tax have, generally speaking, been members of the Republican Party, yet heretofore neither party has ever seriously proposed any such tax. It is quite certain that if the Republicans had been in control of the House they would not have dared to propose this indefensible tax, at least at this time. In fact, we are reliably informed that it was not the intention of the administration to propose any tax bill at this time if the Republicans had organized the House.

The Republicans said nothing about imposing taxes to make up the deficit last year. Although in complete control of all branches of the Government, they made no gesture whatever toward balancing the Budget by taxation for the present fiscal year, although it was known and stated by the Secretary of the Treasury and the President a year ago that there would be a deficit of nearly a billion dollars. Instead, the Treasury recently issued $900,000,000 of Treasury certificates to make up this deficit.

Secretary of the Treasury Mills may be at heart very strongly in favor of the sales tax, but he is a shrewd politician. It is significant that he at first advised the Ways and Means Committee that he would not assume responsibility for a general sales tax. At least he knows that we are to have a national election this fall. However, when most of the Democrats on the Ways and Means Committee insisted upon cutting their political throats, Secretary Mills was naturally willing to view such a performance with equanimity, and so has joined in a strenuous effort to shove through the sales tax.

In my opinion much of the argument upon this bill has been predicated upon a false premise, and that is, that it is necessary to balance the Budget at this particular time by taxation.

We all agree, of course, that it is desirable at all times to balance the Budget. It would be much preferable if the Budget had never become unbalanced. However, there have been many times during the history of this country when we have not balanced the Budget by taxation, and never before has the American Congress enacted a general sales tax to balance the Budget, or for any other purpose. They did not do so during or following the Civil War, or during or following any other war; and even during the World War, when we were put to the necessity of raising over $30,000,000,000,000, we did not impose any sales tax except upon luxuries. We at that time issued $26,000,000,000 in were promptly subscribed the same day more than four bonds rather than impose upon the American people such a vicious system of taxation as this, notwithstanding the fact that at that time the American people were prosperous, they were all making money and were infinitely better able at that time to pay a sales tax than they are now. They are as little able to pay it to-day as at any time in the history of this country. It will fall upon them more heavily and more cruelly than at any other time, and, consequently, there is less justification for it.

Now, what arguments are advanced that it is necessary to balance the Budget at this time by taxation?

In the first place, some advance the idea that if we do not do it the credit of this great nation will be impaired. Upon that subject I wish to call a witness who, I think, will be accepted as authority by the proponents of this tax. As late as December 31, 1931, the Secretary of the Treasury, Ogden L. Mills, who is in favor of this tax bill, as are most multimillionaires, made a speech in New York in which he was discussing the probability of the issuance of additional Government bonds and he used this language:

I do not mean to suggest that the addition of $3,000,000,000, or even $4,000,000,000, could conceivably impair the national credit. That debt stood at $25,000,000,000 a decade ago and the national credit was unimpaired.

Is not this pretty good authority on that question?

The Federal bonded indebtedness has been reduced in the past 10 years from about $26,000,000,000 to about $16,000,-000,000. In this connection it is interesting to note that the debts of our States have increased $10,000,000,000 during the

Now, what else? The distinguished gentleman from Georgia, the introducer of this bill, in his speech said that the banks of the country were calling in loans and were keeping their assets in liquid condition in order that they might invest them in anticipated governmental issues of bonds.

If these banks thought that these additional issues would impair the credit of this Government, or would not be the best possible investments, would they be pursuing that course? Gentlemen, it is pure bunk to say that the issue of the necessary amount of bonds or certificates to balance the Budget at this time would impair the national credit. [Applause.]

Now, what is the other argument? The other argument is that it will impair the market value of our Government bonds, or perhaps make it necessary to pay a higher rate of interest. Suppose it does. Money is dear right now. It is high measured in other commodities. To give you an example, taking 100 as an index figure in the year 1926-and these figures are compiled by the Department of Laborfarm products have fallen during this brief period of five years from 100 to 55.1, measured in the dollar, and during the past year they have dropped 20 points. I could go on through various other commodities and show you that the same thing is true in numerous instances.

Money commands a high rate of interest now under the actual conditions that exist, and suppose that we should have to sell bonds carrying a little higher rate of interest than has been true at other times, what of it? right at this time, able to sell at par 2 per cent antihoarding bonds and sell 31/8 per cent and 33/4 per cent certificates. Government certificates have recently sold on a basis of 1.8 per cent annual interest.

Mr. KNUTSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DAVIS. For a question.

Mr. KNUTSON. Some of the bonds are down to 90 cents, are they not?

Mr. DAVIS. Oh, yes. Some of the bonds that are drawing 3 per cent interest or less are right now selling on the market for less than par, and the reporting of this bill and the prospect of its passage has caused no appreciable advance in the market value of bonds. But the Government of the United States has not sold any of its bonds for less than par, and they can sell all they want to at low interest rates. The $900,000,000 of certificates offered the other day times over.

Mr. BROWNING. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DAVIS. I yield.

Mr. BROWNING. Considering the situation that confronts us, does the gentleman think it would be much of a sacrifice if property belonging to the Government is somewhat depressed?

Mr. DAVIS. No. I was going to discuss that very proposition. I think it is not nearly so bad to cause a temporary depression in the market value of the investments of the bondholders of the country as it would be to impose a cruel and oppressive burden upon the American people who have no bonds. [Applause.]

Oh, the bondholders, of course, are in favor of this tax. The big capitalists are in favor of it. All that class of citizens who selfishly and persistently want to shift the burden of taxation onto the backs of the masses of the people, in order that they may escape their just share of taxation, are in favor of it.

Now, on that point, I have in my hand the Wall Street Journal of yesterday. It contains an article entitled "The Sales Tax Should Pass," in which it is stated that "There can be no certainty as to the fate of the sales tax proposed in the House revenue bill, but the best opinion is that it will pass." And then the article gives one reason for this belief, the fact that the opposition is not strongly organized. Later on the article states:

The House and Senate leaders are confident that in the long run the pressure brought against the sales tax will be less than that which would have been exerted by individual groups which would be affected by a long list of selected excise taxes.

That is true; the great army of consumers are not organized. They have no lobbyists in this c'ty and the Capitol to make demands and threats, as have the other interests referred to by the Wall Street Journal. We are sent here to represent them, and it is up to us to protect their interests; and if we fail to do so, we are misrepresentatives, rather than Representatives of the people. [Applause.]

However, it is proper to state that the four leading farm organizations of the country are denouncing these sales taxes. The farmers are the biggest single consuming class. so this tax would fall heaviest upon them.

Those elements who have been advocating the sales tax are largely the same element who are responsible for the present deplorable situation. They are the elements who talk about there not being enough money in this country to buy United States bonds, and yet they induced the American people to spend many billions of their savings in worthless foreign bonds. [Applause.]

The United States has invested abroad about $28,500,-000,000. This includes the debts due our Government from foreign governments and also private investments abroad. It is true that a large portion of this is now probably worthless, but American money to that extent has gone abroad.

They say that if we tax wealth too heavily, they will invest in tax-exempt bonds. It would be better for them to invest in our own Government, State, county, and municipal tax-exempt bonds than to send their money abroad. It may be that if we issue a few more Government bonds. we will keep more money at home and send less of it abroad. [Applause.]

However, as indicated, I readily recognize the fact that it is highly desirable to balance the Budget, and, in my opinion, that can be done without imposing additional taxes and without issuing additional Government securities.

In the first place, we should effect drastic economies.

During and following the World War, the people and the governments-municipal, county, State, and Federal-went on an extravagant spending spree. They spent money like the proverbial drunken sailor. That was one of the natural incidents of the greatest war in the world's history. Money came freely and went freely.

In the two years following the World War, during which Woodrow Wilson was still President, there were drastic reductions in governmental expenditures and in the number of the employees of the Government. However, since that time Federal expenditures have gradually increased, and there has been practically no reduction in the number of Federal employees.

The total Federal expenditures for the year 1916, the year before we entered the World War, were $1,042,725,180.

President Wilson retired from office March 4, 1921. Since that time the current expenditures for running the Government have increased about $1,000,000,000 under complete Republican control.

The Democratic Party is not responsible for this situation. I cartainly disclaim any responsibility. During my service in Congress I have voted and worked against many more proposals and appropriations than I have voted for. I have made repeated efforts to effect economies and to prevent extravagance. The Congressional Record will disclose that I have made many speeches, proposed legislation and amendments, and voted against many of the things which have been done.

I recognize the fact that it is no easy thing to cut out or reduce activities which have grown up and to effect the discharge of a large number of employees. Whenever there is a proposal to reduce the appropriation for any activity of the Government there immediately arises a storm of protests from those throughout the country interested in such activities. Everybody is for reductions of expenditures, but they want the reductions to fall where they are not interested.

However, the time has come when it is absolutely necessary for economy and retrenchment, both on the part of individuals and governments. We must get back to earth. We must get on a sane, sound, economic basis. We can not afford to continue spending beyond our incomes.

Of course, the Democrats, with a bare majority in one branch of one department of the Government, can not within a few months entirely correct a situation which has grown up as a result of 12 years of Republican extravagance. We can do but little without the cooperation of the Republicans in Congress and of the President and the executive departments. However, we should certainly exert our best efforts, and accomplish all we possibly can.

It is undoubtedly true that there are many Federal activities, bureaus, commissions, and employees which should be dispensed with. There should be eliminations and reductions of both activities and personnel. There should be a drastic reduction in Government expenditures. There should be a reduction in salaries. Of course, any salary reduction bill should, and will, include a substantial reduction in congressional salaries. We should set the example. The average annual salary of civilian employees of the Government is $1,440. Including the Army and Navy personnel, it is considerably less. Naturally, we all have very great sympathy for the Government employees on small salaries. In the interest of fairness, a distinction should be made in favor of those receiving small salaries.

If proper eliminations, reductions, and economies are effected, it should take care of at least a substantial portion of the deficit.

Furthermore, instead of recommending new taxes, the Treasury Department should speed up the collection of the billion dollars of past-due taxes, chiefly due from large tax-payers, and most of which is said to be collectible.

During the past eight years, the Treasury has refunded about $3,500,000,000 of taxes paid—nearly all to the wealthy who in the first instance had employed skilled lawyers to aid in claiming every conceivable deduction in their tax returns. The administrative provisions of the revenue law should be overhauled and strengthened so as to prevent these enormous and outrageous refunds to the favored few. Several of these large refunds were made to Andrew Mellon, the Secretary of the Treasury himself, and his companies, including the Aluminum Trust. In other words, he, in effect, made refunds to himself.

After the World War, and while Woodrow Wilson was President, Congress enacted the sinking fund law for the retirement of our national debt. We have exceeded the requirements of that act by nearly three and one-half billion dollars; that is, we have paid that much on our national debt in excess of the requirements of that act. There is included in the Budget for the next fiscal year the sum of $426,489,600 as a payment on the principal of our foreign debt. This is in addition to the $666,000,000 included in the Budget for the payment of interest on our debt.

Having anticipated the payment of our debt to the extent we have, we should and could well afford to postpone these sinking-fund payments for two years and thus reduce the Budget by about $853,000,000. Under the circumstances, it is our duty to do this, and it would be in accord with the position of the Democratic Party. The 1928 Democratic national platform contained the following provision:

The Democratic Party avows its belief in the fiscal policy inaugurated by the last Democratic administration, which has provided a sinking fund sufficient to extinguish the Nation's indebtedness within a reasonable period of time without harassing the present and next succeeding generations with tax burdens which, if not unendurable, do in fact check initiative in enterprise and progress in business. * * * Taxes levied beyond the actual requirements of the legally established sinking fund are but an added burden upon the American people.

Upon this same subject, the Secretary of the Treasury, Ogden L. Mills, in a public speech in New York last December stated:

It is sometimes urged that, since in the course of 11 years prior to the fiscal year 1931 we had retired some $3,460,000,000 of debt from surplus receipts, we are justified in incurring deficits up to that amount. There is some force to the argument. We have created something in the nature of a reserve which we are warranted in drawing on, certainly to some extent. But there are definite limitations.

Certainly the Budget could and should be balanced by the different methods just indicated, and without the imposition of any additional taxes or the issuance of additional Government securities.

However, if the Ways and Means Committee and the majority of the Congress and the administration desire to disregard all of these methods of effecting savings and bringing in revenue, and persist in their determination to enact a tax bill at all hazards, certainly the tax imposed should be in accordance with well-recognized and sound principles of taxation. Whatever additional taxes that are imposed should certainly be fair and based upon the ability to pay.

Rather than resort to an unjust and oppressive sales tax and other unsound taxes embraced in this bill, they should restore the rates carried in the 1918 revenue act on estates and gifts and the surtaxes on the large incomes.

The total expense for Government-Federal, State, and local—is nearly 20 per cent of the total gross income of the Nation. The value of estates left by decedents each year in the United States amounts to about $10,000,000,000. The State and Federal Governments combined are collecting only about $160,000,000 annually by way of the State and Federal cstate and inheritance taxes, or about 1.6 per cent of the total amount that devolves. Of this amount the Federal Government is collecting about $48,000,000. If a tax should be imposed upon estates equivalent to the tax upon property and incomes, still allowing a $50,000 exemption for each estate, considerably more than enough revenue would be raised to pay the entire Federal deficit. Is there any logical reason why the tax upon estates should not be equal to the tax upon incomes and property? There is infinitely more reason for taxing estates than there is for taxing property and incomes. The distributees of estates have not earned same. They are permitted to receive estates only by the grace of laws. In other words, the devolution of property from ancestor to heir, or by will, is a matter of law and not of natural right.

In England they do not have a sales tax, but last year the British Government collected $400,000,000 in estate taxes. The United States, with four times the wealth of England, collected $48,000,000.

Furthermore, we should have a graduated scale of estate taxes; we have that now, but the rates should be increased, especially on the very large estates.

Four per cent of the people own 80 per cent of the wealth of the country. The rich are growing richer and the poor are growing poorer. The greatest menace in America to-day is the vast accumulation of wealth into the hands of a few and the tremendous power which they wield in the social, political, and economic life of the Nation.

In the true and prophetic words of Oliver Goldsmith:

Ill fares the land, To hastening ills a prey, Where wealth accumulates And men decay.

I am firmly convinced that a very substantial graduated estate tax and a corresponding tax on gifts made in contemplation of death should be imposed not only as a revenue producer but also for the purpose of preventing too large accumulations of wealth. That is likewise the opinion of nearly all economists and unbiased students of government.

Andrew Carnegie amassed a large fortune, but he never ceased to be a real patriot. As far back as 1892 in a public address he declared:

We must let the worker alone during his life, but after his death the State should step in and demand its share of his hoard through a graduated system of taxation. Every fortune left by a hoarder should contribute to the state in proportion to its size, small amounts left to those dependent upon the decedent being exempt, but the scale rising by steps until with enormous fortunes reaching into many millions it should be decreed that "one-half goes to the privy coffers of the state." This is the proportion which the laws of Venice exacted from her Shylock. Our modern Shylocks should be made to contribute at least as much.

Under modern conditions, when men are amassing fortunes of from two hundred million to a billion dollars, and in the manner such fortunes are made, I am of the opinion that the tax on the large estates should go higher than that suggested by Carnegie. In fact, when he suggested that in the case of "enormous fortunes reaching into many millions it should be decreed that one-half go to the privy coffers of the State," there was probably not a man in America worth as much as $50,000,000.

Rather than impose the unjust and burdensome taxes carried in this bill, you should increase the surtax on large incomes. The law for 1918-1924 ran the surtaxes up as high as 65 per cent. In 1914, 60 people in the United States reported net incomes of over $1,000,000 per annum. In 1928 this number had increased to 511. The net individual incomes of these 511 men amounted to more than the total amount received for the combined wheat and cotton crops. Suppose that we impose 65 per cent surtaxes on a man's net income in excess of $1,000,000 annually; the tax would start at nothing and gradually rise so that he would probably pay a tax of about $500,000. This would leave him a half million dollars; and do you not believe that would keep the wolf from the door? Do you not believe that that would be better than to take food out of the mouths of little children, as this bill will do? [Applause.]

If the committee is determined to impose excise taxes, here is another suggestion that I have not heard made. We could impose, say, a 15 per cent excise tax upon the transportation costs of American citizens going abroad on foreign vessels and returning on foreign vessels. These foreign lines obtain much revenue from American people and they pay no tax. That would be justifiable in the sense that it would clearly be a luxury tax and, in the second place, it would be in the interest of an American merchant marine. That would bring in about $18,000,000 revenue.

However, the most vicious feature of this sales tax is the motive in the background. Those primarily responsible for this attempt to foist this indefensible sales tax upon the American people are not prompted by a desire to balance the Budget but by the hope and the expectation of establishing this un-American policy as a permanent system. I acquit of any such motive the few Democrats who are advocating this undemocratic policy; they have simply been imposed upon and misled. Every Democrat who has spoken in favor of this sales tax frankly admits that he does not believe in the principle of a sales tax, but, after making apologies, professes the belief that it is necessary to balance the Budget and to do it by this method. I am proud of the fact that apparently an overwhelming majority of the Democrats of the House are standing by Democratic principles and are going to support a motion to strike the sales tax section from this bill.

As stated, the worst feature of this proposal is that which is back of it. We have always had two lines of thought with respect to taxation. One is the doctrine that taxation should be imposed in accordance with ability to pay and in accordance with the benefits derived from the Government. The Democratic Party also adheres to the doctrine that no more taxes should be imposed than are absolutely necessary to meet the expenses of government economically and honestly administered. On the other hand, there is a line of thought that the masses of the people should pay all the taxes, and that class is strongly in favor of sales or consumption taxes. If this bill is enacted into law, I tell you it is going to be very difficult, indeed, to ever get it out of the law. Those who are back of it are in favor of making it a permanent law and repealing the income tax law and the estate taxes, which are the fairest tax laws ever written. The distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Warson], for many years a member of the Ways and Means Committee, in his speech on this bill frankly said that this was his purpose and hope; he boldly predicted that if this sales tax is admitted as an emergency measure it would be permanently retained. Many others say the same thing.

The multimillionaire publisher, William Randolph Hearst, has been one of the most active and persistent advocates of the sales-tax system in this country. Last Sunday he had a double-column signed editorial on the front page of his newspapers, in which he made a vicious assault upon the income tax and an argument in favor of the sales tax. Then he concluded his editorial in this wise:

When the Democratic Party has the sincerity to be democratic, when it has the patriotism to be American, it will substitute excise taxation and sales taxation for the undemocratic, un-American, discriminatory income taxation, etc.

The idea of talking about the income tax being undemocratic and un-American, and then following it with an advocacy of a tax that of all taxes ever proposed is undemocratic and un-American, and is a tax upon poverty rather than upon wealth!

Mr. CROSSER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. DAVIS. Yes.

Mr. CROSSER. And he did not say anything about its being temporary, did he?

Mr. DAVIS. No. His whole article, as well as his conclusion, shows that he is in favor of a permanent sales-tax policy, and that he wants to substitute it for the income tax; and I say to you Democrats on this side and you Republicans over there, who feel impelled to go along contrary to your own convictions on the idea, that it is a temporary expedient, that you are treading upon dangerous ground. We have too often seen the camel get his nose under the tent and finally get under there himself. That is what is back of this, and the proponents of this measure are willing for the American people to pay any price, to be subjected to any sort of sacrifice and privation in order that they, the wealthy classes, may fasten upon the American people this unjust, unfair, and unpardonable sales tax. [Applause.]

Aside from the nefarious sales tax, there are many other features of this bill which I can not approve.

I am unalterably opposed to the increased tariff duties carried in the bill upon almost every commodity. It is undemocratic, unjust, and indefensible. The Hawley-Smoot Tariff Act imposed the highest tariff duties in history. It was jammed through over the bitter opposition of Democrats, independents, and many of the Republicans, in spite of the warnings of all the economists and the formal protests of 36 foreign nations. All the leading nations of the world have passed retaliatory tariff laws. The result was that world commerce was stagnated. Our own foreign commerce fell off half. It left on our hands our surplus farm products, manufactured articles, and other commodities. That tariff law, undoubtedly, was the chief contributing factor to the terrible panic with which we have been afflicted for more than two years. We Democrats, individually and collectively, have denounced that tariff law in unmeasured terms. That infamous tariff law is already costing the consuming public billions of dollars annually. And for Democratic members of the Ways and Means Committee to propose a substantial increase in those burdensome tariff rates is more than I can understand. Not satisfied with imposing the burden of a sales tax, they propose to impose large additional burdens upon the masses of the people by a substantial increase in tariff duties. I have repeatedly denounced both a sales tax and high tariffs. I still stand where I have always stood. You gentlemen have departed from Democratic principles. As highly as I regard you personally, I can not follow you on this bill.

Aside from the firm belief that no tax bill is necessary, there are many other features which I do not approve. In my opinion 85 per cent of all the taxes imposed by this bill would fall upon the masses of the people—those least able to pay. I am opposed to lowering the income-tax exemptions. This will bring in 1,700,000 taxpayers very few of whom earn more than a living. It would bring in but a small amount of additional revenue, but it would fall heavily upon those from whom collected, especially at this time. The cost of collecting would almost consume the revenue derived from this source.

I am likewise opposed to taxing the movie admissions. They afford recreation for the masses who are not able to engage in more expensive forms of recreation and pleasure. The people need something to occasionally divert their minds from the horrible conditions with which we are afflicted.

It is inconceivable to me that any man who even claims to have at heart the interests of his people, who even claims to be sympathetic with the thought that taxes should be imposed heaviest upon those most able to pay and lightest upon those least able to pay, should support such a dangerous precedent as this.

Some of those advocating this bill echo the howl of plutocracy about "soaking the rich." I do not want to "soak" anybody, but it would be better to soak the rich than to starve the poor.

Some of those advocating this sales tax and other taxes in this bill say that every citizen ought to be made to pay his share of the taxes. Of all the fallacious arguments ever presented by man that is the silliest. Why do I say that? The poor man, the average man, the man who is required to spend all of his income, whether it be wages, or salary, or income, from a farm or small business in order to support himself and his dependents is the heaviest taxpayer in all the land because he pays the tax upon his entire income, without regard to any income tax. Whether he owns a farm or a little home or is a renter, he pays the tax upon the property he occupies. They pay their proportion of the taxes upon everything they purchase. In other words, those engaged in any kind of business include their taxes as a part of their overhead expenses and pass the same on to their customers. Aside from all other taxes of every character and description paid either directly or indirectly by the consumers, the tariff alone costs the American consumers at least $4,000,000,000 a year in the form of tariff duties and the increased cost of commodities made possible by the tariff: the worst feature of this is that only a relatively small percentage of the tribute exacted from the people by the tariff goes into the Federal Treasury. Every time the consumer buys sugar, about half the price he pays is a tax levied by the tariff.

It is true that the tax burden is not fairly distributed, but it is the poor and not the rich who are most heavily burdened. Official statistics show that the State and local tax burdens on the man of small income are about five times as great as those on the man with an income of $100,000, and twelve times as great as the man with an income of $5,000,000 or over, based upon the percentage of the tax to the income. A general sales tax, like the tariff, would greatly increase this inequitable discrepancy.

All consumption taxes are a tax upon a man's needs and not upon his income or property. It is not a tax based upon ability to pay but a tax based upon the necessities of life. It is not fair even between men of the same income. The man of small income and a large family, compelled to spend his whole income for the support of his family, is required to pay more in consumption taxes than a man with a much larger income and no or few dependents.

People who are scarcely able to buy the bare necessities of life should not be required to pay a sales tax upon the few necessities which they are able to buy. It would deprive them of such necessities—to the extent of the tax.

The farmers are the heaviest taxed of any class of our citizens in proportion to their ability to pay. Their investment, whether it be in land or stock and implements, is tangible property, which can not escape the eye of the tax-gatherer, such as intangible personal property does almost universally. The farmer, like the other large army of consumers, does not have subsidiaries, affiliates, and holding companies to which he can shift a part of his taxes. The farmer pays taxes upon all his property and then upon everything he purchases.

There are now 8,000,000 unemployed people in the United States who during normal times are engaged in gainful occupations. Counting their dependents, there are probably 25,000,000 people without any income and dependent upon relatives or charity for subsistence. This enumeration does not include the 27,000,000 on the farms. Due to discriminatory legislation, droughts, the depression, and the resultant collapse of farm prices, the farmers are in a most deplorable condition. They are having their farms sold from under them by the thousands.

Combining these two classes gives us nearly half of the population of this country.

Most of our merchants and small business men are just hanging on—many of them on the verge of bankruptcy. Many of them have already been driven to bankruptcy.

Most of those with small incomes are sharing the same for the support of relatives who are less fortunate.

Even in normal times it requires all of the income of an overwhelming percentage of our citizens to meet their necessary expenses. In the case of a large number they are unable to procure comforts. Only a comparatively small percentage have any luxuries, and these generally meager.

In these distressful times the incomes of the people are either wiped out or reduced. Millions are without adequate food and raiment. Millions are undernourished. The savings of the people have in numerous instances been wiped out or are tied up in closed banks; about 2,700 banks closed last year.

No; this is no time to be imposing additional tax burdens. The people are not able to pay present taxes. Most of all are they unable to pay a sales tax, which is the very opposite of an income tax. The sales tax is a tax on misfortune rather than upon prosperity.

Talk about protecting the market value of the investments of the bondholders! Even prior to this panic, according to the official figures, the average farm income for a man and his family was five or six hundred dollars a year, and for the past two years it has been nothing. They have exhausted their resources. They do not have the money to pay any more taxes, and yet we propose to impose upon them this additional sales tax.

There has been a great deal said here about patriotism. Certain speakers have assumed a "holier-than-thou" attitude, have prated of their own patriotism, and they have talked about those opposing this tax as being prompted by political expediency; and yet their organ, the Wall Street Journal, says that the difficulty here is that the opposition is not backed by organized effort and that the vast organized elements of the country are here pressing for the sales tax.

But talking about patriotism, now what have they done? They have made this tax doubly vicious and indefensible by collecting it from the manufacturer. Everybody knows that in nearly all instances it will be pyramided and passed on to the consumer. The manufacturer is, in effect, made the collector of this sales tax. He and each successive handler of the article will pass the tax on, inflated by a profit percentage, until the consumer pays the tax with two or three accumulated profits thereon. Such a tax will increase the cost of living, diminish the consuming power of the public, hurt business of all kinds, and retard economic recovery.

The report of this committee gives it as their opinion that it will not be universally passed on, but that there will be exceptions, because of competitive conditions, under which some of the manufacturers will not be able to pass it on. The little independent fellow who has to get whatever price he can, just as the farmer does, is that exception, but the great organized manufacturing industries, those in monopolies and in price combines, will pass it on and our little factories at home are the only ones which may not be able to pass it on. [Applause.] The committee has imposed this sales tax in such a manner that it will cost the consuming public two or three times as much as the Government gets in the form of taxes; and why is it done? They admit privately that that is done in an effort to make it "invisible." In other words, in an effort to deceive the consumers and to try to escape the just condemnation of an outraged public, they are willing to make it cost the American people hundreds of millions of dollars more. [Applause.] And then those same gentlemen talk about pa-

My friends, if there ever was a bill written at the behest of plutocracy and against the interest of the masses of the people, it is this bill. [Applause.]

I want to say that, in my opinion, it is the most indefensible betrayal of democratic principles ever presented to the American Congress. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Tennessee has expired.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 20 minutes to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Collins].

Mr. COLLINS. Mr. Chairman, since the time of Jefferson the Democratic Party has claimed to be the protector of the rights and liberties of the American people. Usually it has followed principles sound and progressive; usually its members were masses believing in the justice of their cause. It consistently has maintained that the function of government is not to centralize wealth nor confine prosperity to a favored few but to preserve an equal opportunity for individuals in every walk of life. This party which since its formation has championed the rights of the people is now pictured in an entirely different light. To-day it is advertised throughout the length and breadth of this land as the exponent of the most vicious tax bill ever offered to Congress for adoption, coupled with an actual increase in the already exorbitant tariff rates. Both proposals are condemned not only by actual achievements of the Democratic Party but by the rank and file of Democrats throughout the country.

A review of the traditional policy of the Democratic Party should make the present inconsistent position of certain of its members stand out more in relief. The tax revision plan of the Democratic Party as shown in its platform of 1920 was as follows:

We advocate a tax reform and a searching revision of the war revenue acts to fit peace conditions, so that the wealth of the Nation may not be withdrawn from productive enterprise and diverted to wasteful or nonproductive expenditures.

We demand prompt action by the next Congress for a complete survey of existing taxes and their modification and simplification, with a view to secure greater equity and justice in tax burden and improvement in administration.

On public economy the platform speaks loudly in favor of economies in administration of Government affairs as a way to avoid high taxes:

Claiming to have effected great economies in government expenditures, the Republican Party can not show the reduction of one dollar in taxation as a corollary of this false pretense. In contrast the last Democratic Congress enacted legislation reducing the taxes from eight billions, designed to be raised, to six billions for the first year after the armistice, and to four billions thereafter; and there the total is left undiminished by our political adversaries.

The Democratic platform of 1924, in discussing taxation, states:

The issue between the President and the Democratic Party is not one of tax reduction or of the conservation of capital. It is an issue of a relative burden of taxation and of the distribution of capital as affected by the taxation of income. The President still stands on the so-called Mellon plan, which his party has just refused to independ on mention in its platform.

refused to indorse or mention in its platform.

The income tax was intended as a tax upon wealth. It was not intended to take from the poor any part of the necessities of life. We hold that the fairest tax with which to raise revenues for the Federal Government is the income tax. We favor a graduated tax upon incomes, so adjusted as to lay the burdens of government upon the taxpayers in proportion to the benefits they enjoy and their ability to pay. We oppose the so-called nuisance taxes, sales taxes, and all other forms of taxation that unfairly shift to the consumer the burdens of taxation. We refer to the Democratic revenue measure passed by the last Congress as distinguished from the Mellon tax plan as an illustration of the policy of the Democratic Party. We first made a flat reduction of 25 per cent upon the tax on all incomes payable this year, and then we so changed the proposed Mellon plan as to eliminate taxes upon the poor, reduce them upon moderate incomes and, in the lesser degree, upon the incomes of multimillionaires. We hold that all taxes are unnecessarily high and pledge ourselves to further reductions.

We denounce the Mellon tax plan as a device to relieve multimillionaires at the expense of other taxpayers, and we accept the issue of taxation tendered by President Coolidge.

The Democratic platform of 1928 maintains that-

The taxing functions of governments, free or despotic, has for centuries been regarded as the power above all others which require vigilant scrutiny, to the end that it be not exercised for purpose of favor or oppression.

Three times since the World War the Democrats in Congress

Three times since the World War the Democrats in Congress have favored a reduction of the tax burdens of the people in face of stubborn opposition from a Republication administration, and each time these reductions have largely been made for the relief of those least able to endure the exactions of a Republican fiscal policy. The tax bill of the session recently ended was delayed by Republican tactics and juggled by partisan considerations so as to make impossible a full measure of relief to the greater body of taxpayers. The moderate reductions afforded were grudgingly conceded, and the whole proceeding in Congress, dictated as far as possible from the [Republican] White House and the Treasury, denoted the proverbial desire of the Republican Party always to discriminate against the masses in favor of privileged classes.

No Democratic Member would attempt to prove that the present revenue bill is in agreement with Democratic principles. It is not claimed that the sales-tax provision of it is fair to the common people nor that it lays "the burdens of government upon taxpayers in proportion to the benefits they enjoy and their ability to pay." The general sales tax is not only obnoxious to all Democratic pronouncements and achievements but was especially singled out in the 1924 Democratic platform as contrary to accepted rules of fair play.

In the morning New York Times Mr. Green, the president of the American Federation of Labor has emphasized this fact. He is reported as stating:

So far as the record shows, this position—Democratic platform, 1924—has never been changed or modified. In the light of this declaration it is now difficult to understand how and why the majority party in Congress should favor this type of legislation.

It has been condemned either directly or indirectly in all Democratic platforms.

But before discussing the sales tax in detail it is necessary to consider the tariff. The bill states that—

In addition to any other tax or duty imposed by law, there shall be imposed a tax of  $2\frac{1}{4}$  per cent ad valorem on every article imported into the United States.

Of course, there are trifling exceptions, but they are afterwards taxed the  $2\frac{1}{4}$  per cent.

The Democratic attitude on the tariff should be taken into consideration.

The Democratic platform of 1900 states:

We condemn the Dingley tariff law as a trust-breeding measure, skillfully devised to give the few favors which they do not deserve and to place upon the many burdens which they should not bear.

TARIFF REFORM-DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM 1912

We declare it to be a fundamental principle of the Democratic Party that the Federal Government, under the Constitution, has no right or power to impose or collect tariff duties except for the purpose of revenue, and we demand that the collection of such taxes shall be limited to the necessities of government such taxes shall be limited to the necessities of government honestly and economically administered.

The high Republican tariff is the principal cause of the unequal distribution of wealth; it is a system of taxation which makes the rich richer and the poor poorer; under its operations the American farmer and laboring man are the chief sufferers; it raises the cost of the necessaries of life to them but does not protect their products or wages. The farmer sells largely in free markets and buys almost entirely in the protected markets. In the most highly protected industries, such as cotton and wool, steel and iron, the wages of the laborers are the lowest paid in any of our industries. We denounce the Republican pretense on steel and iron, the wages of the laborers are the lowest paid in any of our industries. We denounce the Republican pretense on that subject and assert that American wages are established by competitive conditions and not by the tariff.

We favor the immediate downward revision of the existing high and in many cases prohibitive tariff duties, insisting that material reductions be especially made upon the necessaries of life. Articles entering into competition with trust-controlled products and articles of American manufacture which are sold abroad more cheaply than at home should be put upon the free list.

We recognize that our system of tariff taxation is intimately connected with the business of the country, and we favor the ultimate attainment of the principles we advocate by legislation that will not injure or destroy legitimate industry.

We denounce the action of President Taft in vetoing the bills to reduce the tariff in the cotton, woolen, metal, and chemical schedules, and the farmers' free-list bill, all of which were designed to give immediate relief to the masses from the exactions signed to give immediate relief to the masses from the exactions of the trusts.

The Republican Party, while promising tariff revision, has shown by its tariff legislation that such revision is not to be in the people's interest, and having been faithless to its pledges of 1908, it should no longer enjoy the confidence of the Nation. We appeal to the American people to support us in our demand for a tariff for revenue only.

The platform of 1920 asserts:

We reaffirm the traditional policy of the Democratic Party in favor of a tariff for revenue only and we confirm the policy of basing tariff revision upon the intelligent research of a nonpartisan commission, rather than upon the demands of selfish interests, temporarily held in abeyance.

The Democratic platform of 1924 proclaims:

The Fordney-McCumber Tariff Act is the most unjust, unscientific, and dishonest tariff tax measure ever enacted in our history. It is class legislation, which defrauds all the people for the benefit of a few; it heavily increases the cost of living, penalizes agriculture, corrupts the Government, fosters paternalism, and, in the long run, does not benefit the very interests for which it was enacted.

We denounce the Republican tariff laws which are written in great part in aid of monopolies and thus prevent that reasonable exchange of commodities which would enable foreign countries to buy our surplus agricultural and manufactured products with resultant benefit to the toilers and the producers of America. Trade interchange, on the basis of reciprocal advantages to the ountries participating, is a time-honored doctrine of Democratic faith. We declare our party's position to be in favor of a tax on commodities entering the customhouses that will promote effective competition, protect against monopoly, and at the same time produce a fair revenue to support the Government.

time produce a fair revenue to support the Government.

The greatest contributing factor in the increase and the unbalancing of prices is unscientific taxation. After having increased taxation and the cost of living by $2,000,000,000 under the Fordney-McCumber tariff, all that the Republican Party could suggest in the way of a relief was a cut of $300,000,000 in direct taxes, and that was to be given principally to those with the largest incomes. * * * And although the farmers and general consumers were bearing the brunt of tariff favors already granted to special interests, the administration was unable to devise any plan except one to grant further aid to the few. Fortunately this plan of the administration failed and, under Democratic leadership aided by progressive Republicans, a more equitable one was adopted, which reduces direct taxes by about $450,000,000.

The 1924 platform compared the position of the two parties, and stated:

The economic life of the Nation was quickened. Tariff taxes were reduced.

And so forth.

On issues it maintained that-

The tariff, the destruction of our foreign markets, and the high cost of transportation are taking the profit out of agriculture, mining, and other raw-material industries. Large standing armies and the cost of preparing for war still cast their burdens upon humanity. These conditions the existing Republican administration has proven itself unwilling or unable to redress.

The Democratic platform for 1928, in discussing agriculture, asserts:

And in indorsing the agricultural policy of the present administration the Republican Party in its recent convention served notice upon the farmer that the so-called protective system is not meant for him, that while it offers protection to the privileged few it promises continued world prices to the producers of the chief cash crops of agriculture.

On the tariff it states:

Duties that will permit effective competition, insure against monopoly, and at the same time produce a fair revenue for the support of government. Actual difference between the cost of production at home and abroad, with adequate safeguard for the wage of the American laborer, must be the extreme measure of every tariff rate.

In order to better understand the direction in which a few Democratic brethren and their reactionary friends will take us if we adopt this measure, it is necessary to consider the published views on this topic. In a radio speech last Sunday Mr. David Lawrence pointed out that the Crisp bill would provide a larger spread. This simply means that everybody will pay Federal taxes. Even those who are without employment and barely managing to keep body and soul together will be forced to contribute to the Federal Treasury. It is indeed a spread that reaches to the plain people and increases the cost of living, already too high for thousands of our population living on a bare margin or actually in want. Mr. Green has emphasized this phase of the tax in the following quotation:

Such a tax as the proposed sales tax will tend to delay a return to prosperity. It will prevent the sale of manufactured goods, and it will mean less food, warmth, and clothing for millions of men, women, and children.

Mr. Huddleston, in favoring the sales tax on the floor of this House last Friday, made this declaration:

Taxes are bad, and a sales tax is particularly bad. It is levied upon property and not upon wealth. It is levied on a man's needs and not upon his ability to pay. It is levied upon what men may consume and not according to the benefits which are derived from government. They violate every fundamental of

I heartily agree with Mr. Huddleston that viewing taxes as bad the sales tax is particularly bad, as it is not levied upon ability to pay but upon what is consumed. It is essentially a consumer's tax. The manufacturer will not only have an excuse for cutting wages, which have already been slashed during the depression, but he will also shift the tax to the consumer. The consumer will thus find that he has been tricked in two directions. His wages will be lowered and the wages he actually receives will purchase less than before this bill goes into effect. The unfairness of this sales tax accounts for the opposition of the American Federation of Labor to the pending legislation. In the following statement Mr. Green has explained this situation:

To add a sales tax to the reduction of wages which have been imposed upon the wage earners during the last year would mean addition to misery, woe, and want which now prevail throughout the land.

That this sales tax is a consumer's tax has never been denied. The comments of those who were in the Hearst party to Canada, in 1921, bear this out. In the New York American, December 4, 1921, Mr. STEAGALL is reported as referring to the Canadian sales tax as follows:

I think we should retain our income and excess-profits taxes and levy a proper tax on inheritances, and collect sufficient revenue to begin to pay off the Nation's indebtedness as a matter of public safety, and not leave all of it for those who fought the war and for those who come after it. I can not bring myself to favor a system of taxation which shifts the burden of taxation.

Mr. John S. Benham, Illinois, stated:

The Canadian authorities have presented the case with wonderful clearness, but, to date, have not changed my former feeling that the sales tax would operate in such a way as to cause the tax to be paid somewhat in proportion to the size of the family rather than in proportion to the size of the family income.

Mr. CRISP, the acting chairman of the committee that reported this present bill to the House, is also quoted in the New York American regarding his views on the Canadian

When I accepted the invitation of Mr. Hearst I frankly stated that I was not in favor of the sales tax, but would be glad to further investigate the matter. The hearings in Canada demonstrated that the sales tax on the manufacturers and jobbers is a revenue-producing tax easily administered, and the universal opinion was that this tax was passed to the ultimate consumer. The proponents of the tax in the United States are urging it with a view to repealing our war plan of taxation, such as excess profits, income tax, and so forth. I firmly believe that those of us able to pay taxes should bear their burden of taxation, and I am not in favor of a sales tax.

Mr. WRIGHT. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. COLLINS. I yield.

Mr. WRIGHT. Was the gentleman a member of that party?

Mr. COLLINS. Yes.

Mr. WRIGHT. Did the gentleman make a statement?

Mr. COLLINS. I did, and I will read it in a few seconds. Gentlemen of the committee, our genial friend the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CRISP] was fresh from the scene of action in 1921. He knew conditions in Canada then better than he knows them now. I am one who is willing to stand for the things which the gentleman from Georgia said in 1921, when he was in better position to advise us than now. [Applause.]

I am afraid that our friend is somewhat in the position Alexander Pope describes in his Essay on Man, in discussing vice—and the sales tax is comparable to vice, because it is an economic vice, a political vice, if you please-

Vice is a monster of so frightful mien, As, to be hated, needs but to be seen. Yet, seen too oft, familiar with her face, We first endure, then pity, then embrace.

[Laughter.]

Now, I fear that our good friend, the gentleman from Georgia, is simply pitying to-day, but two or three years from now that "pity" may be changed to "embrace." I. for one, do not want to start the practice of placing our tax burdens upon the poorest people in our land, those who are not able to bear the burdens that are on them now, much less have them increased.

My very fine friend, Judge Wright, has asked me what I said in 1921 on this trip to Canada. Here is what I stated, quoted from the New York American, December 4, 1921:

I found the people with whom I talked in favor of the tax on sales by manufacturers and wholesalers rather than that on all The fact is that a tax on all sales was first adopted in Canada but was afterwards repealed, and a tax on sales by manufacturers and wholesalers was substituted. Of sales by manufacturers and wholesalers was substituted. Or course, the manufacturers and wholesalers do not pay the tax, but are the tax collectors for the Government. Personally I do not favor either of these methods. I believe in taxing according to ability to pay. The sales and general turnover taxes are admittedly paid by the consumer, and I believe both violate correct principles of taxation. The chief advantage of the sales tax is that it roless considerable revenue and the consumers do not that it raises considerable revenue and the consumers do not know that it comes out of their pockets.

In addition to the fact that it is a consumers' tax, there are other reasons for opposing it. It sets up a dishonest system. It represents to the citizen that it is a tax on sales paid by manufacturers, whereas in reality it is a tax paid by every citizen. The dishonesty becomes more evident from the following:

[Current Opinion for October, 1921, p. 520]

THE CANADIAN SALES TAX

The theory of the tax is based on the idea that the consumer ould sconer pay a high price than a low tax. Yet the first thing would sooner pay a high price than a low tax. Yet the first thing to be noticed about this Canadian sales tax is that it is not levied on or made payable by the consumer. It does not appear, as did the unpopular luxury tax in the bill for goods bought in a departmental store or as an obvious and explicit addition to the price of a pair of trousers. No doubt, as Professor Leacock observes, the consumer pays the tax in the long run, but "he doesn't see it and doesn't mind."

Mr. John Winkler, writing in the New York American, December 4, 1921, stated in his account of the Canadian trip:

While it is generally admitted in Canada that the ultimate consumer pays this tax like any other taxes, he is hardly conscious of it

Mr. John Connolly, of Pennsylvania, states:

The consumer does not know that he is indirectly paying the tax

Mr. PARSONS. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. COLLINS. Yes.

Mr. PARSONS. Last fall-I am sure the gentleman remembers—the then Secretary of the Treasury announced that everybody should be made to pay a tax through a general sales tax so they would be tax conscious. I would like to ask the gentleman if he thinks his people in Mississippi are tax conscious at the present time?

Mr. COLLINS. I do not think this tax bill is proposed in order to make anybody conscious. I think it is more of a proposal of unconsciousness. The idea is, and it has been said several times, I think first by Adam Smith, that this particular tax is a method of extracting the most feathers from a goose with the least squawking. [Applause.] It has been designated as a painless tax, one which the people do not know they are paying.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman five additional minutes.

Mr. CROSSER. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. COLLINS. Yes.

Mr. CROSSER. It is painful enough, but it conceals the cause of the pain.

Mr. COLLINS. That is correct.

On all sides the tax is explained as a "painless" one. It assumes that if applied in this country that the poor, helpless people amongst us will not fight back, as they will not know that they are being taxed. It is evidently an anesthetic administered to the people of this country so that an operation may be performed on them.

The effect on the tariff should not be ignored. The platforms of the Democratic Party have condemned wholeheartedly the high-tariff policy of the Republican administration. We opposed the Dingley tariff before and during the election of 1900. In our platform and on the floor of this House we fought against the high Republican tariff. The Fordney-McCumber Tariff Act was described by the Democratic Party as the most unjust, unscientific, and dishonest tariff tax measure ever enacted in our history. This was, of course, before the Smoot-Hawley bill came before us, and which raised still higher the tariff wall and heavily increased the cost of goods. Yet, in spite of these accepted and well-advised and well-established principles of the Democratic Party, we are now asked in this bill to still further increase the tariff by 21/4 per cent. This is to be done with slight exceptions, which are unimportant. It remains that we are considering adding to the Smoot-Hawley Act an additional amount of 21/4 per cent.

But those Members who favor this bill before us, and this is particularly true of the Democratic Members, propose doing so with the understanding that we are now in an emergency and that the sales tax is an emergency tax. This is decidedly not the view of those who are so strenuously urging the adoption of this measure.

The reporter of the New York American with the congressional party en route from Canada in 1921 stated in the issue of that paper December 4. 1921:

I have discussed this plan with many of the congressional delegates on the journey back from New York, and I find it has met a ready response. A great many of them believe with me that, if the sales tax is once adopted in the United States, it should be first applied to the soldiers' bonus, and after that obligation of the country is met the tax could continue as a means of paying the war debt.

In writing in the New York American November 22, 1931, Mr. Roddan, United Press correspondent, pointed out:

Republican leaders have indicated preference for a reasonable increase in taxes, buttressed by a selective sales tax on various articles. They feel, if the sales tax is given a try, it will come into general use as the firmest base for raising Federal revenues.

Mr. Hearst, in a letter to editors of the Hearst newspapers on March 13, 1932, stated:

Please carry on sustained crusade morning, evening, and Sunday against the present Bolshevist system of income taxation.

The income-tax system has become the greatest racket in the United States and the Government the biggest racketeer.

The system is in itself unjust, inequitable, and un-Ameri-

Later Mr. Hearst continues:

The tax is the most onerous imaginable in times of depression, because a citizen must pay when he has no money for money he spent when he had it to spend.

Mr. Hearst closes his letter to his editors by again referring to the Inequitable, tyrannical, boishevistic policy of confiscatory in-ome taxation. * * * When the Democratic Party has the sincome taxation. cerity to be democratic, when it has the patriotism to be American, it will substitute excise taxation and sales taxation for undemocratic, un-American discriminatory income taxation with its crooked evasion and equally crooked enforcement.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman two additional minutes.

Mr. COLLINS. Without attempting to go into the arguments of Mr. Hearst on taxation, I wish to point out that his press is to carry on a campaign, first of all, against the income tax, and then follows the second stage, when, as stated, that the income tax should be replaced by excise taxation, meaning sales taxation. In other words, Mr. Hearst has no delusions regarding the real purpose of the bill before it. The sales tax is not viewed as an emergency but as a permanent tax. After the Budget is balanced the income tax may be expected to be repealed and the sales tax substituted as the permanent means of raising revenue.

This view of permanency for the sales tax was stated in this House a few days ago. In reply to my question on this point Mr. Watson replied:

I think that we will eventually have it as a permanent tax.

Elsewhere he stated that the manufacturers' tax to-day is an emergency tax, but-

Although it may not be popular, because no new tax is popular, yet in two years from now the sales tax will not be written out

It is this permanent feature of the bill that must be considered. It is the thin edge of the wedge, and must be viewed as such.

The Democratic Party can not be censored for this bill. The party as such has never either been asked an opinion or expressed one on this question. Certain members of the Ways and Means Committee who have considered it as a temporary emergency measure have favored it. On November 17, 1931, the New York American, in discussing a sales tax, stated that "Representative Garner, Texas, ranking Democrat on the Ways and Means Committee, where revenue must originate, maintained a significant silence." I take it therefore that our beloved Speaker does not favor the measure. He has not, to date, made a public plea in its behalf.

If the emergency is to be considered, it is only fair to ask that all Democratic Members of this House be consulted on the procedure and methods to be followed. The administration and certain reactionaries have repeatedly advocated a sales tax, yet the Democratic Party was not consulted. These administration leaders who now urge increased taxation have repeatedly prevented economies from being carried out in the departments of Government. Large savings in governmental administration can be made. These savings can be effectuated immediately. If funds are provided savings will not be forthcoming. We should force economies and not pass a law that will prevent them.

I still have confidence in the Democratic Party and its right-thinking representatives that they will not saddle on the masses increased taxation destined to be raised by a permanent system, whereby the injustices of the taxation this should be no excuse for soaking the common people. [Applause.]

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 20 minutes to the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. GLOVER]. [Applause.]

Mr. GLOVER. Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, we have now before us H. R. 10236, which is a bill seeking to raise more than a billion of dollars in taxes to balance the Budget, as is claimed by those advocating this measure. The gentlemen from Georgia [Mr. CRISP] in his explanation of this bill said that this is the most burdensome tax bill that has ever been brought before Congress in peace times. I certainly agree with him in that statement, and I doubt if there has ever been one in war times that is as indefensible as this bill. There is no man in this House that I have a greater affection for than for the gentleman from Georgia, the acting chairman of the Ways and Means Committee [Mr. Crisp]. I can not believe that in principle he favors this kind of legislation as is proposed in this bill, known as a sales tax. The Democratic platform of 1924, which was the last declaration on this question, put the Democratic Party on record as against this tax. I quote the declaration from the platform, which I hold in my hand, which is as follows:

We oppose the so-called nuisance taxes, sales taxes, and all other forms of taxation that unfairly shifts to the consumer the burdens of taxation.

Can any Democrat, without breaking away from this, the last declaration of our party, vote for a sales tax? We are told by some of the speakers that Mr. Mills, the Secretary of the Treasury, is in favor of this tax. Well, if he can stand it, let him do it. Who was it that made this deficit? Was it the Democratic Party or the Republican You made it. The present administration came into power in the most prosperous times the country has ever known. What is it now? The most distressing the United States has ever seen. We on this side of the aisle have protested against legislation that you have passed, the Smoot-Hawley tariff bill and others, but it did no good; and with 104 majority on your side you never proposed a bill to balance the Budget. If the Budget was balanced to-day, it would likely be out of balance before a week had passed. It can be handled now just as it has been in the past, by issuing short-term notes to meet the emergency. We were told to-day by the acting chairman of the Ways and Means Committee that the Treasury to-day offered for sale $900,-000,000 in these notes and that they were oversubscribed at the low rate of interest of 3%. I think this statement makes an argument against putting the burden on the taxpayers of nearly $2,000,000,000 in this time of distress that no man can answer.

If there ever was a time when the people are burdened to death with taxes, it is now. The bill proposes to raise about $600,000,000 of this sum on a sales tax, which is paid by the consumer. This bill will put a tax on clothes, shoes, overalls, plow tools, and every article that is manufactured. It will put a tax on electricity that makes your lights and the gas you burn. In fact, there is not a single article manufactured and used in the homes that will not be taxed under this bill if the sales tax is kept in it. I shall move when the bill is ready for amendment, if some one else does not, to cut out of the bill the sales-tax provision. The remainder of the bill would raise about $700,000,000 of money, and by extending the provisions of the bill two years longer it would take care of the entire deficit. Why not do that instead of heaping on the backs of the poor a sales tax that they can not resist? The tax is to be 21/4 per cent on the manu-When he sells the goods to the wholesale man facturer. he passes it on to him, and when he sells it to the retail merchant, the retail merchant, of course, will be forced to add it to the price of the article when he sells it and the consumer pays it. Who said this all had to be raised at once to balance the Budget in 1933? The Secretary of the Treasury is for it, of course, wants it done at once, but the people are to be considered first of all. The power to tax is will be continued. If we are afraid to tax those able to pay, I the power to destroy, and we should be careful how we exercise it. I am thinking of the great throng of people that are to be affected by this but that can not be here to protest. The manufacturers do not care, for they pass it on and do not pay it. We have more than a hundred and twenty millions of people to be affected by this legislation, and very few of them have any voice in the matter, and if we do not protest against it, they must be the sufferers. The big interests have been listened to too long. It is now time to hear the cry of the needy. We have more than 8,000,000 men out of employment, and they are going to be taxed under this bill on nearly everything they eat and wear. Can they bear it? I answer, no. Let us see how this deficit came about. Before we met in Congress we had a wire from the President asking authority to give a moratorium to Europe. I answered him back at once that I thought it was not wise. You voted it to them. I did not. The amount of the moratorium was $252,000,000. You then voted $500,000,000 a few days ago to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. you voted $125,000,000 to the Federal land banks. These items alone amount to the sum of $877,000,000. If that was back in the Treasury, we would not hear the word "deficit."

This bill doubles the inheritance tax and makes it very uniust.

If a sales tax could ever be justified at any time, which I do not believe it could, it should be reserved to the States. If a Federal sales tax is ever put on, I doubt if you ever see it removed, because they will find some excuse to use the revenue derived therefrom.

The bill as it is introduced would ruin the rice farmers in my district, and which is one of the great agricultural crops raised in my State. They have to use electric power to pump the water that covers the land which is required in growing rice. I have offered an amendment to the bill for the consideration of the Ways and Means Committee to exempt electric power from the provisions of the bill when it is used in developing agriculture and I feel sure that they will accept the amendment because it is just and right. Gas, oil, or power of any kind used by farmers should not be taked and my amendment would exempt them. This bill would tax farmers $150,000,000.

This Congress started in at the top instead of the bottom to relieve this depression. If Congress would do something to raise the price of agriculture, to a place that it deserves, and would provide for relief of the 8,000,000 unemployed, we would be starting in the right direction.

Every bill that is proposed is to either give more credit or to raise taxes, and the Lord knows we have too much of each of them.

It is not credit the people want. They want money or an opportunity to make it. They want a price for what they produce so they will not have to borrow and they want a price for their labor so that they can take care of their families and live out of debt.

Money is centered into the hands of the few individuals, who can bring on a panic at their will. Sixty per cent of it is in lock boxes and it will stay there when you are enacting such legislation as this. I introduced a bill a few days ago and discussed it on the floor of this House for a double standard of money that will cure this evil in 30 days if you will enact it. Will you do it? It would double the price of cotton, wheat, rice, and corn. It would open up a trade with three-fifths of the world we can not now trade with under our standard of money. It would give us reciprocal trade relations. When, O when, will we have the vision to do this and not tax our people to death? [Applause.]

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CLANCY].

Mr. CLANCY. Mr. Chairman, I am going to support this revenue bill. I am for it as a whole, but I do believe the bill should be amended in some details. The subject of my discourse to-day will be the proposed admissions tax. I understand that an amendment is to be offered on the House floor to the bill when it is read, exempting moving-picture and worthy amendment and I shall support it. I know that the moving-picture business is in a very precarious condition.

Many small moving-picture houses have gone to the wall, and many more are going to the wall if this tax is imposed. In fact, two or three of the great producing companies are in bankruptcy now and the whole production end of the business may go into bankruptcy. The movie business is truly in a terrible condition.

Mr. SIROVICH. And that includes the spoken drama

Mr. CLANCY. Yes; that is probably true. Now I will discuss the phase of the admissions tax which refuses to exempt educational institutions, as Congress did in the previous admission-tax measure levied as a result of the World War. For the first time the committee proposes to tax high schools, colleges, and universities on admissions. You are going to tax State institutions. When the Federal income tax was levied by Congress the salaries paid to State and also city and county employees were exempted from the Federal income tax, but in this case you aim to levy a tax upon city, county, and State institutions and violate a cardinal theory of taxation.

I happen to know a little something of this subject because for about three years I was a field secretary of one of the largest bodies of collegiate alumni in the United States. that of the University of Michigan, formerly the greatest State university, and it still ranks among the first few largest and most influential universities in the country.

I have a letter from the fair and able chairman of the board of control of athletics of that university, Prof. Ralph W. Aigler, stating that this proposed tax on college admissions, and particularly athletic affairs and contests, would be a serious blow to that university if the tax were levied on the tickets. The University of Michigan still owes a million dollars on its athletic plant there. They have built a marvelous athletic plant out of the receipts from football and it is devoted to the high cause of physical education. Everybody interested in college athletics knows that it is the football game which pays and carries the cost and upkeep of the great physical education and recreation and athletic program of the university.

The State legislatures will not grant taxpayers' money for the development of the athletic and physical educational side of the university. Yet educators everywhere now recognize that just as important as providing mental equipment for the girl or boy who goes to high school and colleges is the healthy development of his or her body, so that in this new form of modern living, particularly in the cities, his or her body may be able to stand the terrific strain of the life to which one is subjected. Learning without health is quite futile.

I suspect that the Ways and Means Committee are entering upon a sort of punitive and rectifying expedition in this educational tax. Take the great football spectacles and contemplate the Army and Navy game at Chicago a few years ago, which had 150,000 spectators present, most of whom were paid customers. They are a shining target for taxes and criticism. But let me say in answer to charges of commercialism, pageantry, proselyting, and so forth, that the ideals and ethics of the college football player are higher than you will find in any other phase of human activity. The ethics of American football players, notwithstanding these unfair charges, are higher than you will find in the legal profession, the medical profession, the political profession, or any other field of human endeavor which you care to name. When you go to the football game you know the contest is honest and strictly on the square. You may not be so sure when you go to a prize fight, wrestling match, or political convention that the contest is actuated by the highest motives and ethics.

A squad of 20 or 30 of these football players may bring into the university coffers a large sum of money, but do not even get as much as a pair of shoe laces out of the contest, and still they subject themselves to physical injury and octheatrical and other admissions under 50 cents. That is a casionally death. Several died on the football field last fail. They give everything unselfishly. As a matter of fact, a few years ago, in one of the greatest State universities, the manager of athletics missed a pair of shoe laces and he lectured a squad of about 40 football players and said that he wanted the boy who took or lost those shoe laces to pay for them.

It is said that Harvard, Yale, and Princeton, and some of the larger universities, have made big "gates" and much money on football. They probably did. But the State university now is putting out of business these great privately endowed universities which formerly held the limelight, such as Harvard, Yale, Princeton, and all the other little academies throughout the country which have done so much to develop learning, character, and manhood of the Nation, are facing a terrible competitive struggle to exist and survive.

Deficits, particularly in the State universities and colleges and high schools, will be made up from taxation of the people. Newspapers, magazines, and religious books, and so forth, have been exempted from the sales tax by the committee because you did not want to tax education and you did not want to tax religion and morality, and yet here you ask us to tax education and morality and manhood in the greatest educational institutions in the land.

Permit me to say in this day of falling moral and ethical standards, when even the church is losing its influence to a very large degree, particularly upon college students, the greatest influence in college and American life to-day for purer and cleaner and more ethical action is that old football game in which the boys give up all that is in them for the alma mater, purely a spiritual influence and endeavor, and in this field the standards are the highest and no dirty work is tolerated.

Now, if no other member offers an amendment, I hope to offer an amendment to this bill that educational institutions, and particularly the State, city, and county institutions, will be exempted from this tax. But I also insist that all educational institutions should be exempted, as in the former tax bill.

Certainly athletic contests get big "gates." The whole thing has come upon us suddenly.

When I was in high school we had no gymnasium or play-ground, and I was one of the leaders who raised the first $500 for a school gymnasium by going around collecting 5 and 10 cent pieces from the students and from the grocer, butcher, and so forth, in the neighborhood. That was the beginning of our Detroit gym and playground and physical education program. To-day in my city of Detroit there are millions and millions of dollars invested in gymnasiums, swimming pools, and playgrounds, which grew out of that germ. The annual budget of maintaining those institutions runs to big money now.

Certainly some of these colleges have big gates, such as Northwestern, Notre Dame, California, and so forth, but for every college which is making this big money there are 20 which are in the red for the past year. There are many institutions which do not have the benefit of being State-supported, which have built stadiums. They have gotten out bonds, underwritten their good name mainly, for the payment of those stadiums. Every tax, no matter how large or how small, that is assessed, cuts down the attendance, and jeopardizes their program.

Why, this bill does not even provide for an exemption for charity football games and other charity athletic contests, yet everybody knows that college football teams raised last fall enormous sums of money through charity games for hungry and starving people and for the needy and the unemployed.

I could go into this question in great detail and with facts and figures but time forbids. Certainly the bill should be amended to exempt the tax on charity games and contests.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has expired.

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Swanson].

Mr. SWANSON. Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, the announcement made yesterday by the gentleman from Georgia, the able acting chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, that that committee would offer an amendment to the sales-tax provision of the bill under consideration eliminating canned fruits and vegetables and canned meats was, I am sure, a welcome announcement to the Members of the House. I believe that the committee. or this committee, will also arrive at the conclusion to eliminate from this tax bill the proposed tax on lard, sausage, frankfurters, and the like. I favor the elimination of ice cream from the operation of this tax. In this day and age ice cream is not a luxury but a necessity, and in my judgment a tax on ice cream will in effect be a tax on all the milk and cream used in the manufacture of ice cream, and will ultimately, in large part at least, come out of the pockets of the producer of the milk and cream. I would favor the raising of the exemption from the operation of the tax on moving-picture admissions to 50 cents, and I believe that when the committee reaches that item in the reading of the bill, it should give serious consideration to the raising of this exemption.

There are a number of items in the proposed manufacturers' sales tax which I would like to change. In this emergency it may be absolutely necessary to impose a manufacturers' sales tax. The important matter for consideration under all the circumstances, as we all realize, is the balancing of the Budget. This purpose should be accomplished to the greatest extent possible by the reduction of expenditures and only as a last resort by taxes.

But I rise at this time to propose to the Committee on Ways and Means, to this committee, and to the membership of the House, for serious consideration, a tax which, so far as I can learn, up to this time has not received consideration.

The Constitution provides that Congress shall have the power to "promote the progress of science and useful arts, by securing for limited times to authors and inventors the exclusive right to their respective writings and discoveries." Pursuant to this power Congress has established by law the Patent Office. It seems to have been the policy of the Congress to make the Patent Office only self-sustaining. Since the fiscal year 1922, however, there has been a deficit in the conduct of this office ranging from $85,000 in 1923 to as high as $608,000 in 1929. In 1930 this deficit was $455,000. In the fiscal year 1931 the total receipts of the Patent Office were $4,565,377 and the total expenditures were $4,832,277. leaving a deficit of $266,000. So far as I can learn there are expenditures in the maintenance of our courts growing out of patents, trade-marks, and the like, which are not included in the total of expenditures; and if they were included, in my judgment, the deficit would be very consid-

I have the statement of the Patent Office showing the total number of patents, design patents and reissues, trademarks, and other items since the present series of numbers of letters patent were commenced in the year 1836. At the beginning of this year the total number of patents issued was 1,839,190. In the calendar year 1931 there were issued 51,766 patents, about 3,000 design patents, and about 11,000 trade-marks. The life of a patent is 17 years, and according to the records of the Patent Office, there are now in existence approximately 715,000 live patents. The total fee received by the Government for the issuance of a patent is $50, and for that fee the Government grants an absolute monopoly for 17 years of the American market. It gives the holder of the patent all the benefits of protection by law of a patent and secures to him the market of 120,000,000 people with a highly developed standard of living, all for the initial expenditure. The attorney fee which he pays for the securing of the patent is frequently many times more than the Government of the United States receives for all of the protection and all of the monopolized market which is provided by the Government, the people of the United States. So far as I can learn, there is nothing in the Patent Office to indicate what number of the 715,000 patents issued within the past 17 years are still alive and in use, but I think it fair to assume that at least 50 per cent of them, or more than 350,000, are obtaining monopolistic benefits from the patent laws. In view of the monopoly given to the owner of a patent by the people of the United States and the market given to the owner of the patent as a direct result of the organization of the Government, it seems to me that the owner of every active patent in the United States should pay an annual tax of at least $50 for the benefits he receives. If there are 300,000 patents in actual use, on the basis of an annual tax of $50 this would bring in an annual revenue of $15,000,000. Since the year 1870, when protection of trade-marks was authorized by law, there have been granted 290,000 trade-marks. Many of these, it is true, are not alive or in use to-day, but it may well be assumed that there are 100.000 trade-marks which have been issued for a nominal sum, which has recently been increased to $40. It seems to me that there would be nothing unfair in the imposition of an annual tax on all trade-marks actually in use in return for the governmental protection which the people of the United States give to the holders of trade-marks. The protection of the inventive genius of the individual citizen is recognized not only in this country but by all nations of the world, but in view of the highly developed state of American society and the actual value received by the holder of the patented or trade-marked articles, the imposition of an annual tax on such holder is as fair a tax as could be devised.

We are talking in these days of the maldistribution of wealth. The patent laws of the United States and the monopoly granted to owners of patents have, in a considerable measure, contributed to this maldistribution of wealth. For example, take the Gillette safety razor. For 17 years the owner of the patent for this razor had a monopoly of the American market for his product. Millions of razors were sold at $5 each; and because of the monopoly given to the owner of the patent under our patent laws and the large population and enormous demand created for this articlenot by reason of the genius of the inventor but by reason of the Government of the United States and the high standard of living of the American people-the owner of the patent became a multimillionaire. I am not saying this in criticism of the holder of the patent, but I am merely calling attention to it for the purpose of illustrating the value of the monopoly given by our patent laws and the justice of the imposition of an annual tax on the holder of the patent. Take, for another example, the case of Henry Ford, and I do not refer to him in any spirit of criticism. He acquired a number of patents on the automobile. What value would there have been to his patents had there not been the highly organized system of government which we have and the standard of living of the American people which exists? It was because of this valuable, monopolized market that Ford and his associates accumulated billions of dollars in wealth in one generation, and it was the protection of his patents, for which he paid the Government only a few paltry hundreds or a few paltry thousands of dollars, which made this possible. Of what value would those inventions have been if they had been made in the heart of Africa among the Zulu tribes? It was because of the Government of the United States, the development of its people, their high standard of living, and the market these same people furnished that his achievements were possible. Can anybody say that the payment of an annual tax to the Government which issued the patent and thereby gave a monopoly to the owner of the patent is unfair or unjust? Thousands of illustrations of the same kind can be given. The same principle applies to every invention, the same protection is given all, the same highly developed market is given them all. Surely the people, who are the Government, are entitled to some returns for the protection and benefits given to inventive genius. I suggest this not only as a temporary expedient, but I believe it should be adopted as a permanent part of the tax policy of this Government. [Applause.]

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. Johnson].

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I shall try to present some statements concerning the condition of the Federal Treasury—the actual amount of the deficit, accumulated and estimated. The figures are staggering, and from one standpoint it may not be good policy to line the current Federal debt all up in one big round sum—billions—and leave the startling figures in the Congressional Record in cold type.

A MEMBER. Is the gentleman afraid to put it in?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. No; I am not afraid to put it in, and my judgment is that the quicker we make a complete spread of the whole situation the better. I have just heard the forceful speech of the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. Glover], and I hope that he holds a seat in Congress for a long time and that he makes his hard-hitting help felt not only in his district and his State but in the Nation.

I want to express my admiration for him as a man of force and conviction and an earnest working Member on the Democratic side. He and I can not agree on a lot of the old standard issues that have divided the parties, but I imagine that we can both agree that a whole lot of the old fighting problems have been too long dead to be even entitled to honorable mention. We do not agree on the so-called manufacturers' tax in this revenue bill. It is probable that we can not agree how we came by this enormous Federal deficit.

But, Mr. Chairman, I know how the bright dream of a pot of gold always to be found at the rainbow's end came about. The existence of the income-tax system led to that dream, and I know how easy it is to believe there will always be lots of money in that pot of gold. I know that for 10 years while incomes were good and the dollars came bubbling forth, Congress made several major expenditures of great national importance.

I hardly need to remind the Representatives from the States of the Mississippi Valley—Illinois, Missouri, Arkansas, and on to the Gulf—that one of these great major expenditures was for the flood control of the Mississippi and for other costs in connection with floods, crop losses, and distress. That work was nobly and generously undertaken by the Congress several years ago. It played and is playing a part in the deficit. We do not want to stop this work. We can not, even if income-tax returns have shriveled to dimes where we expected dollars.

Another great cost was incurred in caring for our soldiers in the World War; care of the wounded and the sick, rehabilitation, hospitalization, and more and more new modern hospitals with beds for the sick and exhausted of every war without regard to the exact cause of disability. No Representative who has sat in any previous Congress can begrudge that expenditure. We should be glad we got as many hospitals and homes as we did while the "getting" was good.

Another major cost was the payment of the interest on the war debt. We kept Uncle Sam's credit good.

Among other costly things we authorized and appropriated for Boulder Dam, and it is an easy guess that Boulder Dam got under the wire just in time. Uncle Sam will have to wait a long, long time for California to pay him back. But the work at Boulder Dam is started and must go on even if the rainbow is fading out. California and Arkansas and Missouri and Mississippi and Illinois and, in fact, all the States, should get on the team and pull to the last man to help their beneficent old Uncle Sam out of the hole. [Applause.]

Please do not think I am now criticizing anyone or any group for that which has passed. A couple of years ago I made a sharp speech on this floor against the increase of Federal extravagance. As I walked back to my seat, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. James], then chairman of the Military Affairs Committee, said to me:

You did not talk that way when you were appealing for and securing larger appropriations for buildings at the big military post in your district.

Ah, that's the rub. We have all been driven by the cry, "More, more!" and have been spurred by the query, "What has he ever done for us?" Right now some one is campaigning in your districts and in mine, that, if he is sent to Congress, he will do better, secure more appropriations for that particular district, but will be very economical as to appropriations for other districts.

Mr. Chairman, I said that the full amount of the deficit should be stated, and restated, and stated again in one lump sum for the whole amount that it really is. The deficit—accrued and pending to July 1, this year, and estimated from July 1 to June 30, 1933, next year—is so nearly $5,000,000,000, that we can safely call it five billions. Figures short of these figures do not fool any person likely to invest in any short-term notes, or long-term notes. Income-tax returns just now being paid in and counted will not come up even to the last, lowest revised estimates.

It is not enough to say that the actual physical financial deficit, or shortage, on yesterday, March 15, was $1,871,229,-155. Do you get it—one billion eight hundred and seventy-one million plus. That is the physical actual money shortage at the moment the book balance was struck yesterday. Short-term I O U's, newly issued long-term bonds, and other items of the accrued indebtedness are not included in that figure.

It is quite probable that all the revenue raised by this tax bill now under consideration will not balance the Budget by perhaps as much as $1,000,000,000 for these reasons:

First. The committee left $642,000,000 to be saved by Federal economies.

Second. The committee, of course, could not estimate for unexpected congressional authorizations and appropriations or for possible extraordinary expenditures.

Third. We have no provision for the sinking fund.

Fourth. Interest rates on loans and bonds are likely to increase.

Fifth. The payment of $260,000,000 on war debts at any early date is highly uncertain.

Sixth. Amendments proposed by the Ways and Means Committee to eliminate sales tax on canned goods will reduce probable income by ten to twelve millions.

Seventh. A lot of Budget items have been simply postponed.

Mr. Chairman, the big hour in this Congress is here. It is the duty, when the time comes to read this bill under the 5-minute rule, of each and every Member to be in his seat either to support the committee on just as many paragraphs as he can, or to offer to perfect the bill more to his liking by proposing amendments to any part of the bill that he thinks should be amended.

Whether we like it or not, it is our duty to see that some strong money bill, that will raise this great sum in revenue, is put through the House. We have to do that, just as the strong men that we ourselves selected for the highly responsible places on the Ways and Means Committee found it their necessary but unpleasant duty to prepare this bill. No escape for them. They deserve congratulations on the unanimity with which, regardless of party, they labored to bring out this bill in order to keep the credit of the United States Government up to the key. [Applause.] It was no child's job. Perhaps any one of us, if we had been honored with a position on that committee, would have written and had backing on a different paragraph for this or that; but as a whole, if any 25 of us had been there, what would we have done or what could we have done that would have been any better?

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman five additional minutes.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Mr. Chairman, in my opinion, when we as Members have done our best to help get this bill up in the House and over to the other legislative body, we can ease down a little from the pressure under which Speaker Garner and the new Democratic chairmen of all the House committees have been driving us. We can do the rest of the legislative work at less fierce pace. Why? Because we all know from experience that the revenue bill, which under the Constitution has to originate in this body, will be a long time getting back to the place of its origin. Weeks and weeks, perhaps, and when it gets back it is likely to have been so knocked about and bunged up that even its best friends may not recognize it.

It is hardly to be expected that the other body will attempt to raise that extra billion. But why worry? The Budget need not be balanced to a dollar or a half billion dollars in one year or two years. But we must get as close to a balance as we can.

So get ready to keep your summer homes here. If you are going to take any vacation, take it by going to the conventions. Do not be too certain about going home soon to campaign in your beautiful home districts among your friends and neighbors and knocking out Republicans or Democrats, as the case may be, because it is probable that the legislative problems of the United States will get heavier and heavier week by week and keep you here. I think nearly every Member senses that fact. One hopes that everything will be better, but one must face every fact and the whole situation.

Recently I have come to the conclusion that we are not likely to adjourn this session without giving most serious and earnest consideration to the payment of very considerable sums to the States to be turned over to the counties for the replenishment of the funds of the counties for the relief of destitution. If so, that will mean more revenues through bond issues or anything that will bring in funds for immediate use. It may mean a second tax bill. It may mean lifting incomes in the higher brackets by several notches for one or two years' time. Mind you, not as a substitute for any proposal in this present tax bill, but in addition to and on top of everything now offered in the bill

The financial situation of the Government far transcends any other question before the people and, certainly, any other question that can come before this Congress. Each billion of indebtedness is a thousand million, and who can comprehend one thousand million dollars? We do not even comprehend any too well only so much as $100,000,000, and perhaps not even $1,000,000. We tossed off $132,000,000 the other day in the face of the reporting of this tax bill, and we do not seem to be especially alarmed over the fact that the other legislative body is quite likely to send that bill back to us with the total raised to $3,500,000. You see, it is so much easier to say "a billion" than it is to get a million. We need five hundred million times $1,000,000.

Mr. Chairman, we Members are now becoming tax conscious at a mile-a-minute clip. All the people are tax conscious, but not yet quite so conscious about Federal taxes as to let up on their demands for more and more Federal appropriations.

Oh, yes; the drive is on. Your mail is not different from mine. People have not yet got too tax conscious that they have quit writing for the Federal Government to do everything-more river improvements, more highways, more hospitals, more 50-50 Federal aid, more appropriations, and for everything else that they have got the notion that Uncle Sam can or might do. Relief for mortgaged homes. Aid to build new homes. The rapid and almost unanimous enactment of the Hoover financial relief measures seems to have whipped up interest in all pending proposals. Supporters of the adjusted-compensation bonus proposition are militant and are advancing toward the Federal Treasury with drums beating. The bonus first, the dole afterwards. Their leaders on the floor here are impatient, and some of them will hardly have their "nay" votes out of their throats against this tax bill before they cast their "yea" votes for the bonus.

Rag money, Government I O U's, depreciated currency, slow sale of bonds at increased interest! Who cares? It is on Uncle Sam, and he is not "us." The highway construction bill, when it comes back doubled, will pass under the flimsy guise of unemployment. Agriculture will get its demands. All groups are articulate. Most of the States and counties can not pay their bills or sell their bonds, and Congress will be blamed for even that. No department or bureau will take a cut without a protest. They have started backfires in the districts to discomfort each and all of us.

For 15 years the ease with which Federal revenue could be found through income tax has lured us on as if led by the rhyme of the old nursery song:

When you get to the end of the rainbow, Then you will find a pot of gold.

So brace yourselves for a long session, and remember that this winter we are quite likely to be considering another tax bill, and on the floor of this Chamber defending the credit of Uncle Sam, and scheming and straining to keep his dollar from cracking—standing off rag money, print paper money or depreciated money, and even before then we are quite likely to all get together in the last extremity and vote a dole; as hateful, as disagreeable, and as hard as that will be.

I thank you for the attention that you have given to these remarks. [Applause.]

Mr. PETTENGILL. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. McCLINTIC].

Mr. McCLINTIC of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, this is one of the most important pieces of legislation that has been considered since I have been a Member of Congress, for the reason the bill proposes to inaugurate a new method of collecting taxes by adopting what is commonly known as the consumption or sales tax. In my opinion, if this provision is allowed to be retained in the law, it will be beneficial to the wealthy class as it will eventually cause the poor people to pay an unjust amount toward the expense of maintaining the Government. For five days Members have been making speeches for and against this legislation and great interest has been manifested by all the Members, as the legislation proposes a new departure in the way of collecting revenue. I have been honored on two occasions during these five days by being asked to preside over the House, and I am grateful for this most courteous consideration.

I have carefully considered the provisions contained in the legislation, and regret exceedingly that I can not support that which is commonly known as the consumption or sales Any provision that increases the cost of living by imposing a tax on the necessities of life is, in my opinion, indefensible.

According to statistical information-and it has never been denied-10 per cent of the citizens of this Nation now control 90 per cent of all the wealth. As long as this is true I can never bring myself to the place where I would support a measure which would relieve the wealthy from bearing their proportionate cost of the maintenance of this Government and shoulder this burden on the backs of the poor.

Powerful interests are bringing every kind of pressure possible on Congress in favor of a sales tax, and in a recent edition of a Washington paper owned by William Randolph Hearst he urged that the sales tax be retained in this bill. He also strongly opposed the income tax, stating in a letter to editors of the Hearst newspapers on March 13, 1932:

Please carry on sustained crusade morning, evening, and Sunday against the present bolshevist system of income taxation.

The income-tax system has become the greatest racket in the United States, and the Government the biggest racketeer The system is in itself unjust, inequitable, and un-American.

Later. Mr. Hearst continues:

The tax is the most onerous imaginable in times of depression because a citizen must pay when he has no money for money he spent when he had it to spend.

Ar. Hearst closes his letter to his editors by again referring to the "inequitable, tyrannical, bolshevistic policy of confiscatory income tax.'

Everyone knows that the income tax is the fairest method ever devised for the purpose of collecting taxes, as it causes those who are more fortunate in life to bear a proper proportionate share of expense toward maintaining the Government.

This is the same person who recently criticized me edivent unnecessary authorizations and expenditures at a time when the people are more distressed than ever before.

I have always tried to be consistent in voicing an opinion on all legislation. As a member of the Naval Affairs Committee, when it proposed to authorize an expenditure of more than $600,000,000 to build additional ships, I took the position that such an expenditure was unnecessary now. I also suggested to the Secretary of the Navy, when he advised the committee he had not consulted the Commander in Chief concerning this program, that if he was not in accord with his chief that he should follow the precedent that had been established by other Cabinet officers and resign. I meant no disrespect to him; yet I knew that my constituents did not desire to see this Government further involved financially, as the same would at a later date materially increase our deficit. I also called attention to the 1-year agreement that our State Department had made with some 18 other nations to refrain from any measure that would have for its purpose increasing armament expenditures. If we had gone ahead with this program, it would have been a violation of the spirit of the agreement; and if there is anything a nation should do, it is to keep its word.

My pronouncement in this connection kicked up a big fuss and the press everywhere headlined the story; yet the authorization was postponed, and I am pleased that I did my duty, notwithstanding there was put out a lot of propaganda against me for the purpose of injuring my standing at home. As long as I am the Representative of the seventh congressional district, I am not going to allow criticism coming from the special interests, who would have profited if such a program were put into effect, to deter me from performing

What is wrong at the present time in this Nation? During the last nine years there has been refunded by the income-tax department of this Government over $3,000,000,000, most of the same going to a favorite few. If that policy had not gone into effect, we would not be here to-day with this kind of legislation, providing for the so-called sales tax. I remember that when some of these rebates were first granted a statement was published in a Washington paper to the effect that certain attorneys who had been found guilty of splitting their fees with certain Government employees were disbarred before the department. There was nothing published which showed that these employees were disconnected from their service. I also heard that in some instances attorneys, when they could not obtain satisfactory results from the income-tax department, had the cases referred to the Attorney General who served under the Harding administration, and for some reason such claims were allowed, thereby penalizing this Government in a very unjust manner. If this is true, there is ground for the conclusion that there must have been many irregularities during this period. Anyhow, enormous refunds have been made to the steel companies, the big oil companies, and many other large industries.

The citizens of the district I have the honor to represent are now in a more depressed condition than ever before. Many can not pay their taxes, and some are having their homes foreclosed. Therefore, regardless of what others may say, I think that a tax on the necessities of life would be the most unjust provision ever enacted into a law.

The records show that in 1929, 513 persons paid income taxes of over $1,000,000, and in 1919 over 6,000 reported incomes in excess of $500,000. This legislation does not increase the brackets of those who pay on an income of over $100,000. I have made speeches in the District in which I told my audiences that $100,000 is enough for any person to make; therefore, it would seem wise for the committee to increase the rate of payment on all incomes of $100,000, so that the more fortunate in life could pay a proper proportion of that which has to be raised in order to balance the Budget.

I am also in favor of increasing the inheritance tax, as it will be possible to be raised by this method nearly enough income to match that which would be raised by a sales tax. torially in his papers for doing my duty in trying to pre- If this method is not sufficient, then what would be wrong with floating bond issues sufficient to take care of the remainder of the deficit. Such a program would cause repayments to be spread over a long period of years, and this method would be much better, in my opinion, than to pass a sales tax.

During the discussion of this legislation attention has been called to various bills which have been enacted into law for the purpose of rendering aid to many classes of our citizens. I have supported every measure that I thought would be beneficial to those I have the honor to represent. I feel if it is right to aid those connected with the various occupations that a proper amount of consideration should be given to our ex-service men.

Therefore I am supporting the American Legion program, as I feel that if it could be enacted into a law and the last half of the bonus paid to the veterans, it would bring about a distribution of money at a time when it is needed far more than if paid at some time in the future. Not only is this true, but when it is taken into consideration that Oklahoma's share amounts to $39,815,376, it would result in over $4,000,000 being distributed in the congressional district I have the honor of representing, thereby being beneficial to every person either directly or indirectly.

When our Nation became involved in the World War, it was necessary to draft more than 4,000,000 men into the Army. They were forced to lay aside their various occupations in order that the interests of all our people might receive proper protection. Two and one-half million men went across the sea and performed service at a salary of $1.25 per day. I have visited Belleau Wood. Chateau-Thierry, the Argonne Forest, Soissons, and St. Mihiel. No one can have a proper conception of what our boys went through unless they have witnessed at first-hand the scenes of desolation, destruction, and ruin. We know that our Army was composed of as fine, brave, stalwart sons as ever faced an enemy's bullet, and as long as I am a Member of Congress my services will always be subject to call in behalf of those who did their best when called upon to protect this Nation.

Our country at the present time is confronted with the most serious depression that any of us have ever experienced. The farmers have been compelled to sell their wheat, cotton, and other products at a price below the cost of production. Many financial institutions have been unable to weather this period of distress, and there is a general bad situation existing everywhere. Therefore, if the soldiers could be paid off by the terms of a bill I have pending, it would mean that they would receive their last half without deductions for interest and that a sufficient amount of money could be derived from the sale of bonds issued in such a manner as to cover a long period of time—anyhow, until the country could work out of its present bad financial condition.

The Democratic Party in Oklahoma, in its platform adopted at the last State convention, has gone on record in favor of this payment to our ex-service men.

The ex-service man is asking for nothing more than he is entitled to receive. The service performed by him can never be paid in dollars and cents; therefore when many do not have bread to eat or clothes to cover their bodies, I feel that such payment, if it could be made now, would do more good to our entire citizenship than any other legislation that can be enacted into a law.

I feel that some attention should be given to that which is commonly termed "short sales." I propose to introduce an amendment to this legislation with the hope that those who engage in this kind of practice, which has a tendency to do away with the rule of supply and demand with respect to different commodities, will be taxed, and I figure that such a provision will raise an enormous amount of money.

Last week the Washington papers called attention to the fact that many of those who are engaged in what is commonly known as short selling live abroad, and that they are making raids on the stocks of this country, resulting in much of our wealth being taken across the water to other countries and those who are the beneficiaries paying nothing toward the maintenance of our Government.

Mr. GARBER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. McCLINTIC of Oklahoma. Yes.

Mr. GARBER. I hope the gentleman will succeed in an amendment making that tax high enough to absolutely prohibit the loaning of stock for short-selling purposes. The big opportunity of this bill is that it affords an opportunity to outlaw gambling on the stock exchange.

Mr. McCLINTIC of Oklahoma. The gentleman's contribution is helpful, and I am in accord with him. He knows, as I know, that this practice brings about a situation that is harmful and injurious to every occupation in the land. During the course of this debate I asked the distinguished acting chairman of this committee if this so-called consumption tax would raise the price of farm implements, and he answered that it would. In other words, every hoe, every plow, every cultivator, every piece of machinery will have to contribute its quota. What about the good women of this Nation; those who have to toil long hours in order to keep the wolf away from the door? This sales tax would cause them to have to pay increased costs on calico, gingham. hosiery, kitchen utensils, and practically everything that they use in their homes. To my own knowledge there are many who are not able to buy the bare necessities of life, and as I view it, I would be unfaithful to the trust imposed in me if I should vote for such an iniquitous measure.

There is no answer, as I view it, to this problem other than just to vote against the so-called sales tax which will penalize the consumers to the extent of over $600,000,000. This Nation is now confronted with a deficit of over $2 .-000,000,000. Before the World War it cost $1,500,000,000 to take care of the needs of this Government, and the expenditures have increased since 1887 to the present moment from $282,000,000 per year to approximately $5,000,000,000. Such an increase is entirely out of proportion to the increase in population or the increase of wealth. I take the position that if there ever was a time to reduce expenditures, it is now. Private institutions all through the Nation have found it necessary to reduce salaries. I am in favor of keeping pace with private industries and am willing to reduce the higher salaries of those employed by the Government, including Members of Congress, and I have introduced a bill that has this for its purpose. At the present time there are numerous commissions and useless bureaus costing millions of dollars which, in my opinion, should be abolished, and I am hoping that the Economy Committee will bring in the kind of bill that will make this possible.

I have called the attention of the chairman of the Expenditures Committee to a bill that I have pending, which is largely fashioned after one of our Oklahoma laws and which would consolidate the buying activities of the Government into one bureau, thereby cutting out duplication and waste.

The passage of this measure would assist to the extent that millions of dollars could be saved. Everyone realizes that the expenses of this Government must be reduced. I have no criticism of the members of the Committee on Ways and Means. I think they are as fine gentlemen as ever served in that capacity. I realize they have a hard problem to solve, but I can never support any measure that would take from the backs of the rich that which they should be willing to pay and place it on the backs of the poor. I am hoping that there will be a sufficient number of votes when the question comes up before the House after the conclusion of debate to strike out that provision so that we can return to our homes and say that we kept the faith, that we refused to vote for legislation that would penalize those that we have the honor of representing. [Applause.]

Mr. PETTENGILL. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KNIFFIN].

Mr. KNIFFIN. Mr. Chairman, the pioneers handed this grand country down to us with all of the perplexing problems of their day solved. Our forefathers solved their problems and it is incumbent upon us to solve ours. To do this we need the courage of our forefathers. We must square ourselves to our responsibilities.

I have the honor to represent one of the finest and most intensely agricultural districts in this country, and I believe that I can say from first-hand information that the present condition of American agriculture constitutes an emergency of the gravest character. The position of agriculture surely is of vital concern to all of the people of this country, for it involves the national security, the racial character, the economic welfare, and social progress of our people.

The principal source of State and local revenue is the general property tax which rests almost exclusively on real estate. The tax burden of agriculture, unlike that of other classes, is fixed with hardly any relation to the agricultural income. There can be little doubt that the burden of taxation, as related to tax-paying capacity, is heavier on agriculture than upon the rest of the Nation's taxpayers combined.

To impose upon the farmer, the small business man, and all others residing in agricultural communities an additional tax would be to impose a burden that can not be endured. Members of Congress, we should not write into our law a sales tax on the necessities of life, wearing apparel, farm machinery, fuel, medicine, articles of food, including even the ice-cream cones which millions of prattling American children will consume, and many other things. The imposition of such a tax would be not only unbearable but unconscionable as well.

It is, of course, desirable that the Budget be balanced, and all of the Members of this House are anxious in their efforts to bring about that result. It is true that the Government should live within its income. Let us balance the Budget by reducing the enormously excessive cost of government in abolishing unnecessary bureaus and commissions and eliminating from the pay rolls all unnecessary high-salaried employees, and thereby put an end to the wild saturnalia of expense and extravagance which has in no small measure contributed to the present condition of the Treasury. Then also let us impose an added tax upon those who are able to bear the burden, namely, those whose incomes are many times greater than their actual needs and requirements. We should persist in these two directions until the cost of government is equal to its income, until the Budget is balanced, whether it require one, two, or more years in which to balance it. To do otherwise, it seems to me, would be cowardly. [Applause.]

The prolonged exhibition of patience on the part of the people challenges universal admiration. There is some limit, however, as to what they can and will endure. The American people are becoming awakened to the dangers which menace their freedom and prosperity and are determined to exercise again their sovereign control of this Government.

It is not my purpose to indulge in partisan discussion, for I have as much concern for my Republican neighbor as for my Democratic neighbor. I believe that in this country the injury to one of our citizens should be the concern of all. However, the fact remains that the Republican Party was to a considerable extent repudiated at the last general election, and it is believed that the repudiation will be completed this fall.

Now, to my Democratic colleagues I wish to say that the American people are hopeful. They are looking to the Democratic Party for just measures of relief. They are looking to the Democratic Party in the high hope that its service will enable them to emerge from the slough of despond and the mire of despair. If the Democratic Party will not be responsive to their hopes and aspirations, our party too will deserve to be repudiated by an aroused and justly indignant citizenry. [Applause.]

Mr. PETTENGILL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. Fernandez].

Mr. FERNANDEZ. Mr. Chairman, from whence does this sales tax come? Mr. Chairman, if the President of the United States, if my Democratic colleagues, and if the Republicans of this Congress can grant a moratorium to the European nations for the purpose of balancing their budgets, then why can not we in this Congress grant the American people one year's moratorium by the issuance of bonds to balance their Budget? [Applause.]

From whence does this sales tax come?

Whenever the issue in this Congress is between the common people of this country and the financial interests of Wall Street, you will find me fighting side by side with the common people, you will find me falling by their side, but you will never find me running away from them.

On all highly controversial matters arising in Congress for consideration I hope to be able always, in my humble way, to make known my views and stand on such legislation. We are here confronted with a sales-tax proposition the like of which will be so far-reaching as to sweep out into the poor ranks of the Nation; aye, even into the ranks of the unemployed, who must buy of the necessities of life, some of which are within the broad scope of the sales-tax measure. It has often been said that it requires no courage to vote against a sales tax, or for that matter any tax measure, and to go back home and face your people. Now, I am here representing 254,000 people from my district, and I know I voice the overwhelming sentiment of my people when I say they are unalterably opposed to so-called sales taxes or nuisance taxes. And why? Because industries are almost at a standstill. Money is scarce. In the city there is much suffering with insufficient funds to meet the needs. Relief is woefully inadequate. There is a steady heavy increase in application for relief and a shortage of funds in New Orleans. Will not, then, the imposition of a sales tax increase the already heavily and steadily mounting burden on those least able to pay and those who have consistently contributed to those in need as good citizens of the community? [Applause.]

From whence does this sales tax come? Let us go back a few years and review the platform of the major political parties in regard to the question of taxation. The Democratic platform of 1924, in part, said:

The income tax was intended as a tax upon wealth. It was not intended to take from the poor any part of the necessities of life. We hold that the fairest tax with which to raise revenues for the Federal Government is the income tax. We favor a graduated tax upon incomes, so adjusted as to lay the burdens of government upon the taxpayers in proportion to the benefits they enjoy and their ability to pay. We oppose the so-called nuisance taxes, sales taxes, and all other forms of taxation that unfairly shift to the consumer the burdens of taxation.

The Republican platform of 1920, in part, said:

Sound policy equally demands the early accomplishment of that real reduction of the tax burden which may be achieved by substituting simple for complex tax laws and procedure, prompt and certain determination of the tax liability for delay and uncertainty, tax laws which do not for tax laws which do excessively mulct the consumer or needlessly repress enterprise and thrift.

Therefore, we see both great political parties enunciating a principle. Again, I ask, from whence does this sales tax come?

Why, it is not necessary for us to go back a few years to view the wringing denunciation of sales-tax methods. We have only to go back to November 21 of last year and read the statement issued by the leader of the Democratic Party in the other body, which I quote:

Every effort will be made by the Democrats to deal with the subject in a spirit of justice and conciliation to every interest involved. Such increases in taxation as are found necessary should be imposed with due regard to the principle that the best way to secure laborers in their employment is to promote confidence by rejecting measures likely to discourage investments in productive enterprises. It is generally understood that there is a limit to the rate which may be imposed without discouraging investment and production. In order to avoid the levying of income surtax rates so high that they may be calculated to prolong the existing depression, I recommend that consideration be given to the authorization of a bond issue sufficient in amount to cover that part of the deficit which is not overcome by increased revenues.

He characterized as "objectionable" the levying of a general sales tax.

I should say that the merchant must pass the sales tax on to the consumer. Indeed, all fixed charges must be passed on to the consumer. For the time being and in specific instances com-petition may fix the price without regard to the tax, but it is obvious that the merchant will become insolvent unless the tax is passed on to the consumer. This, however, is true of all taxes. They must be passed on to the consumer either in the form of It is possible or in the form of increased price or profit. that the merchant will add more than the actual tax upon articles of little value and thereby collect a profit on the tax. I should think that this would result in some instances. In other, the merchant might absorb the tax.

Another distinguished Mississippi Senator had this to say about the sales tax:

I have opposed the sales tax even when the country was prosperous, because it is not in accord with my idea of taxation. I do not believe that the Federal Government should impose taxes, as a policy, upon those who are unable to bear them when taxes can be raised from those who are better able to pay them. A sales tax imposed upon all sales, whether from the manufacturer, jobber, the wholesaler, or the retailer, is borne by the conthe jobber, the wholesaler, or the retailer, is borne by the consumer. The consuming public now is in no position to carry heavier loads of taxation than they are bearing. Indeed, there is hunger and distress in the country. The sales tax would make that condition worse. If taxes must be increased, the wiser and equitable way would be through the imposition of increased taxation on the income taxes in the higher brackets. I could not possibly give my consent at this time, of all times, to a sales tax, thereby making every necessity of life more costly.

Why, again I ask from whence does this sales tax come? Listen to this, what the distinguished gentleman from Georgia, for whom I have the highest honor and regard, and who is sponsoring this sales tax bill at this time as a nonpartisan, nonpolitical, all-American bill, had to write in the latter part of 1931:

I am opposed to a sales tax, for I believe the tax would be passed on to the ultimate consumer and that it would be pyramided two or three times before reaching the consumer.

The distinguished gentleman did, I believe, say much in a few words.

Now I refer that such representative bodies as the American Federation of Labor and the National Grange oppose the sales tax as bearing most heavily on the masses. [Applause.]

I am a Democrat and will always, as long as there is a Democratic Party, follow the principles of the Democratic standard. I would like to follow the leaders of the Democratic Party in this legislation, and I am conscientiously and firmly of the belief that I am following the Democratic principles, as already enunciated by their leaders and as evidenced by their past platform, and the statements of the distinguished Democratic leaders I have just quoted herein. I again emphasize, from whence does this sales tax come? [Applause.]

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HOOPER].

Mr. HOOPER. Mr. Chairman, I do not speak frequently in the House of Representatives, but I listen with a great deal of care to the debates ordinarily, and it has seemed to me in the discussions through which we have been passing in the last few days that a very high plane of debate has been attained by the House. I do not recall any discussion that has taken place here in the seven years during which I have been a Member of the House where partisanship has apparently been so absent and where the true merits of the matter in controversy have been so thoroughly debated. I can not help sympathizing with the views of those Members who take an opposite position to my own, but the speech made on the first day of this discussion by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CRISP] would have convinced me very thoroughly that this bill should and must pass, even had there been no other debate on the subject and had I made up my mind to the contrary before I had heard him.

I never have had an opportunity in the House of saying what I think of the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CRISP], who has been my friend ever since I have been a Member. I think if there is anyone in the whole House to whom that hackneyed term "statesman" could be properly and rightfully applied, it is to the gentleman from Georgia. I think

Another distinguished Senator from Georgia is on record | he has earned in the House of Representatives a place of which his State, his section, and his Nation might well be proud. [Applause.] And when, the other day, standing up before the full Membership of the House of Representatives, he gave to us the story of this bill and pictured to us the sheer necessity of its passage, it seemed to me that the first word was practically the last word which could be spoken upon this subject.

> I am one of those who can not agree with the bill in its entirety. I think that when I come to vote under the 5minute rule within a day or two, among other things I shall vote for raising the taxation on admission fees to a higher figure. I was very much relieved when I learned yesterday that the tax upon canned goods had been removed. There are many peculiar things which arise in a bill of this kind. I had a letter from some people at home a day or two ago-manufacturers of gas. They raised this question: They say that under this bill gas is to pay the tax at the source, at the place of generation.

> They say, "We people who manufacture the gas and sell it always consider and estimate that there will be a leakage of somewhere between 6 and 30 per cent at the source, at the time and place of generation," and they raise the question, a very serious question, as to whether or not the tax ought not be taken away from the place of generation and placed at the point of sale. I may ask an amendment on this point.

> Those questions must and will arise in such a bill as this. which must, according to what has been said upon both sides affect, in a sense, all of the people of the country. But it is only going to affect them for a comparatively short space of time. I am not one of those who believe that if the sales tax is adopted it will become one of the permanent features in our scheme of taxation.

> We are to-day passing through a national crisis. That has been so many times said upon this floor that it is trite, but it has not been emphasized enough during this entire session upon the floor of the House that the crisis through which we are passing is not a local national crisis. It is not a crisis confined to the United States, as most of the crises in the past have been. It is a world crisis.

> I was reading last night a book dealing with Japan's policy in Manchuria, in which the writer started out with the amazing statement that of the 450,000,000 people in China there are unemployed 200,000,000 people; 200,000,000, including those who actually do the work and their immediate dependents. Everywhere throughout the world is the same story. Everywhere throughout the world is disaster and dismay. I can not understand how any seriousminded man can think that the United States alone is passing through this cloud, that we alone are suffering from this great depression. The whole world is suffering from it and will be suffering from it for some years to come; but we in this country must take heroic measures, and we are taking heroic measures, to counteract it and to stop it just as far as it is humanly possible, and this is one of these measures.

> Now, we are confronted again with a tax bill. We are confronted with a bill which must be to the highest degree controversial everywhere throughout this country. Votes are cast here for two reasons-for political expediency or for the reason that the person casting the vote believes that he is right and has satisfied his intellect upon that question. I have cast, during my seven years in the House of Representatives, a few votes, at least, which have been votes of expediency, political votes, if you care to call them so. In a crisis like this I intend to vote my views whether I ever enter the doors of the House of Representatives again after my term expires, and with that in mind I intend to vote for this bill as it finally comes out in perfected form from this committee. There is but one alternative, there is but one expedient, and that would be passing to those who come after us another tremendous bond issue, mortgaging and mortgaging again the future of this Nation.

> I think we have had enough of that. I think that if by this tax-which, after all, is not going to bear so heavily upon the ordinary citizen of this Nation-we can balance our Budget, that if we can raise the revenue that must be ! raised in order to bring us into the clear again, the thing for me to do is to support the bill recommended not by Republicans alone nor by Democrats alone but by both Republicans and Democrats.

I wonder if there is any man in the House of Representatives who could point to any member of the Ways and Means Committee and say, "That man is against the plain people," or would say, "That man was against giving to the honest workingman and the farmer the things that are due him"? Who would it be? Would it be the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CRISP]? No. There would be no one in this House who would say he was not working honestly and conscientiously in behalf of just those people. Would it be the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. Hawley], who has earned a position equally as high in the House of Representatives during his long term of service? Nobody would hold him otherwise than as I have said, as being the friend of and meaning well for the ordinary, average, everyday man and woman; and this is true without exception of the entire committee.

If that is true, when this committee, after a long and serious study of this bill, extending over weeks, having the benefit of testimony brought to them from all over the United States, thinks this bill is the bill which should pass the House of Representatives in order to sustain our national credit in the years that are yet to come, then, Mr. Chairman, I am for that bill. [Applause.]

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. Linthicum].

Mr. LINTHICUM. Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, it is not my purpose to devote my time to a general discussion of the bill. There is a particular section in the bill to which I am vitally opposed, because it affects not only the people of my great city of Baltimore but because it affects the whole country. That section is the section which places a tax on oil and gasoline.

It would impose a tax of 1 cent per gallon, or 42 cents per barrel, on crude oil, or 80 per cent ad valorem; 1 cent per gallon, or 42 cents per barrel, on fuel oil, or 70 per cent ad valorem; 1 cent per gallon on gasoline, or 25 per cent ad

Such a high tax levied on an article in a competitive market is prohibitive and confiscatory of the rights and properties of the American producing and shipping companies against whom it is directed. We have also the report of the Treasury to the Committee on Ways and Means that it will produce no revenue. Therefore it has no place in a revenue bill. It is in any event a surreptitious and thinly disguised tariff, and, even if it would produce revenue, has no place except in a separate tariff bill.

Mr. TREADWAY'S report in his speech to the House also shows the Treasury failed to recommend the section as a revenue producer, making no report of expected income. Only the committee-most frivolously-"figured" an income of $5,000,000. This could be expected only from the gasoline schedule, as the Treasury plainly stated that the proposed taxes on crude and fuel oil would bring no revenue.

That statement was put into the RECORD by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY], showing that this tax will produce no revenue. If it will not produce any revenue then the only reason for putting it in the bill is as a tariff, and I think the Democratic Party is against a tariff except in cases where it is absolutely needed for the protection of labor and for revenue. It has no place in a revenue bill, and it is in any event a thinly disguised tariff.

The tax on crude oil is prohibitive. It will keep crude from entering the ports of Baltimore, Savannah, Bayonne, and Norfolk, for the manufacture of asphalt or fuel oil or gasoline: 47,000,000 barrels of crude oil were imported in 1931, from which were produced 1,500,000 tons of asphalt, 25,000,000 barrels of fuel oil, and 7,000,000 barrels of gasoline. These products held down the prices to the public of the Atlantic coast, especially for gasoline and fuel oil.

The oil we use on the Atlantic coast comes from outside the country. The oil which is used in the middle part of the country comes from the mid-west companies, and the oil which is used in California comes from the oil wells of

The tax on fuel oil, which now sells all along the Atlantic for 60 cents a barrel, is 70 per cent of value, therefore prohibitive. The tax would be an umbrella over the heads of the major companies, which would raise the price of fuel oil by that amount.

Mr. McKEOWN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LINTHICUM. The gentleman sees I am trying to stick to facts and figures.

Mr. McKEOWN. Just one question.

Mr. LINTHICUM. Then I will yield, because I always like to yield to the gentleman from Oklahoma.

Mr. McKEOWN. The gentleman knows that these major companies fix the prices. He knows they have always controlled the prices, whether there is an excise tax or any other tax. They have always controlled and fixed the prices, and they fix them as high as the service will stand.

Mr. LINTHICUM. The answer is that they fix the prices. of course; but in fixing the prices they must fix a reasonable price, because of this competitive oil coming in from other countries.

Mr. McKEOWN. The big companies which do this price fixing own the oil that comes in.

Mr. LINTHICUM. The gentleman said he only wanted to ask me one question.

Mr. McKEOWN. That is all. I will not bother the gentleman any more.

Mr. LINTHICUM. Three hundred and forty-eight million six hundred and thirty thousand two hundred and seventyeight barrels of fuel oil were consumed in the United States in 1930. Cost to the user would be raised $152,000,000-all for the benefit of the major companies with hundreds of millions of barrels in storage. American steamships alone used 94,130,000 barrels. The increased cost to them would be $39,000,000, and, worse still, the cheaper fuel oil now brought here would go to their competing lines in Europe, depriving our ships of the only advantage they now enjoy-cheaper fuel-and passing that advantage over to their competitors.

The tax on gasoline is 25 per cent of present selling price of gasoline at American refineries, same being 4 cents per gallon. None would be imported. Under this unbrella the major companies could and would increase the price of gasoline by the amount of the tariff, or possibly more in the East. It would cost the American gasoline-using public, at 1 cent per gallon, an additional $158,580,000 annually-all paid to the major companies with 632,000,000 barrels of all oils in storage to-day.

The Ways and Means Committee refrained from imposing a 1-cent flat Federal tax on all gasoline used, on account of the cost to the public. But this provision of 1 cent per gallon tax on imported gasoline, together with the barring of the crude from which one-third of it is made, will have the same effect without any return at all to the Government.

Total imported gasoline used in 1931:	Barrels
Imported as gasoline	13,000,000
Derived from imported crude oils	7,000,000

Or total of 840,000,000 gallons, which is about 20 per cent of all the gasoline used in the Atlantic Coast States; or 3.3 per cent of all gasoline used in the Nation.

Total cost to the American public without return to	the Treasury
Increased cost of fuel oil	150 000 000
Increased cost of asphalt (at $4.20 per ton, as it takes 10 barrels to make one ton)
Total tribute to major companies	323, 986, 000

To summarize:

The tax, if enacted, will close down the refineries of Baltimore, all of which run on imported crude oil, and reduce the runs of many of the others on the Atlantic, transferring this activity to points in Europe and the Antilles.

&lt;sup>1</sup> Decreasing road construction.

It will place a tremendous burden on all American consumers for the sole benefit of the major companies. No Federal revenue.

It will make our American steamship lines drop out of competition. Its burden upon them vastly exceeds all subsidy aid extended.

It will ruin the purely American industry of production of oil in foreign lands for the bolstering of the American fast-depleting supply of petroleum-which has been encouraged from patriotic reasons by every recent administration. (See hearings, pp. 181, 182.)

It will lay off more American workmen and operatives than are now unemployed in American oil fields. (Hearings, pp. 59, 127, 128, etc.)

And all to the present and continuing benefit of our major oil companies and the royalty speculators of the Southwest. (Hearings, pp. 173-177.)

The United States produces and consumes 68 per cent of the world's oil and has within its borders only 18 per cent of the world's supply. Every report of the conservation board has urged the use of more oil from abroad. This measure would stop that help to our limited supply.

It is just like the lumber question. When the tariff bill came up I voted to let logs and lumber come in from Canada. Why? Because our forests are becoming depleted. and any lumber that we may get from outside will add to the amount that is left for future generations.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Will the gentleman yield for a question on the matter of lumber?

Mr. LINTHICUM. Yes. I am sorry I touched on that subject, now.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I am awfully sorry, because each and every month that the gentleman lives and observes matters he will find that there is more and more timber standing in the United States that can not even pay the taxes.

Mr. LINTHICUM. Well, when it comes to that, we can not pay taxes on anything much.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. And we have had to forfeit the market to our neighbor, Canada, and they are quite

Mr. LINTHICUM. I must admit that I did not see the gentleman sitting there. If I had seen the gentleman, I would not have raised the lumber question.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I am glad the gentleman did not see me, because I like for the gentleman to talk frankly and without fear.

Mr. LINTHICUM. Getting back to lumber, I voted to let the lumber come in because I felt that the more lumber we brought in from some other country the more we would have left for future generations.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Will the gentleman yield

Mr. LINTHICUM. Yes. Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. See how we differ. I voted for everything in Maryland that could be protected by tariff, and years ago when the Democrats had control I helped to vote a tariff on citrus fruits, and then they turned around and would not even put a tariff on the boxes that they packed the fruit in.

Mr. LINTHICUM. I am sorry that Maryland has not treated the gentleman better. It is not because they do not love him, I will tell him that.

The Governments of Venezuela, Mexico, Colombia, and Peru may be expected to recoil at the measure and enlist Latin American reprisals as on other and former occasions. It is our desire to have closer relations rather than halt them. [Applause.]

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Since the gentleman from Maryland has mentioned the companies producing oil in Venezuela and other South American countries, let me suggest it is only fair that the gentleman should place in the RECORD the names of such companies. They are, as he knows, the Dutch Shell, the Standard Oil, and the Gulf, owned by the Mellon interests.

Mr. BLANTON. If the gentleman from Maryland will yield, it is well known that the Gulf Co. and the Dutch Shell, and the Mellon interests are using peon labor in South America and Mexico, and they can ship foreign oil and gasoline into this country and lay it down cheaper than any independent company can produce it that is paying American standard wages. If you can put this tax on foreign oiland it ought to be doubled-it will put many of the 100,000 men now idle back to work in Oklahoma and Texas. Is not the gentleman from Maryland in favor of that?

Mr. LINTHICUM. I understand in Texas they use a good deal of Mexican labor.

Mr. BLANTON. There is not a Mexican employed in the Texas oil-producing business. It is all white labor, and thousands of them are farm boys who need the money.

Mr. LINTHICUM. Is this the gentleman's speech or mine? [Laughter.]

Mr. BLANTON. I am only glad to get the gentleman from Maryland off of the hard-liquor question onto the soft-oil subject once in a while.

Mr. LINTHICUM. This is a lubricant question, and I stick to the lubricant. [Laughter.]

Mr. GOSS. If the gentleman from Maryland will yield, the gentleman from Texas attempted to make a tax speech the other day and got off on the liquor question.

Mr. BLANTON. Yes; and it was the gentleman from Connecticut that got me off. [Laughter.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CRISP. I will yield to the gentleman three minutes

Mr. LINTHICUM. Now, I want to tell you what this will do to my State, and I am very much interested in my State. The cost to the State of Maryland if you tax this 1 cent a gallon for gasoline would be $1,740,000. Fuel oil, 42 cents a barrel, will amount to $2,239,000.

Closing down the refineries, because we will have to close them down, $5,000,000.

Suspension of steamship service—I do not know what that would be.

Bunker oil that comes into the country, and is immediately placed on board the steamships—under this you could not receive any oil, for the tax would be levied immediately, and the British ships would not buy from usthey would go elsewhere. That would be a loss of $2,000,000, making a grand total of $10,979,000.

Now, gentlemen, this is what it would cost Maryland. It would cost other Atlantic seaboard cities about the same. It will cost the users of automobiles a large sum, and fuel oil for the homes, which have been changed from coal to oil burners, another large sum.

This tax will have a devastating effect upon water-borne commerce of the port of Baltimore and work hardships on the ultimate consumer.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. PETTENGILL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Polk].

Mr. POLK. Mr. Chairman, our friends on the other side of the aisle, who have been in control of all branches of this Government during the past 12 years, are now coming to the Democrats and asking us with tears in their eyes to help them balance the Budget. To raise enough money to pay the expenses of running this Government we are asked by the Ways and Means Committee to levy a tax which will reach down to the pocketbook of every farmer, every laboring man, and even to the unemployed.

I shall ask your indulgence to-day solely because I believe the time has come when the people of this country need some one to voice their disapproval of the tax bill now under consideration. I prefer to use the words "the people" as Lincoln used them when he spoke of our Government as being a Government of the people, by the people, and for the people. Too often, I fear, our leaders forget the real meaning of these words. I fear they interpret them as meaning a Government of the people, by a part of the people, for the benefit of that small portion of our people who hold Government positions, either elective or appointive or under the so-called civil service. To-day I am thinking not only of those who derive their income from the Government employment. I am thinking more of those of our people who are toiling on the farms, in the factories, in the workshops, in the mines, in the office buildings, and of that vast army of the unemployed, some eight or ten million of whom are walking the streets of our cities, cold, and hungry, and in rags.

Under this proposed tax bill these people will all have to pay more taxes in addition to those they are now paying. As brought out in the debate of last Thursday, the poor man with only a few pennies in his pocket will have to pay a tax when he patronizes a hot-dog stand, while the wealthy man can buy the finest juicy steak that money will buy in the most expensive restaurant in our land without paying a penny in tax on that steak.

As a farmer and one member of the Committee on Agriculture of this House, I have risen to-day to voice my protest against the sales tax proposed in the tax bill now under consideration. [Applause.] The deplorable financial condition which exists on the farms of America to-day will be aggravated by this measure. At present the farmer-and I use the term "farmer" in its broadest sense, to include all those who are engaged in the production of food products, both grain and livestock, and those who are engaged in the production of all agricultural plant products, as tobacco and cotton. All these people, including in the aggregate some 30,000,000 of our people, will be doubly affected by this proposed sales tax. In the first place, the farmers of America have little control over the selling price of their products. Because of our economic system every farmer is forced to offer his products on the markets, without any control over the price which he may receive. He sends his cattle and his hogs and in fact practically all of his products to market and takes what buyers on that market choose to offer for them. If this sales tax goes into effect, those buyers will decrease their bids approximately the amount of the tax, because it will be easier to charge at least a part of this tax off in this way instead of looking to the consumer for it. If those engaged in manufacturing care to do so, they can charge all of this tax off to the farmer when they buy his products and can collect a double profit for themselves by charging the tax again to the consumer when the consumer buys their manufactured products. So far as I can learn from reading this bill, I find it does not preclude such unfair practices. For example, the farmer can be forced to take a lower price for his cotton than he might otherwise get for it and then be charged with the tax when he goes to the store to buy a pair of overalls or a cotton shirt—the price of those overalls or that shirt will have an item of tax added to its selling price; thus the farmer will be liable for two taxes; he will in many instances be forced to pay the tax twice.

The farmer when he sells his tobacco, his corn, his tomatoes, his cotton, his wool, his cattle or his hogs, or any other food or clothing product which is to be processed or manufactured, will be told by the buyers of that product that because of this manufacturers' sales tax they can not pay him so much for his product as he might otherwise get, while manufactured articles the farmer buys will be taxed. Taxed for whom? Taxed to maintain Federal Government employees in their present good, easy positions, the salaries of which have not been cut one penny. Taxed to pay the deficit of Republican administrations, which during the past 12 years have thrown money away like drunken sailors. I for one shall not by my vote or influence cause one penny additional tax to be levied on the great mass of our people until governmental expenditures are cut to the bone, and I believe that cut should start right here in the House of Representatives. [Applause.]

I have been amused at the unanimity with which the Republican leadership has acclaimed this bill as a Democratic measure. The parts of this tax bill which refer to income taxes, surtaxes, gift taxes, and estate taxes are all Democratic measures. The parts of this bill which include the sales tax and the amusement tax are not Democratic and never have been advocated by any Democratic Party platform since the days of Thomas Jefferson down to the present day. The Democratic Party platforms have favored the plan of making the wealthy pay instead of poverty. Since 1916 every Democratic platform has favored the income tax. The Democratic Party has never intended to take from the poor man any part of the necessities of life. In 1924 the Democratic Party platform stated "we oppose the so-called nuisance tax, the sales tax, and all other forms of taxation which unfairly shift to the consumer the burden of taxation." Why has our Ways and Means Committee. which has on it just a majority of Democrats, now come before us advocating a sales tax? I think I can answer that question. It was partly answered by the distinguished gentleman from Georgia, Judge CRISP, last Thursday when he called to your attention, as recorded in the Congres-SIONAL RECORD, on page 5695, that the Treasury Department came before his committee with a recommendation that tobacco should be placed on the tax list with an increase of one-sixth over the present tax: that automobiles and trucks under this Treasury Department program were to be taxed to the tune of one hundred millions; that an additional gasoline tax would be levied; that the poor man who wants to send a letter through the mails would have to pay 3 cents postage instead of the present 2-cent rate; that a stamp tax on checks estimated to place a burden of ninety-five millions principally on the small banks of America; that real-estate transfers affecting the man who wants to sell his farm or the man who owns a little lot in some small town or city and who would have to pay an additional tax to the Federal Treasury should he desire to sell his property; radios and phonographs were to be taxed; and capping the climax of this proposed scheme which our present Treasury Department advocated was the proposition that every domestic consumer of electricity and gas was to have levied upon his light bill and his gas bill an additional sum of money to help pay for the extravagances of government. If I remember correctly, Judge CRISP stated that we must take either one horn or the other of this dilemma-that we must take this tax program advocated by the United States Treasury Department or that we must adopt the sales-tax idea. My answer to the proposition is simply this:

I do not think it is at all necessary to raise this additional sum of money in either the way suggested by the Secretary of the Treasury or the way suggested by the Ways and Means Committee.

I believe that the Federal income-tax schedule should be advanced to the war-time rates, together with the elimination of many of the exemptions which are now granted. Second, by a Federal estate tax of 20 per cent as was suggested during the debates of Saturday, approximately one billion eight hundred millions would be brought into the Treasury. Third, a 2 per cent tax on the net worth of all stock and bond transactions has been estimated to bring in an income of approximately a billion dollars.

I heartily agree with the statement that it is necessary to balance the Budget, and in my humble judgment there are two ways, and only two ways, of accomplishing this balance. First, by reducing governmental expenditures, and by reducing them I mean a radical reduction which will hit all along the line. The second method and the easiest, from a political standpoint, is to leave governmental expenditures practically where they are and to place a sales tax on the unsuspecting public. I fear this latter plan is being recommended to us because it is considered to be a painless solution of the problem. As for myself, I can not agree to such a proposition of adding additional tax burdens upon our people until after adequate savings in governmental expenditures have been brought about. We should not levy one cent additional tax burden upon the people until we have cut the costs of government much more than these costs have so far been

I have been surprised at the charge that has been voiced on that side of the aisle that the Democrats have made no effort to cut down governmental expenditures during the present session of Congress. Let us consider this matter fairly and upon its merits. As mentioned in the debate last Thursday, if two proposals recommended and sponsored and supported practically unanimously by those on that side of the aisle had not been foisted upon the unsuspecting public, there would be no need for a sales tax or an amusement tax. I refer to the moratorium of European war debts amounting to $252,000,000 and to the $2,000,000,000 Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

I voted for the former because our President had already promised those foreign countries that he would give them his word that the United States would not ask them to make their payments this year. I voted as I did to support the President, to keep from having our President discredited in the eyes of the world. I think the country will commend us Democrats for our action in supporting the President on this proposition, even though many of us think his charity should have begun at home. The country will not forget the Democratic cooperation with our President in this matter, as the country has not forgotten the lack of cooperation on the part of Republicans some 13 years ago, when you failed to cooperate with the then President, the immortal Woodrow Wilson, after he had made some promises to these same foreign countries.

I can speak frankly about these matters because I voted against the Reconstruction Finance Corporation proposal, which has saddled an obligation of $2,000,000,000 upon all the people of the country for the benefit of a very few of our people. In this regard I have the distinction of being the only Representative from either political party from the great State of Ohio who voted against the Reconstruction Finance Corporation bill.

I repeat that I have been surprised to hear distinguished statesmen on that side of the aisle hurl the charge to us that we Democrats are making no sincere effort to cut down Government expenses and that consequently additional taxes are necessary. In that regard I would like to call the attention of the House to a vote which is recorded on pages 5305 and 5306 of the Congressional Record of March 5, 1932. The House then had under consideration the appropriation bill for the Post Office Department. The distinguished Democratic chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, Mr. Byrns, repeatedly begged the membership of this House to do our duty and to vote down any proposal seeking to increase appropriations for salaries in that department as we had done in the other departments. A distinguished Republican, the gentleman from New York [Mr. La Guardia], arose and offered an amendment to strike out all of section 4 of the bill then under consideration, which section provided that no postal salaries should be increased during the years 1932 and 1933. The distinguished chairman of the Appropriations Committee had formerly pointed out, as recorded on page 5303 of the Congressional Record of that day, that this amendment, if agreed to, would mean an additional tax burden of a million and a quarter dollars on the people, not for the purpose of preventing a cut in salary but to provide actual increases in salaries.

While this problem was under discussion, if I remember correctly, only one Republican Member chose to raise his voice against this raid on the Treasury. I believe in giving credit where credit is due. This was the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Michener], who pointed out that the adoption of the amendment might well lead to an eventual additional cost to the Treasury of $7,000,000 which must be raised for the next fiscal year. His remarks are recorded on page 5304 of the Congressional Record.

In spite of the convincing arguments of the Democratic chairman of the Committee on Appropriations the gentleman from New York demanded the yeas and nays on his proposition to grant this raid on the Treasury. The vote was taken: It was a very interesting vote. It is a very amusing vote. But in reality it is really a tragic vote. This vote shows who had backbone on March 5, 1932. It shows who of the membership of this House were for economy on March 5; it shows who were legislating for the people, and who were legislating for the comparatively few who have their feet in the public trough. As a result of this vote demanded by the distinguished gentleman from New York, 116 Members of this House failed to vote. Their names are recorded on pages 5305 and 5306 of the Congressional Rec-ORD. Of those who voted against the amendment, and I was one of that group, and please keep in mind that those who voted against that amendment were voting against the further raiding of the Treasury of the United States, 155 votes are recorded; 114 of these votes are Democrats and only 41 are Republicans. That is an interesting comparison when we remember that the two parties are practically evenly matched in numbers in this House. Of those who voted for this amendment 100 were Republicans and 60 were Democrats. This vote indicates that nearly twice as many Republicans were willing to go on record and register their votes in favor of increasing salaries while nearly three times as many Democrats as Republicans voted against further increases at this time. And yet our Republican friends charge that we Democrats are making no sincere effort to reduce expenses.

There is just one further example of the sincere effort of the Democrats of this House to reduce expenses, to which I shall call your attention. You may remember when the subject of the Speaker appointing an Economy Committee came before this House some weeks ago there was considerable Republican opposition to it. Monday, when the House had under consideration the question of extending the life of this special Economy Committee to the end of the session and the question of giving the committee some additional authority, a very interesting vote was recorded. You will find on page 6014 of Monday's Congressional RECORD the names of the 116 Members of the House who voted against the proposition of continuing the Economy Committee. In checking over those votes you will find that out of the 116 who voted against this proposition, 113 were Republicans. This is a further indication of the character of the opposition to the Democratic program of economy.

In conclusion may I repeat that this tax bill under discussion is not a Democratic measure. It has Andrew Mellon and his chief satellite, Ogden Mills, written all over it. Why do they advocate a sales tax? Simply because such a tax hits those who can not fight back. It strikes at an unorganized group of our people. It further burdens those least able to pay. It is taxation without representation.

In embracing this sales-tax system of taxation, it seems to me, we Democrats will be traveling far from the teachings of Thomas Jefferson, who fought so valiantly for the rights of rural America. Will it be necessary for those of us who choose to defend those same rights to write another Declaration of Independence? An independence of the domination of those who represent wealth, who, forgetful of the rights of the many, bow to the demands of the few.

I appeal to those patriots on both sides of the aisle who represent rural districts to vote against this sales-tax proposal, which will place a further unjust burden on the farmers of America. [Applause.]

Mr. PETTENGILL. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Cochran].

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I have a great deal of respect for the opinion of the Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Mills; and I also have a great deal of respect for the opinion of the Under Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Ballantine. On December 15, 1931, the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. Hawley] placed in the Record a speech delivered by the Secretary of the Treasury entitled "The National Budget and the Public Credit," which I think it would be well for Members of the House to read. I have an article written by the Under Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Ballantine, and I ask unanimous consent to include that short article in my remarks.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, in the speech of the Secretary of the Treasury, reading from the Record, after discussing the sales tax, he said:

Certain it is that many months would elapse before the necessary administrative machinery could be set up and a number of years before such a new form of taxation could be firmly established in this country. And we are in need of additional revenue now.

The Under Secretary of the Treasury in his article gives a very good reason why I should oppose this bill if the sales tax remains in it.

I read now a portion of the article by the Under Secretary of the Treasury, who, if precedents are followed, will probably some day be Secretary of the Treasury. Mr. Ballantine said in the course of his article:

In its fundamental aspects the general sales tax is open to objections broadly classified as follows:

jections broadly classified as follows:

1. The general sales tax is essentially unjust in that it is a tax levied according to needs rather than according to ability to pay.

2. The general sales tax is grossly discriminatory. In so far as the tax can not be shifted it is distributed according to gross income, which furnishes no measure of taxpaying ability. The tax the tax can not be shifted it is distributed according to gross income, which furnishes no measure of taxpaying ability. The tax treats as being alike transactions which are fundamentally unlike; it subjects to very unequal risks taxpayers in substantially similar positions; it affords an indefensible bounty to the large integrated industry as compared with smaller industrial units.

3. The tax rests upon an artificial basis in that it turns upon the mere form of business transactions, and would lead to undesirable changes in business practices.

Mr. Chairman, I propose to follow the lead of the Secretary of the Treasury and the Under Secretary of the Treasury in casting my vote upon the sales tax.

Under my leave to extend I herewith include the article by the Under Secretary of the Treasury, Arthur A. Ballantine, entitled "The General Sales Tax Is Not the Way Out," written when he was a counselor at law in New York, and published in the May, 1921, edition of the Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science, on the general subject "Taxation and Public Expenditures":

THE GENERAL SALES TAX IS NOT THE WAY OUT

(By Arthur A. Ballantine, counselor at law, New York, formerly Solicitor of Internal Revenue)

Consumption taxes and other miscellaneous excise taxes must be relied upon to furnish a reasonable proportion of the vast sums needed as postwar revenues of the United States. A billion dollars sufficed for the fiscal year 1917; for current years expenditures and necessary debt reduction can scarcely be taken care of with four billions. (The Annual Report of the Secretary of the Treasury, submitted to Congress in December, 1920, indicates that the ordinary expenditures for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1921, will be as much as $4,851,298,931, and that the corresponding figure for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, will be $3,897,419,227. These figures are not inclusive of any amounts for reduction of the public debt and are based in the main upon estimates. Through the action of Congress the actual expenditures may be reduced below these estimates. It does not seem possible, however, that expenditures for this year or next year can be reduced much below four billions.) To place the bulk of the revenue burden upon consumption, through the instrumentality of the widely urged general sales tax, would, however, be unjust and unsound. Such a course would be a reversion to methods of unsound. Such a course would be a reversion to methods of taxation discredited by modern thought.

Under the revenue legislation now in force, according to the latest reliable estimates, out of a total estimated yield for the calendar year 1921 of approximately four billions, there will be derived from taxes on tobacco, admissions, transportation, automobiles, musical instruments, sporting goods, candy, toilet articles, jewelry, and luxuries about $1,300,000,000, compared with a yield of somewhat less than one billion from the individual income tax, about half a billion each from the income tax and from the excess-profits tax on corporations, $200,000,000 from minor business taxes, such as the capital-stock tax, stamp taxes, and license taxes, and somewhat under $400,000,000 from customs duties. (These figures are taken from an unofficial estimate made in January. figures are taken from an unofficial estimate made in January, 1921, by Dr. Joseph S. McCoy, actuary of the Treasury Department—see revised report of the tax committee of the National Industrial Conference Board. Preliminary statements as to the amount of income and excess-profits taxes paid on March 15, 1921, appear to indicate that the actual yield, which was very difficult to gage because of the changed business conditions, will be somewhat higher than this estimate.)

Thoroughgoing proponents of the general sales tax urge that the tax system be changed so that the greater portion of the revenue will be derived from a flat tax on sales or turnover. The rate ordinarily proposed for such a tax is 1 per cent, and The rate ordinarily proposed for such a tax is 1 per cent, and estimates of the yield relied upon by them vary from somewhat less than two billions to as much as six billions. The taxes which they would supplant are the excess-profits tax, the current estimated yield of which is rather less than half a billion, the corporation-income tax, and at least the greater part of the individual surtaxes. Sales-tax advocates are not clear and not in harmony among themselves as to what would be done with the present miscellaneous consumption taxes, but presumably these would be in the main supplanted by the general flat tax. In current discussions proposals for far-reaching uniform sales tax take at least three forms:

1. A tax on every sale or turnover not only of commodities but also of services, real property, capital assets, and on rent and

2. A tax on every business sale or turnover of goods, wares, and merchandise—sometimes referred to as the merchants' gross sales

A tax on all final sales of goods, wares, and merchandise for consumption or use,

The first two differ only in the scope of their application, and most of the difficulties with the wholly inclusive tax apply also to what is left within the scope of the more modified second form. While the first form, "a tax on all sales by anyone to anyform. While the first form, "a tax on all sales by anyone to anyone," would have the merit of simplicity in definition, it is scarcely conceivable that any tax seriously considered for adoption would include the bothersome item of services, or would be made so burdensome as to cover sales of real estate, sales of securities, or sales of capital assets. A tax in the third form, on "final retail sales" only, would involve so much practical difficulty in requiring the constant distinguishing of final sales for consumption from other sales, and would have to be so high, probconsumption from other sales, and would have to be so high, probably at least 4 or 5 per cent, to yield the amount desired by salestax advocates, that it does not require special consideration. Discussion is therefore directed to the tax in the second formtax on all sales of goods, wares, or merchandise at a rate sufficient to yield the bulk of the needed revenue. It is assumed that such a tax would be assessed upon the net sales of each taxpayer, presumably for each month, and would not be required to be collected from the buyer by the seller as a separate item. Such a requirement is clearly not adapted to conditions prevailing in commercial transactions in this country, and would constitute an intolerable clog and annoyance.

The general sales tax seems on first consideration to afford the most attractive solution of the revenue problem. The advocates of this tax maintain that it would easily furnish the bulk of the needed revenues; that it would be the fairest of all taxes, because under it, all transactions are treated alike; that it would be economically beneficial through freeing for investment pur-poses funds now absorbed in taxation, and through furnishing incentive for industrial effort by increasing the portion of profits that could be retained; that it would be easier upon the consumer than present forms of taxation because there would be less "pyramiding" of taxes; that the taxpayer would always know where he stood in reference to his obligations to the Government instead of being involved, as at present, in long-continued doubt and uncertainty; that the Government would be more securely financed through a tax which did not depend upon profits, and more conveniently financed by reason of the collection of the bulk of the revenues each month instead of at quarterly periods; and that the tax would be far easier for the Government to administer than income and profits taxes.

This is a formidable array of arguments, but analysis shows that the only arguments for the general sales tax having any substantial foundation are those of convenience, and that even here the advantages are generally exaggerated. In its fundamental aspects the general sales tax is open to objections broadly classified as follows: know where he stood in reference to his obligations to the Gov-

classified as follows

1. The general sales tax is essentially unjust in that it is a tax levied according to needs rather than according to ability to pay.

2. The general sales tax is grossly discriminatory. In so far as the tax can not be shifted, it is distributed according to gross the tax can not be shifted, it is distributed according to gross the tax can not be shifted, it is distributed according to gross the tax can not be shifted, it is distributed according to gross the tax can not be shifted. income, which furnishes no measure of tax-paying ability. This tax treats as being alike transactions which are fundamentally unlike; it subjects to very unequal risks taxpayers in substantially similar positions; it affords an indefensible bounty to the large integrated industry as compared with smaller industrial units.

The tax rests upon an artificial basis in that it turns upon the mere form of business transactions and would lead to unde-strable changes in business practices.

Approach to the general sales tax is frequently made through Approach to the general sales tax is frequently made through the avenue of foreign experience. There is, however, very little in experience in other countries to commend the tax theoretically or, indeed, to furnish any basis for a judgment as to how it would operate under the very different conditions prevailing in the United States. The sales tax is by no means new; it was used in Egypt, in Babylonia, and in Rome. (For remarks and as to the history of the sales tax and foreign experience, see Prof. E. R. A. Seligman's report, Proceedings of the Second National Industrial Tax Conference (1920), pp. 70-83.) Under the rule which frevailed in France prior to the revolution, and which has prevailed in many instances when a privileged aristocracy was in a position valied in France prior to the revolution, and which has prevaled in many instances when a privileged aristocracy was in a position to dictate the method of securing the funds of the state, the greater part of the revenue was drawn from sales taxes which applied directly to the necessities of the common man. One of chief objects of the democratic movement was to get rid of methods so oppressive.

THE SALES TAX IN OTHER COUNTRIES

In current practice the most notable instances of the use of the general sales tax are those of France and Canada. In neither case is the tax a flat general tax. In France the turnover tax instituted on July 1, 1920, covers three categories:

1. One and one-tenth per cent on general turnover, except such turnover as comes under headings 2 and 3 below.

2. Three per cent on all business classified as category 11 of luxury trades (articles which are considered as luxuries if price exceeds a certain figure).

3. Ten per cent on all business classified as category 1 of luxury trades (articles which from their nature are considered as luxuries).

It is clear that it was regarded as unreasonable to adhere to a general flat rate and that the classification of articles adopted must involve many difficult distinctions. According to official reports it furthermore appears that this tax is yielding not over 45 per cent of the estimated revenue. France has been notably backward in the development of a modern, adequate system of taxation.

the development of a modern, adequate system of taxation.

The Canadian tax rests upon sales of finished articles by manufacturers, wholesalers, and jobbers. As originally adopted it was coupled with other taxes upon the sales of a variety of specified commodities at rates of 3 per cent, 5 per cent, 10 per cent, 15 per cent, 20 per cent, and 50 per cent, and was subject to a long list of exemptions which included all food products, building materials for construction purposes, fuel, and other articles, and was subject to the power of the governor and council to add to the list of exempt articles so far as it was deemed expedient or necessary. The luxury taxes have been recently modified to meet the changed business conditions. Neither in France nor in Canada is the volume or complexity of transactions at all comparable to those in the United States.

In the Philippines the 1 per cent sales tax often referred to, which represents a continuation of Spanish methods, applies to sales of merchandise in raw, manufactured, or partly manufactured state and also to the sales of various kinds of services, including those by power, transmission, and transportation companies, but is subject to a large number of exemptions, including the sales of agricultural products used by farmers and the sales of small merchants. Philippine business is too trifling for mention in comparison with United States business, and we can not turn to the Philippines for instruction in the field of finance any more than in the field of politics. Mexico has indeed a comprehensive general sales tax, but even the Carranza government, after a careful report, recommended abolition of the tax because of cost of collection and the injustice to the poorer classes. One of the first acts of the United States on coming into the possession of Cuba was to abolish the old sales or consumo tax and substitute other methods of taxation. In England, where taxation is generally believed to have been handled with greater consideration and intelligence than in any other country, the sales tax has been carefully considered and rejected; so also in Italy.

DOES NOT DISTRIBUTE REVENUE BURDENS FAIRLY

To warrant adoption for a major source of revenue, other than as a last resort, a tax must be shown to rest upon some principle which makes it fair to the average citizen. The general sales tax rests upon no such principle; its theoretical basis is the bald proposition that the consumer must foot all the bills. This proposition makes about the same appeal to the citizen as did Ricardo's "Iron law of wages" to the workingmen. That law doomed the wage worker to the minimum wage needed for bare subsistence; the sales tax, resting upon no higher ethical basis, would levy a toll even upon that wage the sales tax, resting upon no higher ethical basis, would levy a toll even upon that wage.

That the consumer would pay the general sales tax is the outspoken and fundamental position of its advocates. And the burden which they would lay upon the consumer is not light, as implied by the 1 per cent rate usually suggested, but heavy. The minimum yield desired is $2,000,000,000—more than the entire yield of the income tax at its highest. The rate necessary to procure the revenue desired from this source would very likely be as much as 2 per cent instead of 1 per cent. The most reliable estimate of the yield of a 1 per cent tax covering sales of all kinds by traders, manufacturers, mines, and farms—the estimate of Dr. Joseph S. McCoy—is $1,100,000,000. To assure two billions or more it would therefore seem to be necessary to make the rate 2 per cent. (See report of the tax committee of the National Industrial Conference Board, December, 1920, pp. 13–14.)

Under this tax all sales transactions would indeed be treated alike, but far from being just this uniform treatment would be must come from the buyer or the seller.

Under this tax all sales transactions would indeed be treated alike, but far from being just this uniform treatment would be grossly inequitable. It has been wisely remarked that no injustice exceeds that of treating as equals things which are unequal. The general sales tax would levy toll upon sales of bread, of medicines, of plows, of tools, of building materials, of the simplest clothing, and would levy toll at the same rate from the sale of jewels, candy, and of automobiles. Sales do not pay taxes; the money must come from the buyer or the seller.

There is nothing whatever in the fact that all desired goods must be bought, which warrants a conclusion that all buyers can justly pay to the Government the same percentage on the price of what they buy. The one argument for such a method of tax is that sales may furnish a basis for collecting revenue which is convenient. That argument may suffice for a levy very small in total burden or resting upon articles not of prime necessity, but it falls to justify a uniform toll upon all articles, both necessities and luxuries.

In sharp contrast the income tax rests not upon needs but upon ability to pay. That ability is measured generally by the tax-payer's increase in assets over the taxable period and increases progressively with the amount of the income. Here we have a genuine principle commending itself as fair to the individual. More effort upon the part of the taxpayer and of the Government is required for the collection of taxes according to this principle, but, as in almost every field, painstaking effort is the price of justice.

Sales-tax advocates urge, however, that the consumer pays the taxes now—not only the excess-profits tax but also the income tax. The position that the consumer pays income and profits taxes is somewhat difficult to reconcile with the zeal of sales-tax advocates to do away with such taxes on the ground that they stifle industry. How can industry be burdened by taxes which are passed on? The truth of the matter is probably that taxes assessed against net incomes from business activities are in part shifted. (For an interesting and illuminating discussion of the relation of the income and excess-profits tax to prices, see David Friday's Profits, Wages, and Prices, Harcourt, Brace & Howe, 1920.) Under conditions such as prevalled during the war, those of a "sellers'-market" taxes on business income may be largely shifted, while under conditions such as now prevail they may be shifted to a relatively small extent. Always the producer near the margin finds it difficult to shift, for his prices can not be increased. Decisive here, however, is the consideration that the placing of the bulk of the tax burden directly upon income and profits leaves it in the first instance where the ability to pay is clear and in such a way that the largest possible portion will actually be paid through subtraction from income and profits.

That there would be less pyramiding of the general sales tax in the course of passing it on than of the income and profits taxes is a proposition without real foundation. Colorable support for this idea is drawn from a picture of the sales tax as a 1 per cent item which can be added as an item of a particular invoice. Waiving the difficulty that very many sales are not invoiced at all, it is apparent that even for invoiced sales 1 per cent covers the tax only in the case of initial sales of raw materials and even then only approximately. When the manufacturer or dealer comes to make a sale, he must, in order to cover the tax which he has had to pay or bear, allow not only for the tax applying to what he sells but for many things purchased by him subject to tax, not resold by him but constituting elements of expense such as equipment, packages, fuel, and the like. Under any practicable sales-tax plan this tax, like any other item, will so far as possible be treated by the sellers simply as an element of expense, not separately disclosed to the buyer, and subject to the same possibility of increase when passed on as is any other item of expense. Under this tax, as under income and profits taxes, the seller will charge all that he believes he can charge wisely, and the buyer must depend for protection against pyramiding not upon the form of tax but upon the maintenance of competitive conditions.

Keeping up a flow of profits available for investment in industry is essential to the successful working of the industrial system. It is, however, difficult to urge that business profits should in such times be left free from any substantial tax and that the needs of the Government should be met by the consumer, whose participation in the benefits of the investment process is rather more limited than the participation by the investors themselves. So long as Government expenditure remains inordinately high the flow of capital for investment is bound to be checked, whatever the form of taxation. Just distribution of the revenue burden is a consideration of even more pressing importance to those who desire to maintain the present industrial system than the full maintenance of the flow of profits for investment. On no economic or social principle so far developed can the general sales tax stand comparison with income taxes as the major revenue source.

INDEFENSIBLE DISCRIMINATIONS

Subjected to the same tax, sales transactions of every sort would result in indefensible discrimination in the distribution of the tax burden.

So far as the general sales tax is not shifted to the buyer, it would constitute a tax distributed according to gross income. Such income furnishes no test of taxpaying ability. A manufacturer having a substantial investment in plant and comparatively small turnover may realize on his sales a high percentage of profit, his net profit being a larger percentage of his gross receipts. If we assume that on sales of $500,000 such a manufacturer realizes 15 per cent, or $75,000, the sales tax which he would be required to pay, if he could not shift the tax, would at the rate of 1 per cent amount to $5,000. In many lines, notably in jobbing and some retail lines, the gross profit is very low and the large turnover is what produces a satisfactory return upon the capital. Thus, according to the reports of the Harvard Bureau of Business Research, the average wholesale grocer turns his capital five times a year and makes a net profit on his sale of somewhat less than 2 per cent. To result in $75,000 profits the sales of such a grocer would have to amount to $3,750,000. The grocer's tax upon such sales would, at 1 per cent, amount to $37,500. Accordingly, if the grocer could not shift his tax, he would in the case assumed be paying more than five times as much to the Government as the manufacturer, although his net profits, except for the tax, would be exactly the same. The Government would take one-fifteenth of the manufacturer's profit, but would take one-half of the grocer's profit. This is by no means an extreme case, for the difference in rates of net profits and the range of difference in relation of net to gross are very great. Nor is it idle to say that a large part of the total burden of the sales tax could not be shifted. Merchants selling goods at established prices or selling broken lots, merchants already charging all that the traffic w shifted. Merchants selling goods at established prices or selling broken lots, merchants already charging all that the traffic will bear without destructive loss of volume, would be helpless before the discriminatory levy of the general sales tax.

Even where the tax can be largely shifted those who pay it in the first instance are subject to very unequal risks. In the illustration stated the manufacturer in making his payment to the Government risks only $5,000, while the grocer risks $37,500. The Government would take the money but would give to the tax-payer neither guarantee of his ability to collect it out of the buyer nor justification for requiring him to pay it himself. This levy would operate not only in prosperous times when the taxpayer would feel able to pay it or in a position to collect it out of the buyer but also in hard times when unavoidable expense can barely be met.

Discrimination through the cumulative effect of the sales tax has been often pointed out but never explained away. How this results is seen by considering such a situation as, for example, that existing in the shoe industry. Here, if the business is conducted by a great integrated enterprise, there may be but one or at most two sales between the raw leather and the delivery of shoes to the wearer. While if the different steps in the process are carried on by small dealers there may be five or six sales as follows:

1. Hides to tanner.

Tanner to leather merchant.

Leather merchant to shoe manufacturer. Shoe manufacturer to jobber. 3.

5. Jobber to retailer. Retailer to consumer.

6. Retailer to consumer.

Where the goods pass by successive sales through six hands a sales tax will be levied six times. Where the goods move directly from the tanner to the consumer there would be one tax. The profits in the shoe industry are in general a very small proportion of gross receipts, frequently as low as 2 per cent, and this discriminatory cumulative tax burden might mean the difference between the success and failure of the small units. Even more striking instances of the disastrous cumulative effect of the tax might be taken from other lines of industry such as the textile might be taken from other lines of industry, such as the textile field or the field of the metal industries, where there may be seven or eight sales between the raw material and the placing of the finished articles in the hands of the consumer.

Under the income tax such discrimination does not occur. net profits resulting from each stage in the process of manufacturing are taxed to the small unit where they are realized by small units but are also taxed to the great enterprise where that enterprise realizes profits from several different processes. That small units have been able to survive in many fields of industry in spite units have been able to survive in many fields of industry in spite of certain advantages enjoyed by larger enterprises furnishes no justification for placing upon them a discriminatory tax burden, and, on the contrary, makes it clear how desirable it is to keep the small enterprise free from such burdens. It does not appear to be practicable to meet this difficulty of the cumulative effect of the general sales tax by attempting to apply the tax to each clearly marked stage in the processes of the integrated industry. clearly marked stage in the processes of the integrated industry. The large manufacturer does not and can not sell raw materials to The large manufacturer does not and can not sell raw materials to his factory or finished goods to his jobbing branch, and to attempt to set an imaginary price on the goods as they pass from one stage to another would lead to endless difference of opinion and confusion. Taxes to be practicable must follow transactions and not create them. They must be made to rest upon real transactions, not upon imaginary transactions.

UNDESTRABLE BUSINESS PRACTICES

Even as applying to actual sales the turnover tax would rest upon an artificial basis and would result in undesirable changes in business practices.

The use of direct sales upon which this tax would rest would probably be materially restricted in order to avoid the tax. Even where the tax could be shifted it would still be a substantial competitive advantage so to conduct business as to avoid accumulation of the tax. The burden of a 1 or 2 per cent tax on gross sales added at various stages is by no means light and would be emphatically worth saving. Hence the woolen manufacturer instead of buying his yarn would buy the wool and hire the spinner to make it up into yarn, and would also hire the dyer and the finisher. Sending of goods out to be processed would become a standard practice; consignments would take the place of direct sales. Effort to avoid the tax might result in the absorption of small with the leaves extravariate a process that wight tion of small units into the larger enterprises, a process that might have some advantages but which is not to be justly accelerated by a scheme of taxation.

Some advantages of convenience to the taxpayer the general general sales tax undoubtedly has. It is simpler to make up a statement of net sales than a statement of net profits; it is easier to pay monthly than to pay quarterly; it is a relief to feel that a tax paid can not be the subject of any real difference of opinion. Yet these advantages of convenience are less important than it seems. Even though the general sales tax were adopted as a major source of revenue, a modified income tax would very likely major source of revenue, a modified income tax would very likely be retained so that the sales tax reports would be additional and not in substitution for net income reports. Quarterly payment of income taxes as now permitted enables a prudent taxpayer to adjust his financing in a reasonably convenient way. Differences as to tax assessments, which have been so frequent, have arisen mainly as to excess profits taxes. That tax is distinctly a war tax. It ought to be abolished at the earliest possible date, and it can be abolished without recent to the general sales tax.

be abolished without resort to the general sales tax.

Under the income tax alone, with increasing experience by tax-payers in the application of the tax, increasing improvement in the structure, interpretation, and administration the structure, interpretation, and administration of the tax, difficulties with it should be far less in the future than they have been in the past when it has been a new tax operating under war conditions. What advantage in the convenience of the sales tax compares with the advantage of the income tax in ceasing to compares with the advantage of the income tax in ceasing to accrue when there is no net income?

This very consideration, that the income tax diminishes in yield in bad years, of course emphasizes the need of the Government to have at all times sources of revenue other than income taxes. Such sources can, however, be maintained as they have been without resort to the wholly inclusive general tales tax. So far as sales taxes are needed, and they will be needed for some time, use can continue to be made of taxes levied upon the sales of selected can continue to be made of taxes levied upon the sales of selected articles not of prime necessity and levied at one stage of the process only so as to avoid any cumulative effect. (For a discussion of the methods of replacing revenue lost through the abolition of the excess profits tax and reduction of surtaxes, see the report of the tax committee of the National Industrial Conference Board, Special Report No. 18, December, 1920. See also in such report the discussion of the general sales tax and full statement of the reasons which indused are constant this tax. ment of the reasons which induced a report against this tax by a committee unusually representative of industry.)

That objections to the general sales tax are much more than academic is shown by the rejection of the tax by the United States Chamber of Commerce in the recent referendum to its constituent local chambers of commerce throughout the United States; by the tax committee of the National Association of Credit Men; and notably by the rejection of it, after careful consideration and investigation, by the tax committee of the National Industrial Conference Board.

O, Mr. Chairman, where is this going to stop? Do the Members of this House feel for an instant that the masses are going to remain silent? You abuse the privilege granted to the Congress to provide for a tariff by placing a burden of over $2,000,000,000 on the public. What for? To collect a few hundred million dollars? No. Under the guise of protection you extend special benefits to a selected few at the expense of the many and paralyze our foreign trade, causing American manufacturers to open plants in Europe.

Now, you come along with a tax bill, include a manufacturers' or a plain sales tax, that will take more from the pockets of those least able to meet your demands.

A set of those who have enjoyed special privileges from the Republican Party could not have drawn a bill that would have better satisfied them.

As my friend, Charles Ross, the Washington correspondent of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch says, "The sales tax is the income tax in reverse. It is large or small, according to the amount consumed by the taxpayer."

Prof. E. R. A. Seligman, of the Columbia University, says, "It sins against the cardinal principle of equality in taxation."

The St. Louis Star in an editorial says-

The sales tax is a tax on goods consumed. It is a tax on what people spend. Because most people must spend all they have, it is a tax on the entire income of the multitude. Far more important is the fact that the adoption of the sales tax would be an entering wedge for a complete shift of policy, the beginning of a drive against the income-tax theory, the opening of a campaign to go back to the old convenient system of putting the tax burden on these least able to pay on those least able to pay.

Mr. Chairman, surely Mr. Mills should have some excellent reason for changing the position he took in December last; and Mr. Ballantine-what is responsible for him changing the view he expressed in this article, or can I be mistaken, is he of the same view to-day?

Some one around me says Mr. Ballantine wrote about a sales tax and not a manufacturers' tax. Call it what you will, but this proposal is an out and out sales tax and nothing else.

If a sales tax was such an evil when Mr. Ballantine prepared his article, surely it is equally as much an evil to-day. I so regard it and will cast my vote against it. [Applause.]

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Pettengill].

Mr. PETTENGILL. Mr. Chairman, this sales tax seems to be a waif, a political foundling. Nobody acknowledges its paternity, nobody wants it, and yet a great many gentleman on both sides of the aisle say we must take it in and nourish it upon our emaciated bosoms. The Republican papers call it a Democratic measure, and the Democratic papers say that it will be known as the Hoover surtax. It makes me think of the story of a meeting of the Indiana Society in Chicago a few years ago, when Mr. McCutcheon was toastmaster and George Ade was on the speaking list. When McCutcheon came to introduce Ade he said:

The next gentleman on the program is a very distinguished The next gentleman on the program is a very distinguished son of Indiana. Two cities claim him in the same way that nine cities claimed to be the birthplace of Homer, but with this difference, that Logansport says that he was born in LaFayette and LaFayette insists that he was born in Logansport. We talk about balancing the Budget. Some gentlemen are arriving at this a little late in the session. I began to think about this with my first vote cast here when I voted against the moratorium. I voted against the Reconstruction Finance Corporation bill and voted against the road bill. These three bills totaled $884,500,000. All of them had arguments which appealed to me, but I voted not to impair the credit of the Nation. Many gentlemen think I am wrong in all of those votes, but from the time I came here and knew the situation the country was in I thought the best way to balance the Budget was to keep money in the Treasury rather than vote it out. We talk about balancing the Budget; but I have one thought which has not been brought to the attention of this Congress. I offer it for your consideration.

We have more than one budget to balance. We have the Budget of the Federal Government; but, in addition to that, we have the budgets of 48 States, of 3,000 counties, of tens of thousands of towns and townships and cities and counties and school districts and drainage and levee districts and park districts in this country, all of which are supporting municipal securities that are now in the hands of the American investor.

The total of Federal obligations outstanding is around $17,000,000,000. The total of municipal obligations outstanding is $15,000,000,000, or almost an equal amount. These securities are held by banks, insurance companies, and private investors in the same way that Federal securities are, and it is just as important to them that the credit of those municipalities be maintained as it is that the credit of the Federal Government be maintained.

Where does this $600,000,000 represented by the sales tax come from? It comes from the pockets of the American people and from no other source. It comes from the same pockets that pay the general property taxes upon which the budgets of tens of thousands of municipalities in this country depend and upon the balancing of which the value of their municipal obligations rests, and the question is, Can you drain $600,000,000 from the States of this Union by enforcing a consumption tax which their taxpayers can not avoid paying, because they are upon the very necessities of life itself, without further impairing the ability of those same taxpayers to pay their property taxes, which are the basis of the credit of tens of thousands of municipalities in this country, which credit protects the integrity of $15,000,-000,000 worth of municipal obligations? In other words, are you not running a risk that for every benefit you seek to obtain for the Federal Government you are creating a more dangerous credit structure for the municipal corporations of the country?

Without pyramiding, the sales tax of $600,000,000 will take $5 per capita from the American people, or $20 or $25 per family per year, or $2 per month per family. If it is passed on to the consumers of my district, that is over $2,000,000. If it is not passed on, the manufacturers of my district will pay $6,000,000 more to the support of the Federal Government than they are now paying. But, of course, it will be passed on, in whole or in part, plus some pyramiding. The sales tax will take $21,000,000 from my State, which doubles its contribution to the support of the Federal Government, because it is now paying income taxes of $21,000,000.

Now, my friends, people will pay their property taxes if they possibly can. It is a debt that they will pay before they even pay their grocery bill or their doctor bill, because if they do not pay the property tax they will lose the old homestead and the farm and the cottage of the wage earner in the city, properties into which so much of tears and sacrifice has gone. My friends, they are losing them now, because they are not able to pay the property tax, and that is affecting the credit structure of every municipality in this country. Literally millions of dollars of property taxes are in default at the present time.

From 1926 to 1930, 682,000 farms, or more than one-tenth of the total number of farms of this Nation, were sold at forced sale, because they could not pay their property tax or the interest on their mortgages, and if you load on to those people who are living on such a thin margin as that another burden of $25 per year per family, how many more farms and homes are going to foreclosure; and what is that going to do to the credit structure of the municipalities, which have issued obligations to be retired by the general property tax that they expected to collect but failed to do so? And for every forced sale of a home or a farm you add to the heartache and despair and social unrest of our people.

The gentleman from Montana [Mr. Evans] the other day said that in his State 29 per cent of all the taxpayers are in default on the payment of their property tax and in some counties as much as 78 per cent. We know that that is true, more or lecs, in every State in this Union, and it is affecting the credit structure of every State and every county and every school district and every other tax-levying district in this country, against which a total of $15,000,000,000 worth of municipal obligations are outstanding. How many more will default?

One of the leading bankers of this country—and I may say to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Crisp] he is not one of the New York bankers, but he is one of the leading bankers of this country nevertheless, one of the few big bankers of this country who has been doing a lot of constructive thinking, one of the very few who has kept his reputation in the last few years—said to me at the time of the Jackson Day dinner in Washington that there are 38 States of the 48 in the American Union in which municipal obligations of some tax-levying body are already in default.

Now, it is said that a sales tax of $25 per family per year is a small burden; but you add that on when they are not able to pay the general property taxes, which is the very basis of $15,000,000,000 worth of municipal securities, and what are you going to do back home?

Talk about balancing the Budget; we have other budgets to think of than the Federal Budget alone. It is not a small burden. In my city of South Bend, Ind., there are 32,000 automobiles. The last day for paying the license expired on March 1, and, according to my newspapers, 11,000 automobiles were taken off the streets of my city, one out of every three, because they could not pay six or seven or eight dollars necessary to pay for the license tax. You can imagine what that did to the sale of gasoline.

Now, my friends, the United States has not yet reached the limit of its borrowing capacity, as was clearly evidenced by the fact that for the $900,000,000 that were offered last week we had an oversubscription of $2,500,000,000, at 3½ per cent on the average, without any campaign to sell them. So the surplus borrowing capacity of this Government is not yet exhausted.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. PETTENGILL. I yield.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. For what length of time was that obligation that was oversubscribed?

Mr. PETTENGILL. Three hundred million dollars for 7 months; $600,000,000 for 12 months.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. The gentleman realizes the great difference between ability to sell short-term bonds and long-term bonds?

Mr. PETTENGILL. I appreciate that; but nevertheless I call the gentleman's attention to the fact that the rate upon which the United States Government is able to obtain money is a much lower rate of interest than the average rate of interest paid by the municipal corporations of the country.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I agree with the gentleman as a general proposition, but I am wondering if, when the gentleman puts the township necessity ahead of the necessity for keeping up the credit of the whole Federal structure, which is above the township, he is not getting the cart before the horse a little?

Mr. PETTENGILL. Well, that is for the gentleman to answer. The gentleman may think that Federal bureaus are more important to his people back home than their schools, police, and fire protection. I say that the credit of the American Nation is not exhausted, but the credit of thousands of municipalities is exhausted, either because they are not able to sell their bonds or because of constitutional limitations which prevent them from going into the market to get additional funds to meet deficiencies caused by general property taxes which are now in default or because municipal funds are in closed banks.

Mr. MARTIN of Oregon. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PETTENGILL. I yield.

Mr. MARTIN of Oregon. Would the gentleman exhaust the Government credit and the great resources of this country in selling Government bonds? Does the gentleman not realize how the sale of these bonds keeps manufacturers from getting money?

Mr. PETTENGILL. I would say that I am not in favor of issuing any bonds, because I would raise this money by a tax on nonintoxicating beer, the only tax you can propose where both the manufacturers and the consumers will pay without any protest whatever.

Mr. MARTIN of Oregon. Does the gentleman remember in 1919 that the Government was paying 6 per cent for money?

Mr. PETTENGILL. I do not recall that. But if so, we are not paying 6 per cent now. We are paying on an average  $3\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. So your observation does not seem to me to be pertinent to this discussion.

Mr. MARTIN of Oregon. And it was on these short-term loans paying 6 per cent. What chance would manufacturers have with rates like that?

Mr. PETTENGILL. I never heard of that. You are conjuring up a scarecrow that is not now before us. If you are having difficulty now by reason of the burdens on the people back home by way of property taxes, you will find the value of municipal obligations going down and affecting the portfolios of the same people who are holding the securities of the Federal Government itself, if you superimpose this sales tax on the very necessities of life. It was the last straw, not the first, that broke the camel's back.

You will create danger that schools are going to close and people are going to go short on fire and police protection and hospitals, which are a darned sight more important to them than tens of dozens of the various bureaus here in Wash-

So I submit to you, my friends, whether by bolstering up $17,000,000,000 worth of Federal securities by taking $600,000,000 away from the States of the Union you are not going to impair the budgets and credit of the municipalities of this country which are supporting $15,000,000,000 worth of municipal obligations?

If with this burden, my friends, thousands of farms and homes are now going under the hammer, will not more go under the hammer if you place on the people of the Nation a burden of taxation which will amount to $25 per family per year?

In other words, my friends, the sales tax is the income tax in reverse. If a man can pay an income tax he can also pay his property tax and will not lose his home nor will his city or county find its budget unbalanced, and its credit affected by such form of Federal taxation. The same is true of taxes on estates, or on luxuries or semiluxuries. But if you put a sales tax on the necessities of life, on his clothing, on his shoes, his fuel, his gas, his electricity, and almost everything else, you are going to make it more difficult for him to pay his property tax.

In other words, my friends, one of the objections to this sales tax, as I see it, is that it is the one form of Federal taxation which we might think of at the present time which is most designed to impair the credit structures of the municipal corporations of this country because it is a forced tax on the very people who are having great difficulty paying their property taxes and will necessarily be paid out of the same slender pocketbook. To balance the Federal Budget you run the risk of throwing thousands of other governmental budgets out of balance. To strengthen Federal credit you are adopting the one form of tax most dangerous to $15,000,000,000 of municipal bonds held by the investors of the Nation.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Will the gentleman vield?

Mr. PETTENGILL. Yes.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I understood the gentleman to say that he thought this money could be raised by a tax on beer?

Mr. PETTENGILL. Yes. And let me say again, I am not in favor of issuing any bonds whatever. I prefer to tax beer, which millions want, to bonds which no one wants.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Will the gentleman tell me how the people who are now losing their property can afford to drink enough beer to save their property and pay the beer tax?

Mr. STAFFORD. They are drinking it anyhow and not paying any tax at all, and paying two or three prices for it besides.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Where are they drinking beer?

Mr. STAFFORD. In Chicago and all over the country, and Capone and his like are getting the revenue which belongs to the Government.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HADLEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield two minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. Strong]. [Applause.]

Mr. STRONG of Kansas. Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I want to correct the inference left by my friend from Missouri [Mr. Cochran] with the members of the committee when he quoted from Mr. Mills and Mr. Ballantine in opposition to the sales tax. I think most of the members of the committee thought he meant the manufactures tax carried in this bill. The fact of the matter is that the quotations he read, made by Mr. Mills and Mr. Ballantine, were against a general sales tax. They were statements they made in 1921, when we were considering a general sales tax upon every article sold, which would be pyramided. The article he quoted as having been written by Mr. Ballantine was published in a magazine printed in 1921.

I just wanted members of the committee to know the facts. I did not want these gentlemen of the Treasury Department quoted as being opposed to this manufactures tax

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Boland]. [Applause.]

Mr. BOLAND. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks and to include some newspaper clippings.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania asks unanimous consent that in addition to the general consent to revise and extend his remarks he be permitted to include certain newspaper clippings. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. BOLAND. Mr. Chairman, it was not my intention to debate upon any question before the House of Congress in this session, but because of the result of a meeting held yesterday before Secretary of the Treasury Mills, in behalf of the exclusion of materials coming from Russia into this country, I am forced to abandon that idea, and I expect to offer an amendment against this sales tax bill. Secretary Mills told that committee yesterday it was a matter for Congress, and that Congress should not be passing the buck to the Secretary of the Treasury in reference to the exclusion of materials coming from Russia.

This important matter of anthracite coal coming into this country, which is fast becoming a menace, was brought very forcibly to my attention by a letter from Mr. Charles H. Dorrance, president of the Pennsylvania Anthracite Mining Co. This letter appeared in the Scranton Times, our leading publication in northeastern Pennsylvania, on February 8, 1932. Mr. Dorrance is a resident of my congressional district. His letter is as follows:

Vitally interested as I know you are in one of the basic industries of the State of Pennsylvania, I am taking the liberty, as one of your constituents, of calling your attention to a very serious matter affecting the sale of Pennsylvania anthracite at or near the ports of the North Atlantic States, especially in the New England territory.

England territory.

The report of the Department of Mines, under date of January 29, shows that during 1931 there were 216,000 tons of Russian anthracite imported into this country. From private advices which I have from New England, this tonnage is probably more nearly 350,000 tons. On a check-up we have recently completed we find that there are at least 30 cargoes, averaging 4,000 to 5,000 tons per steamer, which are due to arrive in New England from foreign countries before the 1st of March. A very large proportion of this is Russian Soviet coal.

We also find that this Russian coal is being sold in the New England market for a price equal with Pennsylvania anthracite and in some cases at a slight premium over Pennsylvania anthra-Therefore, there is nothing in connection with this situation whereby the exclusion of this coal mined by convict or in-dentured labor would in any way work to the detriment of the consumer in this country but its exclusion would definitely work to the benefit of the prosperity and the employment of your constituents in Pennsylvania. I think that you will agree with me that there is no question as to this Russian coal being mined me that there is no question as to this Russian coal being mined by indentured labor and very properly being subject to exclusion from import into this country. As one of your constituents, and speaking, as I think I do, for an overwhelming majority of the people of Pennsylvania, I am asking whether you can not arrange to bring such force to bear that this Russian Soviet coal may be excluded from import into this country.

As regards the Welsh, German, Scottish, and Chinese anthracite, I fail to see why, with a differential tariff in Canada against our Pennsylvania anthracite and bituminous, we should not have a protective tariff against the dumping of this coal into the Atlantic seaboard ports.

Atlantic seaboard ports.

I would be very glad if you would advise together with our other Pennsylvania representatives and see what can be done in order to protect the employment of our Pennsylvania miners.

Upon receipt of this communication I immediately gathered the statistics which substantiate the previous statement showing this custom is becoming a menace to one of the Nation's greatest industries.

Statement regarding importations of coal from Germany entered at various districts during the months of December, 1931, and January, 1932

	Amount	Value	Importer
ANTHRACITE COAL
December, 1931: Maine district Massachusetts district	Tons 366 4, 137	$2, 972 26, 337	Chase, Beavitt & Co., Portland, Me. John G. Hall & Co., 33 Broad Street, Boston, Mass.
New York district	4, 590	25, 658	Domestic Fuel Corporation, 17 Bat- tery Place, New York City.
January, 1932: Massachusetts dis- triet	3, 245	19, 962	2,502 tons to John G. Hall & Co., 33 Broad Street, Boston; 743 tons to John A. Conkey & Co., Boston, Mass.
Total	12, 338
BRIQUETS (BRICKS MADE OF COAL DUST AND OTHER COMPOSITIONS)
December, 1931: Maine district. Massachusetts district.	991 8, 104	7, 125 43, 960	Chase, Beavitt & Co., Portland, Me. 5,602 tons to John G. Hall & Co., 33 Broad Street, Boston; 2,502 tons to William C. Atwater & Co., Fall River, Mass.
Philadelphia district	118	299	Allen Forwarding Co. for the account of the Nucol Co., Philadelphia, Pa.
January, 1932: Massachusetts dis- trict.	3, 051	16, 447	2,502 tons to John G. Hall & Co., 33 Broad Street, Boston; 549 tons to John A.
Philadelphia district	370	1,051	Conkey & Co., Boston, Mass.  Allen Forwarding Co. for the account of the Nucoal Co., Philadelphia, Pa.
Total	12, 634

No transactions in bituminous, shale, and lignite.

Only briquets imported at New York was a sample shipment of 70 pounds from Germany during November to the American Shipping Co. for the Transocean Coal & Transport Corporation.

Import coal situation

Russia
	63, 772
Coke imports shipped in January, 1931:  Belgium	711
Netherlands Great Britain Canada	1,788
Mexico	80
	5 317

Briquets shipped in January, 1931: Germany	Long tons
Foreign anthracite coal shipped in January, 1932:	-
Great Britain	24, 425
Germany	32, 736 5, 944
Belgium	8, 849
Coke imports shipped in January, 1932:	71,954
Great Britain	6, 250
Germany	3.354
Belgium	96
	9,906
Briquets imported in January, 1932:
Germany	3,421
Belgium	2,301
	5, 722

Ocean freight rate from British coal and coke shipping ports and Germany when British currency was at par, $1.80 a ton, but since the sterling has depreciated the rate is now about $1.35.

George E. Warren Co., Boston, handling Russian coal.

E. E. Kalthoff handling German coal coming in January and February, 1932, into Baltimore.

Information on Russian coal, February 18, in this country from Commissioner of Customs Eble in January, into the port of Baltimore, January, 1932, 250 tons; February, 1932, 700 tons, by E. Kalthoff.

Mr. Bradley further stated, February 19, 1932, a cargo of Hindu China anthracite just arrived in Boston. Will sell to wholesaler or party importing it at $12.25 gross ton, f. o. b. Boston, with 75 cents a ton charged off for degradation and 25 cents a ton for cash in 10 days (gross ton, 2,240 pounds).

The same party is also importing English coke at $7.50. f. o. b. Boston, net tons (2,000 pounds).

Statement showing quantity and value of 23 shipments of anthracite coal entered at the port of Boston, Mass., from the United Kingdom, from January 1, 1931, to February 8, 1932, consigned to the New England Gas & Coke Co., 252 Stuart St., Boston

Cons:	Value
4,094	$23,894
2,994	14, 111
2,996	15, 506
3,594	04 004
4,200	29, 095
3,362	20, 224
2,355	20, 053
2,999	26, 830
2,492	20, 274
3,599	28, 961
3,334	22, 098
2,595	17, 866
2,692	20, 314
2,492	21, 162
2,376	13, 793
3,239
2,647
3,444
3,200
2,786
3,053
3,584
2,974	13, 866

FEBRUARY 29, 1932.

After compiling some of these figures as to shipments of foreign coal to the various corporations I was greatly surprised to learn that some of our own citizens were involved in this traffic. I wish at this time to bring to the attention of Congress the statement of March 4 in the leading newspaper of Scranton, Pa., the Scranton Times, which involves our present ambassador to the Court of St. James.

[Scranton Times, March 4, 1932]

Ambassador Enriched by Anthracite Imports—Scranton Times Representative Reveals Big Shipment of Hard Coal to Mel-lon Interests From Abroad—Believes Much of it Russian

Washington, D. C., March 4.—Profits from importation of low-cost foreign anthracite coal are adding their share to the already swollen private fortune of Andrew W. Mellon, former Secretary of the Treasury and now American ambassador to Great Britain.

This was learned by the Scranton Times here to-day through Government and private agencies.

Through a subsidiary company, the New England Gas and Coke Co., 252 Stuart Street, Boston, the Mellons and their associated interests have imported approximately $486,000 worth of foreign anthracite coal.

All of this coal entered through the port of Boston, and all of it came from the United Kingdom.

The anomaly whereby an American ambassador's fortune is being privately enriched through imports from the country to which he is diplomatic representative is thus presented.

TWENTY-THREE SHIPMENTS

Federal figures show positively that 23 shipments of foreign anthracite entered the port of Boston consigned to the New England Gas and Coke Co., and that the customs valuation of these shipments was $485,955.

Although this anthracite is billed as from the United Kingdom, to the principal country in which (England) Mellon is the accredited ambassador, it is very probable that some of it originates in Russia

Since Great Britain has diplomatic relations with Russia and trade between the two nations is relatively free, it is regarded as virtually certain that the majority of the anthracite imported by the Mellon-controlled firm originates in Russia.

Another angle to the situation brought to the forefront by this revelation is the fact that the Mellon interests control large Canadian interests and that much of the imported anthracite probably enters Boston from abroad by way of Canada.

PITTSBURGH MEN DIRECTORS

The New England Gas & Fuel Association, the parent company for the New England Gas & Coke Co., and other Mellon interests in New England, was formed in 1929 by interests identified with the Koppers Co. of Pittsburgh. Seven Pittsburghers, all regarded as affiliated with the Mellons, are on the board of directors, including the Rusts and R. K. Mellon.

The New England Gas & Fuel Association owns 98.8 per cent of the stock of the Massachusetts gas companies, which in 1917 formed the New England Fuel & Transportation Co., which in turn controls the New England Gas & Coke Co., and is virtually the transportation firm of the latter concern.

Herewith are listed individually, in the order received, the shipments of anthracite coal consigned through the port of Boston to the New England Gas & Coke Co.:

Value

ons:	Value
4,094	$23, 894
2,994	14, 111
	15, 506
3.594	21, 081
	29,095
3.362	20, 224
1,522,000	20, 053
	26, 830
	20, 300
	28, 961
0.004	22, 981
2 - 2 - 2	17, 866
	21, 162
0.000	13, 793
	24, 799
2,647
	25, 692
	27, 938
	14, 270
3,053	14, 825
3,584	18, 208
2,974	13, 866

If this statement is true, as it undoubtedly is, we certainly should feel very proud of the ambassador we have at the Court of St. James, and it also proved very conclusively to me that there was a very good reason for the nonexclusion of Russian coal, which in my opinion was mined entirely by forced labor. There seems to be some doubt as to our being able to get the proper kind of evidence that these shipments of anthracite coal from Russia are being mined by forced labor and, therefore, that particular coal can not be excluded from our shores, although it is helping to create the hardship that now exists in the anthracite fields. It is impossible for me to convey the deplorable conditions that now exist in the anthracite coal field, but I might say in a few words that they are heart-rending, and with this condition existing, it is regrettable to think that this country would allow a commodity of this kind to come from foreign countries to compete with one of our greatest assets.

Anthracite coal from those countries is now being transported thousands of miles over the seas and sold in Boston at prices as low as we can sell ours at the mines. Of course, the present unnatural differences in values of currencies are responsible to a degree for that condition, but only to a degree. The low cost of labor is the major element. In many instances there is almost a total lack of labor cost, investment cost, and costs similar to those of maintaining our standards of protection of human life in mining. The oversupply of freight ships, coupled with such use of labor, makes the transportation of coal halfway around the world cost less than from Scranton, Pa., and Boston.

The freight rates on recent cargoes from Indo-China was $3.50 per net ton. Our Scranton-Boston rail rate is $3.88.

Recent rates from Russia are $2.27 per net ton; from Germany, Belgium, Wales, and Scotland, $1.05 to $1.22.

Imports of foreign anthracite into New England territory have been as follows:

	Net tons
1926	387,000
1927	106,000
1928	369,000
1929	483,000
1930	658,000
1931	638,000

I am also informed that new contracts insure an increase of importations to more than 1,000,000 tons in 1932. Already the record is being made, and up to February 16 material increases have arrived.

Mr. Dorrance, to whom I have heretofore referred, in a letter to Senator REED of March 9, says that the charge is not made that this Russian anthracite is produced or transported to tidewater by convict labor. The charge very definitely is made and widely known that it is produced and transported by "forced labor," under any just or fair interpretation of "forced labor" in section 307 of tariff act of 1930. This fact was related to us by a Pennsylvania engineer who had actual experience in the Donetz field of Russia for nearly two years. He said the workmen are sent to these mines by the soviet. They are not compelled to go nor are they compelled to work. But if they do not go or do not work-with some possible exceptions-their bread card, which means food, clothing, and housing to them, is taken away. I am satisfied with that kind of condition you can not designate this in any other manner than "forced labor."

Now, Mr. Chairman, I believe that the Customs Department would exclude this Russian-mined coal from our shores if they could get the proper kind of evidence that it was being mined by forced labor, but unfortunately they are unable to get this evidence because of the arbitrary attitude of the Russian Government. However, I have always been under the impression that this body was all powerful and could, if they thought it wise, find a remedy to meet any kind of an emergency. If this is true, I am appealing to this Congress in the name of humanity, in the name of protection for American industries, in the name of starving women and children, because of the lack of employment for their bread earners, to find a remedy for this very important matter. You will not only help the unemployment situation but you will be responsible for the bringing of happiness in no small measure to hundreds of thousands of American citizens. [Applause.]

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. Goss].

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Chairman, I rise at this time to read an editorial that appeared this morning in the Philadelphia Public Ledger in connection with the bill that is now under discussion, as follows:

CONGRESS MUST GET BACK TO BEDROCK

Capitol Hill is swarming with terrified Congressmen. The frenzied screaming in Congress as the new tax bill is debated in the House is drowning out all other sounds in Washington.

Some 435 Members of Congress are now face to face with their

Some 435 Members of Congress are now face to face with their own sins of omission and commission. The appropriation chickens they so willingly hatched during the last decade are coming home to roost. They finally realize that even for Heaven's own anointed in Congress the new era is over.

Somebody must pay for the wildest orgy of governmental spending ever known in this or any other country in all recorded time. Somebody must pay for four billion dollar Congresses. Somebody must pay for all the frantic irrigation projects, all the Farm Board experiments, and all the enormous subsidies and tremendous but umproductive "improvements" of the last 15 years.

That somebody is the American taxpayer, and he happens to be in a mood of brooding revolt against further and increased taxation. He is looking at Congress with a hard and cynical eye. He wants his taxes reduced at the exact moment when Congress wants his taxes reduced at the exact moment when Congress simply and inevitably must increase taxation.

The richest government in the world is facing the biggest deficit in the world. As swiftly as possible the Federal Budget must be balanced. To do this additional revenues totaling more than 1,000 millions must be raised in the fiscal year 1932–33.

Borrowing can not do it. There would come a day—and soon—when the Government could not borrow. No matter how much Congress may fear and dread it, the money must be raised by total to the congress may fear and dread it, the money must be raised by taxation.

It can not come from income taxes. Only a little more can be had by taxing incomes. In 1929–30 these taxes yielded $2,411,000,000. At the present rates, incomes would yield not more than $867,000,000 for the year 1932–33. Even under the proposed steeply raised rates they can not return more than $1,110,000,000. The deficit can not be cured by income taxation.

$1,110,000,000. The deficit can not be cured by income taxation. That source of revenue is failing.

Customs receipts can not carry the new load. Nor can the now heavily burdened internal revenues. Oil, tobacco, utilities, amusement, and motor interests stopped the congressional attempt to place the whole burden on their backs. Miscellaneous items of revenue can not make up a tenth of the deficit.

Congress and the Nation have made their beds and must liberary. The country finds itself between the deril of its own.

Congress and the Nation have made their beds and must lie therein. The country finds itself between the devil of its own wild spending and the deep sea of certain resentment. For nearly 15 years it has gone along on the apparent assumption that the Treasury of the United States was a golden and bottom-less bin. Congress has spent just about what it was asked to spend. There have been subsidies and commissions and improvements, and Congress has handed out the cash.

Now, all this must be paid for and maintained. The big whoopee is over, but the piper must be paid. We thought the devil had been chained for a thousand years in the bottomless pit. We were mistaken. Mr. Ford and Mr. Schwab were mistaken. Mr. Coolidge and Mr. Hoover and Mr. Raskob and Professor Fisher and divers other gentlemen were mistaken.

The old delusions and illusions have exploded in our faces. We

The old delusions and illusions have exploded in our faces. We are back to bedrock. Congress must get back to bedrock along with the rest of us. We shall have to stop emptying the Treasury with a steam shovel. Some tens of thousands of our officeholders must be cast into outer darkness. Washington must stop explaining why it can not cut, and do some actual cutting. ernment must be deflated along with everything else.

Congress fears the new manufacturers' tax. Congress fears any tax that can not be saddled on a minority.

Nobody wants to be taxed. Somebody will fight any tax that can be proposed. But Congress may as well cease whining and wriggling and screaming and dodging. It must pass a tax bill, and it may as well enact one that will spread what is everybody's bunder on everybody's shoulders. burden on everybody's shoulders.

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Doughton] says he has no one to go on now, the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. HAWLEY] has no one, and neither have I.

I move, Mr. Chairman, that the committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. BANKHEAD, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee, having had under consideration the bill H. R. 10236, the revenue bill, had come to no resolution thereon.

LIMITATION OF INJUNCTIONS

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas submitted the conference report on the the bill (H. R. 5315) to amend the Judicial Code and to define and limit the jurisdiction of courts sitting in equity, and for other purposes.

PROPOSED AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION

The SPEAKER. The Chair lays before the House the following communication:

STATE OF NEW YORK,

The honorable the Speaker of the House of Representatives,

Washington, D. C.

Sir: I desire officially to inform you that the Legislature of the State of New York has ratified the proposed amendment to the Constitution of the United States passed at the first session of the Seventy-second Congress relating to terms of the President, Vice President, Senators, and Representatives of the United States, time of assembling of Congress, and the method of succession to the Presidency and Vice Presidency.

I am inclosing herewith an engrossed copy of the concurrent resolution of ratification of the Legislature of the State of New York. Very truly yours,

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

Mr. CHINDBLOM. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry. What will become of the communication of the Governor of New York?

The SPEAKER. It goes in the archives of the House.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to Mr. Gillen (at the request of Mr. Thomason), for the remainder of the week, on account of illness.

PENDING LEGISLATION

Mr. JEFFERS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on the subject of pending legislation.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

Mr. JEFFERS. Mr. Speaker and my colleagues of the House of Representatives, several matters of interest to our war veterans and their dependents are pending before the Congress at this time, and it is my desire to call attention briefly to these matters, to register my views concerning them, and to express the hope that we may be afforded the opportunity of bringing these bills to the floor of this House for action at the earliest possible time, and certainly during this session of Congress.

THE ADJUSTED-COMPENSATION CERTIFICATES

I am in favor of the payment of the balance on these certificates, and I am confident it can be done without seriously impairing or disrupting the economic or financial status of this Nation.

We have during this session of Congress enacted into law several measures of major importance. We have passed upon these questions in good faith, believing them to be necessary to the stabilizing of business, and in the sincere hope that with the aid of these relief measures that we have passed the confidence of our people would be restored.

The bill to enable the Federal farm land banks to extend mortgage payments in meritorious cases; the reconstruction finance act, to give new lifeblood to faltering business; the Glass-Steagall bill, to expand Federal reserve credits-all should be of material help in the long run. We are hoping for and looking forward to the return of more prosperous conditions; but in the meantime we sorely need, in every nook and corner of the land, among the rank and file of the people, some form of relief which will put money into circulation immediately, even though it may not be in such plentiful quantities. Any amount of actual cash in circulation, however small, would give hope and encouragement to our people. If there ever was a time when this was needed, it is now.

This is not a matter of charity to be extended to our people by the Federal Government. These adjusted-compensation certificates constitute an outstanding obligation. Some may use the argument that while these adjusted-compensation certificates are an obligation of the Government they are not yet due. But, let us remember that if this adjusted compensation, or added pay, as we might well term it, had been issued at the time when it should have been-that is, when the soldiers of the World War received their discharge-these certificates would now be a great deal nearer due for full payment than is now considered to be the case, because they were not issued until a good many years had elapsed after the soldiers had finished their services and had received their honorable discharges. But, even though it may be argued that the certificates are not due, according to their terms, to be paid in full at this time, we must take into account the actual conditions that exist among our people all over our Nation to-day, and as we do find in these certificates an outstanding obligation we can very properly see, through their payment now, an opportunity to relieve distress and, at the same time, stimulate business.

I feel perfectly safe in making this prediction, that if these certificates are paid off at this time a vast majority of the veterans will undoubtedly put this money to good use by paying current debts, making payments on homes and thereby preventing the actual loss of their homes, which is now confronting a great many of these men; for the purchase of furniture for their homes or equipment for their farms, and many other such worthy purposes. This money would find its way into every channel of business. We have already put over a big program of legislation which we hope will, in the course of time, stabilize and stimulate business, and I can not think of anything which would be more apt to set things into motion than to put these funds immediately into circulation. And remember that these certificates have had a small loan value from year to year, and a large percentage of the veterans have found it necessary to borrow annually on their certificates. Remember, too, that last year we granted a 50 per cent loan value on the certificates and a still larger percentage of the veterans, on account of the very distressing economic condition existing last year, borrowed up to 50 per cent of their certificates. And remember one thing further, and that is that if we do not now find a way to pay off the balance of these certificates, the banks and the Government will consume it by compound interest on what has been borrowed, so if the veterans are forced to wait for this balance until, under the terms of their certificates, it becomes due, they will then find that there will be no balance, because by that time it will have been eaten up by compound interest. Let us not forget that fact. Certainly that condition is not one which we wish to anticipate.

The payment of these certificates would be of great practical benefit to these veterans, to their families, and other business people of the country; but let me say that a result just as valuable as that, or even more so, would be the satisfied feeling toward their Government, for the protection of which they served in time of national peril, in the minds and hearts of our ex-service men and women, and I want to see that result just as much as any other.

When the adjusted compensation bill was passed in March, 1924, I strongly favored cash payment to those who wanted and needed cash, and the issuance of a certificate for an insurance policy to those who might elect to take a policy instead of the cash. On March 5, 1924, I was given the opportunity to appear before the Ways and Means Committee to testify regarding the form of an adjusted compensation bill. Permit me to quote, in part, from that testimony as follows:

Mr. Jeffers. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the Ways and Means Committee, as to the form of a bill to provide for adjusted compensation for ex-service men and women who served in the World War, we respectfully recommend and urge that the bill which will be reported out by your committee shall be a bill providing two options, to wit:

(a) Adjusted compensation in cash to all such ex-service men and women who desire cash;

and women who desire cash;

(b) A paid-up insurance certificate, so that those who would prefer the terms of the paid-up insurance certificate to the cash may accept it instead of cash.

We believe that a bill containing only the two options—(a) cash and (b) a paid-up insurance certificate—would certainly satisfy a and (b) a paid-up insurance certificate—would cer greater per cent of the ex-service men and women.

The following extract from a news item which appeared in the Washington Star of March 6, 1924, states correctly the fact that it was not with any partisan feeling that I testified before the Ways and Means Committee regarding this legislation:

While the twofold proposition to allow either full cash payments or the insurance policies was advanced by the special committee of veterans named by the House Democratic conference, the plan is not binding on the Democrats as a whole, it was explained, and Representative Jeffers, Alabama, chairman of the committee, asked that it not be considered as a partisan view.

We have heard from some quarters that the war veterans themselves are not, as a rule, desirous of securing the payment of the balance on these certificates. I am sure that is not a correct estimate of the situation. If those who are making that contention could see the letters that come every day from organizations and groups of veterans and read the steady stream of individual letters, all emphasizing the distress and actual need in which so many of these veterans and their families now find themselves, and through no fault of their own, they would not long continue to labor under such false impression.

We are furnished with reliable statistics which give us a very clear and understandable idea as to how this money would be put into circulation in every county and community, however remote, and I note that it is estimated that the probable amount which would go to my own State of Alabama is $29,876,139.92. In the congressional district which I have the honor to represent the probable amount which would be put into circulation is as follows:

Alabama
Autauga County	$222, 345, 26
Calhoun County	627, 848, 19
Clay County	200, 600, 72
Coosa County	140, 673, 40
Dallas County	622, 011. 26
Elmore County	387, 021, 20
St. Clair County	276, 717. 90
Talladega County	510, 770.89

2, 987, 988, 82 Fourth congressional district___

In concluding my remarks, when I spoke on this subject here in the House of Representatives on March 17, 1924, I stated:

I am in favor of fair adjusted compensation for the ex-service people of our Nation as a matter of right, looking at it from the standpoint of merit, fairness, and justice.

And now in this hour of distress among these same exservice people of our Nation, let me again say, looking at this proposition from the same standpoint of merit, fairness, and justice, I am of the sincere and honest opinion that this matter can be rightfully settled only by arranging for the payment of the balance of these certificates.

WIDOWS' AND ORPHANS' PENSION BILL

The Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation, on which committee I have the privilege of serving, has reported a bill to the House providing financial relief for the widows and orphans of deceased World War veterans, regardless of the immediate cause of the death of the veteran. Everyone knows that there is real need for general legislation of this character.

Of course, we have now the law under which widows and orphans can draw a pension, provided it can be proven by medical evidence that the veteran's death was caused by some service-connected disability. But even if the veteran has suffered all the time since the World War with serviceconnected disability, and if his death is brought about by some cause other than his service-connected disability, we find these widows and orphans left without any financial aid whatever. There is no Member of Congress who does not know from his actual experience of many such cases that exist in his district where these women are prevented from making a living for themselves and their children because of having these children to rear which they have borne by these war veterans who are now dead. The members of the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation and Members of Congress know that for several years I have worked for legislation of this character. I am very glad that it seems now that we have good prospects of securing consideration on the floor of the House on this proposition during this session.

Personally, I am opposed to the so-called needs clauses, which are sometimes referred to as pauper clauses, and if we can secure the opportunity to do so I will be very glad to support an amendment to take those particular provisions out of the bill. Of course, we realize that we are working under a great handicap at this time, in view of the general economic situation over the country, and in view of the present condition of the Federal Treasury; but, nevertheless, this relief for these widows and orphans which is so sorely needed in so many pitiful cases is of such meritorious appeal that I am perfectly willing to go on record in favor of the passage of this bill during this session of Congress.

THE 90-DAY CLAUSE

In the past all pension laws have required a specific number of days of service as a minimum as a condition of title to a pension for disability not of service origin. This has been the policy in this regard for service pensions for veterans of the Civil War and the Spanish-American War. This policy has been followed in the law providing disability allowance for World War veterans on account of disability not of service origin. Upon mature study of this question I think it reasonable to conclude that on account of the different conditions covering the recruiting of men for the World War the 90-day clause, as a condition of title to a pension for disability not of service origin, should be eliminated.

In the wars prior to the World War the soldiers enlisted for terms or for the duration of the war. It was not so in the World War. In that war this Nation adopted the policy of drafting men. Under that policy the men had to wait until the Government called them. Therefore we can see that it was through no fault of the veteran that he did not serve the 90 days. The men were called at the will of the Government and discharged in the same manner; and all those who were discharged within 90 days from the time they were drafted are barred from participation in the benefits of the disability allowance law. I do not think there should be this discrimination against these veterans since the matter of the exact time when they entered the service, or the exact length of their period of service, was not within their control under the policy of our Government during the World War.

I will do what I can, therefore, to bring about the repeal of that particular provision of the law.

CIVIL-SERVICE PREFERENCE FOR VETERANS

The experience of war veterans that the preference which is supposed to be granted them under existing laws and regulations in recognition of their services to their country in time of war has been, in many instances, defeated by executive and administrative agencies in the executive departments of the Government in connection with original appointment, promotion, and retention in service. It may be said that existing laws, Executive orders, and regulations are confusing and therefore can not be fairly and adequately administered.

I believe it is the desire of the Congress to effect real recognition of war service in granting civil-service preference to veterans, and, in order to do this, I believe that it is necessary for Congress to give definite expression to its desire by the enactment of specific legislation which will not permit of manipulation or misinterpretation. This is particularly true at a time like this when the Congress is endeavoring to accomplish economy in the governmental services and to require reductions in forces wherever it can be done without serious injury to the services.

I have introduced a bill (H. R. 10420) providing specifically that appointments shall be made in recognition of such preference, and prohibiting the introduction of other contingencies and conditions. The bill would prevent the discharge of war veterans where nonveterans are retained in similar positions, requiring that the discharge of a war veteran must be for good cause, in accordance with civil-service regulations. Unsympathetic officials will be hesitant to initiate adverse action affecting war veterans if they are required to set forth in writing the basis of such action. The bill proposes definite and specific preference to veterans of military service who have served under war conditions when applying for appointment, or while in the service, in all departments, bureaus, and branches of the governmental service located throughout the United States.

I believe this legislation would be reasonable and right, there is need for it, and I hope we can secure favorable action on it.

NATIONAL DEFENSE

We need to give attention to our national defense, and by all means we should at least maintain our national plan of defense as it was intended that it should be maintained when it was first adopted. Our national plan of defense is largely a civilian plan, depending upon the understanding and support of our civilian population. It is the least militaristic and also the least expensive national plan of defense which could possibly be devised, and upon which we could depend for the protection and preservation of our Nation in time of need. I earnestly favor the maintenance of our National Guard in a higher state of efficiency, and I am opposed to the attempts to cripple the National Guard by cutting off finances necessary to conduct trial periods and encampments. I am opposed to the efforts which are being made at this time to curtail or even abolish the summer training camps of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps and the citizens' military training camps. Our Regular Establishment is but a skeleton as it now stands, and it would be folly to further reduce its strength. To allow our Navy to become weak by failure to continue a reasonable and safe building program in order to provide renewals for deteriorated and obsolete craft is but to let the rest of the world see for themselves the weakness of our national defense, and such a blunder on our part might prove to be a fatal one.

At this time of disturbance and unrest in all other parts of the world it is essential to our national life that we demonstrate to the rest of the world by adequate maintenance of our own national defenses that we stand ready, if need be, to defend our own Nation and maintain her integrity if emergency should arise. We are not a militaristic people, and we do not desire a vast Army establishment for any offensive purposes, but, as Americans we must, if we are to hope to preserve our Nation, guard carefully our defenses. With other Members of Congress who feel as I do concerning the component parts of our national plan of defense, I am doing what I can to prevent the crippling of our defenses.

While it is true that we are in the midst of a very busy session of the Congress, with highly important legislation under consideration, let us not forget that these matters must not be overlooked and must receive due consideration.

MUSCLE SHOALS

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record by having printed therein an address of Hon. Lister Hill, of Alabama, on the Muscle Shoals bill, drafted by the subcommittee of the Committee on Military Affairs of the House of Representatives, delivered over the Dixie network of the Columbia Broadcasting system, Tuesday evening, March 15, 1932.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

There was no objection.

The address is as follows:

I wish to thank the Columbia Broadcasting Co. for this opportunity to briefly tell you of the bill which the subcommittee of the Committee on Military Affairs of the House of Representatives has drafted for the disposition of Muscle Shoals. The subcommittee, of which I was chairman, was composed of Representatives Jed Johnson, of Oklahoma, James M. Fitzpatrick, of New York, Numa F. Monter, of Louisiana, Democrats, and Representatives W. Frank James, of Michigan, Thomas W. Cochran, of Pennsylvania, William H. Stafford, of Wisconsin, Republicans.

sylvania, William H. Stafford, of Wisconsin, Republicans.

As we recall, Muscle Shoals was built under the authority of section 124 of the national defense act of 1916 for the production of nitrogen and other products for munitions of war and for the manufacture of fertilizer for agriculture. Agriculture in the United States in our time has undergone and is still undergoing profound and far-reaching changes. We have seen the first chapter of this country's agricultural history close with the passing of the public lands. The main work of our people for half a century was to acquire and occupy the public domain, continental in extent. Practically all the tillable public lands of the Nation have now been occupied. There remain no longer vast stretches of free land, rich and unowned. Agriculture has consequently come to require a new national basis of life, and we must adopt new agricultural policies.

There are only two great forces that destroy national life. One is an invading army and the other is the depletion of the soil. Invading armies wipe out peoples and civilizations. Depletion of the soil makes it impossible for peoples and nations to sustain life in their habitat. They move on as in times gone by the people of Greece moved to the more fertile lands of southern Italy. In soil depletion lies the tragic story of the fall of Babylon, of Greece, of Rome. Strange as it may seem, by divine ordinance the element which is used to destroy life is the element which gives life. The nitrogen which makes the gunpowder also brings forth the products of the field. It is estimated by the Department of Agriculture that nitrogen exhaustion in this country each year is represented by about 9,000,000 tons and replenishment by about 5,450,000 tons. The net depletion of 3,550,000 tons represents the impairment of 118,000,000 acres of farm lands each year. Are we to permit our America to become a China with her soil so exhausted that she can produce only one crop in seven years? Shall we become an India where because of soil depletion famine haunts a destitute people? It is said that there are more hungry people in India every year than the total population of the United States. We must begin again as did our forefathers, not to conquer the land, wrest a living from it and abandon it, but to restore it. We must reclaim our lands by restoring their lost soil fertility, for when the lime is extracted from the soil and deposited in men's arteries the end of the Nation is in sight.

There are at Muscle Shoals Government properties representing an original investment of approximately $140,000,000, including Dam No. 1, which is a small navigation dam; Wilson Dam, which is the great power dam, and the most talked-of dam in all the world, the big steam plant; nitrate plant No. 1, a small pilot plant the operation of which did not prove successful; nitrate plant No. 2 with annual production capacity of 40,000 tons of fixed nitrogen which uses the cyanamid process and which was operated successfully during a two weeks trial run; the Waco limestone quarry; and approximately 4,000 acres of land. For 10 years Congress has been endeavoring to make disposition of these properties. In 1928 it passed a bill for Government operation of them, but this bill was killed by the veto of President Coolidge. Again in 1931 Congress passed a bill which was primarily a Government operation bill, and this bill was killed by the veto of President Hoover.

President Hoover.

The subcommittee was instructed by the full committee to draft a bill providing for the operation of the power-generating facilities and power switch by the Government, the construction of the Cove Creek Dam, the leasing of the nitrate properties on liberal terms, and if the making of a lease be impossible the operation of the properties by the Government. The bill drafted by the subcommittee and which was reported to the full committee this morning creates a board of three members to be appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate and to be known as the Muscle Shoals Board.

Members of the board shall have no financial interest in any

Members of the board shall have no financial interest in any business adversely affected by the provisions of the bill. The board is authorized to employ such officers and employees as may be necessary and is authorized, with the approval of the President, to lease, for a period not exceeding 50 years, the properties at Muscle Shoals, except the power plants and power-generating facilities, but no lease can be made with any power-distributing company or with any holding company or other company affiliated or allied with any power-distributing company. It is the duty of the board to operate and control the power-generating facilities and the power switch and to supervise and enforce the obligations of all contracts made by it. Preference as a lessee is accorded to States and to nonprofit corporations exclusively owned and controlled by organizations of farmers; and so far as may be practicable in the negotiations of any lease, open competition shall be employed after due advertisement. The lease contract shall contain a stipulation requiring the lessee to produce at Muscle Shoals within two years from the date of the lease, in the most economical manner, fertilizer containing not less than 10,000 tons of fixed nitrogen and shall require periodic increases in quantity of fixed nitrogen from time to time as the market demands may reasonably require, and such increases shall finally reach the maximum production capacity of the plants at Muscle Shoals as the board may find them to be economically adapted or susceptible of being made economically adapted to the fixation of nitrogen.

The lease shall further provide for the production at Muscle Shoals of an initial quantity of phosphoric acid containing not less than 15,000 tons within two years and six months from the date such production becomes effective, and such production shall be increased from time to time in response to the reasonable market demand until it shall amount to 40,000 tons of phosphoric acid per annum which shall be offered for sale in concentrated fertilizer. The lessee shall be required to offer all fertilizer for sale first to farmers or their authorized agents under conditions providing for equitable distribution at a profit not to exceed 8 per cent of the cost of production and sale. The fertilizer shall be of greater concentration than now generally sold to the farmers. The lessee shall maintain the nitrate properties in an up-to-date condition, so that they will be ready for operation in the event of war or national emergency, and in such event shall turn them over to the Government. All power necessary for the production of fertilizer and for the manufacture of chemicals by the lessee, and power in excess of that so allocated shall be sold by the board at the switchboard on an equitable basis—States, counties, municipalities, and the manufacturers of chemical products to have preference. Rental payments to the Government and prices charged for power shall be fixed by the board and shall be fair and reasonable.

In the event the board is unable within 18 months to effect a lease, it shall be the duty of the board until a lease can be effected to manufacture fertilizer at Muscle Shoals by employment of existing plants and facilities or by modernizing the existing plants and facilities or by the construction of new plants and facilities. Such fertilizer shall contain not less than 10,000 tons of fixed nitrogen per annum, and said amount shall periodically be increased until the maximum production capacity of the plants is reached. Surplus power in excess of that required from time to time by the board for production of fertilizer shall be sold at the switchboard on an equitable basis giving States, counties, and municipalities the preference. When a lease of the Muscle Shoals properties has been effected, or if no lease be effected, when the board shall certify to the President that there is a demand for increased power for the manufacture of fertilizer at Muscle Shoals, the Secretary of War is authorized to construct the Cove Creek Dam. This dam will be 225 feet high with a reservoir of 83 square miles. It is an integral part of the Muscle Shoals project and will more than double the amount of primary electric power now available at the Wilson Dam and at all other dams on the Tennessee River below it. It will contribute mightily to the navigation of the river with its channel of 652 miles twisting capriciously until it empties into the Ohio 67 miles from the Mississippi. It will control in large measure the floods on the Tennessee and even lessen the ravages of those on the Father of Waters. The bill insures the disposition of Muscle Shoals.

It is liberal in its leasing provisions, affords every opportunity for a lease that will be fair to the lessee and yield a reasonable return to the Government on its investment. The bill contemplates at Muscle Shoals a great electrochemical development requiring coal, coke, limestone, phosphate, and various other raw material. The labor necessary for fertilizer-plant operations, limestone quarries, phosphate mines, coal mines, coke ovens, and electrochemical operations will require a population of thousands of men in Alabama and Tennessee. For 12 years the people of the Tennessee Valley have awaited the disposition of Muscle Shoals as the entering wedge for the development of the valley. The bill will forge the first link in the chain of development and open up the industrial empire of the Tennessee Valley destined to become a greater Ruhr. As has been said, there are in the Tennessee Valley conjunctions of raw materials of all kinds, of coal, iron, and waterpower more fateful than conjunctions of the stars. The bill will keep the promise of the Government to the farmer, afford cheaper fertilizer, and lighten the burdens of him who is a partner with God to liberate the forces of nature and feed and clothe the teeming millions of the Nation. It will set an honest standard of cost for the generation of electric power for the benefit of the millions of power consumers of the Nation.

There comes down to us through the ages the injunction to multiply and replenish the earth and the earth must be replenished with nitrogen. Wherever man looks, the living, moving, doing thing in the world is nitrogen, constantly reminding us that "There's a Divinity that shapes our ends, rough hew them how we will."

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. STRONG of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record by printing a statement made by President O'Neal, of the American Farm Bureau Federation, on the stabilization of the purchasing power of money.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, will not the gentleman withdraw that request and present it to-morrow morning when the gentleman from Massachusetts is present? For the time being I object.

SENATE BILLS REFERRED

Bills, a joint resolution, and a concurrent resolution of the Senate of the following titles were taken from the Speaker's table and under the rule referred as follows:

S. 95. An act to amend the second paragraph of section 6 of the civil service retirement act of May 29, 1930 (relating to persons retired for disability); to the Committee on the Civil Service.

S. 266. An act to provide for an investigation and report of losses resulting from the campaign for the eradication of the Mediterranean fruit fly; to the Committee on Agriculture.

S. 1003. An act for the relief of Capt. Jacob M. Pearce, United States Marine Corps; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

S. 1307. An act authorizing an appropriation for the alteration and repair of the buildings of Eastern Dispensary and Casualty Hospital; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

S. 1406. An act to provide for the improvement of the approach to the Confederate Cemetery, Fayetteville, Ark.; to the Committee en Military Affairs.

S. 2059. An act for the relief of Albert Ross; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

S. 2062. An act for the relief of Adam Augustus Shafer; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

S. 2148. An act for the relief of Clarence R. Killion; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. 2290. An act for the conservation of rainfall in the United States; to the Committee on Agriculture.

S. 2335. An act for the relief of O. R. York; to the Committee on Claims,

S. 2355. An act to define, regulate, and license real-estate brokers and real-estate salesmen; to create a real-estate commission in the District of Columbia; to protect the public against fraud in real-estate transactions, and for

S. 2682. An act to amend section 5 of the Criminal Code: to the Committee on the Judiciary.

S. 3362. An act to prevent fraud in the promotion or sale of stock, bonds, or other securities sold or offered for sale within the District of Columbia; to control the sale of the same; to register persons selling stocks, bonds, or other securities; to provide punishment for the fraudulent or unauthorized sale of the same; to make uniform the law in relation thereto, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

S. 3508. An act to amend section 1 of the act entitled "An act to provide for determining the heirs of deceased Indians, for the disposition and sale of allotments of deceased Indians, for the leasing of allotments, and for other purposes," approved June 25, 1910, as amended; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

S. 3536. An act for the relief of Jerry O'Shea; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 3570. An act to amend the act entitled "An act confirming in States and Territories title to land granted by the United States in the aid of common or public schools," approved January 25, 1927; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

S. 3584. An act to require all insurance corporations formed under the provisions of Chapter XVIII of the Code of Law of the District of Columbia to maintain their principal offices and places of business within the District of Columbia, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

S. 3744. An act for the construction of a reservoir in the Little Truckee River, Calif., and for such dams and other improvements as may be necessary to impound the waters of Webber, Independence, and Donner Lakes, and for the further development of the water resources of the Truckee River; to the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation.

S. J. Res. 116. Joint resolution relating to the allocation of funds to the Secretary of Agriculture under the Reconstruction Finance Corporation act; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

S. Con. Res. 6. Concurrent resolution favoring the designation and appropriate observance of American conservation week; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

RESOLUTION AND BILLS PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT

Mr. PARSONS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee did on this day present to the President, for his approval, a joint resolution and bills of the House of the following titles:

H. J. Res. 182. Joint resolution authorizing an appropriation to defray the expenses of participation by the United States Government in the Second Polar Year Program, August 1, 1932, to August 31, 1933;

H. R. 361. An act to provide for the extension of improvements on the west side of Georgia Avenue, north of Princeton Place, in the District of Columbia, and for other pur-

H. R. 5866. An act to authorize the construction of a dam across Des Lacs Lake, N. Dak.;

H.R. 6485. An act to revise the boundary of the Mount McKinley National Park, in the Territory of Alaska, and for other purposes; and

H. R. 8235. An act to clarify the application of the contract labor provisions of the immigration laws to instrumental musicians.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 18 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until to-morrow, Thursday, March 17, 1932, at 12 o'clock noon.

COMMITTEE HEARINGS

Mr. RAINEY submitted the following tentative list of committee hearings scheduled for Thursday, March 17, 1932, Whole House.

other purposes: to the Committee on the District of Colum- | as reported to the floor leader by clerks of the several committees:

> COMMITTEE ON BANKING AND CURRENCY (10.30 a. m.)

Stabilization measures.

COMMITTEE ON INTERSTATE AND FOREIGN COMMERCE

(10 a. m.)

Railroad holding companies (H. R. 9059).

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII,

Mr. THOMASON: Committee on Military Affairs. H. R. 8624. A bill to authorize the loan of War Department equipment to the Knights of Pythias; with amendment (Rept. No. 808). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. CHAVEZ: Committee on Indian Affairs. H. R. 9071. A bill to authorize appropriations to pay in part the liability of the United States to the Indian pueblos herein named, under the terms of the act of June 7, 1924, and the liability of the United States to non-Indian claimants on Indian pueblo grants whose claims, extinguished under the act of June 7, 1924, have been found by the Pueblo Lands Board to have been claims in good faith; to authorize the expenditure by the Secretary of the Interior of the sums herein authorized and of sums heretofore appropriated, in conformity with the act of June 7, 1924, for the purchase of needed lands and water rights and the creation of other permanent economic improvements as contemplated by said act; to provide for the protection of the watershed within the Carson National Forest for the Pueblo de Taos Indians of New Mexico and others interested, and to authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to contract relating thereto and to amend the act approved June 7, 1924, in certain respects; with amendment (Rept. No. 820). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII.

Mr. PITTENGER: Committee on Claims. A bill for the relief of Pierre E. Teets: with amendment (Rept. No. 809). Referred to the Committee of the Whole

Mr. SWANK: Committee on Claims. H. R. 1834. A bill for the relief of Claude E. Dove; with amendment (Rept. No. 810). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. SCHAFER: Committee on Claims. H. R. 2916. A bill for the relief of Kathryn Thurston; with amendment (Rept. No. 811). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. CLARK of North Carolina: Committee on Claims. H. R. 5980. A bill for the relief of Lottie W. McCaskill; without amendment (Rept. No. 812). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. MILLER: Committee on Claims. H. R. 6623. A bill for the relief of Minnie D. Hines; with amendment (Rept. No. 813). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. RAMSPECK: Committee on Claims. H. R. 7215. A bill for the relief of May Weaver; with amendment (Rept. No. 814). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. BOEHNE: Committee on Claims. H. R. 7278. A bill for the relief of Joseph Vigliotti; without amendment (Rept. No. 815). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. RAMSPECK: Committee on Claims. H. R. 8144. A bill for the relief of O. H. Chrisp; with amendment (Rept. No. 816). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. BLACK: Committee on Claims. S. 84. An act for the relief of Abraham Green; without amendment (Rept. No. 817). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. BOEHNE: Committee on Claims. S. 1205. An act for the relief of Edith Tolerton Lathrop; without amendment (Rept. No. 818). Referred to the Committee of the

Mr. BACON: Committee on Claims. H.R. 5513. A bill to permit the United States to be made a party defendant in certain cases; without amendment (Rept. No. 819). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. McCORMACK: A bill (H. R. 10558) authorizing the establishment of a seaplane base on Castle Island in the city of Boston, Mass.; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. STEVENSON: A bill (H. R. 10559) to amend so much of the first deficiency act, fiscal year 1921, approved March 1, 1921, as relates to the printing and distribution of a revised edition of Hinds' Parliamentary Precedents of the House of Representatives; to the Committee on Printing.

By Mr. EVANS of Montana: A bill (H. R. 10560) giving consent to the several States for the taxation of personal property in private ownership on certain military reservations within the States; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. CHRISTGAU: A bill (H. R. 10561) placing certain positions in the Postal Service in the competitive classified service; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

By Mr. IGOE: A bill (H. R. 10562) to authorize the establishment of a national cemetery at Hines, Cook County, Ill.; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mrs. NORTON (by request of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia): A bill (H. R. 10563) to provide for the closing of certain streets and alleys in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. LAMNECK: A bill (H. R. 10564) to fix the rates of postage on catalogues exceeding 8 ounces in weight; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mrs. NORTON: A bill (H. R. 10565) to amend section 3 of an act, as amended, entitled "An act making it a misdemeanor in the District of Columbia to abandon or willfully neglect to provide for the support and maintenance by any person of his wife, or his or her minor children, in destitute or necessitous circumstances, approved June 10, 1926"; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. CONNERY: A bill (H. R. 10566) to provide that the prevailing rate of wages shall be paid to laborers and mechanics employed on certain public works of the United States, the District of Columbia, the Territories, and the Panama Canal, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. BRITTEN: A bill (H. R. 10567) for the repeal of the drastic provisions of the so-called Jones 5 and 10 law; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. AMLIE: A bill (H. R. 10568) to establish a referendum to enable the people of the United States to propose candidates for nomination for President of the United States, and the other purposes: to the Committee on Election of President, Vice President, and Representatives in Congress.

By Mr. BYRNS: A bill (H. R. 10584) to prevent the sale or transportation in interstate and foreign commerce of certain commonly used poisons; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. SUMMERS of Washington: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 335) to promote the conservation of health and the education of minor children residing on tax-free Indian land on the Yakima Reservation, Wash.; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. CHINDBLOM: A bill (H. R. 10569) granting a pension to Elizabeth Woods; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. DOUGLASS of Massachusetts: A bill (H. R. 10570) to extend further benefits of the employees' compensation act of September 7, 1916, as amended, to Guiseppe Iacono; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. ENGLEBRIGHT: A bill (H. R. 10571) granting a pension to Apostolo Calaritto; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. GARRETT: A bill (H. R. 10572) to correct the naval record of Aubrey Layton Dunn; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. HARE: A bill (H. R. 10573) for the relief of Florence M. Humphries; to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10574) for the relief of Dr. B. J. Hammet; to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. HARLAN: A bill (H. R. 10575) granting a pension to Arthur L. Atkins; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. POLK: A bill (H. R. 10576) granting an increase of pension to Ruth P. Shivers; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. PURNELL: A bill (H. R. 10577) granting a pension to Emma C. Fisher; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. REED of New York: A bill (H. R. 10578) granting an increase of pension to Elsie R. Decker; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SWANK: A bill (H. R. 10579) granting a pension to Susie A. Box; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10580) for the relief of George Louis Dynes; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. TEMPLE: A bill (H. R. 10581) for the relief of Julia Krenz; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. UNDERHILL: A bill (H. R. 10582) granting an increase of pension to Amy R. Knox; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WOLVERTON: A bill (H. R. 10583) for the relief of James Smith; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

4433. By Mr. ALDRICH: Resolution of Betsy Ross Council, No. 23, Sons and Daughters of Liberty, of Providence, R. I., urging passage of House bill 1967; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

4434. By Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri: Petition of thousands of mothers of St. Louis, urging the Congress to enact the Cochran bill making it a Federal offense to kidnap a person and remove that person from one jurisdiction to another. Some of the petitions represent 100 per cent the congregations of churches, lodges, and societies; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

4435. By Mr. DALLINGER: Petition of 35 citizens of Woburn, Mass., protesting against the repeal, resubmission, or modification of the eighteenth amendment to the Constitution; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

4436. By Mr. ENGLEBRIGHT: Petition of Board of Supervisors, City and County of San Francisco, Calif., through its clerk, J. S. Dunnigan, protesting any reduction in Army appropriations; to the Committee on Appropriations.

4437. Also, petition of Glendale Post, No. 127, American Legion (Ltd.), favoring House bill 7115; to the Committee on Agriculture.

4438. By Mr. FITZPATRICK: Memorial of the Polish National Alliance of the United States of North America, urging the enactment of House Joint Resolution 144 directing the President of the United States to proclaim October 11 of each year as General Pulaski's Memorial Day; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

4439. By Mr. GARBER: Petition of Chamber of Commerce of Pittsburgh, opposing House bill 9390; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

4440. Also, petition of Enid Cooperative Creamery Association, opposing the repeal of the agricultural marketing act or any amendment abolishing the Federal Farm Board or transferring the function of same to any other Government department; to the Committee on Agriculture.

4441. Also, petition of citizens of Oklahoma, protesting against resubmission of the eighteenth amendment; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

4442. Also, petition of the Woodward Chamber of Commerce, urging the enactment of legislation regulating interstate traffic of motor busses and motor trucks; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

4443. Also, petition of Ben E. Mobley, Oklahoma State game warden, Oklahoma City, Okla., on behalf of Oklahoma sportsmen, supporting 1-cent-a-shell tax for the purpose of restoring and perpetuating migratory waterfowl and upland game birds; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

4444. Also, petition of Ralph Hemphill, of Oklahoma City, urging exemptions of agricultural fairs; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

4445. Also, petition of Citizens of Okema, Okla., urging the passage of Senate bill 2487 and House bills 1197 and 7797; to the Committee on Agriculture.

4446. Also, petition of Sam Brown Warden, opposing the use of convict labor on Federal roads; to the Committee on Labor.

4447. Also, petition of Lynn Thompson, of Minneapolis, urging Army mobilization; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

4448. Also, petition of Harry H. Smith, of Tulsa, Okla., protesting against proposed Federal tax on Gasoline; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

4449. Also, petition of citizens of Garber, Okla., urging passage of bill which provides for the immediate payment of the soldier's adjusted-service certificates; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

4450. Also, petition of Kiwanis Club of Enid, Okla., urging the passage of bill providing for the immediate payment to ex-service men of the balance due on their bonus certificates; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

4451. Also, petition of C. O. Moser, of New Orleans, representing the American Cotton Cooperative Association, advocating a tariff against foreign-produced oils and fats; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

4452. Also, petition of citizens of Park Ridge, Ill., urging passage of bill 9891, railroad employees national pension; to the Committee on Pensions.

4453. Also, petition of H. E. Manly, of Oklahoma City, protesting against the manufacturers' sales tax; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

4454. Also, petition of H. C. Busker, of Newkirk, Okla., urging amendment of Sherman Anti-trust Act, H. R. 8930; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

4455. Also, petition of citizens of Oklahoma, protesting against compulsory Sunday observance; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

4456. By Mr. GARRETT: Petition of citizens of Texas, in behalf of the Federal Farm Board; to the Committee on Agriculture.

4457. By Mr. GLOVER: Resolution of Pine Bluff Chamber of Commerce; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

4458. By Mr. HADLEY: Petition of some residents of Wickersham, Wash., urging maintenance of the prohibition law and its enforcement; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

4459. By Mr. HOGG of West Virginia: Petition of Romney Fire Co., recommending the passage of House bill 9596; to the Committee on Roads.

4460. By Mr. IGOE: Petition of the Crawford Business Men's League of Chicago, Ill., petitioning the President and Congress of the United States to withdraw and stay out of the Orient and not involve the Nation in any quarrels which may arise between the respective nations of the East; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

4461. By Mr. JAMES: Petition of Journeymen Barbers International Union of America, Local No. 955, of Hancock, by Ralph Ziegenbein, secretary, office at Houghton, Mich.; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

4462. By Mr. JOHNSON of Texas: Petition of C. C. Adams, of Rockdale, Tex., favoring immediate cash payment of the adjusted-service certificates; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

4463. By Mr. KELLER: Petition of Local Union No. 790, United Mine Workers of America, Zeigler, Ill., with a membership of 900, petitioning Congress to allot to southern Illinois a hospital for disabled veterans; to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

4464. Also, petition of the members of the Martin, Carter, Steveson Post, No. 744, American Legion, Cutler, Ill., urging the payment of the amount remaining due on the soldier bonus; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

4465. Also, petition of Local Union No. 812, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, urging the passage of a law to compel contractors to pay the prevailing rate of wages and observe the hours of labor; to the Committee on Labor.

4466. By Mr. LINDSAY: Petition of Arbuckle Bros., favoring a duty on refined sugar; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

4467. Also, petition of William E. Lindsley, of Newburgh, N. Y., opposing 21/4 per cent sales tax; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

4468. By Mr. MEAD: Petition of National Live Stock Marketing Association, objecting to sales tax on meat; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

4469. By Mr. NELSON of Maine: Petitions of W. E. Gerald and 75 other residents of the State of Maine, protesting against Senate bill 1202, providing for the closing of barber shops on Sunday in the District of Columbia; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

4470. By Mr. NOLAN: Resolution of the City Council of Minneapolis, requesting that the Congress of the United States enact House Resolution No. 1, relating to the payment in full of soldiers' adjusted-service certificates; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

4471. By Mr. PARKER of Georgia: Petition of L. P. Maggioni & Co., of Savannah, Ga., urging the enactment of regulatory legislation for busses and trucks for hire; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

4472. Also, petition of Hon. Pleasant A. Stovall; H. L. Kayton; the Georgia Ice Co.; A. F. Rehm; Abrahams, Nouhan, Atkinson & Lawrence, attorneys; E. W. Thomas, for Odeon Theater employees; Arcadia Theater employees; Robert Hardee, for Bijou Theater; A. W. Thiot, secretary Trades and Labor Assembly of Savannah; Lucas Theater employees; Love B. Harrell and B. J. Fowler, of Macon; Paul S. Ethridge, chairman Fulton County Commission; Arthur Lucas, Moultrie Chamber of Commerce; and O. C. Lam, all of the State of Georgia, protesting against certain phases of proposed tax legislation; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

4473. By Mr. PATMAN: Petition of D. I. Hooks and 60 other citizens of Bowie County, Tex., urging the retention of the agricultural marketing act, and asking that no amendment thereto be made; to the Committee on Agriculture.

4474. Also, petition of Tom Jeffus and 17 other citizens of Lamar County, Tex., urging the retention of the agricultural marketing act, and asking that no amendment thereto be made; to the Committee on Agriculture.

4475. Also, petition of A. W. Smith and 186 other citizens of Camp County, Tex., urging the retention of the agricultural marketing act, and asking that no amendment thereto be made; to the Committee on Agriculture.

4476. Also, petition of M. O. Combs and 54 other citizens of Titus County, Tex., urging the retention of the agricultural marketing act, and asking that no amendment thereto be made; to the Committee on Agriculture.

4477. Also, petition of C. B. Anderson and 18 other citizens of Delta, County, Tex., urging the retention of the agricultural marketing act, and asking that no amendment thereto be made; to the Committee on Agriculture.

4478. By Mr. RUDD: Petition of Arbuckle Bros., New York, favoring a duty on refined sugar; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

4479. Also, petition of Eugene Fitzpatrick, Long Island City, favoring the passage of House bill 319 providing for tariff on imports of copper; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

4480. Also, petition of Dr. R. B. Church, Akron, Ohio, favoring the passage of Senate bill 2683 and House bill 4499; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

4481. By Mr. SCHUETZ: Petition of Group No. 1424 of the Polish National Alliance of the United States, memorializing Congress to proclaim October 11 of each year as General Pulaski's Memorial Day; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

4482. Also, petition of Group No. 1991 of the Polish National Alliance of the United States, memorializing Congress to proclaim October 11 of each year as General Pulaski's Memorial Day; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

4483. Also, petition of Group No. 2424 of the Polish National Alliance of the United States, memorializing Congress to proclaim October 11 of each year as General Pulaski's Memorial Day; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

4484. Also, petition of Group No. 2459 of the Polish National Alliance of the United States, memorializing Congress to proclaim October 11 of each year as General Pulaski's Memorial Day; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

4485. Also, petition of Group No. 843 of the Polish National Alliance of the United States, memorializing Congress to proclaim October 11 as General Pulaski's Memorial Day; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

4486. Also, petition of Group No. 2352 of the Polish National Alliance of the United States, memorializing Congress to proclaim October 11 of each year as General Pulaski's Memorial Day; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

4487. Also, petition of Group No. 4 of the Polish National Alliance of the United States, memorializing Congress to proclaim October 11 of each year as General Pulaski's Memorial Day; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

4488. Also, petition of Group No. 844, of the Polish National Alliance of the United States, memorializing Congress to proclaim October 11 of each year as General Pulaski's Memorial Day; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

4489. By Mr. SEGER: Petition of John Kehrle, secretary, and 30 members of the St. Boniface Holy Name Society, Catholic Central Verein of America, Paterson, N. J., favoring immediate modification of the Volstead act and eventual repeal of the eighteenth amendment; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

4490. By Mr. SELVIG: Petition of Henning Farmers' Creamery, Henning, Minn., composed of 300 farmers, opposing any sales tax whatever; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

4491. By Mr. STRONG of Kansas: Resolution of Gen. E. S. Godfry Camp, No. 5, United Indian War Veterans, Clay Center, Kans., urging the passage of the widows' uniform pension bill, H. R. 7230; to the Committee on Pensions.

4492. By Mr. SWING: Petition signed by 13 residents of Blythe, Calif., protesting against compulsory Sunday observance; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

SENATE

THURSDAY, MARCH 17, 1932

(Legislative day of Monday, March 14, 1932)

The Senate met at 12 o'clock meridian, on the expiration of the recess.

CHANGES OF REFERENCE

Mr. JONES. Mr. President, the bills (S. 3467) amending the annual rate of payment of irrigation-construction assessments on the Wapato irrigation project, and (S. 3998) approving and confirming contract for apportionment of waters of Ahtanum Creek, Wash., between Yakima Indian Reservation and lands north thereof, dated May 9, 1908, were referred to the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation. I do not know how it happened, but that reference occurred. The bills ought to be referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, as they deal with Indian reservation matters.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation will be discharged from the further consideration of the bills, and they will be referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas obtained the floor.

- Mr. FESS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to enable me to suggest the absence of a quorum?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Arkansas yield for that purpose?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I do.

Mr. FESS. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Dale	Jones	Robinson, Ark.
Austin	Davis	Kean	Robinson, Ind.
Bailey	Dickinson	Kendrick	Schall
Bankhead	Dill	Keyes	Sheppard
Bingham	Fess	King	Shipstead
Black	Fletcher	Lewis	Smith
Blaine	Frazier	Logan	Smoot
Borah	George	McGill	Steiwer
Bratton	Glass	McKellar	Thomas, Idaho
Brookhart	Goldsborough	McNary	Thomas, Okla.
Broussard	Hale	Metcalf	Townsend
Bulow	Harrison	Moses	Trammell
Capper	Hastings	Neely	Tydings
Caraway	Hatfield	Norbeck	Vandenberg
Carey	Hawes	Norris	Walcott
Connally	Hayden	Nye	Walsh, Mass.
Coolidge	Hebert	Oddie	Walsh, Mont.
Copeland	Howell	Patterson	White
Costigan	Hull	Pittman
Couzens	Johnson	Reed

Mr. KEAN. My colleague the junior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. Barbour] is unavoidably absent. I would like to have this announcement stand for the day.

Mr. LOGAN. I announce the necessary absence of my colleague the senior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Barkley] on public business. I ask that the announcement may stand for the day.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. I wish to announce the continued illness of my colleague the senior Senator from Indiana [Mr. Warson]. I ask that this announcement may stand for the day.

Mr. GEORGE. My colleague the senior Senator from Georgia [Mr. HARRIS] is still detained from the Senate because of illness. I will let this announcement stand for the day.

Mr. GLASS. I wish to announce that my colleague the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. Swanson] is absent in attendance upon the disarmament conference at Geneva.

Mr. SHEPPARD. The junior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Long] is necessarily detained from the Senate. I ask that this announcement may stand for the day.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Seventy-eight Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

RADIO ADDRESSES BY GOVERNOR LA FOLLETTE AND SENATOR
LA FOLLETTE ON PROGRESSIVE GOVERNMENT

Mr. BLAINE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the Record speeches delivered by the governor of my State, Hon. Philip La Follette, and my colleague, Hon. ROBERT M. LA FOLLETTE, JR., over the National Broadcasting System on the evening of March 14, 1932.

There being no objection, the addresses were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SPEECH OF GOVERNOR LA FOLLETTE

Some of you may have been in the forest with a guide when you have lost the trail. You will recall that moment of panic and fear that comes when suddenly you realize that the guide, in whose knowledge you had trusted, himself no longer knows where you are or where next to turn. The forest looms about, its stillness intensifying the terror that lurks within you. Only a calm consideration of factors of stream flow and the lay of the land, of basic factors, will enable you to reach your ultimate objectives. Yet it is precisely at such a time that one can maintain a sufficient evenness of judgment only with the greatest effort. Such is the situation of America to-day. We have lost confidence in leaders, because leaders have lost their own way. In our fear and uncertainty it is difficult for us to be able to apply the basic knowledge we already possess. And so we endanger ourselves further with irrational but humanly understandable despair and panic. This is not worthy of our heritage.

is not worthy of our heritage.

Sober and conservative minds are convinced to-day that we face one of the gravest emergencies of our history. Confronted by this emergency, people have divided themselves broadly into two groups. One group has maintained that there was nothing to do but let the depression run its course in the vague hope that somewhere, somehow, something might happen that would automatically start the machine running again on the right road. This group is now, and has been for 25 years, with few interruptions, in compete control of our national business and political life, as well as of most of the governments of our States and municipalities.

Another group has maintained from the outset that the depres-

Another group has maintained from the outset that the depression was caused by a series of policies reaching back at least 25 years, and pursued with increasing recklessness during the period of inflation, and until those causes are searched out and adequate remedies applied our machine, instead of getting better, will get worse. To this latter group belong the progressives of Wisconsin. We hold that America has the best labor and the most modern industrial machinery; that we can produce all of the industrial products needed by our people; that we have a rich and fertile soil, with the most efficient and best trained agricultural population, which can easily produce enough food to maintain a high standard of living. We hold that there is nothing wrong with our power of production; that our difficulty lies with our direction and distribution of that production.

The farmer produces and wants to trade his milk and butter and

The farmer produces and wants to trade his milk and butter and eggs and vegetables and meats and other farm products for clothes and shoes and electric lights and other industrial products, but he can not trade them for enough to pay his interest and taxes, let alone to have enough over to buy even a small part of what he The worker wants milk and butter and eggs and meat and clothes and shoes and other products of the farm and factory, but millions of our workers are totally without money to buy anything.

In practical terms this means that unless the advances made in the production of goods are shared widely among people of all classes through wages and prices of commodities the whole ecoclasses through wages and prices of commodities the whole economic structure is so narrowly based that it becomes insecure. The slightest disturbance will topple it over. There is no advantage in being able to finance enlargement of plant and equipment or any other investments if there is no assurance that a market will be ready to absorb the new volume of goods to be produced. To secure such stabilization of production and consuming power requires not merely intelligent administration of each individual economic unit and activity. It requires also deliberate effort on the part of the various interests and groups in society as a whole to see that its resources in land, in capital, in skill, and knowledge are applied to their best advantage. We in skill, and knowledge are applied to their best advantage. We have discovered that the unplanned and unregulated growth of our cities destroys the very wealth that first resented the effort to guide and direct development. We are learning to-day that the same lesson holds true of national and, indeed, world economy as

One hundred and fifty years ago a small part of the population in other countries—the nobility—had the extreme degree of liberty, namely, license to do about as they pleased, but the bulk of human beings had no liberty whatever. The founders of our Republic recognized that in order to give the mass of people security there had to be restraints and controls upon the selfish and powerful few—our forefathers provided us with the American system of government, which accomplished the purposes for which it was designed.

To-day a small fraction of our population at the very top have economic liberty to do about as they please, but the vast majority of us are without security. Unless our generation devises some economic control, some reasonable restraint, we shall have missed economic control, some reasonable restraint, we shall have missed both the opportunity and the crying need of our time.

In many parts of the world to-day other nations are attempting to create some sort of economic order and government. Unfortunately for the progress of the world most of these attempts are duplicates in the economic field of the political autocracy of a century ago. We in America should blaze a trail in this economic field as we did in the political field.

We should devise machinery for our economic government that

We should devise machinery for our economic government that will be in keeping and in harmony with our traditions and our experiences. America should meet the need of our time out of experiences. America should meet the need of our time out of our experience and according to American principles.

We have gone for 40 years without adequate economic restraint; we can not expect to correct overnight the mistakes of four decades. In all that we do we must act for the present, endeavoring to do what is humanly possible to prevent hardship and disaster now, but we must also build for to-morrow.

The progressives of Wisconsin recognize that no single State can alone solve our problems, nor do we make any pretense that our program is perfect. We do maintain that if we continue this endless buck passing from the Federal Government to the States and back again, millions will go hungry and millions more sink into apathy and hopelessness before even a beginning has been made. In Wisconsin we are making a beginning. We have begun by recognizing, for example:

by recognizing, for example:
(1) That mechanical energy is the foundation for the improvement and development of our farms, homes, and factories. We favor the public ownership and control of enough of our heat, light, and power to protect the public interest. We are not for Government ownership nor against private ownership as a matter of theory. We are interested in having the people provided with of theory. We are interested in having the people provided with light, heat, and power in abundant quantities and by the most efficient and economical means. Wisconsin is adopting as rapidly as possible a comprehensive program to enable this State and its municipalities, together with our privately owned utilities, to develop an integrated and carefully planned power program that will eventually supply these necessities to every home, farm, and factory in this State.

(2) That careful economic and social planning are as essential for a community as they are for a successful business or agricultural enterprise. Wisconsin has created such an agency. In spite of the warmth of our politics, leaders in business, industry, agriculture, labor, and commerce have patriotically laid aside their prejudices and sit together around a table to discuss and plan for the welfare of the entire State.

(3) That machinery must be created to enable businessuse business in its widest sense—to govern itself. We do not favor the Government trying to run business. We do favor the Government providing the machinery to enable business intelligently to govern itself. The progressives of Wisconsin have a definite and carefully considered program to provide the machinery and at the same time afford adequate protection to the general public through cooperative associations and boards of trade.

cooperative associations and boards of trade.

(4) That the taxing power can be used to carry us through the present emergency with as little suffering as possible by providing the necessary relief and necessary public works and by removing unjust tax burdens from farms, homes, and places of business. Wisconsin has this year provided all of the localities with funds equal to one-half of their 1931 expenditures for unemployment relief and has likewise decreased the total tax for all purposes on farms, homes, and places of business by 11 per cent less than in 1930.

During the past 25 years the country as a whole has been dominated by the reactionary elements in the Republican and Democratic Parties. In Wisconsin the progressives have had an opporcratic Parties. In Wisconsin the progressives have had an opportunity to put their policies into partial application.

Throughout this period you have been told that Wisconsin was radical and destructive. As we all confront the emergencies of this depression, Wisconsin welcomes a comparison of her public housekeeping with that of the other States and the National Govnousekeeping with that of the other States and the National Government. Wisconsin has followed the policy of paying as we go. We have no State indebtedness. We have better than a balanced budget and have been able to provide substantial tax reduction to the farmer, home owner, and business man in this emergency. Not a single county or municipality has failed to pay the interest and principal upon its obligations. Wisconsin is suffering in this depression like every other community, but the general condition in the State of Wisconsin is better than in any place in America, and no one can to-day deny that the State of Wisconsin is one of and no one can to-day deny that the State of Wisconsin is one of the soundest and most secure in the United States.

Six years ago a member of the President's Cabinet gave an address on the occasion of the birth of the Republican Party. In that address he pointed with pride to the achievements of the past quarter century, to the things that had been done that had improved life for the great mass of people. Every achievement that this conservative pointed to as improving the life of America had originated with the progressive movement in Wisconsin and had been enacted into our national law by the progressives over the bitter opposition of the conservatives in both the Republican and Democratic Parties.

In the face of this constructive record of achievements and sound public housekeeping the reactionaries will still continue to sound public housekeeping the reactionaries will still continue to call the Progressives of Wisconsin radical and destructive. In the true meaning of the word "conservative"—to conserve and preserve—the only real conservatives in America to-day are the Progressives. We say with Lincoln that every political idea that we have came from Thomas Jefferson and the Declaration of Independence. The reason is this: One hundred years ago our ancestors, through individual zeal, courage, and endurance, were solving the problems of their day by founding new settlements in the vast lands of the continent. We of to-day can no longer attack our problems in such a way. But the Progressives are seeking to find some modern equivalent for the free land of the frontier as a means of supplying the humblest citizen and his family with equal access to the opportunities of life. That is why, in our effort to find some means for encouraging industrial and business statesmanship, in our effort to broaden and deepen the consuming statesmanship, in our effort to broaden and deepen the consuming power of the country, we are seeking to conserve and transmit to our children the most fundamental ideals of America.

SPEECH OF SENATOR LA FOLLETTE

I agree with what Phil has said of the underlying causes of our national economic breakdown and the problems which it creates for the people and their Government. I hope I may be pardoned for expressing pride in him, not only because he is my brother but because of the courage and ability which he and the Progressives in Wisconsin are dealing with the problems that beset us.

The conflicting theories of government and economics which are being put to the test are better understood when we survey the conditions existing throughout the country.

Industrial production is down 45 per cent from the 1929 level.

Freight-car loadings have dropped 38 per cent, manufacturing employment is 33 1/2 per cent lower, construction is down 50 per cent, residential building is off 80 per cent.

Five hundred and fifty great industrial corporations had a net income in 1929 of $3,500,000,000; in 1931 they had a net income of approximately $1,100,000,000.

It is conservatively estimated that 8,300,000 men and women are trudging the streets looking for work and unable to find it. At least another 7,000,000 are working part time and for greatly reduced wages.

Six million farmers in the United States have been fighting a losing economic battle ever since 1920. The industrial and financial depression of the last three years has served merely to intensify the deflation which agriculture has experienced for the last 12 years.

The wage and salary loss of the unemployed, it is estimated, reaches the staggering total of $20,000,000,000. The purchasing power of 50,000,000 people dependent upon wages and of 30,000,000 people dependent upon agriculture has been withdrawn from the market. This is one of the prime reasons why the depression, now in its third winter, has extended without recovery from 1929 to 1932.

For years preceding this depression the Federal Government pursued a policy of noninterference, looking on with complacency while there grew up a system of irresponsible and speculative control of industry and finance. This resulted in the concentration of wealth in the hands of a relatively small group. While this system was being created, in Wisconsin and at Washington Progressives fought, as they are fighting to-day, to prevent domination and control of our economic life by concentrated wealth.

As one corrective step I have proposed a national economic

As one corrective step I have proposed a national economic council, to be composed of men thoroughly trained and equipped to consider problems of labor, agriculture, industry, finance, transportation, and scientific management as related to changes which portation, and scientific management as related to changes which will continue to come in the development of our highly mechanized system of production. It is not proposed in the bill now pending that the council shall have power to coerce any industry by curtailing production, fixing prices, or by any similar device.

But such a council could do much by intelligent economic planning to guard against violent swings in the business cycle.

The Federal Government may be unable to prevent depressions, but when a depression is obviously approaching it is the duty of those in authority at Washington to put up storm signals. And when a depression is here the Federal Government, equally with the cities and States, should share the burden of saving human victims of economic calamities and governmental mistakes.

victims of economic calamities and governmental mistakes.

Up to this time not a dollar of Federal funds has been made available for this purpose to supplement funds raised for the most part by taxation on real estate in the several States. A bipartisan combination in the Senate last month defeated the bill to assist cities, counties, and States in meeting the problem of unemployment relief. I still believe that Congress will not adjourn without passing such legislation.

Unless the Federal Government does its share in this emergency the social progress we have made in raising the standard of living in this country will be lost. For years to come we shall be paying the price in the breakdown of health, stunted and undernouring the price in the breakdown of health, stunted and undernourished children, and disintegration of the moral fiber of millions of our citizens. We are in the midst of a disaster comparable to earthquake, flood, and fire, and quite as far removed from control of the individual in its causes and effects. Yet there are those who contend that National Government should not place a share of the burden of relief upon corporations and individuals paying income and inheritance taxes.

The so-called reconstruction program sponsored by the administration and the coalition in Congress has had the right of way at this session. These measures seek to meet the present emergency by tinkering with the banking system and loaning the credit of the Government to railroads, banks, and insurance companies. Loaning money to railroads to refinance bonds which are coming due may temporarily prevent them from going into the hands of receivers. But it will not produce an additional ton of traffic nor add a dollar to their revenues.

traffic nor add a dollar to their revenues.

Loaning Government credit, even to the extent of $2,000,000,000, will not bring orders for goods, nor will it increase pay rolls or the earnings of industrial corporations. Loans to the Steel Corporations of the steel of tion, for instance, will not produce an order for a ton of steel.

we are to stimulate recovery, we must create purchasing power in the hands of the masses of people.

I have proposed use of Government credit to finance the expansion of Federal, State, county, and municipal public works programs. Inauguration of such a program will provide work directly and indirectly for 4,500,000 people. Wages thus distributed will be spent immediately for purchase of food, clothing, shoes, and other commodities. Such a construction program will result in the control of the state orders for steel, cement, brick, stone, lumber, and other building materials. Transportation of these materials will increase the materials. Transportation of these materials are realized as the railroads.

Farmers will benefit both through a stiffening of commodity prices and through ability to pay debts with dollars more nearly approximating the value of the dollar at the time these debts were incurred.

It has been contended by opponents of this legislation that a bond issue of this size could not be sold without disastrous effect upon outstanding obligations of the Government and the security market. The answers to that argument are that the bonds would not be issued all at one time but only as funds were required. Also they would be sold by popular subscription in small denominations to the general public through an organized campaign. In the Liberty bond campaigns we sold $25,000,000,000—and this for the purpose of destruction!

the purpose of destruction!

There is, in fact, no lack of demand for Government securities at an adequate rate of interest. The recent issue of short-term securities by the Treasury was oversubscribed more than $2,500,-000,000. Finally, it should be emphasized that inauguration of this great public-works program will result in employment of millions in enterprises which, for the most part, do not produce consumption goods. Thus the wages provided would represent a net gain in lifting consuming power to a level more nearly approaching our capacity to produce ing our capacity to produce.

We must also create unemployment reserves. Capital already has a measure of security against times of depression when capital lies idle. Enormous surpluses built up during periods of prosperity by corporations are used as unemployment benefits to capital tal. One who gives the best years of his or her life in honest, intelligent work is helping to build up an industry just as invested capital helps to build it up.

Created on a sound basis, unemployment reserves will be a spur to stabilization of industry by industry, just as workmen's compensation laws resulted in reduction of accidents by industry.

To meet increased responsibilities of Government and to reduce deficit, increased burdens of taxation must be assumed by Federal taxpayers. Progressives secured enactment of the graduated income and inheritance tax system by the National Government. That system is based on the sound principle that taxes should be levied in progressive. should be levied in proportion to ability of taxpayers to carry the

The reactionary administration and its bipartisan supporters in Congress propose to balance the Budget by imposition of a general congress propose to balance the Budget by imposition of a general sales tax. Progressives have opposed this method of taxation ever since it was first proposed by Secretary Mellon and Senator Smoot shortly after the war, because it places the greatest burden upon those least able to bear it, and because a tax upon consumption will prove a further handicap to restoration of business activity. In the brief time available to-night I have tried only to suggest the point of view of progressives in relation to national issues, and to outline their position upon a few of the specific questions that are now pressing for solution.

I agree with Phil in the conclusion that what we are trying to do is to preserve the heritage of democratic principles handed down from one generation to another since Thomas Jefferson expressed them in the Declaration of Independence.

Those of us who believe in fundamental principles of democracy can not be unmindful of the challenge which confronts it in the can not be unmindful of the challenge which confronts it in the world to-day. In Russia we have a dictatorship from the left; in Italy a dictatorship from the right. While these dictatorships may have entirely different objectives, they are the counterpart of the despotism of kings as applied to problems of government in centuries gone by. In all history, whenever dictatorships have been created, all things we hold dear in a democratic form of government are trampled under foot—free speech, a free press, freedom of religion and assembly—go by the board.

I recognize the complexity of the problems that confront us to-day. But it is my firm belief that if we apply the same fundamental principles to the control of our economic life that our forbears applied to the problems of government we can and we forbears applied to the problems of government we can and we will solve the problems of this generation and build for the future economic security of all the people.

BRITISH DEBT SETTLEMENT

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, it is believed that the statement about to be made relates to a subject of great interest and importance. The announcement in to-day's press, apparently on the authority of the administration, that the first official action of the newly appointed ambassador to the Court of St. James, Mr. Andrew W. Mellon, will be to reopen negotiations on the war-debt situation, with a view to readjusting the contracts now in force, so that Great Britain and other debtor foreign governments will be relieved from the hardship of paying war-time and postwar obligations in depreciated currencies, prompts the suggestion that disturbance of existing agreements by the United States through its diplomatic agents may prove unwise and harmful from every standpoint of the interest of our own people.

The article published in this morning's Washington Post from the pen of Mr. Horan declares:

The new American ambassador to Great Britain is very sympathetic to the financial straits of the British. Mr. Mellon believes Great Britain is under a very great hardship in being forced to pay its war-time and postwar obligations in a depreciated cur-

Our ambassador is also quoted as saying that when the British debt settlement was made its present value was 80 per cent of the total amount due prior to funding, and that-

It becomes apparent from the standpoint of the British taxpayer he is asked not only to meet the obligation as established by our Debt Commission but an amount considerably in excess of such

Is it the policy of the administration to accept payment of obligations due from foreigners in depreciated currencies while requiring payment of obligations from our own citizens in gold or currency which is constantly appreciating in purchasing power?

Why not look at the subject from the standpoint of the American taxpayer rather than from that of the British taxpayer? Is the interest of the British taxpayer the primary concern of the administration in this distressing period?

With the annual deficit of approximately two and a quarter billion dollars facing the Treasury and with the greatest difficulty confronting Congress in efforts to balance the Budget in spite of numerous demands for emergency appropriations, some of which probably must be made, this Government is going out of its way to reduce the amount which may be received from foreign debtor governments for the purpose of relieving their taxpayers from hardship and financial strain! Why is it that the ambassador of the United States initiates the effort to reduce war debts?

By abandoning the gold standard and depreciating their currencies governments which are in debt to the United States have obtained a great advantage over us as competitors in foreign commerce! One of the penalties of the policy referred to is found in meeting gold payments. Is an effort to be made to commit the United States to the absurd and impossible undertaking of paying the losses which foreign governments will incur by reason of changes in their financial policies—policies which on the whole seem fruitful of gain to them and disadvantage to us?

Any reduction of debt settlements, especially when proposed by Mr. Mellon, will require very careful consideration by the Congress in order to safeguard the best interests of the Government which Mr. Mellon is presumed to represent

Mr. President, I ask leave to print the entire article appearing in the Washington Post of this date, written by Mr. Harold J. T. Horan, in substantiation of the statement that there is an implication that the article is written with the approval of former Secretary, now Ambassador Mellon, and other high authorities in the administration, and also in fairness to the author of the article and those whom he quotes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The article is as follows:

[From the Washington Post, Thursday, March 17, 1932]

MELLON SLATED TO RENEW DEST TALK IN LONDON—REPARATIONS WORK TO BE FIRST ON PROGRAM OF NEW AMBASSADOR—FINAL AGREEMENT ON ISSUE HOPED FOR—ADJUSTMENT ACCEPTABLE TO BOTH UNITED STATES AND EUROPE IS ANTICIPATED

By Harold J. T. Horan

Ambassador Andrew W. Mellon will reopen negotiations on the debt situation, particularly with regard to the British debt to the United States, as soon as he has presented his letters of credence to King George, it became known here yesterday. The former Secretary of the Treasury will leave for Pittsburgh to-day to wind up some details of his business and then will sail for London the end of the month.

The next few months will see what is hoped to be the final and definite adjustment of the decade-old debt question. The post-poned Lausanne conference will meet in June. France, England, and Germany will sit around another council table in a final effort to determine just how much Germany will pay the former allies. The reelection of President von Hindenburg as a foregone conclusion will tend to create an atmosphere of "sweet reasonableness" instead of the hitherto uncompromising chauvinism that has prevailed.

In the entire history of the debt question the former Secretary of the Treasury has been most intimately connected. Ever since he entered his first Cabinet Ambassador Mellon has successively treated with the British, the French, and the Italian Governments in the funding of their war-time borrowings from this country. He is therefore in a privileged position to advise on the best possible method of solution.

ATTENDED MORATORIUM SESSION

Last summer while he was Secretary of the Treasury, he was requested by President Hoover to attend the conferences of governmental chiefs in London which decided on the application of the Hoover moratorium.

The Hoover moratorium expires next June. While the present temper of Congress very definitely indicates a positive refusal to an extension of the debt holiday, some form of financial adjustment will be necessary. Several European nations, fortunately not the most important debtor nations of the United States, have shown alarming signs of financial insolvency. Hungary and Austria are virtually in a state of financial default. Bulgaria, one of the former German allies, only raised herself yesterday from impending collapse by an all-night session of the cabinet, which endeavored to find ways and means of postponing payment of the small sum of $266,000 in national interest charges.

For the month of February Germany's favorable balance of trade amounted to $20,000,000 and the fixed charges on her indebtedness amounted to $40,000,000. The British pound is still vacillating below par and, paradoxically enough, its recent rise was deplored, not applauded, by British financial authorities.

SYMPATHETIC TO BRITAIN

The new American ambassador to Great Britain is very sympathetic to the financial status of the British. Mr. Mellon believes Great Britain is under a very great hardship in being forced to pay its war-time and postwar obligations in a depreciated currency. Last December, while he was still Secretary of the Treasury, he declared:

"Take the case of Great Britain, our best customer, which even in the depression year 1930 took $678,000,000 worth of American agricultural and industrial product.

"Take the case of Great Britain, our best customer, which even in the depression year 1930 took $678,000,000 worth of American agricultural and industrial products. The economic and financial changes of the past year have immensely increased the burden of her payments to us. The series of events through which Great Britain was forced off the gold standard are too recent to require enumeration.

"All debts to Great Britain from foreign governments, except reparations payments, which are not being collected at all this year, are payable in sterling. Her debts to us are payable in gold dollars. The combined effect of these unfavorable factors results in an enormously increased burden for the people of Great Britain.

"When the British debt settlement was made it was estimated that its present value at a 4½ per cent interest rate was 80 per cent of the total amount due prior to funding. If the amount to be raised in pounds sterling to meet the obligations to us in dollars is increased by 47 per cent—the difference between the pound at par and the pound at $3.315—it becomes apparent that from the standpoint of the British taxpayer he is asked to meet not only the obligation as established by our Debt Commission but an amount considerably in excess of such obligation."

Although Congress resolutely declined to bring to life the War Debt Funding Commission to determine the capacity to pay of the

Although Congress resolutely declined to bring to life the War Debt Funding Commission to determine the capacity to pay of the various debtor nations, Ambassador Mellon still believes that some investigation of the economic factors which they face should be made in the interests of debtor and creditor.

He will very probably bring to the economic plight of European debtors of this country a harmonious, well-thought-out plan of action which will relieve them of a portion of their indebtedness to us and at the same time maintain the ratio between European debt payments and the American tax rate.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I do not expect to add anything to what the senior Senator from Arkansas [Mr. Robinson] has submitted to the Senate with respect to press reports this morning with reference to Ambassador Mellon and his proposal to take up with the British Government as soon as he has presented his credentials the matter of the modification or reduction of the debt owed by Great Britain to the Government of the United States. However, I do want heartly to join the Senator in his statement, and to express my own views with reference to that particular matter.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, will the Senator from Texas yield to me?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Texas yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. CONNALLY. I shall yield in just a moment. I should like to have the clerk read the underscored portions of the newspaper statement which I send to the desk.

Mr. SMOOT. Am I correct in understanding the Senator to say that the former Secretary of the Treasury proposed the course that was indicated by the Senator from Arkansas?

Mr. CONNALLY. That is correct. I refer to the present ambassador to Great Britain, Mr. Mellon, the former Secretary of the Treasury. If the Senator will read the newspaper report, portions of which I have asked to have read at the desk, I think he will understand the matter more clearly.

Mr. SMOOT. I have never heard of it, and I was wondering whether the Senator from Texas had any evidence that it was other than simply a newspaper report as to Mr. Mellon's attitude.

Mr. CONNALLY. The Senator from Texas has not been in communication with the ambassador to Great Britain, but this report appears in this morning's issue of the Washington Post, which comes more nearly to being the official gazette of the administration than any journal of which I know anything.

Mr. SMOOT. It is a newspaper report, and I do not say that it is true or false, because I do not know; but I wanted to know whether the Senator had any definite information as to its authenticity.

as to its authenticity.

Mr. CONNALLY. The Senator from Texas knows no more than what is in the newspaper report. I shall ask the Senator from Utah if he agrees with the reported attitude of the ambassador to Great Britain?

Mr. SMOOT. I do not know whether it is his attitude.
Mr. CONNALLY. Well, if it is his attitude, does the Senator from Utah agree with it?

Mr. SMOOT. I need not state again to the Senate my position. All Senators know that I am against the cancellation of these debts.

Mr. CONNALLY. I wish the Senator would speak loudly enough for the reporters in the gallery to hear him.

Mr. SMOOT. The reporters can get what I say.

Mr. CONNALLY. What is the Senator's answer?

Mr. SMOOT. Just what it has always been. I am opposed to the cancellation of the foreign debts.

Mr. CONNALLY. Or their reduction?

Mr. SMOOT. Or their reduction.

Mr. CONNALLY. Or a reduction?

Mr. SMOOT. Or a reduction.

Mr. CONNALLY. I thank the Senator.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the Secretary will read, as requested.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Ambassador Andrew W. Mellon will reopen negotiations on the debt situation, particularly with regard to the British debt to the United States, as soon as he has presented his letters of credence to King George, it became known here yesterday.

The new American ambassador to Great Britain is very sympathetic to the financial straits of the British. Mr. Mellon believes Great Britain is under a very great hardship in being forced to pay its war-time and postwar obligations in a depreciated currency.

Although Congress resolutely declined to bring to life the War Debt Funding Commission to determine the capacity to pay of the various debtor nations, Ambassador Mellon still believes that the various debtor nations, Ambassador Mellon still believes that some investigation of the economic factors which they face should be made in the interests of debtor and creditor.

He will very probably bring to the economic plight of European debtors of this country a harmonious, well-thought-out plan of action which will relieve them of a portion of their indebtedness to us and at the same time maintain the ratio between European debt payments and the American tax rate.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, the Senator from Utah [Mr. Smoot] has raised the question as to whether that report reflects the real views of the ambassador to Great Britain, Mr. Mellon. It is much more important to know whether or not the report represents the views of the administration. If the Senator from Utah is seriously interested in the prosecution of a quest for that information, knowing his intimacy with the White House, he will have no difficulty whatever in ascertaining what the administration's attitude is. I assume, in view of the fact that this statement comes from the Washington Post, which is probably closer to the White House than is any other journal in the United States, that until denied it very likely represents the real attitude of Mr. Mellon and the attitude of the administration.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me for a moment?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Texas yield to the Senator from New York?

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield. Mr. COPELAND. Is it not a fact that within the last few days Great Britain has succeeded in paying many millions of dollars on her debt? If that is the case, as I am sure it is, she can not be quite in the calamitous economic condition that we have been led to believe.

Mr. CONNALLY. I thank the Senator from New York. I have noted in the press statements to that effect and conforming to the views which have just been uttered by the Senator from New York.

Mr. President, I want to protest against the conduct of Mr. Mellon as ambassador to Great Britain in defying the expressed will of the Congress-expressed in the most solemn form in this body within the last three months. It will be recalled that when the moratorium resolution was presented to the Congress and enacted at the request of the administration, it carried this provision:

SEC. 5. It is hereby expressly declared to be against the policy of Congress that any of the indebtedness—

Not all of it, but "any of the indebtedness"- of foreign countries to the United States should be in any manner canceled or reduced; and nothing in this joint resolution shall be construed as indicating a contrary policy or as implying that favorable consideration will be given at any time to a change in the policy hereby declared.

Mr. President, that was the expression of both branches of the Congress, contained in a joint resolution which was approved by the President of the United States on the 23d day of December, 1931. Can there be anything more clear in its language? Can there be anything evidencing more lucidly the purpose of the Congress? Can there be anything announcing a policy in terms more distinct or more definite than that declaration of the Congress?

To reinforce that position, it will be recalled that the President of the United States in a formal message to Congress requested that Congress re-create the World War Debt Commission for the purpose of undertaking in an official. authorized fashion, what Mr. Mellon now undertakes to do either on his own authority or on the authority of the President of the United States. It will be recalled by Senators that when the President requested the re-creation of the World War Debt Commission, Senators on both sides of the Chamber protested against it, and that Congress refused to re-create the World War Debt Commission.

Mr. President, by what authority does this new ambassador to Great Britain assume the power, immediately upon the presentation of his credentials to King George, on his own initiative, as was so well suggested by the Senator from Arkansas, to propose a reduction or a modification of the debt? It is true, Mr. President, that Great Britain has gone off the gold standard, and her currency has temporarily declined in value, but these war debts are not expected to be paid in a moment; they stretch over a period of 62 years from the beginning of payment; and shall this Government now settle the debts that are to be paid in the years to come on the basis of the present condition of the world and forgive Great Britain and other nations of Europe a portion of their indebtedness because of a temporary decline in the value of their currencies?

Mr. President, are we forgiving our domestic debtors here at home because our currency is still high in value and commodities are low? Are we taking advantage of this period of distress to say to our people that their obligations shall be scaled down? Senators need not hesitate a moment as to that conclusion; we know that it is not true.

Mr. President, Mr. Hoover was elected in 1928 upon a Republican platform. I wish to quote briefly the pronouncement of that platform with reference to World War debts. I hold in my hand a copy of that platform, from which I quote briefly:

We have steadfastly opposed and will continue to oppose cancellation of foreign debts.

Skipping a portion of the platform, it then concludes with this paragraph:

The people can rely on the Republican Party to adhere to a foreign-debt policy now definitely established and clearly understood both at home and abroad.

Mr. President, what power or what moral right has Mr. Mellon to repudiate that platform pledge? What right has the administration, in the face of the solemn pronouncements of the Congress, and in repudiation of its own pledged faith to the American people, now, by devious diplomatic methods, to undertake to do what the Congress has said shall not be done?

Why should Mr. Mellon be so concerned about the ability of the British people to pay their obligations at this time? I want to say that I have a great admiration for the British people, and it is through no malice or ill-will toward that great people that I speak here to-day; but it is because of my interest in the American people rather than in our debtors in other lands that I have assumed to occupy the attention of the Senate for a short time.

Mr. President, under the management of Mr. Mellon, under his financial policies as Secretary of the Treasury during the past two years, this country has been plunged into a Treasury deficit larger than that of any other great country on earth. We are told by the administration that we must balance the Budget, and that in order to balance the Budget | He is supposed to be the servant first of the President, and we shall have to lay upon the backs of the American people $1,100,000,000 of new taxes—$1,100,000,000 of increased burdens upon the American people in the tax bill that will soon be before this body. Methods of taxation which have never before been seriously proposed are now proposed in order to get out of the people of the United States this staggering sum of new taxation.

I am concerned with the necessity of the Congress at this time to cut down its expenditures, to cut down appropriations, in order to lessen, in so far as we may, the great burden which much inevitably be placed upon the American people. Is this any time to forego or to scale down foreign debts in behalf of foreign debtors when our own people will be laboring under a load of taxation heavier than they have ever staggered under in the past 50 years?

The Senator from Utah [Mr. Smoot] realizes the great necessity of the Government for money. The Senator from Utah is not blind to the fact that we have distress in our own land as grim as that which exists in any land in Europe. The Senator from Utah realizes that our own people will be called upon to make sacrifices and contributions to the National Treasury that will pinch them and will gall them as severely as the taxation of any other nation on the face of the earth will affect its people.

The Senator from Utah knows that unless we substantially reduce Government appropriations at this time we shall probably be forced to the expedient, however distasteful it may be, of reducing for the time being the salaries of all Government employees above a minimum rate in the lower brackets. However distasteful that action might be, I am ready to vote for such a reduction of the salaries of Federal employees for the next ensuing year. I am ready to reduce my own salary.

I challenge the right of Mr. Mellon, I challenge the right of the President, I challenge the right of any arm of this Government, to defy the expressed will of the Congress in the matter of entering upon negotiations for either the reduction or the forgiveness of foreign debts.

What more can the Congress do? How more clearly can it express its intention? I would remind Senators that the foreign debts can not legally be settled except with the consent of the Congress of the United States. How is it that Mr. Mellon has grown so great? As Secretary of the Treasury it is commonly and well understood throughout the country that he has dominated three administrations for 12 long years as to finances. He is no longer, however, Secretary of the Treasury. He is an ambassador to a foreign country, speaking for and representing the President of the United States. I call upon the President, and I call upon his advisers on the other side of the Chamber; I call particularly upon the Senator from Utah [Mr. Smoot], who is interested, as to the truth of this statement; I challenge him to deny, in the name of the President, this pronouncement which is supposed to express the views of Mr. Mellon.

Mr. President, the Senator from California [Mr. Johnson] a few days ago, in a splendid address to the Senate, laid before you the sordid tale of the international bankers foisting upon the American people several billions of dollars in foreign securities. He is entitled to the thanks of the country and the thanks of the Senate for tearing the mask from this drama of exploitation, this revelation in many cases of fraud itself. Of course, there is a school of international bankers who favor the cancellation of foreign debts. There are substantial interests in America who would like to see them scaled down. When it comes to a choice between getting back their own money from foreign countries, from private corporations, from private individuals, and foreign governments on the one hand, and, on the other, having the American people repaid what these governments owe us, of course, as between those two alternatives they want to get back their own money.

But, Mr. President, Mr. Mellon is supposed to represent the people of the United States. He is not supposed to go to London as the ambassador of the international bankers.

in a larger way of the people of the United States.

I solemnly protest against this course of policy. I protest against it now, particularly, because of the condition in which our own country finds itself.

Go out, Senators, over this Nation of ours. Go through your morning's mail. You will there see revealed a tale of hardship and of suffering which you have never before seen portrayed in all of your public service. Contemplate the load of taxation that is almost crushing the economic life out of the United States-local taxation, county taxation, State taxation, and Federal taxation. Then con-template the possibility of wiping out billions of dollars of foreign debts, and superimposing that new burden on the backs of the American people.

It is not just. It is not right. It is not in keeping with the solemn announcement of the policies of the Congress. No President, no ambassador, no matter what his credentials, no matter what his authorization from his chief, has any power or any moral right to do that which the law solemnly says he shall not do.

Mr. President, if this be the attitude and the intention of the new ambassador to England, I desire to add my voice to the voice of the Senator from Arkansas in denouncing it. If these statements reflect the views of this administration, I want to protest against them as a violation of the administration's own solemn political pledge, as a defiance of the Congress in its well-expressed views of policy, and as a betrayal of the interests of the American taxpayers and the American people in this hour of crisis and in this hour of tragedy and in this hour of suffering, when we are confronted with the necessity of lopping off appropriations and in addition placing upon the backs of our people a load of taxation greater than has ever been imposed upon them in the last half of a century.

Mr. BRATTON obtained the floor.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me? Mr. BRATTON. I yield to the Senator from Pennsyl-

Mr. REED. I did not have the advantage of hearing all that has been said by the distinguished Senator from Texas, but I gather that he has been reproaching the administration because of the article which appeared in this morning's Washington Post to the effect that Mr. Mellon had been instructed to reopen negotiations with regard to the intergovernmental debts due to this country.

I am authorized to say that there is not a word of truth in the article.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REED. Yes.

Mr. CONNALLY. Authorized by whom?

Mr. REED. By the President.

Mr. CONNALLY. I am glad to hear the Senator say so. Mr. REED. I am authorized to say that there is not a word of truth in the article; that the subject of debt negotiations or debt reconsideration has not even been discussed with Mr. Mellon since it was first suggested that he should go to London as ambassador.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REED. The Senator from New Mexico has the floor. Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Will the Senator from New Mexico yield to me to make an inquiry of the Senator from Pennsylvania?

Mr. BRATTON. I yield to the Senator from Arkansas. Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I thank the Senator.

The article to which reference was first made by myself, before the Senator from Pennsylvania came into the Chamber, and later by the Senator from Texas, a part of the latter's remarks being heard by the Senator from Pennsylvania, did not make the statement that Mr. Mellon had been instructed by the President, nor did it in any way, except by implication, seek to commit the administration; but it did define what it said had been definitely learned yesterday would be the policy and action of Mr. Mellon. In substantiation of the declaration the article quotes literally, or purports to quote literally, the language of Mr. Mellon himself.

Among other things, as stated a few moments ago, it is declared that Mr. Mellon is strongly in sympathy with the British Government and with British taxpayers because they are compelled to pay in depreciated currencies their war and postwar obligations to the United States. The article asserts that it is known that Mr. Mellon, immediately upon filing his credentials with the King, will open negotiations for the readjustment of the debt settlements, having in view the increased burdens imposed upon foreign governments by reason of the reduced value of their currencies.

The question I wanted to ask the Senator from Pennsylvania—and I think the Senate would take the declaration of fact of the Senator from Pennsylvania as conclusive—is, Does he know whether the declaration actually contained in the article is true or untrue? Does he know whether the quotation attributed to Mr. Mellon is true or false? Is he prepared to declare that Mr. Mellon will not, either immediately upon filing his credentials or subsequently, begin negotiations for the purposes referred to? That is the materiality of the issue I raised.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, if the Senator from New Mexico will be patient with me—

Mr. BRATTON. I yield further to the Senator.

Mr. REED. Mr. Mellon emphatically will not begin negotiations for reconsideration of this debt. The article, which I thought had been put in by the Senator from Texas—

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I published it in the Record myself.

Mr. REED. I did not know the Senator from Arkansas had spoken on this subject at all. The article states that as soon as Mr. Mellon has presented his credentials he will open up negotiations regarding the debt. That is absolutely and unqualifiedly untrue. There is no expectation that he will, at that time or at any other time, so far as we now know, open up any such negotiations.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REED. Just a moment. As for the authenticity of the quotation at the end of the article, I have no knowledge. There are no facts stated in the quotation which everybody does not know. It is a mere arithmetical calculation of the effect of the pound going off the gold standard, which would have to be made fresh every day as quotations changed. I do not see any value in it whatever. Nor do I see any evidence in that of any intention on Mr. Mellon's part, independently of instructions, of undertaking such negotiations as have been mentioned.

Furthermore, we all ought to bear in mind that under the present arrangement Great Britain is receiving considerably more from the Continent than she is paying us, and it is quite beside the mark to be discussing the effect of the British debt to us upon the British taxpayer, because he is not contributing one penny to the installments Great Britain is obliged to pay to us.

It is also true that as a result of going off the gold standard, the British, and other governments which have taken that course, have greatly and quickly revived their foreign commerce. They are taking trade which the United States can not acquire by reason of the very fact that their currencies have been depreciated by reason of the very fact that they have gone off the gold standard.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, I think that is entirely true. I concur in that declaration, and I made a similar statement myself.

Mr. REED. Of course that is so. Will not the Senator now let me finish? Then I will sit down.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. No; I want to ask the Senator a question that is pertinent.

Mr. REED. Let me finish this.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Certainly.

Mr. REED. By going off the gold standard Great Britain has hurt our trade very substantially, just as she has hurt French trade and has hurt the trade of every competitor.

By doing that she has made an invisible cut in the wages of her people by about 30 per cent; and any nation which can do that will, of course, have a favored position in the competitive situation in the world.

Furthermore, she has put on a high tariff, finally learning by our example, and the revival of trade consequent from that is very marked, and the establishment of new industries in Great Britain is very marked. So she has had many benefits from her action, as well as many disadvantages.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, will the Senator from New Mexico yield to me for just a moment?

Mr. BRATTON. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. The Senator from Pennsylvania has expressly and unqualifiedly declared that the statement in the article to the effect that Mr. Mellon will immediately open negotiations for readjustment of the debt settlement and for reduction of the amounts is untrue. He therefore puts the author of this article and, in a measure, the administration paper which published it on its front page, the Washington Post, in the attitude of deliberately misrepresenting the administration.

The Senator undertook to belittle, as inconsequential, the quotation upon which the author of the article, Mr. Horan, rested in part his conclusion, and it is that to which I wish to call his attention, and to the attention of those who are interested in this important subject, as almost conclusive evidence that the statement made by Mr. Horan is true. The only way it can be repudiated is by repudiating the quotation, and I am going to read that quotation:

Last December, while he was still Secretary of the Treasury, he declared—

Then comes the quotation, which is strangely significant, in view of the attitude taken by the Senator from Pennsylvania as the spokesman for Mr. Mellon and for the President. The quotation is:

Take the case of Great Britain, our best customer, which even in the depression year 1930 took $678,000,000 worth of American agricultural and industrial products. The economic and financial changes of the past year have immensely increased the burden of her payments to us. The series of events through which Great Britain was forced off the gold standard are too recent to require enumeration.

All debts to Great Britain from foreign governments except reparations payments, which are not being collected at all this year, are payable in sterling. Her debts to us are payable in gold dollars. The combined effect of these unfavorable factors results in an enormously increased burden for the people of Great Britain.

in an enormously increased burden for the people of Great Britain. When the British debt settlement was made it was estimated that its present value at a 4½ per cent interest rate was 80 per cent of the total amount due prior to funding. If the amount to be raised in pounds sterling to meet the obligations to us in dollars is increased by 47 per cent—the difference between the pound at par and the pound at $3.315—it becomes apparent that from the standpoint of the British taxpayer he is asked to meet not only the obligation as established by our Debt Commission, but an amount considerably in excess of such obligation.

That is the end of the quotation of the statement attributed to Mr. Mellon. That is published by the author of the article referred to as a literal quotation from Mr. Mellon, and if it be a literal quotation from Mr. Mellon—and Mr. Mellon has not repudiated the attitude assumed in that statement—then the declaration by the Senator from Pennsylvania that the article is without justification or foundation in fact is itself without justification or foundation in fact.

No other construction than that placed upon the language of Mr. Mellon by the writer is capable of being applied to the language which he used. Mr. Mellon's object or concern in that statement was relief of the taxpayers of Great Britain. His concern was to reduce the debts so as to relieve the debtors of at least as much of the burden incident to a depreciation in their currencies as is found from an average of the amount which the currencies have declined.

Mr. KEAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I have not the floor, but I yield as far as I am able to.

Mr. KEAN. I would like to say that as United States bonds have gone down more than 20 per cent, and as Great Britain can pay her debt to us in United States bonds, they get the advantage of that decline in United States bonds.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. The Senator's statement does strengthen the justice of my contention when I say that the attitude of the Secretary, as set forth in his own language, is simply beyond my power to comprehend.

He is the ambassador of the United States. He assumes that it is in order to relieve British taxpayers, and, of course, in order to increase the burden on American taxpayers; and we all know they are in a condition now where they can not pay the losses which foreign governments incurred in wresting from us our commerce.

There are advantages and disadvantages in going off the gold standard. If it had not been an advantage to do so, in all probability these governments would not have taken that course. Perhaps their primary purpose was to increase their commerce with countries which could not meet their requirements under the gold standard. And what this means is that we are relinquishing their obligations to us and transferring the burden to our own people, while their ships are sailing into all the ports of the world and taking commerce in which we might share.

Mr. REED. Mr. President-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from New Mexico yield to the Senator from Pennsylvania?

Mr. BRATTON. I yield to the Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. REED. We are letting our imaginations rather than our eyesight read the statement. In the first place, it could not very well have been made by Mr. Mellon, the ambassador, because he speaks of the pound being worth $3.311/4. Since Mr. Mellon has been ambassador the pound has been very much higher than that. At present it is around $3.65.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REED. I vield.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I am amazed at the Senator from Pennsylvania resorting to an argument like that. The article itself specifies the time of the quotation. It does not pretend to quote Mr. Mellon as ambassador. It says-and I will read it again, if the Senator will permit-

Mr. REED. I see it.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. It says "last December." I read that. That was the first I read when through the courtesy of the Senator from New Mexico I took the floor a few moments ago.

Last December, while he was still Secretary of the Treasury.

For some reason which I do not think is easily understood the Senator undertakes to make a play in the argument and discredit the accuracy of the quotation by saying that it could not have been made by Mr. Mellon as ambassador. It did not purport to be made by Mr. Mellon as ambassador. It was made in December last, and everybody here knows, and the article states, that it was made while he was Secretary of the Treasury. That was the reason for my declaration that unless the Secretary has retracted the statement it is presumed to reflect his attitude now.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, if the Senator will be patient with me a little more-

Mr. BRATTON. I yield.

Mr. REED. It is only by our imagination that we read into this quotation any implication that the burden should be taken from the British taxpayer and put upon the American taxpayer. There is nothing in the statement to that effect. Congress has made it very plain that it is not going to agree to the burden being taken off the British taxpayer and put on the American taxpayer.

Mr. GLASS. The Senator means this Congress? Mr. REED. I mean this Congress, and I mean that it is entirely unlikely for many years to come that there will be a Congress which by a majority vote will adopt any other

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. REED. Certainly.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I did not quote Mr. Horan as saying that the release or cancellation of a part of the debts would transfer the burden to the people of the United States. I made that declaration myself. I would like to have the Senator, who is an expert in these matters and much better informed than I am, correct me if I have reached the wrong conclusion. That is an obligation to the United States, and if we release any part of these debts why is it not true, in a fair sense, that the people of the United States will be taxed just that much more to make up the

Mr. REED. No; the Senator did not hear me or did not understand me. What I said was that there is no implication even in the article that Mr. Mellon or President Hoover proposes to take that burden off the back of the British taxpayer and put it on the back of the American taxpayer. Of course, the Senator from Arkansas is right, and we who have said the same thing so often before, I think, are right when we say that if the foreign taxpayer does not pay his just obligation the American taxpayer will have to pay it for him. Somebody is going to pay these World War debts. The question is whether they will be paid by the people who got the benefit of them or will be paid by the American taxpayer who is merely an accommodation indorser and did not get any benefit from them. That is the question. Congress has decided that clearly without any partisan division whatsoever. We have practically unanimously agreed in both Houses of Congress that that burden must rest where it justly belongs, and that is on the shoulders of the countries who got the money, and that America ought not to cancel, it ought not to reduce, it ought not to forgive. It has already made concessions which are remarkable in their generosity, and the United States ought not to be asked to go further.

But what I rose to say is that the quotation-I do not know what its context was, I do not know how it came to be made—which appears in the article does not justify the conclusions drawn by the author of the article. When he states that Ambassador Mellon will at once open negotiations for a reconsideration of the debt he has drawn an erroneous conclusion, because the fact is Mr. Mellon will do no such thing.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, will the Senator from Pennsylvania yield?

Mr. REED. If I have the floor, I gladly yield to the Senator from Arkansas.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. For the time being the Senator from Pennsylvania has the floor.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. In the very beginning of the article, which prompted this discussion, it is stated:

Ambassador Andrew W. Mellon will reopen negotiations on the debt situation, particularly with regard to the British debt to the United States, as soon as he has presented his letters of credence to King George, it became known here yesterday.

Mr. REED. Will the Senator permit an interruption?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Certainly.

Mr. REED. What I rose to say was that if it "became known here yesterday," it did not become known to the President of the United States or to Mr. Mellon himself. Somebody else must have learned it other than the only people who could definitely know it.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. The language of the article plainly implies that the information came either from Mr. Mellon himself or sources close to him. Listen:

The former Secretary of the Treasury will leave for Pittsburgh to-day to wind up some details of his business and then will sail for London the end of the month. The next few months will see what is hoped to be the final and definite adjustment of the decade-old debt question-

And so forth, and so forth.

I said in the beginning that the plain implication of the article is that it was either issued at the instance or with the approval of the ambassador and other high authorities in the administration. To support the declaration that Mr. Mellon favors canceling a part of the debt, there is quoted a statement made by him in December, after the statute referred to by the Senator from Texas was enacted by the Congress, statement plainly indicates the purpose to try to secure a reduction of the debt or at least strong sympathy with that

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator from

New Mexico be good enough to yield to me?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from New Mexico has the floor, but the Chair holds that under the circumstances he has yielded the floor. However, the Chair will protect the Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. BRATTON. I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Texas is recognized.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, it was not through any fear the Chair would not protect the rights of the Senator from New Mexico that I made courteous reference to the Senator from New Mexico. I am aware of the willingness and the desire of the Chair to protect Senators at all times, and I congratulate him.

I could not get the Senator from Pennsylvania to yield. I wanted only to ask him a question. The Senator from Pennsylvania said, in answer to an inquiry, that he spoke with authority of the President in saying that Mr. Mellon is not going to do this thing.

Mr. REED. That is correct.

Mr. CONNALLY. The Senator from Pennsylvania realizes, of course, that Mr. Mellon is the servant of the President and as ambassador would have to observe the President's wishes, of course.

Mr. REED. Naturally.

Mr. CONNALLY. The Senator is aware, however, is he not, that the President of the United States does want to scale down the debts?

Mr. REED. I do not think he wants to do anything of the sort. I think he is just as strongly opposed to any sacrifice of American interests in that way as are some of us up here who talk so much about it.

Mr. CONNALLY. The Senator from Pennsylvania is certainly not ignorant of the President's message relating to foreign affairs delivered to the Congress on December 10 last, in which the President said this:

The Congress has shared with the Executive in the past in the consideration of questions arising from these debts. I am sure that it will commend itself to the Congress that the legislative branch of the Government should continue to share this re-sponsibility. In order that we should be in position to deal with the situation, I recommend the re-creation of the World War Foreign Debt Commission-

As an ornament? As a place to which to appoint his favored friends? As an agency to provide places for functionaries to indulge in ceremonials and pomp? Not at all. To do something! To do what?-

with authority to examine such problems as should arise in connection with those debts during the present economic emergency and to report to the Congress its conclusions and recommendations.

The Senator from Pennsylvania, as I recall, on the floor here in effect repudiated that pronouncement of the Presi-

Mr. REED. I did not repudiate it. I disagreed with it because I thought it would make a bad impression abroad and encourage hopes that would not be justified.

Mr. CONNALLY. Then the Senator from Pennsylvania disagreed with it. He disagreed with it because it disagreed with what he said a while ago about his attitude with respect to the foreign debts.

Mr. REED. Not in the slightest.

Mr. CONNALLY. Why, then, did the Senator disagree with it?

Mr. REED. Because I thought it was clearly not the President's intention to arouse such hope, I felt that the re-creation of the debt commission would lead to a revival of propaganda for cancellation. The President is no more in favor of cancellation than is the Senator from Texas or myself. The President does realize that some of our debtors are in trouble just as the debtors of banks are in trouble or the debtors of individuals are in trouble. He wanted this He ought to know Mr. Mellon's mind. I do not think Mr.

after the British had gone off the gold standard, and that | commission to help him deal intelligently with those cases of debtors who are in difficulty.

Mr. CONNALLY. I thank the Senator.

Mr. REED. If that had been the impression probable to be aroused abroad, I think I would have favored it; but I did not want to do anything that seemed to lean toward cancellation or toward a revival of this propaganda of charging everything to Uncle Sam.

Mr. CONNALLY. I thank the Senator.

Mr. REED. To be a statesman in Europe now all that is necessary is to think up some way of putting more burdens on the United States. I do not want to encourage that type of statesmanship.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. And to be a statesman in the United States now is to think up some way of imposing more burdens on the people of the United States.

Mr. REED. Not at all. I think when the sound and furor and smoke have swept away, the people will most highly appreciate those of us who have worked to keep down expenses and to keep down taxes.

Mr. CONNALLY. I thank the Senator from Pennsylvania for expressing with a reservation his precise language on the floor in which he disagreed very vitally and very sharply with the President's statement in his message to the Senate on December 10. The Senator now says that he disagreed with that, not because it would be misunderstood here but because it would be misunderstood abroad and would arouse fruitless and futile hopes of European governments to seek cancellation or reduction.

Mr. REED. And, if the Senator will permit me to interrupt him, I would like to say that I told the President so at the time.

Mr. CONNALLY. I thank the Senator. I am glad to yield to the Senator from Pennsylvania, though he did not see fit to yield to the Senator from Texas.

The Senator from Pennsylvania disagreed with the President's view because the language in the President's message appealed to his mind as being something with which he could not agree and which ought to be repudiated. There is not a clearer mind in the United States Senate than that of the Senator from Pennsylvania when he desires that it

Mr. President, the Senator from Pennsylvania repudiated the statement of his own President, with whom he is in such contact that he may almost instantaneously get information from the White House and rush here on the floor and give utterance to it. He expresses not a private disagreement with the President, but he expresses a public disagreement. Why? Because the English language is so plain that it was apparent to the Senator from Pennsylvania exactly what the President meant. He knew that the President of the United States did not mean to re-create the War Debt Funding Commission for nothing. He knew that it would produce something else besides visits to foreign capitals of commissioners to be entertained at dinners and parties and functions. He knew that any such proposal would be construed here, and he knew it would be construed in Europe as evidence of the willingness of Mr. Hoover and his administration to entertain proposals for modification and amendment of the war debts. The term "modification" is a euphonism. We may say all you want to do is to modify, but if we scratch further. down into the meaning of the term, we find "cancel"probably not entirely, but it means cancellation nevertheless.

I want to congratulate the Senator from Pennsylvania on disagreeing with he President. I congratulate him on his courage in standing out against his chief, in standing out against his chieftain who has a backbone of iron and a face of stone. I congratulate him for disagreeing, and I congratulate him this morning for uttering the sentiments he has uttered here to the effect that an act of Congress which we passed some time ago ought to be respected and that the solemn pronouncement of the lawmaking body ought to be enforced.

The Senator from Pennsylvania naturally wants to put as good a face as possible on the statements of Mr. Mellon.

Mellon knows the mind of the Senator from Pennsylvania, ! but I think the Senator from Pennsylvania ought to know Mr. Mellon's mind. If the sentiment referred to by the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. Robinson] in the quotation from the statement made last December-and it was a literal quotation, in quotation marks, from a statement made last December-if that were the utterance of Mr. Mellon then, how does the Senator from Pennsylvania know that that is not his sentiment now? The Senator from Pennsylvania has said the statements were not an expression of the ambassador, because he was not then the ambassador. Does the Senator from Pennsylvania mean that Mr. Mellon, when he goes to London and pulls off his American clothes and puts on his diplomatic clothes, thereby pulls off his intellectual raiment and assumes a new attitude of mind?

Mr. REED. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Texas yield to the Senator from Pennsylvania?

Mr. CONNALLY. Certainly.

Mr. REED. The point I was trying to make, and apparently was not successful in making, was that this quotation from Mr. Mellon was a mere statement of arithmetical truths which may have been true last December but which are not true to-day; that is all.

Mr. CONNALLY. And by which the Senator from Pennsylvania illustrates the great statesmanship of Mr. Mellon; in other words, because something was true in December with reference to foreign exchange Mr. Mellon would then have readjusted the war debts on that basis; and yet three months later we have a wholly different proposition, which illustrates, of course, Mr. Mellon's farseeing vision and his wise financial ability that resulted in plunging this country into a deficit of $3,000,000,000 in two years.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, will the Senator from Texas again vield?

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield.

Mr. REED. I congratulate the Senator from Texas on his far-seeing imagination, because there is not a word in the statement just quoted which advocates a reduction or a cancellation or a modification of the debt. I do not know what its context was. I should like to see that before I pass judgment on the whole statement.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I will say to the Senator from Pennsylvania that he exhibits in his interruptions and his conduct here on the floor the qualities of an excellent pleader, an excellent lawyer. He is quibbling now, and he is objecting to evidence on technicalities. That statement may or may not say in so many words, "Yes; I favor reducing the British debt," but anyone who will read it, anyone who will listen to its reading by the clerk or by the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. Robinson], will see in it an able bodied argument for the reduction of the British debt.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, will the Senator from Texas yield to me?

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. It could not have meant

Mr. CONNALLY. And if the Senator from Pennsylvania with all his forensic ability had made an argument here on the floor, with all due respect to the Senator, I do not see how it could have been much more forceful than the argument of the Secretary of the Treasury at that time, the present ambassador to Great Britain, in favor of scaling down the British debt. Did he talk about the plight of the American taxpayer? No. He talked about the plight of the British taxpayer and how burdensome and how onerous it would be if he had to pay the United States debt in full. If the British taxpayer does not pay the United States debt in full, who is going to pay the United States in full? forgiveness of the British taxpayer means a reduction in the debt; a reduction of the debt means an increase of the load of taxation upon the American people, and, regardless of the exact language of that statement, the Senator from Pennsylvania does little credit to the credulity and understanding of other Members of the Senate and little credit to his own fine powers of presenting matters on this floor when he says that it can not be deduced from that statement that Secretary Mellon was in favor of reducing the

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Pennsylvania a question. Mr. Laval visited this country last fall; and before he returned to France, a statement was given to the press that certain agreements had been reached. Among other agreements reported in the press to have been reached—and I have never seen the statement denied-was that the President had agreed with Mr. Laval that we would not consider the question of debts in the future except within the confines of the provisions of the Young plan. If that be true, I think it is a very important point in Mr. Laval's visit; and because the Senator was quoted in the press as taking part in the negotiations, I should like to know if the statement was correct.

Mr. REED. Will the Senator from Minnesota yield to me?

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Yes.

Mr. REED. I never have heard of such an agreement; I never have heard that such an agreement was made or even suggested. Of course, I do not know all that might have been in the mind of the President and of the President of the French Council, but I think that we might have heard of it if there had been such an agreement, and I never heard of it until this minute.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. It was quoted in the press.

Mr. REED. I did not see it quoted.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. There also was mentioned in the same dispatch-

Mr. REED. I may add that I feel as sure as one can be who did not sit in at all the conversations-I feel perfectly certain in my own mind that there never was any such agreement made or suggested.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. I am very glad to hear that. Another agreement was mentioned in the same news dispatch as having been entered into by the President and Mr. Laval to the effect that the United States would take no action whatever in Europe in the future without first consulting France.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I feel absolutely certain that there never was any such agreement made or suggested.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. I am very glad to hear that. Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, on my own individual responsibility I want to say a word in total disagreement with the views entertained and expressed on both sides of the Chamber.

Of course, if the ambassador to the Court of St. James made the statements ascribed to him, I think there can be no dissent from the proposition that it was a most inexpedient thing to do, if it did not involve a very distinct impropriety. However, I will not discuss that aspect of the

I totally disagree with the view of the Senator from Pennsylvania that the whole question involved here is one that relates to the payment to the last pound of flesh and the last drop of blood of the indebtedness to this country by foreign nations. Even if we strip the problem of every type of sentiment, that is not the case. As I conceive it, a very practical question is involved, or may be involved, and that is whether it were to the better advantage of this country to readjust the indebtedness rather than to insist upon the pound of flesh. I can very readily apprehend that circumstances hereafter may be such as to induce the Congress absolutely to reverse its apparent attitude of to-day on that question.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, will the Senator suggest why that should be done?

Mr. GLASS. Suppose such circumstances present themselves, what are we going to do about it? Suppose European nations should tell us in plain terms that they are unable to comply with the settlement, are we going to war to exact payment?

Mr. REED. Does the Senator wish an answer now or

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President-

Mr. GLASS. I yield. Mr. REED. To whom?

Mr. GLASS. To the Senator from Pennsylvania, as he rose first.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, obviously we are not going to war to collect the debts; obviously if conditions arose that changed the whole picture we would look at the conditions as they were; but I can not conceive of a combination of conditions that would warrant the cancellation of what is left of those just claims. When the Senator talks about the last pound of flesh he must refer to the Shakespearean character who demanded it, Uncle Shylock, and that is now our pet name in Europe. We have already waived a large part of the pound of flesh to every one of those countries.

Mr. GLASS. Oh, yes; I know by certain statistical manipulations we have made it appear that we have been extremely generous to those with whom we fought in the World War; but I do not admit it. The Senator from Pennsylvania can not conceive of such circumstances; but plainly the President of the United States does conceive of such circumstances, and it is my conviction that the Senator from Pennsylvania does not accurately represent the thought of the President of the United States on that problem.

Mr. REED. I never pretend to do so, Mr. President, except when I am specifically authorized to deny a story like this one.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GLASS. I yield.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. The Senator from Virginia has stated a hypothetical case, namely, that changed conditions may prompt foreign governments to represent to this Government that they can not meet their obligations to us, and in that event he asks what would be our attitude. My answer is that that is the vital point which I raised in the beginning of my argument, as everyone who heard me will remember. I complained bitterly of the initiation of a movement to reduce these debts in the interest of British taxpayers, and I am utterly unable to understand how anyone here can justify it.

Mr. GLASS. I am not in antagonism to anything the Senator from Arkansas has said. I say that if the former Secretary of the Treasury, the present ambassador to the Court of St. James, made these statements, I regard his act as one of great impropriety. I am not contesting that contention; but I am not willing to sit here any longer and hear the Senator from Pennsylvania make the broad declaration that the Congress is unanimously insistent upon exacting the last dollar that was provided under the plan of settlement, when I, myself, can very easily conceive that circumstances may arise, if they have not already arisen, which would make it imperative to our own practical interest to readjust this indebtedness. I do not assume here ever to speak for the President, but I am as perfectly convinced as I ever was of anything that the President of the United States does not share the utterly arbitrary and irrevocable attitude of the Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, has the Senator concluded? Mr. GLASS. Yes.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, may I say in that connection that I think the last statement of the Senator from Virginia is entirely correct. I think if the Senator from Pennsylvania would look into the matter, he will find that the President has expressed the view that these debts should be readjusted.

Mr. GLASS. And he was not among those who applauded the declaration to the contrary by the Senator from Pennsylvania on the floor of the Senate prior to the holiday recess.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, on the very few occasions that I have undertaken to speak for the President I have done so only by his expressed authorization, and I have never pretended to speak his thoughts further than I was expressly authorized so to do. In what I have now to say about the international debts, I hope it will be understood I am speaking for myself alone.

When the Senator from Virginia suggests that it was a terrible impropriety for Mr. Mellon to make a statement from which it might be argued that the debts might have to be reconsidered and then follows it by his own explicit statement that the debts may have to be reconsidered, he loses me. I can not see why it should be an impropriety for Mr. Mellon to make what was possibly an intimation to that effect and so highly patriotic for the Senator from Virginia to make it explicit.

Mr. GLASS. I do not lose myself at all. The Senator from Virginia is a Member of the legislative body of the United States whose function it is to determine these matters, whereas the ambassador to Great Britain has no authority to initiate any such proceedings.

Mr. REED. I remind the Senator again, however, that the statement was not made by the ambassador to Great Britain but seems to have been made by the Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. GLASS. I predicated my criticism upon the supposition that it was.

Mr. REED. Very good. Now, nothing could give aid and comfort to our propagandist adversaries abroad more than such remarks as that we have just heard from the Senator from Virginia.

Mr. GLASS. And I may interject there that nothing that might be comparably said could intensify their enmity more than the speech delivered here on the floor, just prior to the recess holidays, by the Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. REED. Very good. If we have to buy their friendship by the constant cancellation of just claims, their friendship is not worth the buying.

Mr. GLASS. And then the question arises as to what may be a "just claim."

Mr. REED. What may be a just claim? Take France, for whom we have spilled so much sentiment: We advanced more to France after the armistice to help her in reconstruction and in purchase of foods than we advanced before the armistice to help her with ammunition.

Mr. GLASS. Oh, that is not a fact!

Mr. REED. That is a fact.

Mr. GLASS. Oh, no! I demonstrated here on the floor a year ago that that is not so.

The Senator from Utah [Mr. Smoot] is now smiling. I should think he would have been so humiliated by the presentation of those facts that he would never want to refer to them again.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President-

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Pennsylvania yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. REED. I do.

Mr. SMOOT. I will repeat to the Senate that after the armistice was signed there was paid to France more in dollars and cents than had been advanced to her before.

Mr. GLASS. That is utterly inaccurate. It is not true.
Mr. SMOOT. I will put the figures in the Record, Mr. President.

Mr. GLASS. The Senator has been promising to do that now for 18 months, and he has never put a figure in the RECORD.

Mr. SMOOT. No; I have not promised it at all, Mr. President; but if the Senator wants it, it can be done. It is in the report that was made.

Mr. GLASS. I presented the figures in the RECORD, and the Senator never assumed to contradict them.

Mr. SMOOT. I never made the statement that the Senator made. I was not going to assume anything. I took the record for it.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, if I have the floor, assuming for the moment that we are all wrong but the Senator from Virginia—and I have not my copy of the World War Debt Funding Commission report, but I will get it as soon as possible—assuming that we are all wrong about that, perhaps we are still right when we say that all of the French debt, pre-war and postwar, prearmistice and postarmistice, was reduced and refunded to about 46 per cent of its value before the refunding. I say, and I do not believe my fiery friend from Virginia will contradict this, that the cancellation we effected in that debt refunding was tantamount to the forgiveness of more than all that we had advanced to France before the armistice—and still we are called "Uncle Shylock."

How far down must we reduce, Mr. President, to begin to lose those insults from abroad? How much must we pay them for civility, and how much more for friendship? Yet the Senator apparently, thinks that that is the way for us to win the friendship of foreign nations!

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?
The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Pennsylvania yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. REED. I yield.

Mr. SMOOT. I want also to say to the Senate that $407,000,000 was due from France to the Government of the United States for goods sold to France, and that was due within two years from the time the settlement was signed. We included in the settlement with France the $407,000,000 due us for all the goods that were purchased by France, the value of which was said to be about $2,000,000,000. I think the value, at 4½ per cent, of the settlement with France was about 51 cents on the dollar, and that included the $407,000,000 of goods purchased from the Government of the United States by France.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, just one word more.

We are told by our melancholy friends who favor cancellation that it is utterly impossible for these European nations to pay us, because to do so they will have to transfer gold, which they have not, or goods, which we do not want.

Mr. President, that does not begin to be a true statement of the fact. Both France and Great Britain, which are the two largest debtor nations, are in themselves great creditor nations, with billions of foreign investments held in their vaults. It is a perfectly simple transaction to accomplish that transfer of value by the shipment and sale of those securities, or some of them; and it is not necessary at all to disrupt the exchange markets by the shipment of gold or to disrupt the balance of trade by the shipment of goods. Yet that is an element of the question that is forgotten by almost every one of these sobbing pro-Europe propagandists that we hear abroad and in this country.

There are, I am ashamed to say, a lot of Americans who get asked to lunch by a countess and immediately break into tears and cancel the debt. There are a lot of Americans who, for some reason of their own, have taken this foreign propaganda as if it were the Bible. We hear too much of it and too little in reply to it.

I have wandered from the subject upon which I first rose to speak; but I think there is a certain value in the reiteration of the statement that that propaganda is not successful with all Americans.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President-

Mr. REED. I yield to the Senator from Florida.

Mr. FLETCHER. I merely wish to say that I fully concur in the views expressed by the Senator from Pennsylvania. I commend him for his position with regard to this question of cancellation.

We may not ever be able to realize on these debts. I do not know as to that; but I believe we ought not for one minute to encourage the idea that we are going to cancel or reduce them. Let us keep them there; and if we have an Andrew Jackson as President of the United States some time we will collect some of them, too.

Mr. REED. I thank the Senator.

Mr. HOWELL. Mr. President, as stated by the able Senator from Utah [Mr. Smoot], there was due and payable from the French Government on the 1st day of August, 1929, $407,000,000 in bonds received by our Government for $2,000,000,000 of property and supplies turned over to that Government.

Notwithstanding the total French debt was $4,231,000,000, all that France will have paid us on account of this debt, including this $407,000,000, since the date of settlement in 1925 is $200,000,000. However, during this same period the people of the United States will have paid in interest by next July on Liberty and other bonds outstanding, representing this $4,231,000,000, a total of $1,228,000,000. Yet it is urged that we have not been overgenerous to our European debtors.

Mr. President, there are three possible outcomes in connection with our foreign debts:

First. Payment by our foreign debtors of what remains of these debts and which they have promised to pay.

Second. Reduction in the amounts still due, with further promises of payment.

Third. Repudiation by our debtors.

I do not take the position that our debtors must pay exactly in accord with the letter of their contracts. My position is that we ought to treat France and our other European debtors no differently from the treatment that would be accorded by an American banker to an American debtor. He would say: "If you can not pay now, we want you to pay when you can. However, we insist upon your ultimately paying." If our European debtors say they will not pay, it is my opinion that we should insist that the alternative is not forgiveness or reduction, but repudiation.

If these debts are not to be paid, we should at least be the beneficiaries of the lesson that we can not trust Europe in financial transactions, and that if we do, it is not unlikely that repudiation will be the end. Otherwise, by reductions and cancellations we may ultimately fritter away what remains of these great credits, which our debtors have promised to pay, and in the future our people will forget Europe's part in the transaction and charge it all to the unwisdom and inefficiency of legislators, thus robbing the Nation of a great lesson which realized experience should teach. We should salvage this much at least.

Mr. BRATTON. Mr. President, about two hours ago I had in mind to make certain remarks which would consume 10 minutes' time. I still have in mind those remarks. The intervening discussion has been very helpful. It related to a very important subject.

I am gratified to hear the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. Reed] say again that the administration has in mind no purpose to advocate cancellation of the foreign debts, in whole or in part; but before addressing myself to the pending question I desire to say that it is strikingly strange that the administration suggested the re-creation of the Debt Commission unless it had in mind a reduction of the debts. No one would think that the foreign nations are going to pay more. There is to be no revision upward. The sole and moving spirit was to revise the terms downward.

I think the sentiment in this body, and perhaps in the body at the other end of this Capitol, is almost unanimous that we will do nothing of the kind. Perhaps our debtors can not pay promptly and in full, but let them pay what they can. There will be no reduction, no cancellation.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives by Mr. Haltigan, one of its clerks, announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5315) to amend the Judicial Code and to define and limit the jurisdiction of courts sitting in equity, and for other purposes.

INTERIOR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATIONS

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 8397) making appropriations for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1933, and for other purposes.

Mr. BRATTON. Mr. President, the pending question is the amendment offered by the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. Frazier], chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs, and likewise chairman of the subcommittee that has conducted a comprehensive survey of existing conditions among Indians throughout the West and the Southwest, to the effect that none of the money appropriated in this measure shall be used to pay the salary or expenses of a special assistant to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs to negotiate with the Navajo Indians.

While the amendment does not relate to Governor Hagerman by name, there is no doubt but that it is directed at the position now held by him.

Let me say at the outset that I have known Governor Hagerman for many years. I do not question his honor, his integrity, nor his ability. He is a man of honor. He is a man of integrity. He is a man of ability; and in reaching the conclusion which I have reached respecting this matter I do not yield in whole or in part the high regard in which I hold him as a man of honor, integrity, and ability. But, Mr. President, I am going to vote for the amendment of the Senator from North Dakota.

We talk about economy in government. We preach daily about retrenchment in expenditures. We declare repeatedly in favor of curtailing the expenses of the Government. While the item in question is small in dollars and cents, the adoption of this amendment, in my opinion, will not affect adversely the efficiency of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, and it will save to the Government the limited sum involved.

It is my opinion, Mr. President, that the services of a special assistant to negotiate with the Navajo Indians are not needed. We never had such a position until 1922. Indian affairs had been administered through all time until then without such a position.

There are agents at various places throughout the system. They are called Indian agents. They are in direct contact with the Indians. They are men of sufficient ability, or should be of sufficient ability, to deal with these problems arising on the reservations under their respective jurisdictions.

Moreover, it is my belief that the criticisms urged against Governor Hagerman during the last 24 months, or thereabouts, whether right or wrong, whether just or unjust, have impaired his usefulness as special assistant to negotiate with Indians, if not destroyed it.

I do not join in some of the criticisms which have been urged against him on the floor since this debate began. For instance, it was urged with much vigor yesterday that Governor Hagerman's connection with the oil leases covering the Rattlesnake and the Hogback structures on the Navajo Reservation are properly the subject of criticism. I do not share that view. The leases were auctioned and went to the highest bidder. They covered wildcat territory. The existence of oil on those structures was not known at the time. Many of those who bought leases at such auction suffered tremendous losses resulting from their purchases, because they pioneered in a wildcat country and failed.

It has been said that prior to the approval of one of the leases the Bureau of Indian Affairs had information from the Geological Survey that the structure in question was as good as another structure. Perhaps so; but I do not think that is sufficient to warrant one in saying years afterwards that Governor Hagerman should be subjected to severe criticism on that score. It may have been a mistake of judgment, and I say here that, in my opinion, Governor Hagerman has made some tremendous mistakes of judgment in relation to Indian affairs, which have caused criticism; but I repeat, they were mistakes of judgment, not involving honor, integrity, or good purposes.

It was urged yesterday that Governor Hagerman's connection with the bill offered some four or five years ago authorizing oil and gas leases on Executive-order Indian reservations should subject him to criticism. Let it be understood that Governor Hagerman had nothing to do with the introduction of that bill, so far as I know. I introduced that bill, and sponsored it before the committee. The bill provided that in lieu of taxes the State might receive 37½ per cent of the royalties, and the balance should go to the Indians. It conformed strictly to the policy existing since 1920 with respect to the development of oil and gas upon the public domain. It proceeded upon the theory that the legal title to Executive-order Indian reservation lands was vested in the Government—not in the Indian.

I entertained that belief then, and I entertain it now, as a sound legal proposition, because the Constitution provides that property of the United States can be conveyed only by congressional action. I held to the view then, and I entertain it still, despite adjudication in the meantime, that to permit the Executive to set aside Government lands as an Indian reservation and to hold that such action alienates title from the Government and vests it in the Indian does indirectly what the Constitution expressly prohibits being done directly.

I digress simply to say that I introduced that bill. I sponsored it before the committee and I assume full responsibility for it. None of the responsibility should be thrust upon Governor Hagerman.

It is said in that connection that Governor Hagerman came before the committee and stated that the Indians had approved the measure. There was some criticism on that score, and I am not certain that I correctly recall the facts. As I recall them, the Indians had taken that position, but afterwards contended that they had not understood the situation correctly. I may be in error in my memory, but that is the situation as I remember it.

Congress disapproved that bill. It passed one more liberal to the Indians, and I am as deeply gratified as any Member of the Senate that Congress took a more generous attitude. It took the position that the Indians owned title to their Executive-order reservations, but at the time I introduced the bill I had no belief that Congress would assume that attitude Repeating, and to emphasize, I sponsored that bill, not Governor Hagerman.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BRATTON. I yield.

Mr. KING. Speaking for myself, and not for the chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs, my criticism of Mr. Hagerman with respect to that matter was that he was not authorized by the Indians to make statements which he made. He had received no commission or authority from them to consent that they would be satisfied with 371/2 per cent, or any other per cent derived from the sale of oil produced from their lands. I think the testimony clearly shows that Mr. Hagerman acted without authority and against the interest of the Indians in his negotiations for the sale of the oil lands owned by the Indians. He had no authority, and I think that a fair, dispassionate perusal of the hearings, particularly when Senator Wheeler, on crossexamination of Mr. Hagerman, confronted him with his testimony, will demonstrate that Mr. Hagerman misrepresented the views and wishes of the Indians, and did protect their rights. That was my criticism. There was no criticism because of the introduction of the bill or of those who sponsored it.

Mr. BRATTON. Very well. Some criticism was hurled against the Bureau of Indian Affairs, if not Governor Hagerman, with respect to discontinuing allotments of the Navajo Indians and in withdrawing from allotment and homestead entry a vast area of land in New Mexico.

That was done about a year ago, and I heartily concurred in the action taken by the department. I want to tell the Senate why. I shall be brief in doing so.

Throughout that area the railroad company owns alternate sections. The opposite alternate sections are public domain, subject to allotment by Indians, and likewise subject to homestead entry by whites.

While the Indians were pushing outward and were occupying much of that land, endeavoring to obtain it by allotment, white men were moving into the same area and were endeavoring to homestead on other parts of the land. That created what we call a checkerboard situation, which is complicated and troublesome to the State, to local authorities, and to everyone having to do with it.

In an effort to solve the problem the bureau has devoted some two years to a so-called blocking program, that is to say, blocking white-owned lands within so many townships and blocking Indian lands in the adjoining townships, so | that the Indians and the whites would cease to be interlocked and interwoven in a checkerboard fashion, creating friction and trouble on the part of both.

The withdrawal of that land by Executive order stopped the taking of allotments by Indians and stopped homesteading by whites. It holds the entire area in a suspended state pending consummation of the effort of everybody concerned to carry out and complete the blocking program.

It is true that the Indians can not acquire allotments in that area while the land is withdrawn. It is equally true that white men can not acquire it by homesteading. When the order is withdrawn and the area is restored to the public domain, the Indians' rights to allotments will be restored and the white man's right of homesteading be restored. That was a step to preserve the status quo while the bureau and private owners of land in the area undertook to complete that blocking program.

Mr. President, I now address myself to the other subject matter giving rise to the criticism of Governor Hagermanthat is, his work on the Pueblo Lands Board. I think it was a grave mistake for Governor Hagerman to occupy the two positions, one as a member of the Pueblo Lands Board and the other as special assistant commissioner to negotiate with the Navajo Indians, at the same time.

